

HE-LIBBARY OF 13130NA-201-42 HEIGHINEBOY WE-LIBRARYO, THE UNIVERSA AE-LIBRARY O CELES ANCELES OF-CALIFORA, OF CALIFORN CHEDNINEBOY OF CALIFORN OF CALIFORN CHE UNIVERS, WE-LIBRARYO. HE-LIBRARYO, J3130WA-201-2 CHE ONLYERS !> THE UNIVERSA STOS-ANCELES. SHE-UNIVERS! CHIOS-ANCFIEC WE-FIBBARKO YE-LIBBARYO. HEINNINERSY KE-LIBRARY C LOS-ANGELES 4.0F-CALIFORN CALIFORA 13130WA-201-42 CHE-DNIVERSI LOF-CALIFORA HE-FIBBARYO, WE-UBBRARY OF 3-105-ANCELES CHE-DNINEBEN KHE-UNIVERS/

Digitized by the Internet Archive in 2007 with funding from Microsoft Corporation

Arthur R. Godson. June 1847

NEW AND LITERAL

TRANSLATION

OF

UVENAL & PERSIUS;

WITH

Copious Explanatory Notes,

BY WHICH

SE DIFFICULT SATIRISTS ARE RENDERED EASY
AND FAMILIAR TO THE READER,

IN TWO VOLUMES.

BY

THE REV. M. MADAN.

Ardet....Instat....Aperte jugulat.

SCAL. IN JUV.

VOL. I.

London:

Printed by J. F. Dove, St. John's Square,

3 197 188 A3

JUVELAN . WISHUS.

Woman Common Com

ALTERNATION OF THE

A KOYD O AND MILE

71 77 700

1 1117.5

-monito.

 Annex 6447 E5M32 1814

PREFACE

TO

JUVENAL.

DECIMUS JUNIUS JUVENAL was born at Aquinum, a town of the Volsci, a people of Latium; hence, from the place of his birth, he was called Aguinas. It is not certain whether he was the son, or foster-child of a rich freedman. He had a learned education, and, in the time of Claudius Nero, pleaded causes with great reputation. About his middle age he applied himself to the study of Poetry; and, as he saw a daily increase of vice and folly, he addicted himself to writing Satire: but, having said something (sat. vii. l. 88-92.) which was deemed a reflection on Paris the actor, a minion of Domitian's, he was banished into Ægypt, at *eighty years of age, under pretence of sending him as captain of a company of soldiers. was looked upon as a sort of humorous punishment for what he had said, in making Paris the bestower of posts in the army.

However, Domitian dying soon after, Juvenal returned to Rome, and is said to have lived there to the † times of Nerva and Trajan. At last, worn out with old age, he expired in a fit of coughing.

^{*} Quanquam Octogenarius.—Marshall, in Vit. Juv.

⁺ Ibique ad Nervæ et Trajani tempora supervixisse dicitur Mar-

He was a man of excellent morals, of an elegant taste and judgment, a fast friend to Virtue, and an irreconcileable enemy to Vice in every shape.

As a writer, his style is unrivalled, in point of elegance and beauty, by any Satirist that we are acquainted with, Horace not excepted. The plainness of his expressions are derived from the honesty and integrity of his own mind: his great aim was—" to hold, as it were, the mirror up " to nature; to shew Virtue her own feature, " Scorn her own image, and the very age and " body of the time his form and pressure *."-He meant not, therefore, to corrupt the mind, by openly describing the lewd practices of his countrymen, but to remove every veil, even of language itself, which could soften the features, or hide the full deformity of vice from the observation of his readers, and thus to strike the mind with due abhorrence of what he censures. All this is done in so masterly a way, as to render him well worthy Scaliger's encomium, when he styles him-Omnium Satyricorum facile Princeps. He was much loved and respected by + Martial. Quintilian speaks of him, Inst. Orat. lib. x. as the chief of Satirists. ‡ Ammianus Marcellinus says, that some who did detest learning, did, notwithstanding, in their most profound retiredness, diligently employ themselves in his works.

The attentive reader of Juvenal may see, as in a glass, a true portraiture of the Roman manners in his time: here he may see, drawn to the life, a people sunk in sloth, luxury, and debau-chery, and exhibiting to us the sad condition of human nature, when untaught by divine truth, and uninfluenced by a divine principle. However polite and refined this people was, with respect to the cultivation of letters, arts, and sciences, beyond the most barbarous nations; yet, as to the true knowledge of God, they were upon a footing with the most uninformed of their cotemporaries, and consequently were, equally with them, sunk into all manner of wickedness and abomination. The description of the Gentiles in general, by St. Paul, Rom. i. 19—32. is fully verified as to the Romans in paritcular.

^{*} Hamlet, act iii. ecene 2. ‡ Hist. lib. xxviii.

⁺ See MART, lib. vii. epig. 24,

Juvenal may be looked upon as one of those rare meteors, which shone forth even in the darkness of Heathenism. The mind and conscience of this great man were, though from * whence he knew not, so far enlightened, as to perceive the ugliness of vice, and so influenced with a desire to reform it, as to make him, according to the light he had, a severe and able reprover, a powerful and diligent witness against the vices and follies of the people among which he lived; and, indeed, against all, who, like them, give a loose to their depraved appetites, as if there were no other liberty to be sought after, but the most unrestrained indulgence of vicious pleasures and gratifications.

How far Rome-Christian, possessed of divine revelation, is better than Heathen Rome without it, is not for me to determine: but I fear, that the perusal of Juvenal will furnish us with too serious a réason to observe, that, not only modern Rome, but every metropolis in the Christian world, as to the generality of its manners and pursuits, bears a most unhappy resemblance to the objects of the following Satires. They are, therefore, too applicable to the times in which we live, and, in that view, if rightly understood, may, perhaps, be serviceable to many, who will not come within the reach of higher instruction.

^{*} Rom. ii. 15. Comp. Is. xlv. 5. See sat. x. l. 363, and note.

Bishop Burnet observes, that the "satirical poets, Horace, Juvenal, and Persius, may contribute wonderfully to give a man a detestation of vice, and a contempt of the common methods of mankind; which they have set out in such true colours, that they must give a very generous sense to those who delight in reading them often.." Past. Care, c. vii.

This translation was begun some years ago, at hours of leisure, for the Editor's own amusement: when, on adding the notes as he went along, he found it useful to himself, he began to think that it might be so to others, if pursued to the end on the same plan. The work was carried on, till it increased to a considerable bulk. The addition of Persius enlarged it to its present size, in which it appears in print, with a design to add its assistance in explaining these difficult authors, not only to school-boys and young beginners, but to numbers in a more advanced age, who, by having been thrown into various scenes of life, remote from classical improvement, have so far forgotten their Latin, as to render these elegant and instructive remains of antiquity almost inaccessible to their comprehension, however desirous they may be to renew their acquaintance with them.

As to the old objection, that translations of the Classics tend to make boys idle, this can never happen, but through the fault of the master, in not properly watching over the method of their studies. A master should never suffer a boy to construe his lesson in the school, but from the Latin by itself, nor without making the boy parse, and give an account of every necessary word; this will drive him to his grammar and dictionary, near as much as if he had no translation at all: but in private, when the boy is preparing his lesson, a literal translation, and explanatory notes, so facilitate the right comprehension, and understanding, of the author's language, meaning, and design, as to imprint them with ease on the learner's mind, to form his taste, and to enable him, not only to construe and explain, but to get those portions of the author by heart, which he is, at certain periods, to repeat at school, and which, if judiciously selected, he may find useful, as well as ornamental to him, all his life.

To this end, I have considered, that there are three purposes to be answered. First, that the reader should know what the author says; this can only be attained by * literal translation: as for poetical versions, which are so often miscalled translations, paraphrases, and the like, they are but ill calculated for this fundamental and necessary purpose.

They remind one of a performer on a musical instrument, who shews his skill, by playing over a piece of music, with so many variations, as to disguise, almost entirely, the original simple melody, insomuch that the hearers depart as ig-

^{*} I trust that I shall not be reckoned guilty of inconsistency, if, in some few passages, I have made use of paraphrase, which I have so studiously avoided through the rest of the work, because the literal sense of these is better obscured than explained, especially to young minds.

norant of the merit of the composer, as they came.

All translators should transfer to themselves the directions, which our Shakespeare gives to actors, at least, if they mean to assist the student, by helping him to the construction, that he may understand the language of the author. -As the actor is not "to o'erstep the modesty " of nature"—so a translator is not to o'erstep the simplicity of the text.—As an actor is "not " to speak more than is set down for him"—so a translator is not to exercise his own fancy, and let it loose into phrases and expressions, which are totally foreign from those of the author. He should therefore sacrifice vanity to usefulness, and forego the praise of elegant writing, for the utility of faithful translation.

The next thing to be considered, after knowing what the author says, is how he says it; this can only be learnt from the original itself, to which I refer the reader, by printing the Latin, line for line, opposite to the English, and, as the lines are numbered, the eye will readily pass from the one to the other. The information which has been received from the translation, will readily assist in the grammatical construction. The third particular, without which the reader would fall very short of understanding the author, is, to know what he means; to explain this is the intention of the notes, for many of which, I gratefully acknowledge myself chiefly indebted to various learned commentators, but who, having written in Latin, are almost out of the reach of those for whom this work is principally intended. Here and there, I have selected some notes from English writers: this indeed the student might have done for himself; but I hope he will not take it amiss, that I have brought so many different commentators into one view, and saved much trouble to him, at the expense of my own labour. The rest of the notes, and those no inconsiderable number, perhaps the most, are my own, by which, if I have been happy enough to supply any deficiencies of others, I shall be glad.

Upon the whole, I am, from long observa-tion, most perfectly convinced, that the early disgust, which, in too many instances, youth is apt to conceive against classical learning, (so that the school-time is passed in a state of * labour and sorrow,) arises mostly from the crabbed and difficult methods of instruction, which are too often imposed upon them; and that, therefore, all attempts to reduce the number of the difficulties, which, like so many thorns, are laid in their way, and to + render the paths of instruction pleasant and easy, will encourage and invite their attention, even to the study of the most difficult authors, among the foremost of which we may rank Juvenal and Persius. Should the present publication be found to answer this end, not only to school-boys, but to those also who would be glad to recover such a competent knowledge of the Latin tongue, as to encourage the renewal of their acquaintance with the Clasaltitude of the or

ii. 2.

^{* &}quot;The books that we learn at school are generally laid aside, with "The books that we learn at school are generally laid aside, with this prejudice, that they were the labours as well as the sorrows of our childhood and education; but they are among the best of books —the Greek and Roman authors have a spirit in them, a force both of thought and expression, that later ages have not been able to imitate." Bp. Burner, Past. Care, cap. vii.

† Quod enim munus reipublicæ afferre majus, meliusve possumus, quam si docemus atque erudimus juventutem? Cic. de Divin, lib.

sics, (whose writings so richly contribute to ornament the higher and more polished walks in life, and which none but the ignorant and tasteless can undervalue,) it will afford the Editor an additional satisfaction. Still more, if it prove useful to foreigners; such I mean as are acquainted with the Latin, and wish to be helped in their study of the English language, which is now so much cultivated in many parts of Europe.

The religious reader will observe, that God, who "in times past suffered * all the nations " (παντα τα εθνη, i. e. all the heathen) to walk in their own ways, nevertheless left not him-"self without witness," not only by the out-ward manifestations of his power and goodness, in the works of + creation and providence, but by men also, who in their several generations, have so far shewn the work of the law written in their hearts, as to bear testimony against the unrighteousness of the world in which they lived. Hence we find the great apostle of the Gentiles, Acts xvii. 28. quoting a passage from his countryman, Aratus of Cilicia, against idolatry, or imagining there be gods made with hands. We find the same apostle & reproving the vices of lying and gluttony in the Cretans, by a quotation from the Cretan poet Epimenides, whom he calls "a prophet of their own," for they accounted their poets writers of divine oracles. Let this teach us to distinguish between the use and abuse of classical knowledge—when it tends to inform the judgment, to refine the manners, and to embellish the conversation; when it keeps a due subordination to that which is divine, makes us truly thankful of the superior light of God's infallible word, and teaches us how little can be truly known * by the wisest of men, without a divine revelation—then it has its use—still more, if it awakens in us a jealousy over ourselves, that we duly improve the superior light with which we are blessed, lest the very heathen rise in judgment † against us. If, on the contrary, it tends to make us proud, vain, and conceited, to rest in its attainments as the summit of wisdom and knowledge; if it contributes to harden the mind against superior information, or fills it with that sour pedantry which leads to the contempt of others—then I will readily allow, that all our learning is but "splen-" did ignorance and pompous folly."

^{*} See White on Acts xiv. 16. + Comp. Rom. i. 19, 20, with Acts xiv. 17. § Tit. i. 12.

^{* 1} Cor. i. 20, 21,

[†] Luke xii. 47, 48.

- 1 (m) - 1 (m) A1 10 32 10 37 and the same of the balance and the second s COX 1 On The 11 - 10 - 20 · 1 · 1 · 1 · 1 · 1 · 1 · 1 years and a second of the seco real designation of the state o Maccoulant, Water Land and the company of the same of probabilities and to by the street of the same Similar Programmy - High Street The second secon . The first of the second of t And the state of t 5 90 02 20 the second of th

DECIMI

JUNII JUVENALIS

AQUINATIS

SATIRÆ.

THE

SATIRES

OF

JUVENAL.

DECIMI

JUNII JUVENALIS

AQUINATIS

SATIRÆ.

SATIRA I.

ARGUMENT.

JOVENAL begins this satire with giving some humourous reasons for his writing: such as hearing, so often, many ill poets rehearse their works, and intending to repay them in kind. Next he informs us, why he addicts himself to satire, rather than to other poetry, and gives a summary and general view of the reigning SEMPER ego auditor tantum? nunquamne reponam, Vexatus toties rauci Theseïde Codri? Impune ergo mihi recitaverit ille togatas, Satires.] Or satyrs—concerning this word—see Chambers's Dictionary.

Line 1. Only an hearer.] Juvenal complains of the irksome recitals, which the scribbling poets were continually making of their vile compositions, and of which he was a hearer, at the public assemblies where they read them over. It is to be observed that, sometimes, the Romans made private recitals of their poetry, among their particular friends. They also had public recitals, either in the temple of Apollo, or in spacious houses, which were either hired, or lent, for the purpose, by some rich and great man, who was highly honoured for this, and who got his clients and dependents together, on the occasion, in order to increase the audience, and to encourage the poet by their applauses. See sat. vii. 1. 40—4. Persius, prolog. 1. 7. and note. Hon. lib. I. sat. iv. 1. 73, 4.

—— Repay.] Reponam, here, is used metaphorically; it al-

THE

SATIRES

OF

JUVENAL.

SATIRE I.

vices and follies of his time. He laments the restraints which the satirists then lay under from a fear of punishment, and professes to treat of the dead, personating, under their names, certain living vicious characters. His great aim, in this, and in all his other satires, is to expose and reprove vice itself, however sanctified by custom, or dignified by the examples of the great.

SHALL I always be only a hearer?—shall I never repay, Who am teiz'd so often with the Theseis of hoarse Codrus? Shall one (poet) recite his comedies to me with impunity, ludes to the borrowing and repayment of money. When a man repaid money which he had borrowed, he was said to replace it—reponere. So our poet, looking upon himself as indebted to the reciters of their compositions, for the trouble which they had given him, speaks, as if he intended to repay them in kind, by writing and reciting his verses as they had done theirs. Sat. vii. l. 40.—4. Persius, prolog. l. 7. Hor. lib. I. sat. iv. l. 73, 4.

2. Theseis.] A poem of which Theseus was the subject.

Hoarse Codrus.] A very mean poet: so poor, that he gave rise to the proverb: "Codro pauperior." He is here supposed to have made himself hoarse, with frequent and loud reading his poem.

3. Comedies.] Togatas—so called from the low and common people, who were the subjects of them. These wore gowns, by which they were distinguished from persons of rank.

There were three different sorts of comedy, each denominated from the dress of the persons which they represented.

Hic elegos? impune diem consumpserit ingens Telephus? aut summi plena jam margine libri Scriptus et in tergo necdum finitus Orestes?

5

Nota magis nulli domus est sua quam mihi lucus Martis, et Æoliis vicinum rupibus antrum Vulcani. Quid agant venti: quas torqueat umbras Æacus; unde alius furtivæ devehat aurum

10

First: The Togata which exhibited the actions of the lower sort;

and was a species of what we call low comedy.

Secondly: The Prætextata—so called from the prætexta, a white robe ornamented with purple, and worn by magistrates and nobles. Hence the comedies, which treated of the actions of such, were called prætextatæ. In our time, we should say genteel comedy.

Thirdly: The Palliata—from pallium, a sort of upper garment worn by the Greeks, and in which the actors were habited, when the manners and actions of the Greeks were represented. This was also a species of the higher sort of comedy.

It is most probable that Terence's plays, which he took from Menander, were reckoned among the palliatæ, and represented in the pallium, or Grecian dress: more especially too, as the scene of every play lies at Athens.

4. Elegies.] These were little poems on mournful subjects, and consisted of hexameter and pentameter verses alternately. We must despair of knowing the first elegiac poet, since Horace says—Art. Poet. 1. 77, 8.

Quis tamen exiguos elegos emiserit auctor, Grammatici certant, et adhuc sub judice lis est.

By whom invented critics yet contend, And of their vain disputing find no end.

FRANCIS.

Elegies were at first mournful, yet, afterwards, they were composed on cheerful subjects. Hor. ib. l. 75, 6.

Versibus impariter junctis querimonia primum, Post etiam inclusa est voti sententia compos.

Unequal measures first were tun'd to flow, Sadly expressive of the lover's woe: But now to gayer subjects form'd they more, In sounds of pleasure, and the joys of love.

FRANCIS.

Bulky Telephus. Some prolix and tedious play, written on the subject of Telephus, king of Mysia, who was mortally wounded by the spear of Achilles, but afterwards healed by the rust of the same spear. Ovid. Trist. v. 2. 15.

--- Waste a day.] In hearing it read over, which took up a whole day.

5. Or Orestes.] Another play on the story of Orestes, the son of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra. He slew his own mother, and Ægysthus, her adulterer, who had murdered his father. This too,

Another his elegies? shall bulky Telephus waste a day

With impunity? or Orestes—the margin of the whole book already

And written on the back too, nor as yet finished?

No man's house is better known to him, than to me

The grove of Mars, and the den of Vulcan near

The Æolian rocks: what the winds can do: what ghosts

Æacus may be tormenting: from whence another could convey the 10

by the description of it in this line, and the next, must have been a very long and tedious performance. It was usual to leave a margin, but this was all filled from top to bottom-it was unusual to write on the outside, or back, of the parchment; but this author had filled the whole outside, as well as the inside.

5. Of the whole book. Or—of the whole of the book.—Liber primarily signifies the inward bark or rind of a tree; hence a book or work written, at first made of barks of trees, afterwards of paper and parchment. Summus is derived from supremus, hence sum-mum-i, the top, the whole, the sum.

8. The grove of Mars.] The history of Romulus and Remus, whom Ilia, otherwise called Rhea Sylvia, brought forth in a grove sacred to Mars at Alba: hence Romulus was called Sylvius-also, ... the son of Mars. This, and the other subjects mentioned, were so dinned perpetually into his ears, that the places described were as familiar to him as his own house.

- The den of Vulcan. The history of the Cyclops and Vulcan, the scene of which was laid in Vulcan's den. See Vurg. Æn. viii. 1.

9. The Æolian rocks.] On the North of Sicily are seven rocky islands, which were called Æolian, or Vulcanian; one of which was called Hiera, or sacred, as dedicated to Vulcan. From the frequent breaking forth of fire and sulphur out of the earth of these islands, particularly in Hiera, Vulcan was supposed to keep his shop and forge there.

Here also Æolus was supposed to confine, and preside over the winds. Hence these islands are called Æolian. See VIRG. Æn. i. l.

55-67.

- What the winds can do.] This probably alludes to some tedious poetical treatises, on the nature and operations of the winds. Or, perhaps, to some play, or poem, on the amours of Boreas and Orithya, the daughter of Erectheus, king of Athens.

10. Eacus may be tormenting.] Eacus was one of the fabled judges of hell, who with his two assessors, Minos and Rhadamanthus, were supposed to torture the ghosts into a confession of their crimes. See Virg. Æn. vi. l. 566-69.

--- From whence another, &c. Alluding to the story of Jason, who stole the golden fleece from Colchis.

Pelliculæ: quantas jaculetur Monychus ornos; Frontonis platani, convulsaque marmora clamant Semper, et assiduo ruptæ lectore columnæ. Expectes eadem a summo, minimoque poëtâ.

Et nos ergo manum ferulæ subduximus: et nos Consilium dedimus Syllæ, privatus ut altum Dormiret. Stulta est elementia, cum tot ubique / Vatibus occurras, perituræ parcere chartæ. Cur tamen hoc libeat potius decurrere campo, Per quem magnus equos Auruncæ flexit alumnus: Si vacat, et placidi rationem admittitis, edam.

Cum tener uxorem ducat spado; Mævia Tuscum

20

11. Monychus.] This alludes to some play, or poem, which had been written on the battle of the Centaurs and Lapithæ.

The word Monychus is derived from the Greek povos, solus, and ovoz, ungula, and is expressive of an horse's hoof, which is whole and entire, not cleft or divided.

The Centaurs were fabled to be half men, and half horses; so that by Monychus we are to understand one of the Centaurs, of such prodigious strength, as to make use of large trees for weapons, which he threw, or darted at his enemies.

12. The plane-trees of Fronto] Julius Fronto, a noble and learned man, at whose house the poets recited their works, before they were read, or performed in public. His house was planted round with plane-trees, for the sake of their shade.

The convuls'd marbles.] This may refer to the marble statues which were in Fronto's hall, and were almost shaken off their pedestals by the din and noise that were made—or to the marble with which the walls were built, or inlaid; or to the marble pavement; all which appeared, as if likely to be shaken out of their places, by the incessant noise of these bawling reciters of their works,

13. The columns broken.] The marble pillars too were in the same situation of danger, from the incessant noise of these people.

The poet means to express the wearisomeness of the continual repetition of the same things over and over again, and to censure the manner, as well as the matter, of these irksome repetitions; which were attended with such loud and vehement vociferation, that even the trees about Fronto's house, as well as the marble within it, had reason to apprehend demolition. This hyperbole is humourous, and well applied to the subject.

14. You may expect the same things, &c.] i. e. The same subjects, treated by the worst poets, as by the best. Here he satirizes the impudence and presumption of these scribblers, who, without genius or abilities, had ventured to write, and expose their verses to the public ear; and this, on subjects which had been treated by men of a superior cast.

15. Therefore.] i.e. In order to qualify myself as a writer and

Of the stolen fleece; how great wild-ash trees Monychus could

The plane-trees of Fronto, and the convuls'd marbles complain Always, and the columns broken with the continual reader:

You may expect the same things from the highest and from the least poet.

And I therefore have withdrawn my hand from the ferule; and I Have given counsel to Sylla, that, a private man, soundly

He should sleep. It is a foolish clemency, when every where so many Poets you may meet, to spare paper, that will perish.

But why it should please me rather to run along in the very field, Through which the great pupil of Aurunca drave his horses, I will tell you, if you have leisure, and kindly hearken to my reason. When a delicate eunuch can marry a wife: Mævia can stick declaimer. His meaning seems to be, that as all, whether good or bad, wrote poems, why should not he, who had had an education in learning, write as well as they?

15. Have withdrawn my hand, &c.] The ferule was an instrument of punishment, as at this day, with which schoolmasters corrected their scholars, by striking them with it over the palm of the hand: the boy watched the stroke, and, if possible, withdrew his hand from it.

Juvenal means to say, that he had been at school, to learn the arts of poetry and oratory, and had made declamations, of one of which the subject was: "Whether Sylla should take the dictatorship, or " live in ease and quiet as a private man?" He maintained the latterproposition.

18. Paper that will perish, &c. 7 i. e. That will be destroyed by others, who will write upon it if I do not; therefore there is no reason why I should forbear to make use of it.

19. In the very field. A metaphor, taken from the chariot-races in the Campus Martius.

20. The great pupil of Aurunca, &c. Lucilius, the first and most famous Roman satirist, born at Aurunca, an ancient city of Latium, in Italy.

He means—Perhaps you will ask, "how it is that I can think of " taking the same ground as that great satirist Lucilius—and why I " should rather choose this way of writing, when he so excelled in " it, as to be before all others, not only in point of time, but of " ability in that kind of writing?"

21. Hearken to my reason.] Literally, the verb admitto signifies to admit: but it is sometimes used with auribus, understood, and then it denotes attending, or hearkening, to something: this I suppose to be the sense of it in this place, as it follows the si vacat.

22. Mavia. The name of some woman, who had the impudence to fight in the Circus with a Tuscan boar.

The Tuscan boars were reckoned the fiercest,

Figat aprum, et nudâ teneat venabula mammâ:
Patricios omnes opibus cum provocet unus,
Quo tondente gravis juveni mihi barba sonabat:
Cum pars Niliacæ plebis, cum verna Canopi
Crispinus, Tyrias humero revocante lacernas,
Ventilet æstivum digitis sudantibus aurum,
Nec sufferre queat majoris pondera gemmæ:
Difficile est Satiram non scribere. Nam quis iniquæ
Tam patiens urbis, tam ferreus, ut teneat se?
Causidici nova cum veniat lectica Mathonis
Plena ipso: et post hunc magni delator amici,
Et cito rapturus de nobilitate comesâ

23. With a naked breast.] In imitation of an Amazon. Under the name of Mævia, the poet probably means to reprove all the ladies at Rome, who exposed themselves in the pursuit of masculine exercises, which were so shamefully contrary to all female delicacy.

24. The Patricians.] The nobles of Rome. They were the descendants of such as were created senators in the time of Romulus, Of these there were originally, only one hundred—afterwards, more were added to them.

25. Who clipping, &c.] The person here meant, is supposed to be Licinius the freedman and barber of Augustus, or perhaps Cinnamus. See sat. x. l. 225, 6.

—— Sounded.] Alluding to the sound of clipping the beard with scissars. Q. D. who with his scissars clipped my beard, when I was a young man, and first came under the barber's hands.

26. Part of the commonalty of the Nile.] One of the lowest of the Ægytians who had come as slaves to Rome.

—— Canopus.] A city of Ægypt, addicted to all manner of effeminacy and debauchery—famous for a temple of Serapis, a god of the Ægyptians. This city was built by Menelaus, in memory of his pilot, Canopus, who died there, and was afterwards canonized. See sat. xv. l. 46.

27. Crispinus.] He, from a slave, had been made master of the horse to Nero.

—— His shoulder recalling.] Revocante—The Romans used to fasten their cloaks round the neck with a loop, but in hot weather, perhaps, usually went with them loose. As Juvenal is now speaking of the summer season, (as appears by the next line,) he describes the shoulder as recalling, or endeavouring to hoist up, and replace the cloak, which, from not being fastened by a loop to the neck, was often slipping away, and sliding downwards from the shoulders.

— Tyrian cloaks.] i. e. Dyed with Tyrian purple, which was very expensive. By this he marks the extravagance and luxury of these upstarts.

28. Ventilate the summer-gold, &c.] The Romans were arrived at such a height of luxury, that they had rings for the winter, and

30

A Tuscan boar, and hold hunting-spears with a naked breast:

When one can vie with all the patricians in riches,

Who clipping, my beard troublesome to me a youth sounded: When a part of the commonalty of the Nile, when a slave

Canopus

Crispinus, his shoulder recalling the Tyrian Cleaks, Can ventilate the summer-gold on his sweating fingers,

Nor can he bear the weight of a larger gem;

It is difficult not to write satire. For who can so endure

The wicked city—who is so insensible, as to contain himself?

When the new litter of lawyer Matho comes

Full of himself: and after him the secret accuser of a great friend,

And who is soon about to seize from the devoured nobility others for the summer, which they wore according to the season.

Ventilo signifies—to wave any thing to and fro in the air.

Crispinus is decribed as wearing a summer-ring, and cooling it by, perhaps, taking it off, and by waving it to and fro in the air with his hand-which motion might likewise contribute to the slipping back of the cloak.

31. So insensible.] Ferreus-literally signifies any thing made of iron, and is therefore used here, figuratively, to denote hardness or insensibility.

32. The new litter. The lectica was a sort of sedan, with a bedor couch in it, wherein the grandees were carried by their servants: probably something like the palanquins in the East. This was a piece of luxury which the rich indulged in.

____ Lawyer Matho.] He had been an advocate but had amassed a large fortune by turning informer. The emperor Domitian gave so much encouragement to such people, that many made their fortunes by secret informations; insomuch that nobody was safe, however innocent; even one informer was afraid of another. See below, 1. 35, 6, and notes.

33. Full of himself.] Now grown bulky and fat .- By this expression, the poet may hint at the self-importance of this upstart fel-

- The secret accuser of a great friend. This was probably Marcus Regulus, (mentioned by Pliny in his Epistles,) a most infamous informer, who occasioned, by his secret informations, the deaths of many of the nobility in the time of Domitian.

Some think that the great friend here mentioned was some great man, an intimate of Domitian's; for this emperor spared not even his greatest and most intimate friends, on receiving secret informations against them.

But, by the poet's manner of expression, it should rather seem; that the person meant was some great man, who had been a friend to Regulus, and whom Regulus had basely betrayed.

34. From the devoured nobility. i. e. Destroyed through secret accusations, or pillaged by informers for hush-money.

| Quod superest: quem Massa timet: quem munere palpat | 35 |
|---|----|
| Carus; et a trepido Thymele summissa Latino; | |
| Cum te summoveant qui testamenta merentur | |
| Nectibus, in cœlum quos eveluit optima summi | |
| Nunc via processûs, vetulæ vesica beatæ. | |
| Unciolam Proculeius habet, sed Gillo deuncem: | 40 |
| Partes quisque suas, ad mensuram inguinis hæres; | |
| Accipiat sane mercedem sanguinis, et sic | |
| Palleat, ut nudis pressit qui calcibus auguem, | |
| Aut Lugdunensem rhetor dicturus ad aram. | |
| Quid referam? quanta siccum jecur ardeat irâ, | 45 |
| Cum populum gregibus comitum premat hic spoliator | |
| Pupilli prostantis? et hinc damnatus anani | |

35. Whom Massa fears.] Babius Massa, an eminent informer; but so much more eminent was M. Regulus, above mentioned, in this way, that he was dreaded even by Massa, lest he should inform against him.

36. Carus soothes.] This was another of the same infamous profession, who bribed Regulus to avoid some secret accusation.

Judicio (quid enim salvis infamia nummis ?,) — Thymele.] The wife of Latinus the famous mimic; she was sent privately by her husband and prostituted to Regulus, in order to avoid some information which Latinus dreaded, and trembled under the apprehension of.

37. Can remove you.] i. e. Set you aside, supplant you in the good graces of testators.

Who earn last wills, &c.] Who procure wills to be made in their favour. The poet here satirizes the lewd and indecent practices of certain rich old women at Rome, who kept men for their criminal pleasures, and then at their death, left them their heirs, in preference to all others.

39. The best way, &c.] By this the poet means to expose and condemn these monstrous indecencies.

Into heaven.] i. e. Into the highest state of affluence.

40. Proculeius—Gillo.] Two noted paramours of these old ladies.

—— A small pittance—a large share.] Unciola, literally signifies a little ounce, one part in twelve.—Deunx—a pound lacking an ounce—eleven ounces— eleven parts of any other thing divided into twelve.

42. Of his blood.] i. e. Of the ruin of his health and constitution, by these abominable practices.

43. Pressed a snake.] By treading on it. See Virg. Æn. ii. l.

379, 80.

44. The alter of Lyons.] The emperor Caligula instituted, at this place, games, wherein orators and rhetoricians were to contend for a prize. Those, whose performances were not approved, were to wipe them out with a spunge, or to lick them out with their

What remains: whom Massa fears: whom with a gift
Carus sooths, and Thymele sent privately from trembling Latinus.

When they can remove you, who earn last wills

By night, and whom the lust of some rich old woman

(The best way of the highest success now-a-days) lifts up into heaven.

Proculeius has a small pittance, Gillo has a large share: 40

Every one takes his portion, as heir, according to the favour he procures:

Well let him receive the reward of his blood, and become as Pale; as one who hath pressed with his naked heels a snake.

Or as a rhetorician, who is about to declaim at the altar of Lyons.

What shall I say?—With how great anger my dry liver burns, 45
When here a spoiler of his pupil exposed to hire presses on the people

With flocks of attendants? and here condemned by a frivolous Judgment, (for what is infamy when money is safe!)

tongue: or else to be punished with ferules, or thrown into the

45. What shall I say? Q. D.—How shall I find words to express the indignation which I feel !

— My dry liver burns.] The ancients considered the liver as the seat of the irascible and concupiscible affections. So Hor. lib. I. od. xiii. l. 4. says:

Difficili bile tumet jecur—to express his resentment and jealousy, at hearing his mistress commend a rival.

Again, lib IV. od. i. l. 12. Si torrere jecur quæris idoneum—by which he means—kindling the passion of love within the breast.

Our poet here means to express the workings of anger and resentment within him, at seeing so many examples of vice and folly around him, and, particularly, in those instances which he is now going to mention.

46. A spoiler of his pupil, &c.] The tutelage of young men, who had lost their parents, was committed to guardians, who were to take care of their estates and education. Here one is represented as spoliator—a spoiler—i. e. a plunderer or pillager of his ward as to his affairs, and then making money of his person, by hiring him out for the vilest purposes. Hence, he says—Prostantis pupilli.

—— Presses on the people.] Grown rich by the spoils of his ward, he is supposed to be carried, in a litter, along the streets, with such a crowd of attendants, as to incommode other passengers.

47—8. By a frivolous judgment.] Inani judicio—because, though inflicted on Marius, it was of no service to the injured province: for, instead of restoring to it the treasures of which it had been plundered, part of these, to a vast amount, were put into the public treasury. As for Marius himself, he lived in as much festivity as if nothing had happened, as the next two verses inform us.

Exul ab octavâ Marius bibit, et fruitur Dîs.

Iratis: at tu victrix provincia ploras!

Hæc ego non credam Venusinâ digna lucernâ?

Hæc ego non agitem? sed quid magis Heracleas,
Aut Diomedeas, aut mugitum labyrinthi,
Et mare percussum puero, fabrumque volantem?

Cum leno accipiat mœchi bona, si capiendi

Jus nullum uxori, doctus spectare lacunar,
Doctus et ad calicem vigilanti stertere naso:

49. The exiled Marius.] Marius Priscus, proconsul of Africa, who, for pillaging the province of vast sums of money, was condemned to be banished.

— From the eighth hour.] Began his carousals from two o'clock in the afternoon, which was reckoned an instance of dissoluteness and luxury, it being an hour sooner than it was customary to sit down to meals. See note on sat. xi. 1. 204, and on Persius, sat. iii. 1. 4.

49-50. He enjoys the angry gods.] Though Marius had incurred the anger of the gods by his crimes, yet, regardless of this, he enjoyed himself in a state of the highest jollity and festivity.

— Vanquishing province, &c.] Victrix—was used as a forensic term, to denote one who had got the better in a law-suit. The province of Africa had sued Marius, and had carried the cause against him, but had still reason to deplore her losses: for though Marius was sentenced to pay an immense fine, which came out of what he had pillaged, yet this was put into the public treasury, and no part of it given to the Africans; and, besides this, Marius had reserved sufficient to maintain himself in a luxurious manner. See above, note on 1. 47, 8.

51. Worthy the Venusinian lamp?] i. e. The pen of Horace himself?—This charming writer was born at Venusium, a city of Apulia. When the poets wrote by night they made use of a lamp.

52. Shall I not agitate, & c.] Agitem—implies pursuing, as hunters do wild beasts—hunting—chasing.—So inveighing against by satire, driving such vices as he mentions out of their lurking places, and hunting them down, as it were, in order to destroy them.

—— But why rather Heracleans.] Juvenal here anticipates the supposed objections of some, who might, perhaps, advise him to employ his talents on some fabulous, and more poetical subjects—such as the labours of Hercules, &c.—"Why should I prefer these " (as if he had said) when so many subjects in real life occur, to exercise my pen in a more useful way?"

53. Or Diomedeans.] i. e. Verses on the exploits of Diomed, a king of 'Thrace, who fed his horses with man's flesh. Hercules slew him, and threw him to be devoured by his own horses.

the monster kept in the labyrinth.] The story of the Minotaur, the monster kept in the labyrinth of Crete, who was half a bull, and slain by Theseus. See Ainsw. Minotaurus.

The exile Marius drinks from the eighth hour, and enjoys the Angry gods? but thou, vanquishing province, lamentest! 50 Shall I not believe these things worthy the Venusinian lamp? Shall I not agitate these (subjects?)—but why rather Heracleans, Or Diomedeans, or the lowing of the labyrinth, And the sea stricken by a boy, and the flying artificer? When the bawd can take the goods of the adulterer, (if of taking 55 There is no right to the wife,) taught to look upon the ceiling, Taught also at a cup to snore with a vigilant nose.

54. The sea stricken by a boy.] The story of Icarus, who flying too near the sun, melted the wax by which his wings were fastened together, and fell into the sea; from him called Icarian. See Hor. lib. IV. od. ii. 1. 2—4.

— The flying artificer.] Dædalus—who invented and made wings for himself and his son Icarus, with which they fled from Crete. See Ainsw. Dædahis.

55. The bawd.] The husband—who turns bawd by prostituting his wife for gain, and thus receives the goods of the adulterer, as the price of her chastity.

56. There is no right to the wife.] Domitian made a law to forbid the use of litters (see note, 1. 32.) to adulterous wives, and to deprive them of taking legacies or inheritances by will. This was evaded, by making their husbands panders to their lewdness, and so causing the legacies to be given to them.

— Taught to look upon the ceiling.] As inobservant of his wife's infamy then transacting before him—this he was well skilled in. See Hor. lib. III. od. vi. l. 25-32.

57. At a cup, &c.] Another device was to set a large cup on the table, which the husband was to be supposed to have emptied of the liquor which it had contained, and to be nodding over it, as if in a drunken sleep.

To snore with a vigilant nose.] Snoring is an evidence that a man is fast asleep, therefore, the husband knew well how to exhibit this proof, by snoring aloud, which is a peculiar symptom of a drunken sleep. The poet uses the epithet vigilanti, here, very humourously, to denote, that though the man seemed to be fast asleep by his snoring, yet his nose seemed to be awake by the noise it made. So Plaut, in Milite.

An dormit Sceledrus intus? Non naso quidem,

Nam eo magno magnum clamat.

Is Sceledrus asleep within?

Why, truly, not with his nose; for with that large instrument he makes noise enough.

Our Farquhar, in the description which he makes Mrs. Sullen give of her drunken husband, represents her as mentioning a like particular:

"My whole night's comfort is the tunable serenade of that wake-

"ful nightingale—his nose."

60

Cum fas esse putet curam sperare cohortis, Qui bona donavit præsepibus, et carct omni Majorum censu, dum pervolat axe citato Flaminiam: puer Automedon nam lora tenebat,

Ipse lacernatæ cum se jactaret amicæ. Nonne libet medio ceras implere capaces Quadrivio-cum jam sextà cervice feratur (Hinc atque inde patens, ac nudâ pene cathedrâ, 65 Et multum referens de Mæcenate supino) Signator falso, qui se lautum, atque beatum

38. A cohort. A company of foot in a regiment, or legion, which consisted of ten cohorts.

59. Hath given his estate to stables. i. e. Has squandered away all his patrimony in breeding and keeping horses. Præsepe sometimes means—a cell, stews, or brothel. Perhaps, this may be the sense here, and the poet may mean, that this spendthrift had lavished his fortune on the stews, in lewdness and debauchery.

59-60. Lacks all the income, &c. Has spent the family estate. 60. While he flies, &c. The person here meant is far from certain. Commentators differ much in their conjecture on the subject. Britannicus gives the matter up. "This passage," says he, "is

But whether Cornelius Fuscus be meant, who when a boy was charioteer to Nero, as Automedon was to Achilles, and who, after wasting his substance in riotous living, was made commander of a regiment-Or Tigillinus, an infamous favourite of Nero's, be here designed, whose character is supposed to have answered to the description here given, is not certain-one or other seems to be meant. -The poet is mentioning various subjects, as highly proper for satire; and, among others, some favourite at court, who, after spending all his paternal estate in riot, extravagance, and debauchery, was made a commander in the army, and exhibited his chariot, driving full speed over the Flaminian way, which led to the emperor's villa; and all this, because, when a boy, he had been Nero's charioteer, or, as the poet humourously calls him, his Automedon, and used to drive out Nero and his minion Sporus, whom Nero castrated, to make him, as much as he could, resemble a woman, and whom he used as a mistress, and afterwards took as a wife, and appeared publicly in his chariot with him, openly caressing, and making love, as he passed along.

"one of those, concerning which we are yet to seek."

The poet humourously speaks of Sporus in the feminine gender. -As the lacerna was principally a man's garment, by lacernatae amicæ, the poet may be understood, as if he had called Sporus, Nero's male-mistress-being habited like a man, and caressed as a woman.

The above appears to me a probable explanation of this obscure and difficult passage. Holiday gives it a different turn, as may be seen by his annotation on this place. I do not presume to be posi-

65

When he can think it right to hope for the charge of a cohort,

Who hath given his estate to stables, and lacks all

The income of his ancestors, while he flies, with swift axle, over 60 The Flaminian way; for the boy Automedon was holding the reins, When he boasted himself to his cloaked mistress.

Doth it not like one to fill capacious waxen tablets in the middle of a Cross-way-when now can be carried on a sixth neck

(Here and there exposed, and in almost a naked chair,

And much resembling the supine Mæcenas)

A signer to what is false; who himself splendid and happy

tive, but will say with Britannicus: "Sed quum in ambiguo sit, de "quo poeta potissimum intelligat, unusquisque, si neutrum horum "probabile visum fuerit, quod ad loci explanationem faciat, exco-"gitet."

61. The Flaminian way.] A road made by Caius Flaminius, colleague of Lepidus, from Rome to Ariminum.

. 62. When he boasted himself.] Jactare se alicui—signifies to recommend, to insinuate one's self into the favour, or good graces of another—as when a man is courting his mistress. By ipse, according to the above interpretation of this passage, we must understand the emperor Nero.

63. Capacious waxen tablets.] These are here called ceras, sometimes they are called ceratæ tabellæ—because they were thin pieces of wood, covered over with wax, on which the ancients wrote with the point of a sharp instrument, called stylus, (see Hor. lib. I. sat. x. 1, 72): it had a blunt end to rub out with. They made up pocket-books with these.

64. Cross-way.] Juvenal means, that a man might please himself by filling a large book with the objects of satire which he meets in passing along the street. Quadrivium properly means a place where four ways meet, and where there are usually most people passing—a proper stand for observation.

—— On a sixth neck.] i. e. In a litter carried by six slaves, who bare the poles on the shoulder, and leaning against the side of the neck. These were called hexaphori, from Gr. $i\xi$, six, and $\varphi_{i\varphi\omega}$, to bear or carry. See sat, vii. l. 141, n.

65. Exposed, &c.] Carried openly to and fro, here and there, through the public streets, having no shame for what he had done to enrich himself.

66. The supine Mæcenas.] By this it appears, that Mæcenas was given to laziness and effeminacy. See sat. xii. l. 39.

Horace calls him Malthinus-from pandanos, which denotes softness and effeminacy. See Hor. lib. i. sat. ii. l. 25.

67. A signer, &c.] Signator signifies a scaler or signer of contracts or wills. Here it means a species of cheat, who imposed false wills and testaments on the heirs of the deceased, supposed to be made in their own favour, or in favour of others with whom they Exiguis tabulis, et gemmâ fecerat udâ?

Occurrit matrona potens, quæ molle Calenum

Porrectura viro miscet sitiente rubetam,

Instituitque rudes melior Locusta propinquas,

Per famam et populum, nigros efferre maritos.

Aude aliquid brevibus Gyaris, et carcere dignum,

Si vis esse aliquis: Probitas Laudatur, et alget

Criminibus debent hortos, prætoria, mensas,

Argentum vetus, et stantem extra pocula caprum.

Quem patitur dormire nurûs corruptor avaræ?

Quem sponsæ turpes, et prætextatus adulter?

shared the spoil. See sat. x. l. 336. and note. Some suppose this to be particularly meant of Tigellinus, a favourite of Nero's, who poisoned three uncles, and by forging their wills, made himself heir to all they had.

68. By small tables. Short testaments, contained in a few words.

Comp. note on l. 63.

A wet gem.] i. e. A seal, which was cut on some precious stone, worn in a ring on the finger, and occasionally made use of to seal deeds or wills—this they wetted to prevent the wax sticking to it. This was formerly known among our forefathers, by the name of a seal-ring.

69. A potent matron occurs, Another subject of satire the poet here adverts to, namely—women who poison their husbands, and this with impunity. The particular person here alluded to, under the description of matrona potens, was, probably, Agrippina, the wife of Claudius, who poisoned her husband, that she might make her son Nero emperor.

Occurs.] Meets you in the public street, and thus occurs to the observation of the satirist. Comp. 1. 63, 4.

69. Calenian wine.] Calenum was a city in the kingdom of Naples, famous for a soft kind of wine.

70. About to reach forth.] Porrectura—the husband is supposed to be so thirsty, as not to examine the contents of the draught; of this she avails herself, by reaching to him some Calenian wine, with poison in it which was extracted from a toad.

71. A better Locusta.] This Locusta was a vile woman, skilfulin preparing poisons. She helped Nero to poison Britannicus, the son of Claudius and Messalina; and Agrippina to dispatch Claudius. The woman alluded to by Juvenal, l. 69. he here styles—melior Locusta—a better Locusta—i. c. more skilled in poisoning than even Locusta herself.

- Her rude neighbours.] i. e. Unacquainted-and unskilled before, in this diabolical art.

72. Through fume and the people.] Setting all reputation and public report at defiance: not caring what people should say.

To bring forth.] For burial—which efferre peculiarly means.

See Ter. And. act. I. sc. i. l. 90.

Has made, with small tables, and with a wet gem? A potent matron occurs, who soft Calenian wine

About to reach forth, her husband thirsting, mixes a toad,

70

And, a better Locusta, instructs her rude neighbours,

Through fame and the people, to bring forth their black husbands.

Dare something worthy the narrow Gyaræ, or a prison,

If you would be somebody. Probity is praised and starves with cold.

To crimes they owe gardens, palaces, tables,

75

Old silver, and a goat standing on the outside of cups.

Whom does the corrupter of a covetous daughter-in-law suffer to sleep?

Whom base spouses, and the noble young adulterer?

72. Black husbands. Their corpses turned putrid and black, with the effects of the poison.

73. Dare.] i. e. Attempt-presume-be not afraid-to commit.

——Something.] Some atrocious crime, worthy of exile, or imprisonment.

- The narrow Gyara. Gyaras was an island in the Ægean sea, small, barren, and desolate—to which criminals were banished.

74. If you would be somebody.] i. e. If you would make yourself taken notice of, as a person of consequence, at Rome. A severe reflection on certain favourities of the emperor, who, by being informers, and by other scandalous actions, had enriched themselves.

—— Probity is praised, &c.] This seems a proverbial saying—and applies to what goes before, as well as to what follows, wherein the poet is shewing, that vice was, in those days, the only way to riches and honours. Honesty and innocence will be commended, but those who possess them, be left to starve.

75. Gardens.] i. e. Pleasant and beautiful retreats, where they had gardens of great taste and expense.

Palaces.] The word prætoria denotes noblemen's seats in the country, as well as the palaces of great men in the city.

Tables.] Made of ivory, marble, and other expensive materials.

76. Old silver.] Ancient plate-very valuable on account of the workmanship.

— A goat standing, &c.] The figure of a goat in curious bass-relief—which animal, as sacred to Bacchus, was very usually expressed on drinking cups.

77. Whom.] i.e. Which of the poets, or writers of satire, can be at rest from writing, or withhold his satiric rage?

— The corrupter.] i. e. The father who takes advantage of the love of money in his son's wife, to debauch her.

78. Base spouses. Lewd and adulterous wives.

The noble young adulterer.] Prætextatus, i. e. the youth, not having laid aside the prætextata, or gown worn by boys, sons of the nobility, till seventeen years of age—yet, in this early period of lite, initiated into the practice of adultery.

VOL. 1.

Si natura negat, facit indignatio versum,
Qualemcunque potest: quales ego, vel Cluvienus.

Ex quo Deucalion, nimbis tollentibus æquor,
Navigio montem ascendit, sortesque poposcit,
Paulatimque animâ caluerunt mollia saxa,
Et maribus nudas ostendit Pyrrha puellas:
Quicquid agunt homines, votum, timor, ira, voluptas,
Gaudia, discursus, nostri est farrago libelli.
Et quando uberior vitiorum copia? quando
Major avaritiæ patuit sinus? alea quando
Hos animos? neque enim loculis comitantibus itur
Ad casum tabulæ, positâ sed luditur arcâ.

79. Indignation makes verse.] Forces one to write, however naturally without talents for it.

80. Such as I, or Cluvienus.] i. e. Make or write. The poet names himself with Cluvienus, (some bad poet of his time,) that he might the more freely satirize him, which he at the same time does, the more severely, by the comparison.

81. From the time that Deucalion.] This and the three following lines relate to the history of the deluge, as described by Ovid. See Met. lib. i. l. 264-315.

82. Ascended the mountain, &c.] Alluding to Ovid:

Mons ibi verticibus petit arduus astra duobus, Nomine Parnassus— Hic ubi Deucalion (nam cætera texerat æquor) Cum consorte tori parvâ rate vectas adhæsit.

—— Asked for lots.] Sortes here means the oracles, or billets, on which the answers of the gods were written. Ovid, (ubi supra,) 1. 367, 8. represents Deucalion, and his wife Pyrrha, resolving to go to the temple of the goddess Themis, to inquire in what manner mankind should be restored.

Numen, et auxilium per sacras quærere sortes

And l. 381. Mota Dea est, sortemque dedit.

Again, l. 389. Verba datæ sortis.

To this Juvenal alludes in this line; wherein sortes may be rendered-oracular answers.

83. The soft stones, &c.] When Deucalion and Pyrrha, having consulted the oracle how mankind might be repaired, were answered, that this would be done by their casting the bones of their great mother behind their backs, they picked stones from off the earth, and cast them behind their backs, and they became men and women.

Jussos lapides sua post vestigia mittunt :

Ponere duritiem cæpere, suumque rigorem,

Mollirique morâ, mollitaque ducere formam, &c. 1b. 1. 399-402.

If nature denies, indignation makes verse, Such as it can: such as I, or Cluvienus. 80 From the time that Deucalian (the showers lifting up the sea) Ascended the mountain with his bark, and asked for lots, And the soft stones by little and little grew warm with life, And Pyrrha shewed to males naked damsels, Whatever men do-desire, fear, anger, pleasure, 85 Joys, discourse—is the composition of my little book. And when was there a more fruitful plenty of vices? when Has a greater bosom of avarise lain open? when the die These spirits?—They do, not go, with purses accompanying To the chance of the table, but a chest being put down is played for. 90

Hence Juvenal says—mollia saxa.

It is most likely that the whole account of the deluge, given by Ovid, is a corruption of the Mosaical history of that event .- Plutarch mentions the dove sent out of the ark.

86. The composition, &c.] Farrago signifies a mixture, an hodgepodge-as we say, of various things mixed together. The poet means, that the various pursuits, inclinations, actions, and passions of men, and all those human follies and vices, which have existed, and have been increasing, ever since the flood, are the subjects of his

88. Bosom of Avarice A metaphorical allusion to the sail of a ship when expanded to the wind—the centre whereof is called sinus—the The larger the sail, and the more open and spread it is, the greater the capacity of the bosom for receiving the wind, and the more powerfully is the ship driven on through the sea.

Thus avarice spreads itself far and wide: it catches the inclinations of men, as the sail the wind, and thus it drives them on in a full course—when more than at present? says the poet.

The die.] A chief instrument of gaming—put here for gaming itself. Meton.

89. These spirits. Animus signifies spirit or courage; and in this sense we are to understand it here. As if the poet said, when was gaming so encouraged? or when had games of hazard, which were forbidden by the law, (except only during the Saturnalia,) the courage to appear so open and frequently as they do now? The sentence is elliptical, and must be supplied with habuit, or some other verb of the kind, to govern-hos animos.

- They do not go with purses, &c.] Gaming has now gotten to such an extravagant height, that gamesters are not content to play for what can be carried in their purses, but stake a whole chest of money at a time—this seems to be implied by the word posita. Pono sometimes signifies—laying a wager—putting down as a stake. See an example of this sense, from Plautus, Ainsw. pono, No. 5.

Prælia quanta illic dispensatore videbis Armigero! simplexne furor sesterția centum Perdere, et horrenti tunicam non reddere servo? Quis totidem erexit villas? quis fercula septem Secreto cœnavit avus? nune sportula primo Limine parva sedet, turbæ rapienda togatæ. Ille tamen faciem prius inspicit, et trepidat ne Suppositus venias, ac falso nomine poscas: Agnitus accipies. Jubet a præcone vocari Ipsos Trojugenas: nam vexant limen et ipsi

93

100

91. How many battles, &c.] i. e. How many attacks on one another at play.

The steward.] Dispensator signifies a dispenser, a steward, one that lays out money, a manager.

92. Armour-bearer.] The armigeri were servants who followed their masters with their shields, and other arms, when they went to fight. The poet still carries on the metaphor of prælia in the preceding line.—There gaming is compared to fighting; here he humourously calls the steward-the armour-bearer, as supplying his master with money, a necessary weapon at a gaming-table, to stake at play, instead of keeping and dispensing it, or laying it out for the usual and honest expenses of the family.

——Simple madness, &c.] All this is a species of madness, but not without mixture of injury and mischief; and therefore may be reckoned something more than mere madness, where such immense sums are thrown away at a gaming-table, as that the servants of the family can't be afforded common decent necessaries. The Romans had their cestertius and sestertium. The latter is here meant, and contains 1000 of the former, which was worth about $1\frac{1}{2}d$. See 1. 106, n.

93. And not give a coat, &c.] The poet here puts one instance, for many, of the ruinous consequences of gaming.

Juvenal, by this, severely censures the gamesters, who had rather lose a large sum at the dice, than lay it out for the comfort, happiness, and decent maintenance of their families.

94. So many villas.] Houses of pleasure for the summer-season. These were usually built and furnished at a vast expense. The poet having inveighed against their squandering at the gaming-table, now attacks their luxury, and prodigality in other respects; and then, the excessive meanness into which they were sunk.

95. Supped in secret, &c.] The ancient Roman nobility, in order to shew their munificence and hospitality, used, at certain times, to make an handsome and splendid entertainment, to which they invited their clients and dependents. Now they shut out these, and provided a sumptuous entertainment for themselves only, which they sat down to in private. Which of our ancestors, says the poet, did this?

-- Now a little basket, &c. | Sportula—a little basket or pan-

How many battles will you see there, the steward Armour bearer! is it simple madness an hundred sestertia

To lose, and not give a coat to a ragged servant?

Who has erected so many villas? What ancestor on seven dishes

Has supped in secret? Now a little basket at the first Threshold is set, to be snatched by the gowned crowd.

But he first inspects the face, and trembles, lest

Put in the place of another you come, and ask in a false name.

Acknowledged you will receive. He commands to be called by the crier

The very descendents of the Trojans: for even they molest the threshold 100

nier, made of a kind of broom called sportum. Kenner, Antiq. p. 375. In this were put victuals, and some small sums of money, to be distributed to the poor clients and dependents at the outward door of the house, who were no longer invited, as formerly, to the entertainment within.

96. To be snatched, &c.] i. e. Eagerly received by the hungry poor clients, who crowded about the door.

— The gowned crowd.] The common sort of people were called turba togata, from the gowns they wore, by which they were distinguished from the higher sort.

See note before on 1. 3.

97. But he.] i. e. The person who distributes the dole.

- First inspects the Face. That he may be certain of the person he gives to.

— And trembles.] At the apprehension of being severely reproved by his master, the great man, if he should make a mistake, by giving people who assume a false name, and pretend themselves to be clients when they are not.

99. Acknowledged, &c.] Agnitus-owned-acknowledged, as one for whom the dole is provided,

Perhaps, in better days, when the clients and dependents of great men were invited to partake of an entertainment within doors, there was a sportula, or dole-basket, which was distributed, at large, to the poor, at the doors of great men's houses.—Now times were altered; no invitation of clients to feast within doors, and no distribution of doles, to the poor at large, without—none now got any thing here, but the excluded clients, and what they got was distributed with the utmost caution, 1. 97, 8.

—— He commands to be called.] i. e. Summoned—called together. The poet is now about to inveigh against the meanness of many of the nobles, and magistrates of Rome, who could suffer themselves to be summoned, by the common crier, in order to share in the distribution of the dole-baskets.

100. The very descendents of the Trojans.] Ipsos Trojugenas—from Troja—or Trojanus—and gigno.—The very people, says he, who boast of their descent from Æneas, and the ancient Trojans, who first came to settle in Italy; even these are so degenerate, as to come and scramble, as it were, among the poor, for a part of the spor-The word ipsos makes the sarcasm the stronger.

Nobiscum: da Prætori, da deinde Tribuno. Sed libertinus prior est: prior, inquit, ego adsum: Cur timeam, dubitemve, locum defendere? quamvis Natus ad Euphratem, molles quod in aure fenestræ Arguerint, licet ipse negem: sed quinque tabernæ Quadringenta parant: quid confert purpura majus Optandum, si Laurenti custodit in agro Conductas Corvinus oves? Ego possideo plus Pallante, et Licinis: expectent ergo Tribuni.

105

100. Molest the threshold. Crowd about it, and are very troublesome. So Hor. lib. i. sat. viii. l. 18.—hunc vexare locum.

101. With us. Avec nous autres—as the French say.

- Give to the Prætor. In Juvenal's time this was a title of a chief magistrate, something like the lord-mayor of London-He was called Prætor Urbanus, and had power to judge matters of law between citizen and citizen. This seems to be the officer here meantbut for a further account of the Prætor, see Ainsw .- Prætor.

101. The Tribune. A chief officer in Rome. The tribunes, at their first institution, were two, afterwards came to be ten-they were keepers of the liberties of the people, against the encroachments of the senate. They were called tribunes, because at first set over the three tribes of the people. See AINSW.—Tribunus—and Tribus.

Juvenal satirically represents some of the chief magistrates and officers of the city, as bawling out to be first served out of the sportula.

102. The libertine. An enfranchised slave. There were many of these in Rome, who were very rich, and very insolent; of one of these we have an example here.

——Is first, &c.] "Hold," says this upstart, "a freedman, rich as "I am, is before the prætor; besides I came first, and I'll be first " served."

103. Why should I fear, &c. I'm neither afraid nor ashamed to challenge the first place.—I'll not give it up to any body.

103-4. Altho' born at the Euphrates. He owns that he was born of servile condition, and came from a part of the world from whence many were sold as slaves. The river Euphrates took its rise in Armenia, and ran through the city of Babylon, which it divided in the midst.

104. The soft holes, &c. The ears of all slaves in the East were bored, as a mark of their servitude. They wore bits of gold by way of ear-rings; which custom is still in the East Indies, and in other parts, even for whole nations; who bore prodigious holes in their ears, and wear vast weights at them. DRYDEN. PLIN. lib. xi. c. 37.

The epithet molles may, perhaps, intimate, that this custom was looked upon at Rome (as among us) as a mark of effeminacy. Or Together with us: "Give to the Prætor-then give to the Tribune." But the libertine is first: I the first, says he, am here present. Why should I fear, or doubt to defend my place? altho' Born at the Euphrates, which the soft holes in my ear Prove, though I should deny it: but five houses 105 Procure 400 (sestertia), what does the purple confer more To be wished for, if, in the field of Laurentum, Corvinus Keeps hired sheep? I possess more the poet, by Hypallage, says-Molles in aure fenestræ-for-fenestræ in molli aure.

Than Pallas and the Licini: let the Tribunes, therefore, wait.

105. Five houses. Tabernæ here may be understood to mean shops or warehouses, which were in the forum, or market place, and which, by reason of their situation, were let to merchants and traders at a great rent.

106. Procure 400.] In reckoning by sesterces, the Romans had an art which may be understood by these three rules:

First: If a numeral noun agree in number, case, and gender, with sestertius, then it denotes so many sestertii—as decem sestertii.

Secondly: If a numeral noun of another case be joined with the genitive plural of sestertius it denotes so many thousand, as decem ses :

tertiûm signifies 10,000 sestertii.

Thirdly: If the adverb numeral be joined, it denotes so many 100,000: as decies sestertium signifies ten hundred thousand sestertii. Or if the numeral adverb be put by itself, the signification is the same: decies or vigesies stand for so many 100,000 sestertii, or, as they say, so many hundred sestertia.

The sestertium contained a thousand sestertii, and amounted to about 171. 16s. 3d. of our money. Kennett, Ant. 374, 5.

After 400-quadringenta-sestertia must be understood, according to the third rule above.

The freedman brags, that the rents of his houses brought him in 400 sestertia, which was a knight's estate.

. - What does the purple, &c. The robes of the nobility and magistrates were decorated with purple. He means, that, though he can't deny that he was born a slave, and came to Rome as such, (and if he were to deny it, the holes in his ears would prove it,) yet, her was now a free citizen of Rome, possessed of a larger private fortune than the prætor or the tribune.-What can even a patrician wish for more? Indeed, "when I see a nobleman reduced to keep sheep for "his livelihood, I can't perceive any great advantage he derives from his nobility; what can it, at best, confer, beyond what I possess?"

107. Corvinus. One of the noble family of the Corvini, but so reduced, that he was obliged to keep sheep, as an hired sheplierd, near Laurentum, in his own native country. Laurentum is a city; of Italy, now called Santo Lorenzo.

· 109. Pallas. A freedman of Claudius.

Vincant divitiæ; sacro nec cedat honori 110 Nuper in hanc urbem pedibus qui venerat albis: Quandoquidem inter nos sanctissima divitiarum Majestas: etsi, funesta Pecunia, templo Nondum habitas, nullas nummorum ereximus aras. Ut colitur Pax, atque Fides, Victoria, Virtus, 115 Quæque salutato crepitat Concordia nido. Sed cum summus honor finito computet anno, Sportula quid referat, quantum rationibus addat: Quid facient comites, quibus hinc toga, calceus hinc est, Et panis, fumusque domi? densissima centum Quadrantes lectica petit, sequiturque maritum Languida, vel prægnans, et circumducitur uxor. Hic petit absenti, notà jam callidus arte, Ostendens vacuam, et clausam pro conjuge sellam: Galla mea est, inquit; citius dimitte: moraris? Profer, Galla, caput. Noli vexare, quiescit.

120

125

109. The Licini. The name of several rich men, particularly of a freedman of Augustus; and of Licinius Crassus, who was surnamed Dives.

110. Let riches prevail. Vincant-overcome-defeat all other pretensions.

Sacred honour. Meaning the tribunes, whose office was held so sacred, that if any one hurt a tribune, his life was devoted to Jupiter, and his family was to be sold at the temple of Ceres.

111. With white feet. It was the custom, when foreign slaves were exposed to sale, to whiten over their naked feet with chalk. This was the token by which they were known.

112. The majesty of riches.] Intimating their great and universal sway among men, particularly at Rome, in its corrupt state, where every thing was venal, which made them reverenced, and almost adored. This intimates too, the command and dominion which the rich assumed over others, and the self-importance which they assumed to themselves—a notable instance of which appears in this impudent freedman.

113. Baleful money. i. e. Destructive—the occasion of many cruel, and ruinous deeds.

114. Altars of money. i. e. No temple dedicated, no altars called aræ nummorum, as having sacrifices offered on them to riches, as there were to peace, faith, concord, &c.

· 116. Which chatters, &c.] Crepito here signifies to chatter like a bird. The temple of Concord, at Rome, was erected by Tiberius, at the request of his mother Livia. About this, birds, such as choughs, storks, and the like, used to build their nests. What the poet says, alludes to the chattering noise made by these birds, particularly when the old ones revisited their nests, after having been out to seek food for their young. See AINSW .- Salutatus, No. 2.

117. The highest honour, &c.] i. e. People of the first rank and dignity.

125

Let riches prevail: nor let him yield to the sacred honour,
Who lately came into this city with white feet:

Since among us the majesty of riches is

Most sacred: altho', O baleful money! in a temple

As yet thou dost not dwell, we have erected no altars of money,

As Peace is worshipp'd, and Faith, Victory, Virtue,

And Concord, which chatters with a visited nest.

But when the highest honour can compute, the year being finished,

What the sportula brings in, how much it adds to its accounts,

What will the attendants do, to whom from hence is a gown, from hence a shoe,

And bread and smoke of the house? A thick crowd of litters

An hundred farthings seek; and the wife follows the husband,

And, sick or pregnant, is led about.

This asks for the absent, cunning in a known art,

Shewing the empty and shut-up sedan instead of the wife.

"It is my Galla," says he, "dismiss her quickly: do you delay?"

"Galla put out your head,, -dont vex her-she is asleep."

117. Can compute, &c.] i. e. Can be so sunk into the most sordid and meanest avarice, as to be reckoning, at the year's end, what they have gained out of these doles which were provided for the poor.

119. The attendants, &c.] The poor clients and followers, who, by these doles, are, or ought to be, supplied with clothes, meat, and fire. What will these do, when the means of their support is thus taken from them by great people?

- From hence.] i. e. By what they receive from the dole-basket.

- A shoe. Shoes to their feet as we say.

120. Smoke of the house. Wood, or other fuel for firing—or firing as we say. The effect, smoke—for the cause, fire. Meton.

- Crowd of litters. The word densissima here denotes - a very great number, a thick crowd of people carried in litters.

121. An hundred farthings.] The quadrans was a Roman coin, the fourth part of an as, in value not quite an halfpenny of our money. An hundred of these were put into the sportula, or dole-basket: and for a share in this paltry sum, did the people of fashion (for such were carried in litters) seek in so eager a manner, as that they crowded the very door up, to get at the sportula.

122. Is led about. The husband lugs about his sick or breeding wife in a litter, and claims her dole.

. 123. This asks for the absent.] Another brings an empty litter, pretending his wife is in it.

Cunning in a known art.] i. c. He had often practised this trick with success.

125. It is my Galla. The supposed name of his wife.

126. Put out your head. i. e. Out of the litter, that I may see you are there,—says the dispenser of the dole.

VOL. I.

Ipse dies pulchro distinguitur ordine rerum;
Sportula, deinde forum, jurisque peritus Apollo,
Atque triumphales, inter quas ausus habere
Nescio quis titulos Ægyptius, atque Arabarches;
Cujus ad effigiem non tantum mejere fas est.
Vestibulis abeunt veteres, lassique clientes,
Votaque deponunt, quanquam longissima conce

130

126. Don't vex her.] "Don't disturb her," replies the husband; "don't disquiet her, she is not very well, and is taking a nap." By these methods he imposes on the dispenser, and gets a dole for his absent wife; though, usually, none was given but to those who came in person—and in order to this, the greatest caution was commonly used. See l. 97. 8.

The violent hurry which this imposter appears to be in (l. 125.) was, no doubt, occasioned by his fear of a discovery, if he staid too long

Thus doth our poet satirize, not only the meanness of the rich in coming to the sportula, but the tricks and shifts which they made use of

to get at the contents of it.

127. The day itself, &c. The poet having satirized the mean avarice of the higher sort, now proceeds to ridicule their idle manner of spending time.

128. The sportula.] See before, l. 95. The day began with attending on this.

The forum.] The common place where courts of justice were kept, and matters of judgment pleaded. Hither they next resorted to entertain themselves, with hearing the causes which were there debated.

Apollo learned in the law. Augustus built and dedicated a temple and library to Apollo, in his palace on mount Palatine; in which were large collections of law-books, as well as the works of all the famous authors in Rome.

Hop. lib. i. epist. iii. l. 16, 17. mentions this-

Et tangere vitat Scripta Palatinus quæcunque recepit Apollo.

But I should rather think, that the poet means here the forum which Augustus built, where it is said, there was an ivory statue of Apollo, which Juvenal represents as—learned in the law, from the constant pleadings of the lawyers in that place. Here idle people used to lounge away their time

129. The triumphals.] The statues of heroes, and kings, and other great men who had triumphed over the enemies of the state. These were placed in great numbers in the forum of Augustus, and in other public parts of the city.

An Ægyptian, &c.] Some obscure low wretch, who for no desert, but only on account of his wealth, had his statue placed there.

130. An Arabian prafect.] Arabarches—So Pompoy is called by

The day itself is distinguised by a beautiful order of things: The sportula, then the forum, and Apollo learned in the law,

And the triumphals: among which, an Ægyptian, I know not who.

Has dared to have titles: and an Arabian præfect;

At whose image it is not right so much as to make water.

The old and tired clients go away from the vestibules, And lay aside their wishes, altho' the man has had a very long

Cic. epist. ad Attic. l. 2. epist. xvii. because he conquered a great part of Arabia, and made it tributary to Rome. But Juvenal means here some infamous character, who had probably been præfect, or vice-roy, over that country, and had, by rapine and extortion, returned to Rome with great riches, and thus got a statue erected to him, like the Ægyptian above mentioned, whom some suppose to have been in a like occupation in Egypt, and therefore called Ægyptius. Arabarches-from Agat or Agasios and agan.

131. To make water.] There was a very severe law on those who did this, at or near the images of great men. This our poet turns into a jest on the statues above mentioned. Some are for giving the line another turn, as if Juvenal meant, that it was right, or lawful, not only to do this—non tantum meiere, but something worse. But I take the first interpretation to be the sense of the author, by which he would intimate, that the statues of such vile people were not only erected among those of great men, but were actually protected like them, from all marks of indignity. So Pers. sat. i. l. 114. Sacer est locus, ite prophani extra majite.

132. The old and tired clients. The clients were retainers, or dependents, on great men, who became their patrons: to these the clients paid all reverence, honour, and observance. The patrons, on their part, afforded them their interest, protection, and defence. They also, in better times, made entertainments, to which they invited their clients. See before, note on l. 95. Here the poor clients are represented, as wearied out with waiting, in long expectation of a supper, and going away in despair, under their disappointment. Cliens is derived from Greek xxus, celebro-celebrem reddo-for it was no small part of their business to flatter and praise their patrons.

--- Vestibules. The porches, or entries of great men's houses.

VIRG. Æn. ii. l. 469. Vestibulum ante ipsum, primoque in limine.

131. Pot-herbs. Caulis properly denotes the stalk or stem of an herb, and, by Synecdoche, any kind of pot-herb—especially coleworts, or cabbage. See Ainsw. Caulis, No. 2.

- To be bought.] The hungry wretches go from the patron's door, in order to lay out the poor pittance which they may have received from the sportula, in some kind of pot-herbs, and in buying a little firewood, in order to dress them for a scanty meal.

The poet seems to mention this, by way of contrast to what fol-bws.

Spes homini: caules miseris, atque ignis emendus. Optima sylvarum interea, pelagique vorabit 135 Rex horum, vacuisque toris tantum ipse jacebit: Nam de tot pulchris, et latis orbibus, et tam Antiquis, una comedunt patrimonia mensa. Nullus jam parasitus erit: sed quis feret istas Luxuriæ sordes? quanta est gula, quæ sibi totos 140 Ponit apros, animal propter convivia natum? Pæna tamen præsens, cum tu deponis amictus Turgidus, et crudum pavonem in balnea portas: Hinc subitæ mortes, atque intestata senectus. It nova, nec tristis per cunctas fabula cœnas: 145 Ducitur iratis plaudendum funus amicis,

135. Their lord.] i. e. The patron of these clients. Rex not only signifies a king-but any great or rich man: so a patron. See Juv. This from the power and dominion which he exercised over his clients. Hence, as well as from his protection and care over them, he was called patronus, from the Greek warewr-wros-from warne, a father.

Mean while.] i. e. While the poor clients are forced to take up with a few boiled coleworts.

The best things of the woods, &c.] The woods are to be ransacked for the choicest game, and the sea for the finest sorts of fish, to satisfy the patron's gluttony: these he will devour, without asking any body to partake with him.

136. On the empty beds. The Romans lay along on beds, or couches, at their meals. Several of these beds are here supposed to be round the table which were formerly occupied by his friends and clients, but they are now vacant—not a single guest is invited to occupy them, or to partake of the entertainment with this selfish glutton.

137. Dishes.] Which were round—in an orbicular shape—hence called orbes.

—— Beautiful. Of a beautiful pattern—ancient—valuable for their antiquity; made, probably, by some artists of old time.

138. At one meal. Mensa-lit. table-which (by Menton) stands Thus they waste and devour their estates, here for what is set upon it. in this abominable and selfish gluttony.

139. No parasite.] From wage, near—and outer, food.

These were a kind of jesters, and flatterers, who were frequently invited to the tables of the great; and who, indeed, had this in view, when they flattered and paid their court to them. Terence, in his Eunuch, has given a most spirited and masterly specimen of parasites, in his inimitable character of Gnatho.

But so fallen were the great into the meanest avarice, and into the most sordid luxury, that they could gormandize by themselves, without even inviting a parasite to flatter or divert them. But who, even though a parasite, would endure (feret) such a sight?

Expectation of a supper: pot-herbs for the wretches, and fire is to be bought.

Mean while their lord will devour the best things of the woods, and of the sea, 135

And he only will lie on the empty beds:

For from so many beautiful, and wide, and ancient dishes,

They devour patrimonies at one meal.

There will now be no parasite: but who will bear that Filthiness of luxury? how great is the gullet, which, for itself, puts 140

Whole boars, an animal born for feasts?

Yet there is a present punishment, when you put off your clothes,

Turgid, and carry an indigested peacock to the baths:

Hence sudden deaths, and intestate old age.

A new story, nor is it a sorrowful one, goes thro' all companies: 145 A funeral, to be applauded by angry friends, is carried forth.

140. Filthiness of luxury.] Sordes—nastiness—a happy word to describe the beastliness of such gluttony with regard to the patron himself—and its stinginess, and niggardliness, with respect to others.

--- How great is the gullet.] The gluttonous appetite of these men.

---- Puts.] Ponit-sets-places on the table.

141. Whole boars, &c.] A whole boar at a time—the wild boar, especially the Tuscan, was an high article of luxury, at all grand entertainments. The word natum is here used as the word natis. Horelib. I. od. xxvii. l. 1.—See also Ovid, Met. lib. xv. l. 117.

Quid meruistis, oves, placidum pecus, inque tuendos Natum homines?

Juvenal speaks as if boars were made and produced for no other purpose than convivial entertainments.

143. Turgid.] Turgidus—swoln—puffed up with a full stomach.

—— An indigested peacock.] Which you have devoured, and which is crude and indigested within you.

— To the baths.] It was the custom to bathe before meals: the contrary was reckoned unwholesome. See Pers. sat. iii. l. 98—105.

and Hor. Epist. lib. I. Ep. vi. l. 61.

144. Sudden deaths.] Apoplexies and the like, which arise from too great repletion. Bathing, with a full stomach, must be likely to occasion these, by forcing the blood with too great violence towards the brain.

Intestate old age.] i. e. Old gluttons thus suddenly cut off, without time to make their wills.

145. A new story, &c.] A fresh piece of news, which nobody is sorry for.

146. A funeral is carried forth.] The word ducitur is peculiarly used to denote the carrying forth a corpse to burial, or to the funeral pile. So Vine. Geor. iv. 256.

Nil erit ulterius, quod nostris moribus addat
Posteritas: eadem cupient, facientque minores.
OMNE'IN PRECIPITI VITIUM STETIT: utere velis, Totos pande sinus. Dicas hic forsitan, "unde

150

"Ingenium par materiæ? unde illa priorum "Scribendi guodcunque animo flagrante liberet

"Simplicitas, cujus non audeo dicere nomen?

"Quid refert dictis ignoscat Mutius, an non?
Pone Tigellinum, tædå lucebis in illå,

155

"Qua stantes ardent, qui fixo gutture fument,

" Et latum medià sulcum deducis arenà.

Exportant tectis, et tristia, funera Ducunt.

Owing, perhaps, to the procession of the friends, &c. of the deceased, which went before the corpse, and led it to the place of burning, or interment.

146. Applauded by angry friends.] Who, disobliged by having nothing left them, from the deceased's dying suddenly, and without a will, express their resentment by rejoicing at his death, instead of lamenting it. See Pers. sat. vi. 33, 4.

148. To our morals.] Our vices and debaucheries, owing to the depravity and corruption of our morals.

Those born after us.] Minores, i. e. natu-our descendents;

the opposite of majores natu-our ancestors.

149. All vice is at the height.] In praccipiti stetit—hath stood—hath been for some time at its highest pitch—at its summit—so that our posterity can carry it no higher. Compare the two preceding lines.

Vice is at stand, and at the highest flow.

On tip toe. AINSW.

149—50. Use sails—Spread, &c.] A metaphor taken from sailors, who, when they have a fair wind, spread open their sails as much as they can. The poet here insinuates, that there is now a fair opportunity for satire to display all its powers.

150—1. Whence is there genius, &c.] Here he is supposed to be interrupted by some friend, who starts an objection, on his invocation to Satire to spread all its sails, and use all its powers against the vices of the times.

Where shall we find genius equal to the matter? equal to range so wide a field—equal to the description, and due correction of so much vice?

151. Whence that simplicity, &c.] That simple and undisguised freedom of reproof, which former writers exercised. Alluding, perhaps, to Lucilius, Horace, and other writers of former times.

153. A burning mind. Inflamed with zeal, and burning with satiric rage against the vices and abuses of their times.

— Of which I dare not, &c.] It is hardly safe now to name, or mention, the liberty of the old writers; it is so sunk and gone, that the very naming it is dangerous.

There will be nothing farther, which posterity can add

To our morals: those born after us, will desire, and do the same things.

ALL VICE IS AT THE HEIGHT. Use sails,

Spread their whole bosons open. Here, perhaps, you'll say—
"Whence 150

"Is their genius equal to the matter? Whence that simplicity

"Of former (writers), of writing whatever they might like, with " A burning mind, of which I dare not tell the name.

"What signifies it, whether Mutius might forgive what they said, or not?

"Set down Tigellinus, and you will shine in that torch,

155

"In which standing they burn, who with fixed throat smoke;

" And you draw out a wide furrow in the midst of sand.

154. Mutius.] Titus Mutius Albutius—a very great and powerful man. He was satirized by Lucilius, and this, most severely by name. See note on Pers. sat. i. l. 115.

Lucilius feared no bad consequences of this, in those days of liberty.

155. Set down Tigellinus.] i. e. Expose him as an object of satire—satirize this creature and infamous favourite of Nero's, and most terrible will be the consequence.

—— In that torch.] This cruel punishment seems to have been proper to incendiaries, in which light the poet humourously supposes the satirizers of the emperor's favourites, and other great men, to be looked upon at that time.

After Nero had burnt Rome, to satisfy his curiosity with the prospect, he contrived to lay the odium on the Christians, and charged them with setting the city on fire. He caused them to be wrapped round with garments, which were bedaubed with pitch, and other combustible matters, and set on fire at night, by way of torches to enlighten the streets—and thus they miserably perished. See Kennett, Ant. p. 147.

156. Standing. In an erect posture.

--- With fixed throat. Fastened by the neck to a stake.

157. And you draw out a wide furrow, &c.] After all the danger which a satirist runs of his life, for attacking Tigellinus, or any other minion of the emperor's—all his labour will be in vain; there is no hope of doing any good. It would be like ploughing in the barren sand, which would yield nothing to reward your pains.

Commentators have given various explanations of this line, which is very difficult, and almost unintelligible where the copies read deducet, as if relating to the fumant in the preceding line; but this cannot well be, that the plural should be expressed by the third person singular. They talk of the sufferers making a trench in the sand, by running round the post, to avoid the flames—but how can this be, when the person has the combustibles fastened round him, and

- " Qui dedit ergo tribus patruis aconita, vehetur
- " Pensilibus plumis, atque illinc despiciet nos?
- "Cum veniet contra, digito compesce labellum:
- "Accusator erit, qui verbum dixerit, hic est.
- "Securus licet Æneam, Rutilumque ferocem
- "Committas: nulli gravis est percussus Achilles:
- " Aut multum quæsitus Hylas, urnamque secutus.

must be in the midst of fire, go where he may?—Besides, this idea does not agree with fixo gutture, which implies being fastened, or fixed, so as not to be able to stir.

Instead of deducet, or deducit, I should think deducis the right reading, as others have thought before me. This agrees in number and person, with lucebis, l. 155, and gives us an easy and natural solution of the observation; viz. that, after all the danger incurred, by satirizing the emperor's favourites, no good was to be expected; they were too bad to be reformed.

The Greeks had a proverbial saying, much like what I contended for here, to express labouring in vain—viz. 'Appen pelosis—Arenam metiris, you measure the sand—i. e. of the sea.

Juvenal expresses the same thought, sat. vii. 48, 9, as I would suppose him to do in this line:

Nos tamen hoc agimus, tenuique in pulvere sulcos Ducimus, et littus sterili versamus aratro.

158. Wolf's-bane.] Aconitum is the Latin for this poisonous herb; but it is used in the plural, as here, to denote other sorts of poison, or poison in general. See Ovip, Met. i. 147.

Lurida terribiles miscent Aconita novercæ.

— Three uncles.] Tigellinus is here meant, who poisoned three uncles that he might possess himself of their estates. And, after their death, he forged wills for them, by which he became possessed of all they had. He likewise impeached several of the nobility, and got their estates. See more in Ainsw. under Tigellinus.

——Shall he, therefore, &c.] "And because there may be danger "in writing satire, as things now are, is such a character as this to "triumph in his wickedness unmolested? Shall he be carried about in "state, and look down with contempt upon other people, and shall I "not dare to say a word?"—This we may suppose Juvenal to mean, on hearing what is said about the danger of writing satire, and on being cautioned against it.

159. With pensile feathers. Pensilis means, literally, hanging in the air. It was a piece of luxury, to have a mattress and pillows stuffed with feathers; on which the great man reposed himself in his litter. Hence the poet makes use of the term pensilibus to plumis, as being in the litter which hung in the air, as it was carried along by the bearers.

See before, l. 32, and note; and l. 64, 5, and note.

— From thence.] From his easy litter.
— Look down.] With contempt and disdain.

160. When he shall come opposite.] The moment you meet him,

- "Shall he, therefore, who gave wolf's bane to three uncles, be car-
- "With pensile feathers, and from thence look down on us?"
- "When he shall come opposite, restrain your lip with your fin-
- "There will be an accuser (of him) who shall say the word-"That's he."
- "Though, secure, Æneas and the fierce Rutilian
- "You may match: smitten Achilles is grievous to none:
- "Or Hylas much sought, and having followed his pitcher.

carried along in his stately litter, (says Juvenal's supposed adviser.) instead of saying any thing, or taking any notice of him, let him pass quietly-lay your hand on your mouth-hold your tongue-be

161. There will be an accuser.] An informer, who will lay an accusation before the emperor, if you do but so much as point with your finger, or utter with your lips-" That's he." Therefore, that neither of these may happen, lay your finger upon your lips, and make not the slightest remark.

- (Of him) who.] Illi or illius is here understood before qui, &c. 162. Though, secure.] Though you must not meddle with the living, you may securely write what you please about the dead.

- Eneas and the fierce Rutilian. i. e. Eneas, and Turnus, a king of the Rutilians, the rival of Æneas, and slain by him. See Virg. Æn. xii. 919, &c.

163. You may match.] Committas—is a metaphorical expression; taken from matching or pairing gladiators, or others, in single combat.

- Martial says:

Cum Juvenale meo cur me committere tentas?

"Why do you endeavour to match me with my friend Juvenal?"

i. e. in a poetical contest with him.

By committaes we are therefore to understand, that one might very safely write the history of Æneas and Turnus, and match them together in fight—as Virgil has done.

- Smitten Achilles. Killed by Paris in the temple of Apollo. —— Is grievous to none.] Nobody will get into danger, or trouble, by writing the history of this event.

164: Hylas much sought. By Hercules when he had lost him.

See Virg. ecl. vi. 43, 44.

- Followed his pitcher. With which he was sent, by Hercules, to the river Ascanius to draw some water: where being seen, and fallen in love with, by three river-nymphs, they pulled him into the stream.

On subjects like these, saith the adviser, you may say what you please; and nobody will take offence; but beware of attacking the vices of living characters, however infamous or obnoxious.

"Ense velut stricto quoties Lucilius ardens

"Infremuit, rubet auditor, cui frigida mens est

" Criminibus, tacità sudant præcordia culpà :

"Inde iræ, et lachrymæ. Tecum prius ergo voluta

"Hæc animo ante tubas; galeatum sero duelli "Pœnitet." Experiar quid concedatur in illos, Quorum Flaminiâ tegitur cinis, atque Latinâ.

170

165. Ardent.] Inflamed with fatiric rage against the vices of his day.

166. Raged.] Infremuit—roared aloud, in his writings, which were as terrible to the vicious, as the roaring of a lion—which the verb in fremo signifies: hence Met. to rage violently, or tumultuously.

--- Reddens. With anger and shame.

166—7. Frigid with crimes.] Chilled, as it were, with horror of conscience—their blood ran cold—as we should say.

167. The bosom. Præcordia—lit. the parts about the heart—supposed to be the seat of moral sensibility.

—— Sweats.] Sweating is the effect of hard labour.—Sudant is here used metaphorically, to denote the state of a mind labouring, and toiling under the grievous burden of a guilty conscience. This image is finely used—Mat. xi. 28.

168. Anger and tears.] Anger at the satirist—tears of vexation and sorrow at being exposed.

169. Before the trumpets.] A metaphor taken from the manner of giving the signal for battle, which was done with the sound of trumpets.

Think well, says the adviser, before you sound the alarm for your attack-weigh well all hazards before you begin.

— The helmeted, & c.] When once a man has gotten his helmet on, and advances to the combat, it is too late to change his mind. Once engaged in writing satire, you must go through, there's no retreating.

170. I'll try, &c.] Well, says Juvenal, since the writing satire on the living is so dangerous, I'll try how far it may be allowed me to satirize the dead.

Hence he writes against no great and powerful person, but under the feigned name of some vicious character that lived in past time.

171. Whose ashes are covered.] When the bodies were consumed on the funeral pile, the ashes were put into urns and buried.

— The Flaminian and Latin way.] These were two great roads, or ways, leading from Rome to other parts. In the via Flaminia and via Latina, the urns and remains of the nobles were buried, and had monuments erected. See sat. v. l. 55. Hence have been so often found in ancient Rome inscriptions on monuments—Siste viator.

It was ordered by the law of the twelve tables, that nobody should be buried within the city; hence the urns of the great were buried, and their monuments were erected, on those celebrated roads

"As with a drawn sword, as often as Lucilius ardent

"Raged—the hearer reddens, who has a mind frigid "With crimes; the bosom sweats with silent guilt:

"Hence anger and tears. Therefore first revolve, with thyself,

"These things in thy mind, before the trumpets: the helmeted tale of a fight

"Repents." I'll try what may be allowed towards those, Whose ashes are covered in the Flaminian and Latin way.

or ways. For the Flaminian way, see before, l. 61, note. The Via Latina was of great extent, reaching from Rome, through many famous cities, to the farthest part of Latium.

END OF THE FIRST SATIRE.

SATIRA

ARGUMENT.

The Poet, in this satire, inveighs against the hypocrisy of the philosophers and priests of his time—the effeminacy of military officers-and magistrates. Which corruption of manners, as well

LTRA Sauromatas fugere hinc libet, et glacialem Oceanum, quoties aliquid de moribus audent Qui Curios simulant, et Bacchanalia vivunt. Indocti primum: quanquam plena omnia gypso Chrysippi invenias: nam perfectissimus horum est, Si quis Aristotelem similem, vel Pittacon emit, Et jubet archetypos pluteum servare Cleanthis.

Line 1. I could wish. Libet-lit. it liketh me.

——Sauromatæ. A northern barbarous people: the same with the Sarmatæ. Ov. Trist. ii. 198, calls them Sauromatæ truces.

1-2. Icy ocean. The northern ocean, which was perpetually frozen. Lucan calls it Scythicum pontum (Phars. l. 1.)—Scythia bordering on its shore.

> Et qua bruma rigens, et nescia vere remitti, Astringit Scythicum glaciali frigore pontum.

The poet means, that he wishes to leave Rome, and banish himself, though to the most inhospitable regions, whenever he hears such hypocrites, as he afterwards describes, talk on the subject of mora-

2. They dare. i. e. as often as they have the andacity, the daring impudence to declaim or discourse about morals.

3. Curii. Curius Dentatus was thrice consul of Rome: he was remarkable for his courage, honesty, and frugality.

—— Live (like) Bacchanals.] Their conduct is quite opposite to their profession; for while they make an outward shew of virtue and sobriety, as if they were so many Curii, they, in truth, addict themselves to those debaucheries and impurities, with which the feasts of Bacchus were celebrated. These were called Bacchanalia. them described, Liv. xxxix. 8.

Bacchanalia stands here for Bacchanaliter. Græcism.-These are frequently found in Juvenal and Persius.

4. Unlearned. Their pretences to learning are as vain and empty as to virtue and morality.

SATIRE II.

ARGUMENT.

among them, as among others, and, more particularly, certain unnatural vices, he imputes to the atheism, and infidelity, which then prevailed among all ranks.

COULD wish to fly hence, beyond the Sauromatæ, and the icy Ocean, as often as they dare any thing concerning morals,

Who feign (themselves) Curii, and live (like) Bacchanals. First they are unlearned: tho' all things full with plaster

Of Chrysippus you may find: for the most perfect of these is, If any one buys Aristotle like, or Pittacus,

And commands a book-case to keep original images of Cleanthes.

4—5. Plaster of Chrysippus.] Gypsum signifies any kind of parget or plaster (something, perhaps, like our plaster of Paris) of which images, busts, and likenesses of the philosophers were made, and set up, out of a veneration to their memories, as ornaments, in the libraries and studies of the learned: in imitation of whom, these ignorant pretenders to learning and philosophy set up the busts and images of Chrysippus, Aristotle, &c. that they might be supposed admirers and followers of those great men.

Omnia plena—denotes the affectation of these people, in sticking up these images, as it were, in every corner of their houses. Chrysippus was a stoic philosopher, scholar to Zeno, and a great logician.

5. The most perfect of these.] If any one buys the likeness of Aristotle, &c. he is ranked in the highest and most respected class among these people.

6. Aristotle like.] An image resembling or like Aristotle, who was the scholar of Plato, and the father of the sect called Peripatetics, from are marte, circumambulo—because they disputed walking about the school.

Pittacus.] A philosopher of Mytelene. He was reckoned one of the seven wise men of Greece.

7. Original images.] Those which were done from the life were called archetypi: from the Greek αρχη—beginning, and τυπος—form. Hence αρχετυπον, Lat. archetypus, any thing at first hand, that is done originally.

Cleanthes.] A stoic philosopher, successor to Zeno the founder of the sect.

Fronti nulla fides: quis enim non vieus abundat Tristibus obscœnis? castigas turpia, cum sis Inter Socraticos notissima fossa cinædos? 10 Hispida membra quidem, et duræ, per brachia setæ Promittunt atrocem animum: sed podice lævi Cæduntur tumidæ, medico ridente, mariscæ. Rarus sermo illis, et magna libido tacendi, Atque supercilio brévior coma; verius ergo, 15 Et magis ingenue Peribonius: hunc ego fatis Imputo, qui vultu morbum, incessuque fatetur. Horum simplicitas miserabilis, his furor ipse Dat veniam: sed pejores, qui talia verbis Herculis invadunt, et de virtute locuti 20 Clunem agitant: ego te ceventem, Sexte, verebor,

8. No credit, &c.] There is no trusting to outward appearance.

9. With grave obscenes.] i. e. Hypocrites of a sad countenance; grave and severe as to their outward aspect, within full of the most horrid lewdness and obscenities, which they practise in secret.

The poet uses the word obscœnis substantively, by which he marks them the more strongly.

— Dost thou reprove, &c.] Dost thou censure such filthy things (turpia) in others, who art thyself nothing but obscenity?

The poet here by an apostrophe, as turning the discourse to some particular person, reproves all such. Like St. Paul, Rom. ii. 1—3.

10. Among the Socratic, & c.] i. e. Among those, who, though infamously vicious, yet profess to be followers, and teachers of the doctrine and discipline of Socrates, who was the first and great teacher of ethics or moral philosophy.

But it is not improbable, that the poet here glances at the incontinence which was charged on Socrates himself. See Farnary, n. on this line; and Leland on Christian Rev. vol. ii. p. 133, 4; and HOLYDAY, note c.

12. I would here, once for all, advertise the reader, that, in this, and in all other passages, which, like this, must appear filthy and offensive in a literal translation, I shall only give a general sense.

15. And hair shorter than the eye-brow. i. e. Cut so short as not to reach so low as the eye-brow. This was done to avoid the suspicion of being what they were, for wearing long hair was looked upon as a shrewd sign of effeminacy. It was a proverb among the Greeks, that "none who wore long hair were free from the unnatural vices of the Cinædi." May not St. Paul allude to this, 1 Cor. xi. 14. where $\varphi_{\psi_0\eta_0\et

16. Peribonius.] Some horrid character, who made no secret of

No credit to the countenance: for what street does not abound With grave obscenes? dost thou reprove base (actions) when thou art

A most noted practitioner among the Socratic catamites? 10 Rough limbs indeed, and hard bristles on the arms, Promise a fierce mind: but evident effects of unnatural Lewdness expose you to derision and contempt. Talk is rare to them, and the fancy of keeping silence great, And hair shorter than the eye-brow: therefore more truly, 15 And more ingenuously, Peribonius: him I to the fates Impute, who in countenance and gait confesses his disease. The simplicity of these is pitiable; these madness itself Excuses: but worse are they who such things with words Of Hercules attack, who talk of virtue, and indulge 20 Themselves in horrid vice. Shall I fear thee, Sextus, his impurities, and, in this acted more ingenuously, and more according to truth, than these pretended philosophers did.

16. Impute him. Ascribe all his vile actions.

To the fates.] To his destiny, so that he can't help being that he is. The ancients had high notions of judicial astrology, and held that persons were influenced all their lives by the stars which presided at their birth, so as to guide and fix their destiny ever after.

17. His disease.] His besetting sin, (Comp. sat. ix. l. 49. n.) or rather, perhaps, a certain disease which was the consequence of his impurities, and which affected his countenance and his gait, so as to proclaim his shame to every body he met. What this disease was, may appear from lines 12, 13, of this Satire, as it stands in the original. Perhaps Rom. i. 27, latter part, may allude to something of this sort.

18. The simplicity of these. The undisguised and open manner of such people, who thus proclaim their vice, is rather pitiable, as it may be reckoned a misfortune, rather than any thing else, to be born with such a propensity. See notes on l. 16.

These madness itself, &c. Their ungovernable madness in the service of their vices, their inordinate passion, stands as some excuse for their practices, at least comparatively with those who affect to condemn such characters as Peribonius, and yet do the same that he does.

20. Of Hercules.] This alludes to the story of Hercules, who, when he was a youth, uncertain in which way he should go, whether in the paths of virtue, or in those of pleasure, was supposed to see an apparition of two women, the one Virtue, the other Pleasure, each of which used many arguments to gain him-but he made choice of Virtue, and repulsed the other with the severest reproaches. See XEN. Memor. and Cic. de Offic. lib. i.

21. Sextus Some infamous character of the kind above mentioned.

30

Infamis Varillus ait? qua deterior te?
Loripedem rectus derideat, Æthiopian aibus.
Quis tulerit Gracchos de seditione querentes?
Quis cœlum terris non misceat, et mare cœlo,
Si fur displiceat Verri, aut homicida Miloni?
Clodius accuset mœchos, Catilina Cethegum?
In tabulam Syllæ si dicant discipuli tres?
Qualis erat nuper tragico pollutus adulter
Concubitu: qui tunc leges revocabat amaras
Omnibus, atque ipsis Veneri Martique timendas:
Cum tot abortivis fæcundam Julia vulvam
Solveret et patruo similes effunderet offas.
Nonne igitur jure, ac merito, vitia ultima fietos

22. Varillus.] Another of the same stamp. The poet here supposes one of these wretches as gravely and severely reproaching the other. What! says Varillus, in answer, need I fear any thing you can say? in what can you make me out to be worse than yourself?

23. Let the strait, &c.] These proverbial expressions mean to expose the folly and impudence of such, who censure others for vices which they themselves practise. See Matt. vii. 3—5. Hor. sat. vii.

lib. ii. l. 40-2.

This sentiment is pursued and exemplified in the instances following.

24. The Gracchi. Caius and Tiberius, tribunes, who raised great disturbances, on their introducing the Agrarian law, to divide the common fields equally among the people. At length they were both slain: Tiberius, as he was making a speech to the people, by Publius Nasica; and Caius, by the command of the consul Opimius.

25. Mix heaven with earth. i. e. Exclaim in the loudest and strongest terms, like him in Terence,

O cœlum! O terra! O maria Neptuni!

26. Verres.] Prætor in Sicily, who was condemned and banished for plundering that province.

--- Milo. He killed P. Clodius, and was unsuccessfully defended by Tully.

27. Clodius.] A great enemy to Cicero, and the chief promoter of his banishment. This Clodius was a most debauched and profligate person. He debauched Pompeia the wife of Cæsar, and likewise his own sister. Soon after Cicero's return, Clodius was slain by Milo, and his body burnt in the Curia Hostilia.

—— Catiline Cethegus.] i. e. If Catiline were to accuse Cethegus. These were two famous conspirators against the state. See SALLUST, bell. Catilin.

28. The table of Sylla.] Sylla was a noble Roman of the family of the Scipios. He was very cruel, and first set up tables of proscription, or outlawry, by which many thousand Romans were put to death in cold blood.

Says infamous Varillus, by how much (am I) worse than thou art?

Let the strait deride the bandy-legged—the white the Æthiopian.

Who could have borne the Gracchi complaining about sedition?

Who would not mix heaven with earth, and the sea with heaven, 25

If a thief should displease Verres, or an homicide Milo?

If Clodius should accuse adulterers, Catiline Cethegus?

If three disciples should speak against the table of Sylla?

Such was the adulterer lately polluted with a tragical

Intrigue: who then was recalling laws, bitter

To all, and even to be dreaded by Mars and Venus themselves:

When Julia her fruitful womb from so many abortives

Released, and poured forth lumps resembling her uncle.

Do not therefore, justly and deservedly, the most vicious

28. Three disciples.] There were two triumvirates, the one consisting of Cæsar, Pompey, and Crassus, the other of Augustus, Antony, and Lepidus, who followed Sylla's example, and therefore are called disciples, i. e. in cruelty, bloodshed, and murder.

29. The adulterer. Domitian. He took away Domitia Longina from her husband Ælius Lamia.

29—30. A tragical intrigue.] He debauched Julia, the daughter of his brother Titus, though married to Sabinus. After the death of Titus, and of Sabinus, whom Domitian caused to be assassinated, he openly avowed his passion for Julia, but was the death of her, by giving her medicines to make her miscarry. See below, l. 32, 3.

30. Recalling laws.] At the very time when Domitian had this tragical intrigue with his niece Julia, he was reviving the severe laws of Julius Cæsar against adultery, which were afterwards made more severe by Augustus.

30.—1. Bitter to all.] Severe and rigid to the last degree. Many persons of both sexes, Domitian put to death for adultery. See Univ. Hist. vol. xv. p. 52.

31. Mars and Venus.] They were caught together by Vulcan, the fabled husband of Venus, by means of a net with which he inclosed them. Juvenal means, by this, to satirize the zeal of Domitian against adultery in others, (while he indulged, not only this, but incest also in his own practice,) by saying, that it was so great, that he would not only punish men, but gods also, if it came in his way so to do.

32. Abortives.] Embryos, of which Julia was made to miscarry.

33. Lumps.] Offas, lumps of flesh, crude births, deformed, and so resembling her uncle Domitian, the incestuous father of them.

34. Justly and deservedly. With the highest reason and justice. — The most vicious. Ultima vitia, i. e. ultimi vitiosi, the most ubandoned, who are to the utmost degree vicious, so that they may be termed themselves—vices. The abstract is here put for the concrete. Met.

VOL. I.

Contemnunt Scauros, et castigata remordent?
Non tulit ex illis torvum Laronia quendam
Clamantem toties, ubi nunc lex Julia! dormis?
Atque ita subridens: felicia tempora! quæ te Moribus opponunt: habeat jam Roma pudorem;
Tertius e cœlo cecidit Cato. Sed tamen unde
Hæc emis, hirsuto spirant opobalsama collo
Quæ tibi? ne pudeat dominum monstrare tabernæ:
Quod si vexantur leges, ac jura, citari

40

35. Despise.] Hold them in the most sovereign contempt, for their impudence in daring to reprove others for being vicious.

The feigned Scauri.] Æmilius Scaurus, as described by Sallust, bell. Jugurth. was a nobleman, bold, factious, greedy of power, honour, and riches, but very artful in disguising his vices. Juvenal therefore may be supposed to call these hypocrites fictos, as feigning to be what they were not—Scauros, as being like Æ. Scaurus, appearing outwardly grave and severe, but artfully, like him, concealing their vices.

However, I question whether the character of Scaurus be not rather to be gathered from his being found among so many truly great and worthy men—Sat. xi. l. 90, 1. Pliny also represents him as a man summæ integritatis, of the highest integrity. This idea seems to suit best with fictos Scauros, as it leads us to consider these hypocrites as feigning themselves men of integrity and goodness, and as seeming to resemble the probity and severity of manners for which Scaurus was eminent, the better to conceal their vices, and to deceive other people.

And being reproved, bite again.] Such hypocrites are not only despised by the most openly vicious for their insincerity, but whenever they have the impudence to reprove vice, even in the most abandoned, these will turn again and retaliate: which is well expressed by the word remordent.

36. Laronia. Martial, cotemporary with Juvenal, describes a woman of this name as a rich widow.

Abnegat et retinet nostrum Laronia servum, Respondens, orba est, dives, anus, vidua.

By what Juvenal represents her to have said, in the following lines, she seems to have had no small share of wit.

- Did not endure.] She could not bear him; she was out of all patience.

Sour. Crabbed, stern in his appearance. Or torvum may be here put for the adverb torve—torve—clamantem. Græcism. See above, I. 3, and note.

- From among them.] i. e. One of these dissemblers-one out of this hypocritical herd.

37. Crying out so often.] Repeating aloud his seeming indignation against vice, and calling down the vengeance of the law against lewdness and effeminacy.

Despise the feigned Scauri, and being reproved, bite again? 35 Laronia did not endure a certain sour one from among them Crying out so often, "Where is now the Julian law? dost thou " sleep?"

And thus smiling: "Happy times! which thee

" Oppose to manners: now Rome may take shame:

- " A third Cato is fallen from heaven :- but yet whence 40 " Do you buy these perfumes which breathe from your rough
- " Neck? don't be ashamed to declare the master of the shop;
- " But if the statutes and laws are disturbed, the Scantinian

37. Where is the Julian law? Against adultery and lewdness-(see l. 30, note) why is it not executed ?—As it then stood, it punished adultery and sodomy with death.

- Dost thou sleep ? Art thou as regardless of these enormities, as a person fast asleep is of what passes about him?

38. And thus smiling.] Laronia could not refrain herself at hearing this, and, with a smile of the utmost contempt, ready almost at the same time to laugh in his face, thus jeers him.

—— Happy times! &c. That have raised up such a reformer as thou art, to oppose the evil manners of the age!

29. Now Rome may take shame.] Now, to be sure, Rome will blush, and take shame to herself, for what is practised within her walls, since such a reprover appears. Irony.

40. A third Cato. Cato Censorius, as he was called, from his great gravity and strictness in his censorship; and Cato Uticensis, so called from his killing himself at Utica, a city of Africa, were men highly esteemed as eminent moralists: to these, says Laronia, (continuing her ironical banter,) heaven has added a third Cato, by sending us so severe and respectable a moralist as thou art.

41. Perfumes. Opobalsama—οπος βαλσαμι-i. e. Succus balsa-This was some kind of perfumery, which the effeminate among the Romans made use of, and of which, it seems, this same rough-looking reprover smelt very strongly.

41-2. Your rough neck. Hairy, and bearing the appearance of a most philosophic neglect of your person.

42. Don't be ashamed, &c.—] Don't blush to tell us where the perfumer lives, of whom you bought these fine sweet-smelling oint-

Here her raillery is very keen, and tends to shew what this pretended reformer really was, notwithstanding his appearance of sanctity. She may be said-to have smelt him out.

43. Statutes and laws are disturbed. From that state of sleep in which you seem to represent them, and from which you wish to awaken them. The Roman jurisprudence seems to have been founded on a threefold basis, on which the general law, by which the government was carried on, was established—that is to say—Consulta patrum, or decrees of the senate-Leges, which seem to answer to our statute-laws-and jura, those rules of common justice, which were derived from the two former, but particularly from the latter of the two, or, perhaps, from immemorial usage and custom, like the common law of England. Hor. lib. i. epist. xvi. l. 41. mentions these three particulars:

Ante omnes debet Scantinia: respice primum Et scrutare viros: faciunt hi plura; sed illos 45 Defendit numerus, junctæque umbone phalanges. Magna inter molles concordia: non erit ullum Exemplum in nostra tam detestabile sexu: Tædia non lambit Cluviam, nec Flora Catullam: 50 Hippo subit juvenes, et morbo pallet utroque. Nunquid nos agimus causas? civilia jura Novimus? aut ullo strepitu fora vestra movemus? Luctantur paucæ, comedunt coliphia paucæ: Vos lanam trahitis, calathisque peracta refertis Vellera: Vos tenui prægnantem stamine fusum 55 Penelope melius, levius torquetis Arachne, Horrida quale facit residens in codice pellex.

> --- Vir bonus est quis ? Qui consulta patrum, qui leges, juraque servat.

See an account of the Roman laws at large, in Kennett's Roman Antiq. part ii. book iii. chap. xxi. and seq.

43. The Scantinian. So called from Scantinius Aricinus, by whom it was first introduced to punish sodomy. Others think that this law was so called from C. Scantinius, who attempted this crime on the son of Marcellus, and was punished accordingly.

45. Examine the men. Search diligently—scrutinize into their abominations.

- These do more things. They far outdo the other sex; they do more things worthy of severe reprehension.

46. Number defends. This tends to shew how common that detestable vice was. (Comp. Rom. i. 27.) Such numbers were guilty of it, that it was looked upon rather as fashionable than criminal; they seemed to set the law at defiance, as not daring to attack so large a body.

- Battalions joined, &c. A metaphor taken from the Roman manner of engaging. A phalanx properly signified a disposition for an attack on the enemy by the foot, with every man's shield or buckler so close to another's, as to join them together and make a sort of impenetrable wall or rampart. This is said to have been first invented by the Macedonians; phalanx is therefore to be considered as a Macedonian word.
- 47. There is great concord. &c. They are very fond of each other, and strongly connected and united, so that, attacking one, would be like attacking all.

49. Tædia—Flora, &c.] Famous Roman courtezans in Juvenal's time-bad as they were, the men were worse.

" Ought before all to be stirred up. Consider first,

" And examine the men: these do more things—but them 45

" Number defends, and battalions joined with a buckler.

"There is great concord among the effeminate: there will not be any

" Example so detestable in our sex:

"Trædia caresses not Cluvia, nor Flora Catulla:

"Hippo assails youths, and in his turn is assailed.

" Do we plead causes? the civil laws

" Do we know? or with any noise do we make a stir in your courts?

" A few wrestle, a few eat wrestlers diet:

"You card wool, and carry back in full baskets your finished

" Fleeces; you the spindle, big with slender thread, 55

" Better than Penelope do twist, and finer than Arachne,

" As does a dirty harlot sitting on a log.

51. Do we plead, &c.] Do we women usurp the province of the men? do we take upon us those functions which belong to them?

53. A few wrestle.] A few women there are, who are of such a masculine turn of mind, as to wrestle in public. See sat. i. 22, 3, and notes; and Sat. vi. 245-57, and notes.

— Wrestler's diet.] Prepare themselves for wrestling as the wrestlers do by feeding on the coliphium—a κωλα ιφιω, membra robusta—a kind of dry diet which wrestlers used, to make them strong and firm-fleshed. See Ainsw.

54. You card wool.] You, effeminate wretches, forsake manly exercises, and addict yourselves to employments which are peculiar to women.

——In baskets.] The calathi were little osier or wicker baskets, in which the women put their work when they had finished it, in order to carry it back to their employers.

56. Penelope.] Wife of Ulysses, who during her husband's absence, was importuned by many noble suitors, whose addresses she refused with inviolable constancy; but, fearing they might take her by force, she amused them, by desiring them to wait, till she had finished a web which she was then about: and to make the time as long as possible, she undid during the night what she had done in the day.

—— Arachne.] A Lydian damsel, very skilful in spinning and weaving. She is fabled to have contended with Minerva, and being outdone, she hanged herself, and was by that goddess changed into a spider. Ov. Met. lib. vi. fab. i.

By mentioning these instances, Laronia ironically commends the great proficiency of the men in carding and spinning; both these operations seem to be distinctly marked by the poet.

57. A dirty harlot. Pellex properly denotes the mistress of a married man. This, and the Greek παλλακις, seem derived from Heb.

pilgesh, which we render—concubine.

Codex—from—caudex—literally signifies a stump or stock of a tree—of a large piece of which a log was cut out, and made an instru-

Notum est cur solo tabulas impleverit Hister
Liberto; dederit vivus cur multa puellæ:
Dives erit, magno quæ dormit tertia lecto.

Tu nube, atque tace: donant arcana cylindros.
De nobis post hæc tristis sententia fertur:
Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas.
Fugerunt trepidi vera ac manifesta canentem
Stoicidæ; quid enim falsi Laronia? Sed quid.

Non facient alii, cum tu multicia sumas,
Cretice, et hanc vestem populo mirante perores ment of punishment for female slaves, who were chained to it on any misbehaviour towards their mistresses, but especially where there was jealousy in the case; and there they were to sit and work at spinning or the like.

58. Hister.] Some infamous character, here introduced by Laronia in order to illustrate her argument.

—— Filled his will.] Tabula signifies any plate or thin material on which they wrote—hence deeds, wills, and other written instruments, were called tabulæ. So public edicts. See before 1. 28.

58-59. With only his freedman.] Left him his sole heir.

59. Why alive, &c.] Why in his life-time he was so very generous, and made such numbers of presents to his wife, here called puellae, as being a very young girl when he married her: but I should rather think, that the arch Laronia has a more severe meaning in her use of the term puellae, by which she would intimate, that his young wife, having heen totally neglected by him, remained still—puella, a maiden; Hister having no desire towards any thing, but what was unnatural with his favourite freedman.

It is evident that the poet uses puella in this sense, sat. ix. l. 74.

See note on sat. ix. l. 70.

60. She will be rich, &c. By receiving (as Hister's wife did) large sums for hush-money.

— Who sleeps third, &c.] By this she would insinuate, that Hister caused his freedman, whom he afterwards made his heir, to lie in the bed with him and his wife, and gave his wife large presents of money, jewels, &c. not to betray his abominable practices.

61. Do thou marry.] This apostrophe may be supposed to be addressed to the unmarried woman, who might be standing by, and listening to Laronia's severe reproof of the husbands of that day, and contains a sarcasm of the most bitter kind.

As if she had said: "You hear what you are to expect; such of you as wish to be rich, I advise to marry, and keep their husbands' secrets."

—— Secrets bestow gems.] Cylindros—these were precious stones, of an oblong and round form, which the women used to hang in their ears. Here they seem to signify all manner of gems.

62. After all this. After all I have been saying of the men, I can't help observing how hardly we women are used.

" It is known why Hister filled his will with only " His freedman; why alive he gave much to a wench:

" She will be rich, who sleeps third in a large bed. " Do thou marry, and hush-secrets bestow gems.

" After all this, a heavy sentence is passed against us:

" Censure excuses ravens, and vexes doves."

Her, proclaiming things true and manifest, trembling fled

The Stoicides-For what falsehood had Laronia [uttered]? But 65

Will not others do, when thou assumest transparent garments,

O Creticus, and (the people wond'ring at this apparel) thou declaimest

62. A heavy sentence, &c.] Where we are concerned no mercy is to be shewn to us; the heaviest sentence of the laws is called down upon us, and its utmost vengeance is prescribed against us.

63. Censure excuses ravens, & c.] Laronia ends her speech with a proverbial saying, which is much to her purpose.

Censura here means punishment.-The men, who, like ravens and other birds of prey, are so mischievous, are yet excused; but, alas! when we poor women, who are, comparatively, harmless as doves, when we, through simplicity and weakness, go astray we hear of nothing but punishment.

64. Her, proclaiming, &c.] We have here the effect of Laronia's speech upon her guilty hearers—their consciences were alarmed, and away they flew, they could not stand any longer: they knew what she said to be true, and not a tittle of it could be denied: so the faster they could make their escape, the better: like those severe hypocrites we read of, John viii. 7.—9. Cano signifies, as used here, to report, to proclaim aloud.

65. The Stoicides. Stoicidæ. This word seems to have been framed on the occasion, with a feminine ending, the better to suit their characters, and to intimate the monstrous effeminacy of these pretended Stoics. The Stoics were ealled Stoici, from 50%, a porch in Athens, where they used to meet and dispute. They highly commended apathy, or freedom from all passions.

Juvenal, having severely lashed the Stoicides, or pretended Stoics. now proceeds to attack, in the person of Metellus Creticus, the effeminacy of certain magistrates, who appeared, even in the seat of justice, attired in a most unbecoming and indecent manner, and such as bespeak them in the high road to the most horrid impurities.

66. Will not others do, &c. q. d. It is no marvel that we find vice triumphant over people that move in a less conspicuous sphere of life, when plain and apparent symptoms of it are seen in those who fill the seats of justice, and are actually exhibited by them, before the public eye, in open court.

67. O Creticus.] This magistrate was descended from the family of that Metellus, who was called Creticus, from his conquest of Crete. Juvenal, most probably, addresses Metellus by this surname 74.

In Proculas, et Pollineas? est mecha Fabulla:
Damnetur si vis, etiam Carfinia: talem
Non sumet damnata togam. Sed Julius ardet, Æstuo: nudus agas minus est insania turpis.
En habitum, quo te leges, ac jura ferentem
Vulneribus crudis populus modo victor, et illud
Montanum positis audiret vulgus aratris.
Quid non proclames, in corpore Judicis ista
Si videas? quæro an deceant multicia testem?
Acer, et indomitus, libertatisque magister,
Cretice pelluces! Dedit hanc contagio laben,
Et dabit in plures: sicut grex totus in agris of his great ancestor, the more to expose and shame him for acting so unworthy his descent from so brave and noble a person.

66. Transparent garments.] Multicia, quasi multilicia, of many threads. These were so finely and curiously wrought, that the body might be seen through them.

Thou declaimest.] Passest sentence in the most aggravated terms—perores. The end of a speech, in which the orator collected all his force and eloquence, was called the peroration: but the verb is used in a larger sense, and signifies to declaim and make an harangue against any person or thing.

68. Proculæ and Pollineæ.] Names of particular women, who

68. Proculæ and Pollineæ.] Names of particular women, who were condemned, on the Julian law, for incontinence, but, so famous in their way, as to stand here for level women in general.

He could condemn such in the severest manner, when before him in judgment, while he, by his immodest dress shewed himself to be worse than they were.

Fabulla. Notorious Adulteresses.

69-70. Such a gown. &c.] Bad as such women may be, and even convicted of incontinence, yet they would not appear in such a dress, as is worn by you who condemn them.

Or perhaps this alludes to the custom of obliging women convicted of adultery, to pull off the stola, or woman's garment, and put on the toga, or man's garment, which stigmatized them as infamous; but even this was not so infamous as the transparent dress of the judge. Horace calls a common prostitute—togata. Sat. ii. lib. i. l. 63.

- But July burns, &c.] He endeavours at an excuse, from the heat of the weather, for being thus clad.

71. Do your business, &c.] As a judge. Agere legem—sometimes signifies to execute the sentence of the law against malefactors. See AINSW.—Ago.

— Madness is less shameful.] Were you to sit on the bench naked, you might be thought mad, but this would not be so shameful; madness might be some excuse.

72. Lo the habit, &c.]. This, and the three following lines,

Against the Proculæ and Pollineæ? Fabulla is an adulteress:

Let Carfinia too be condemned if you please: such

A gown, condemned, she'll not put on. "But July burns— 70 "I'm very hot"—do your business naked: madness is less shameful.

Lo the habit! in which, thee promulgating statutes and laws,

The people (with crude wounds just now victorious,

And that mountain-vulgar with ploughs laid by) might hear.

What would you not proclaim, if on the body of a judge, those things 75

You should see? I ask, would transparent garments become a witness?

Sour and unsubdued, and master of liberty,

O Creticus, you are transparent! contagion gave this stain, And will give it to more: as, in the fields, a whole herd, suppose some of the old hardy and brave Romans, just come from a victory, and covered with fresh wounds (crudis vulneribus)—rough mountaineers, who had left their ploughs, like Cincinnatus, to fight against the enemies of their country, and on their arrival at Rome, with the ensigns of glorious conquest, finding such an effeminate character upon the bench, bearing the charge of the laws, and bringing them forth in judgment—which may be the sense of ferenten in this place.

75. What would you not proclaim, &c.] How would you exclaim! What would you not utter, that could express your indignation and abhorrence (O ancient and venerable people) of such a silken judge!

76. I ask, would, &c.] q. d. It would be indecent for a private person, who only attends as a witness, to appear in such a dress—how much more for a judge, who sits in an eminent station, in a public character, and who is to condemn vice of all kinds.

77. Sour and unsubdued.] O Creticus, who pretendest to stoicism, and appearing morose, severe, and not overcome by your passions.

Master of liberty.] By this, and the preceding part of this line, it should appear, that this effeminate judge was one who pretended to stoicism, which taught a great severity of manners, and an apathy both of body and mind: likewise such a liberty of living as they pleased, as to be exempt from the frailties and passions of other men. They taught—it μονος ο σοφος ελευθέρος—that "only a wise "man was free."—Hence Cic. Quid est libertas? potestas vivendi ut velis.

78. You are transparent.] Your body is seen through your fine garments: so that with all your stoicism, your appearance is that of a shameless and most unnatural libertine: a slave to the vilest passions, though pretending to be master of your liberty of action.

- Contagion gave this stain.] You owe all this to the company which you have kept: by this you have been infected.

79. And will give it to more.] You will corrupt others by your vol. 1.

Unius scabie cadit, et porrigine porci;
Uvaque conspectà livorem ducit ab uvà.
Fœdius hoc aliquid quandoque audebis amictu:
Nemo repente fuit turpissimus. Accipient te Paulatim, qui longa domi redimicula sumunt
Frontibus, et toto posuère monilia collo,
Atque Bonam teneræ placant abdomine porcæ,
Et magno cratere Deam: sed more sinistro
Exagitata procul non intrat fœmina limen.
Solis ara Deæ maribus patet: ite profanæ, example, as you were corrupted by the example of those whom you have followed.

85

80

The language here is metaphorical, taken from distempered cattle, which communicate infection by herding together.

80. Falls by the scab, &c.] Our English proverb says-"One

" scabby sheep mars the whole flock."

81. A Grape, &c.] This is also a proverbial saying, from the ripening of the black grape, (as we call it,) which has a blue or livid hue; these do not turn to that colour all at once and together, but grape after grape, which, the vulgar supposed, was owing to one grape's looking upon another, being very near in contact, and so contracting the same colour. They had a proverb—Uva uvam videndo varia fit.

83. Nobody was on a sudden, &c.] None ever arrived at the highest pitch of wickedness at first setting out: the workings of evil are gradual, and almost imperceptible at first; but as the insinuations of vice deceive the conscience, they first blind and then harden it, until the greatest crimes are committed without remoise.

I do not recollect where I met with the underwritten lines; but as they contain excellent advice, they may not be unuseful in this place:

O Leoline, be obstinately just, Indulge no passion, and betray no trust; Never let man be bold enough to say, Thus, and no farther, let my passion stray: The first crime past compels us on to more, And guilt proves fate, which was but choice before.

-— They will receive, &c.] By degrees you will go on from one step to another till you are received into the lewd and horrid society after mentioned. The poet is now going to expose a set of unnatural wretches, who, in imitation of women, celebrated the rites of the Bona Dea.

84. Who at home, &c.] Domi—that is, secretly, privately, in some house, hired or procured for the purpose of celebrating their horrid rites, in imitation of the women, who yearly observed the rites of the Bona Dea, and celebrated them in the house of the high priest.—Plut. in vita Ciceronis et Cæsaris.

If we say—redimicula domi—literally—fillets of the house—we may understand it to mean those fillets which, in imitation of the Falls by the scab and measles of one swine:

And a grape derives a blueness from a grape beholden.

Some time you'll venture something worse than this dress:

Nobody was on a sudden most base. 'They will receive thee

By little and little, who at home bind long fillets on

Their foreheads, and have placed ornaments all over the neck,

And, with the belly of a tender sow, appease the good

Goddess, and with a large goblet: but, by a perverted custom,

Woman, driven far away, does not enter the threshold:

The altar of the goddess is open to males only—"Go ye profane"— women, they wore around their heads on these occasions, and which at other times, were hung up about the house, as part of the sacred furniture.

Here is the first instance, in which their ornaments and habits were like those of the women.

85. And have placed ornaments, &c.] Monilia—necklaces—consisting of so many rows as to cover the whole neck; these were also female ornaments. This is the second instance. Monile, in its largest sense, implies an ornament for any part of the body. Ainsw. But as the neck is here mentioned, necklaces are most probably meant; these were made of pearls, precious stones, gold, &c.

these were made of pearls, precious stones, gold, &c.

86. The good goddess.] The Bona Dea, worshipped by the women, was a Roman lady, the wife of one Faunus; she was famous for chastity, and, after her death, consecrated. Sacrifices were performed to her only by night, and secretly; they sacrificed to her a sow pig. No men were admitted.

In imitation of this, these wretches, spoken of by our poet, that they might resemble women as much as possible, instituted rites and sacrifices of the same kind, and performed them in the same secret and clandestine manner.

—— The belly, &c. The sumen, or dugs and udder of a young sow, was esteemed a great dainty, and seems here meant by abdomine. Pliny says (xi. 84, edit. Hard.) antiqui sumen vocabant abdomen. Here it stands for the whole animal (as in sat. xii. 73.) by synec.

87. A large goblet.] Out of which they poured their libations.

By a perverted custom. More sinistro—by a perverted, awkward custom, they exclude all women from their mysteries, as men were excluded from those of the women; by the latter of which alone the Bona Dea was to be worshipped, and no men were to be admitted.

Sacra bonæ maribus non adeunda Deæ. Tis. i. 6, 22.

So that the proceeding of these men was an utter perversion of the female rites—as different from the original and real institution, as the left hand is from the right, and as contrary.

89. Go ye profune.] Profanæ—meaning the women; as if they banished them by solemn proclamation. Juvenal here humour-

Clamatur: nullo gemit hic tibicina cornu.
Talia secretà coluerunt Orgia tædà
Cecropiam soliti Baptæ lassare Cotyttô.
Ille supercilium madidâ fuligine tactum
Obliquâ producit acu, pingitque trementes
Attollens oculos; vitreo bibit ille Priapo,
Reticulumque comis auratum ingentibus implet,
Cœrulea indutus scutulata, aut galbana rasa;
Et per Junonem domini jurante ministro.

95

90

ously parodies that passage in Virgil, relative to the Sybil—Æn. vi. 258, 9.

Procul, procul, este profani, Conclamat vates, totoque absistite luco!

90. With no horn here, &c.] It was usual, at the sacrifices of the Bona Dea, for some of the women to make a lamentable noise (well expressed here by the word gemit) with a horn. The male worshippers had no women among them for this purpose. Nullo tibicina cornu, for nulla tibicina cornu. Hypallage.

91. Such orgies.] Orgia—so called and the Orgie, from the furious behaviour of the priests of Bacchus, and others by whom they were celebrated—but the part of the orgies here alluded to, was that wherein all manner of lewdness, even of the most unnatural kind, was committed by private torch-light—Tæda secreta. Coluerunt—they practised, celebrated, solemnized.

92. The Baptæ.] Priests of Cotytto at Athens, called Baptæ, because, after the horrid impurities which they had been guilty of, in honour of their goddess, they thought themselves entirely purified by dipping themselves in water.

The Cecropian Cotytto. Cotytto was a strumpet (the goddess of impudence and unchastity) worshipped by night at Athens, as the Bona Dea was at Rome. The priests are said to weary her, because of the length of their infamous rites, and of the multiplicity of their acts of impurity, which were continued the whole night. Cecrops, the first king of Athens, built the city, and called it, after his name, Cecropia.

93. His eyebrow.] It was customary for the women to paint the eyebrows, as well as the eyes: the first was done with a black composition made of soot and water; with this they lengthened the eyebrow, which was reckoned a great beauty. This was imitated by those infamous wretches spoken of by the poet, to make them appear more like women.

94. With an oblique needle.] Acus signifies also a bodkin; this was wetted with the composition, and drawn obliquely over, or along the eyebrow.

—— And paints, lifting them up, &c.] This was another practice of the women, to paint their eyes. It is now in use among the Moorish women in Barbary, and among the Turkish women about Aleppo, thus described by Dr. Shaw and Dr. Russel.

Is cried aloud: with no horn here the female minstrel sounds.

Such orgies, with a secret torch, used

The Baptæ, accustomed to weary the Cecropian Cotytto.

One, his eyebrow, touched with wet soot,

Lengthens with oblique needle, and paints, lifting them up, his trembling

Eyes; another drinks in a priapus made of glass, And fills a little golden net with a vast quantity of hair, Having put on blue female garments, or smooth white vests; And the servant swearing by the June of his master.

"Their method of doing it is, by a cylindrical piece of silver, steel, or ivory, about two inches long, made very smooth, and " about the size of a common probe.

"This they wet with water, in order that the powder of lead ore "may stick to it; and applying the middle part horizontally to the "eye, they shut the eyelids upon it, and so drawing it through be"tween them, it blacks the inside, leaving a narrow black rim all "round the edge."

This is sufficient for our present purpose, to explain what the poet means by painting the eyes. This custom was practised by many eastern nations among the women, and at last got among the Roman women: in imitation of whom, these male-prostitutes also tinged their eyes.

Lifting up—trembling.—This describes the situation of the eyes under the operation, which must occasion some pain from the great tenderness of the part. Or, perhaps, by trementes, Juvenal may mean something lascivious, as sat. vii. l. 241.

95. Another drinks, &c.] A practice of the most impudent and abandoned women is adopted by these wretches.

96. A little golden net, & c.] Reticulum—here denotes—a coif, or cawl of net-work, which the women put over their hair. This too these men imitated.

— With a vast quantity of hair.] They left vast quantities of thick and long hair upon their heads, the better to resemble women, and all this they stuffed under a cawl as the women did.

97. Female garments.] Scutulata-garments made of needlework, in form of shields or targets, worn by women.

Smooth white vests.] Galbana rasa—fine garments, shorn of the pile for women's wear. Ainsworth says they were white, and derives the word galbanum from Heb. אלבנות white. But others say, that the colour of these garments was bluish or greenish.

The adjective galbanus-a-um, signifies spruce, wanton, effeminate. So Mart. calls an effeminate person—hominem galbanatum: and of another he says, galbanes habet mores. MART. i. 97.

98. The servant swearing, &c.] The manners of the masters were copied by the servants: hence, like their masters, they swore by Juno, which it was customary for women to do, as the man by Jupiter, Hercules, &c.

Ille tenet speculum, pathici gestamen Othonis,
Actoris Aurunci spolium, quo se ille videbat
Armatum cum jam tolli vexilla juberet.
Res memoranda novis annalibus, atque recenti
Historià; speculum civilis sarcinu belli.
Nimirum summi ducis est occidere Galbam,
Et curare cutem summi constantia civis:
Bedriaci in campo spolium affectare Palati,
Et pressum in faciem digitis extendere panem:
Quod nec in Assyrio pharetrata Semiramis orbe,

Mæsta nec Actiacâ fecit Cleopatra carinâ.

105

100

99. A looking-glass.] Speculum—such as the women used.
—— The bearing, &c.] Which, or such a one as, Otho, infamous for the crime which is charged on these people, used to carry about with him, even when he went forth to war as emperor.

The poet in this passage, with infinite humour, parodies, in derision of the effeminate Otho, and of these unnatural wretches, some parts of Virgil—first, where that poet uses the word gestamen (which denotes any thing carried or worn) as descriptive of the shield of Abas, which he carried in battle. Æn. iii. 286.

Ære cavo Clypeum, magni gestamen Abantis, Postibus adversis figo, &c.

and again, secondly—in Æn. vii. 246. Virgil, speaking of the ornaments which Priam wore, when he sat in public among his subjects, as their Prince and lawgiver, says:

Hoc Priami gestamen erat, &c.

In imitation of this, Juvenal most sarcastically calls Otho's mirror-pathici gestamen Othonis.

100. The spoil of Auruncian Actor.] Alluding to Virgil, Æn. xii. 93, 94. where Turnus arms himself with a spear, which he had taken in battle from Actor, one of the brave Auruncian chiefs.

Juvenal seems to insinuate, that this wretch rejoiced as much in being possessed of Otho's mirror, taken from that emperor after his death, (when he had killed himself, after having been twice defeated by Vitellius,) as Turnus did in having the spear of the heroic Actor.

101. Commanded the banners, &c.] This was a signal for battle. When they encamped, they fixed the banners in the ground near the general's tent.—which was called statuere signa. When battle was to be given, the general gave the word of command to take up the standards or banners—this was—tollere signa.

At such a time as this was the effeminate Otho, when he was armed for the battle, viewing himself in his mirror.

103. Baggage of civil war.] A worthy matter to be recorded in the annals and history of these times, that among the warlike baggage of a commander in chief, in a civil war, wherein no less than the pos-

Another holds a looking glass, the bearing of pathic Otho, The spoil of Auruncian Actor, in which he viewed himself 100 Armed, when he commanded the banners to be taken up: A thing to be related in new Annals, and in recent History, a looking-glass the baggage of civil war! To kill Galba is doubtless the part of a great general, · And to take care of the skin, the perseverance of the highest citi-105

In the field of Bedriacum to affect the spoil of the palace, And to extend over the face bread squeezed with the fingers: Which neither the quivered Semiramis in the Assyrian world, Nor sad Cleopatra did in her Actiacan galley.

session of the Roman empire was at stake, there was found a mirror, the proper implement of a Roman lady! This civil war was between Otho and Vitellius, which last was set up, by the German soldiers, for emperor, and at last succeeded.

104. To kill Galba, &c.] The nimirum—doubtless—to be sure -throws an irony over this, and the following three lines—as if the poet said-To aim at empire, and to have the reigning prince assassinated in the forum, in order to succeed him, was, doubtless, a most noble piece of generalship, worthy a great general; and, to be sure, it was the part of a great citizen to take so much care of his complexion-it must be allowed worthy the mightiest citizen of Rome, to attend to this with unremitting constancy!

This action of Otho's, who, when he found Galba, who had promised to adopt him as his successor, deceiving him, in favour of Piso, destroyed him, makes a strong contrast in the character of Otho: in one instance, bold and enterprising-in another, soft and affemi-

106. In the field to affect, &c.] To aim at, to aspire to, the peaceable and sole possession of the emperor's palace, as master of the empire, when engaged in the battle with Vitellius in the field of Bedriacum, (between Cremona and Verona,) was great and noble; but how sadly inconsistent with what follows!

107. To extend over the face, &c. The Roman ladies used a sort of bread, or paste, wetted with asses milk. This they pressed and spread with their fingers on the face to cover it from the air, and thus preserve the complexion. See sat. vi. l. 461. This was practised by the emperor Otho.

Otho, at last, being twice defeated by Vitellius, dreading the horrors of the civil war in which he was engaged, killed himself to prevent it, when he had sufficient force to try his fortune again.

108. The quivered Semiramis. The famous warlike queen of Assyria, who after the death of her husband Ninus, put on man's apparel, and did many warlike actions.

109. Sad Cleopatra.] The famous and unfortunate queen of Ægypt, who with M. Anthony, being defeated by Augustus, in the sea-fight at Actium, fled to Alexandria, and there despairing to Hic nullus verbis pudor, aut reverentia mensæ:

Hic turpis Cybeles, et fractå voce loquendi

Libertas, et crine senex fanaticus albo

Sacrorum antistes, rarum ac memorabile magni
Gutturis exemplum, conducendusque magister.

Quid tamen expectant, Phrygio queis tempus erat jam

More supervacuam cultris abrumpere carnem?

Quadringenta dedit Gracchus sestertia, dotem

Cornicini: sive hic recto cantayerat ære.

find any favour from Augustus, applied two asps to her breast, which stung her to death. She died on the tomb of Anthony, who had killed himself after the loss of the battle.

Signatæ tabulæ: dictum feliciter! ingens

109. In her Actiacan galley. Carina, properly signifies the keel, or bottom of a ship, but, by synec. the whole ship or vessel. It denotes, here, the fine galley, or vessel, in which Cleopatra was at the battle of Actium; which was richly ornamented with gold, and had purple sails. Regina (Cleopatra) cum aurea puppe, veloque purpureo, se in altum dedit. Plin. lib. xix. c. 1. ad. fin.

From this it is probable that our Shakespeare took his idea of the vessel in which Cleopatra, when she first met M. Anthony on the river Cydnus, appeared: the description of which is embellished with some of the linest touches of that great poet's fancy. See Ant.

and Cleop. act II. sc. ii.

Neither of these women were so effeminate as the emperor Otho. 110. Here is no modesty, &c.] Juvenal having censured the effeminacy of their actions and dress, now attacks their manner of conversation at their sacrificial feasts.

— Reverence of the Table.] That is, of the table where they feasted on their sacrifices, which, every where else, was reckoned sacred: here they paid no sort of regard to it.

111. Of filthy Cybele.] Here they indulge themselves in all the filthy conversation that they can utter; like the Priests of Cybele, who used to display all manner of filthiness and obscenity before the image of their goddess, both in word and action.

--- With broken voice. Perhaps this means a feigned, altered, lisping voice, to imitate the voices of women, or of the priests of Cybele, who were all eunuchs.

112. An old fanatic.] Fanaticus (from Gr. Фаноцан, appareo) denotes one that pretends to inspiration, visions, and the like. Such the Galli, or priests of Cybele were called, from their strange gestures and speeches, as if actuated or possessed by some spirit which they called divine.

See Virg. Æn. vi. l. 46—51. a description of this fanatic inspiration: which shows what the heathens meant, when they spake of their diviners being—pleni Deo—afflati numine, and the like. See PARK. Heb. and Eng. Lex. 28, No. 4.

Such a one was the old white-headed priest here spoken of.

Here is no modesty in their discourse, or reverence of the table: 110 Here, of filthy Cybele, and of speaking with broken voice,

The liberty; and an old fanatic, with white hair,

Chief priest of sacred things, a rare and memorable example

Of an ample throat, and a master to be hired.

But what do they wait for, for whom it is now high time, in the Phrygian 115

Manner, to cut away with knives their superfluous flesh?

Gracchus gave 400 sestertia, a dower

To a horn-blower, or perhaps he had sounded with strait brass, The writings were signed: "Happily"—said:—a vast

113. Chief priest of sacred things.] Of their abominable rites and ceremonies, which they performed, in imitation of the women, to the Bona Dea.

114. An ample throat.] A most capacious swallow—he set an example of most uncommon gluttony.

A master to be hired.] If any one would be taught the science of gluttony, and of the most beastly sensuality, let him hire such an old fellow as this for a master to instruct him.

TER. And. act I. sc. ii. l. 19. has a thought of this kind. Simo gays to Davus;

Tum si magistrum cepit ad eam rem improbum.

115. What do they wait for, &c.] As they wish to be like the priests of Cybele, and are so fond of imitating them, why do they delay that operation which would bring them to a perfect resemblance?

117. Gracchus.] It should seem, that by this name Juvenal does not mean one particular person only, but divers of the nobles of Rome, who had shamefully practised what he mentions here, and afterwards, l. 143. gave a dower—dotem dedit—as a wife brings a dower to her husband, so did Gracchus to the horn-blower.

— 400 sestertia.] See note, sat. j. l. 106. about 3125l.

118. A horn-blower, &c.] A fellow who had been either this, or a trumpeter, in the Roman army, in which the Romans only used wind-instruments: the two principal ones were the cornua, or horns, and the tubæ—trumpets: they both were made of brass: the horns were made crooked, like the horns of animals, which were used by the rude ancients in battle. The trumpets were strait, like ours, therefore Juvenal supposing the person might have been a trumpeter, says—recto cantaverat ære. That these two instruments were made of brass, and shaped as above mentioned, appears from Ovid. Met. lib. 1. 1. 98. Non tuba directi, non æris cornua flexi. See an account of the Roman martial musical instruments, Kennett, Antiq. part II. book iv. c. 11.

119. The writings.] The marriage-writings. See note on l. 58.

"Happily"—said.] They were wished joy, the form of

VOL. I.

120

Cœna sedet: gremio jacuit nova nupta mariti.

O Proceres, censore opus est, an haruspice nobis?
Scilicet horreres, majoraque monstra putares,
Si mulier vitulum, vel si bos ederet agnum?
Segmenta, et longos habitus, et flammea sumit,
Arcano qui sacra ferens nutantia loro
Sudavit clypeis ancilibus. O pater urbis!

125

which was by pronouncing the word—"feliciter"—I wish you joy, as we say: this was particularly used on nuptial occasions, as among us.

119—20. A vast supper is set.] A sumptuous entertainment, on the occasion, set upon the table. Or, ingens come may here be used metonymically, to denote the guests who were invited in great numbers to the marriage supper: the word sedet is supposed equivalent with accumbit. This last is the interpretation of J. Britannicus, and C. S. Curio: but Holyday is for the first: and I rather think with him, as the word sedet is used in a like sense, where our poet speaks (sat. i. l. 95, 6.) of setting the dole-basket on the threshold of the door:

Limine parva sedet.

So here for setting the supper on the table.

120. The new married, &c.] As Sporus was given in marriage to Nero, so Gracchus to this trumpeter: hence Juvenal hamourously calls Gracchus nova nupta, in the feminine gender. Nubere is applicable to the woman, and ducere to the man.

- In the husband's bosom.] i. e. Of the trumpeter, who now was become husband to Gracchus.

121. O ye nobles. O procees! O ye patricians, nobles, senators, magistrates of Rome, to whom the government and magistracy, as well as the welfare of the city is committed! Many of these were guilty of these abominations, therefore Juvenal here sarcastically invokes them on the occasion.

—— A censor.] An officer whose business it was to inspect and reform the manners of the people. There were two of them, who had power even to degrade knights, and to exclude senators, when guilty of great misdemeanours. Formerly they maintained such a severity of manners, that they stood in awe of each other.

— Soothsayer.] Aruspex or haruspex, from haruga—a sacrifice (which from Heb. אורב, to kill or slaughter) and specio—to view. A diviner who divined by viewing the entrails of the sacrifices. A soothsayer. When any thing portentous or prodigious happened, or appeared in the entrails of the beasts, it was the office of the haruspex to offer an expiation, to avert the supposed anger of the gods.

q. d. Do we, in the midst of all the predigies of wickedness, want most a censor for correction, or an haruspex for expiation? For, as the next two lines intimate, we ought not, in all reason, to Supper is set: the new married lay in the husband's bosom.— 120 O ye nobles! have we occasion for a censor, or for a soothsayer?

What! would you dread, and think them greater prodigies,
If a woman should produce a calf, or a cow a lamb?

Collars, and long habits, and wedding veils he takes,
Who carrying sacred things nodding with a secret rein,

Sweated with Mars's shields. O father of the city!

be more shocked or amazed at the most monstrous or unnatural births, than at these monstrous and unnatural productions of vice.

124. Collars.] Segmenta—collars, ouches, pearl-necklaces worn by women. Alnow, from seco, to cut—segmen, a piece cut off from something: perhaps segmina may mean pieces of ribbon, or the like, worn as collars, as they often are by women among us.

- Long habits. The stola, or matron's gown, which reached down to the feet.

— Wedding veils.] Flameum or flammeum, from flamma, a flame, because it was of a yellowish or flame-colour. A kind of veil or scarf, put over the bride's face for modesty's sake.

--- He takes. Gracchus puts on, who once had been one of the Salii.

125. Who carrying sacred things.] This alludes to the sacred images carried in the processions of the Salii, which waved or nod-ded with the motion of those who carried them, or, perhaps, so contrived, as to be made to nod, as they were carried along, like the image of Venus when carried in pomp at the Circensian games, mentioned by Ov. Amor. Eleg. lib. iii. eleg. ii.

Annuit et mota signa secunda dedit.

— A secret rein.] A thong, or leather strap, secretly contrived, so as by pulling it to make the image nod its head: to the no small comfort of the vulgar, who thought this a propitious sign, as giving assent to their petitions. See the last note.

126. Sweated with Mars's skields.] The ancilia were so called from ancisus, cut or pared round.

In the days of Numa Pompilius, the successor of Romulus, a round shield was said to fall from heaven: this was called ancile, from its round form; and, at the same time, a voice said that—" the "city would be of all the most powerful, while that ancile was preserved in it." Numa, therefore, to prevent its being stolen, caused eleven shields to be made so like it, as for it not to be discerned which was the true one. He then instituted the twelve Salii, or priests of Mars, who were to carry these twelve shields through the city, with the images and other insignia of Mars, (the supposed father of Romulus the founder of Rome,) and while these priests went in procession, they sang and danced till they were all over in a sweat. Hence these priests of Mars were called Salii, a saliendo.

The poet gives us to understand, that Gracchus had been one of these Salii, but had left them, and had sunk into the effeminacies and debaucheries above mentioned.

Unde nefas tantum Latiis pastoribus? unde
Hæc tetigit, Gradive, tuos urtica nepotes?
Traditur ecce viro clarus genere, atque opibus vir:
Nec galeam quassas, nec terram cuspide pulsas,
Nee quereris patri!—Vede ergo, et cede severi
Jugeribus campi, quam negligis. Officium cras
Primo sole mihi peragendum in valle Quirini.
Quæ causa officii? quid quæris? nubit amicus,
Nec multos adhibet. Liceat modo vivere; fient,

_

135

130

126. O father of the city [] Mars, the supposed father of Romulus, the founder of Rome, and therefore called pater urbis. See

Hor. lib. i. od. ii. l. 35—40.

127. Latian shepherds?] Italy was called Latium, from lateo, to lie hid; Saturn being said to have hidden himself there, when he fled from his son Jupiter. See Virg. Æn. viii. 319—23. Romulus was supposed to have been a shepherd, as well as the first and most ancient ancestors of the Romans; hence Juvénal calls them Latii pastores. So sat. viii. 1. 274, 5.

Majorum primus quisquis fuit ille tuorum, Aut pastor fuit, &c.

Whence could such monstrous, such abominable wickedness, be derived to a people who once were simple shepherds!

128. This nettle.] Urtica—a nettle literally, but, by Met. the stinging or tickling of lewdness. So we call being angry, being nettled: and it stands with us to denote an excitation of the passions.

—— Gradivus.] A name of Mars, from Gr. Kpadava, to brandish a spear. Some derive it from gradior, because he was supposed to go or march in battle. Homer has both these ideas—

Ηιε μακρα βιζας κραδαων δολιχοσκιον εγκος.

See Virg. Æn. iii. 34. Gradivumque patrem, &c.

129. Is given.] Traditur—is delivered up in marriage, as a thing purchased is delivered to the buyer, so man to man, on payment of dowry, as for a wife.

130. You neither shake, & c.] In token of anger and resentment of such abomination.

131. Nor complain, &c.] To Jupiter, the father of all the gods, or perhaps Juvenal means "your father," as supposing with Hesiod that Mars was the son of Jupiter and Juno. So Homer, Il. s. though some, as Ovid, make him the son of Juno without a father. Ov. Fast. v. 229, &c.

— Go therefore.] Since you are so unconcerned at these things, as to shew no signs of displeasure at them, you may as well depart from us entirely.

Depart.] Cede for discede, the simple for the composite.

So Virg. Æn. iv. 460. Invitus, regina, tuo de litore cessi.

132. The harsh field.] The Campus Martius, a large field near Rome, between the city and the Tiber, where all manner of robust and martial exercises were performed, over which Mars was Whence so great wickedness to Latian shepherds? whence Hath this nettle, O Gradivus, touched your descendants?

Behold a man, illustrious by family, and rich, is given to a man; You neither shake your helmet, nor with your spear smite the earth,

Nor complain to the father !—Go therefore, and depart from the

Of the harsh field, which you neglect.—A bus'ness, to-morrow Early, is to be dispatched by me in the vale of Quirinus.

What is the cause of the bus'ness? why do you ask? a friend marries;

Nor does he admit many. Only let us live, these things will be done, supposed to preside. By the poet's using the epithet harsh, or severe, he may be supposed to allude to the harsh and severe conflicts there exhibited; or to Mars himself, to whom this is given by Martial, ep. xxx. l. 10.

Cum severi fugit oppidum Martis.

132. Which you neglect.] By not vindicating its honour, and not punishing those, who have exchanged the manly exercises of the Campus Martius for the most abandoned effeminacy.

A bus'ness to-morrow.] In order to expose the more, and satirize the more severely, these male-marriages, the poet here introduces a conversation between two persons on the subject.

The word officium is peculiarly relative to marriage, nuptiale or nuptiarum being understood. Suet. in Claud. c. 26. Cujus officium nuptiarum, et ipse cum Agrippina celebravit. So Petron. Consurrexi ad officium nuptiale.

Such is the meaning of officium in this place, as relative to what follows. He was to attend the ceremony at sun-rise, at the temple of Romulus, which was a place where marriage contracts were often made.

134. A friend marries.] The word nubo (as has been observed) properly belonging to the woman, as duco to the man. Nubit here is used to mark out the abominable transaction.

135. Nor does he admit many.] He does not invite many people to the ceremony, wishing to keep it rather private. He had not, perhaps, shaken off all fear of the Scantinian law.—See before, l. 43, note.

Only let us live, &c.] These seem to be Juvenal's words. Only let us have patience, and if we live a little longer, we shall not only see such things done, but done openly; and not only this, but we shall see the parties concerned wish to have them recorded in the public registers.

Juvenal saw the increase of all this mischief, and might from this venture to foretell what actually came to pass: for Salvian, who wrote in the fifth century, speaking of this dedecoris scelerisque consortium, as he calls it, says, that "it spread all over the city, and Fient ista palam, cupient et in acta referri.

Interca tormentum ingens nubentibus hæret,
Quod nequeunt parere, et partu retinere maritos.

Sed melius, quod nil animis in corpora juris

Natura indulget; steriles moriuntur, et illis

Turgida non prodest conditâ pyxide Lyde,
Nec prodest agili palmas præbere Luperco.

Vicit et hoc monstrum tunicati fuscina Gracchi,
Lustravitque fugâ mediam gladiator arenam,
Et Capitolinis generosior, et Marcellis,
Et Catulis, Paulique minoribus, et Fabiis, et Omnibus ad podium spectantibus: his licet ipsum

"though the act itself was not common to all, yet the approbation of it was."

137. Mean while, &c.] The poet here, with much humour, scoffs at these unnatural wretches in very ludicrous terms.

138. Retain their husbands.] Barrenness was frequently a cause of divorce.

141. Turgid Lyde.] Some woman of that name, perhaps called turgida from her corpulency, or from her preparing and selling medicines to cure barrenness, and to occasion fertility and promote conception. Conditus literally signifies seasoned—mixed, made savoury, and the like—here it implies, that she sold some conserve, or the like, which was mixed, seasoned, or, as we may say, medicated with various drugs, and put into boxes for sale.

142. The nimble Lupercus. The Lupercalia were feasts sacred to Pan, that he might preserve their flocks from wolves, (a lupis,) hence the priests were called Luperci. The Lupercalia appears to have been a feast of purification, being solemnized on the dies nefasti, or non-court-days of February, which derives its name from februo, to purify; and the very day of the celebration was called Februaca. The ceremony was very singular and strange.

In the first place, a sacrifice was killed of goats and a dog; then two children, noblemen's sons, being brought thither, some of the Luperci stained their foreheads with the bloody knife, while others wiped it off with locks of wool dipped in milk. This done, they ran about the streets all naked but the middle, and, having cut the goat-skins into thongs, they lashed all they met. The women, so far from avoiding their strokes, held out the palms of their hands to receive them, fancying them to be great helpers of conception. See Kennett, Antiq. b. ii. part ii. c. 2. Shakespeare alludes to this—Jul. Cæs. act I. sc. ii. former part.

143. The fork.] Fuscina—a sort of three-pronged fork or trident, used by a particular kind of fencer or gladiator, who was armed with this, and with a net—hence called Retiarius. His adversary was called Mirmillo (from Gr. µvguos, formica—See Ainsw.) and was armed with a shield, scythe, and head-piece, with the figure of a fish on the crest. The Retiarius tried to throw his net over the

Done openly, and will desire to be reported in the public registers.

Mean while a great torment sticks to those (thus) marrying,

That they can't bring forth, and retain by birth (of children) their husbands.

But it is better, that, to their minds, no authority over their bodies

Doth nature indulge; barren they die: and to them

140

Turgid Lyde, with her medicated box, is of no use,

Nor does it avail to give their palms to the nimble Lupercus. Yet the fork of the coated Gracchus outdid this prodigy,

When, as a gladiator, he traversed in flight the middle of the stage, More nobly born than the Manlii, the Capitolini, and Marcelli, 145 And the Catuli, and the posterity of Paulus; than the Fabii, and Than all the spectators at the podium: tho', to these, him

Mirmillo's head, and so entangle him, saying, when he cast the net—Piscem peto, non te peto. The Mirmillo is sometimes called the secutor or pursuer, because if the Retiarius missed him, by throwing his net too far, or too short, he instantly took to his heels, running about the arena for his life, that he might gather up his net for a second cast; the Mirmillo, in the mean time, as swiftly pursuing him, to prevent him of his design. This seems to be meant, l. 144. Lustravitque fuga, &c. which intimates the flight of the Retiarius from the Mirmillo.

—— Coated, &c.] Tunicatus, i. e. dressed in the tunica, or habit of the Retiarii, which was a sort of coat without sleeves, in which they fought.

This same Gracchus meanly laid aside his own dress, took upon him the garb and weapons of a common gladiator, and exhibited in the public amphitheatre. Such feats were encouraged by Domitian, to the great scandal of the Roman nobility.

Mediam arenam—may here signify the middle of the amphitheatre, which was strewed with sand; on which part the gladiators fought: this made arena be often used to signify the amphitheatre itself.

145. Capitolini, &c.] Noble families, who were an ornament to the Roman name.

147. The podium.] nodior, Gr. from #85—a foot. That part of the theatre next the orchestra, where the nobles sat—it projected in form something like the shape of a foot. See AINSW.

— Tho', to these, &c. Though to those who have been mentioned before, you should add the prætor, at whose expense these games were exhibited.—The prætors often exhibited games at their own expense. But the poet may here be understood to glance at the emperor Domitian, who was a great encourager of these strange proceedings of the young nobility. See note on 1.143. He that set forth, at his own charge, the sight of sword-players, and

Admoveas, cujus tunc munere retia misit. Esse aliquos manes, et subterranca regna, Et contum, et Stygio ranas in gurgite nigras, Atque una transire vadum tot millia cymba, Nec pueri credunt, nisi qui nondum ære lavantur. Sed tu vera puta. Curius quid sentit, et ambo Scipiadæ? quid Fabricius, manesque Camilli? Quid Cremeræ legio, et Cannis consumpta juventus, Tot bellorum animæ? quoties hinc talis ad illos other like games unto the people, was called munerarius—Hence Juvenal says-cujus tunc munere, &c.

155

150

148/ Threw the net.] Entered the lists in the character. of a Retiarius! and thus a man of the noblest family in Rome debased himself, and his family, by becoming a prize-fighter in the public theatre.

149. That there are any ghosts.] The poet now proceeds to trace all the foregoing abominations to their source, namely, the disbelief and contempt of religion, those essential parts of it, particularly, which relate to a future state of rewards and punishments.

By manes, here, we may understand, the ghosts or spirits of persons departed out of this life; which exist after their departure from the body, and are capable of happiness and misery. See Ving. Æn. vi. 735-44.

- Subterranean realms. Infernal regions, which were supposed to be under the earth.

150. A boat pole. Contus signifies a long pole or staff, shod with iron at the bottom, to push on small vessels in the water. Juvenal here alludes to Charon, the ferry-man of hell, of whom Virgil says, Æ11. vi. l. 302.

Ipse ratem conto subigit.

- Frogs. The poets feigned that there were frogs in the river Some give the invention to Aristophanes—See his comedy of Styx. the Frogs.

____ Stygian gulph.] The river Styx, supposed to be the boundary of the infernal regions, over which departed souls were ferried in Charon's boat. See VIRG. Geor. iv. 467-80.

If any of the gods swore by this river falsely, he was to lose his divinity for an hundred years.

152. Not even boys believe. All these things are disbelieved, not only by persons in a more advanced age, but even by boys.

— Unless those not as yet, &c. The quadrans, which was made of brass, in value about our halfpenny, was the bathing fee paid to the keeper of the bath by the common people. See sat. vi. 446. and Hor. lib. i. sat. iii. l. 137.

Dum tu quadrante lavatum Rex ibis-

Little children, under four years old, were either not carried to the baths, or if they were, nothing was paid for their bathing.

You should add, at whose expense he then threw the net. That there are many ghosts, and subterranean realms, And a boat-pole, and black frogs in the Stygian gulph, 150 And that so many thousands pass over in one boat, Not even boys believe, unless those not as yet washed for money: But think thou that they are true: What thinks Curius, and both The Scipios? what Fabricius, and the ghost of Camillus? What the legion of Cremera, and the youth consumed at Cannæ, 155

The poet means, that none but children, and those very young indeed, could be brought to believe such things: these might be taught them, among other old women's stories, by their nurses, and they might believe them, till they grew old enough to be wiser, as the freethinkers would say.

So many warlike souls? as often as from hence to them such

153. But think thou, &c. Do thou, O man, whatever thou art, give credit to these important matters, which respect a future state of rewards and punishments.

- Curius.] Dentatus: thrice consul, and remarkable for his courage, singular honesty, and frugality. What does he now think, who is enjoying the rewards of his virtue in elysium.

153-4. Both the Scipios.] Viz. Scipio Africanus Major, who conquered Hannibal, and Scipio Africanus Minor, who rased Numantia and Carthage. Hence Virg. Æn. vi. 842, 3.

— Geminos duo fulmina belli Scipiadas, cladem Libyæ.-

- Fabricius. C. Luscinius the consul, who conquered Pyr-

- Camillus. A noble Roman; he, though banished, saved Rome from its final ruin by the Gauls. The Romans voted him an equestrian statue in the Forum, an honour never before conferred on a Roman citizen.

155. The legion of Cremera. Meaning the 300 Fabii, who, with their slaves and friends, marched against the Vejentes, who, after many battles, surrounding them by an ambuscade, killed the 300 near Cremera, a river of Tuscany, except one, from whom came afterwards the famous Fabius mentioned by Virg. Æn. vi. 845, 6.

— The youth consumed, &c.] Cannæ-arum. A village of Apulia in the kingdom of Naples, where Hannibal defeated the Romans, and killed above 40,000. Among these, such a number of the young nobility, knights, and others of rank, that Hannibal sent to Carthage three bushels of rings in token of his victory. There was such a carnage of the Romans, that Hannibal is said, at last, to have stopped his soldiers, crying out—"Parce ferro."

156. So many warlike souls.] Slain in battle, fighting for their country. Virg. Æn. vi. 660. places such in elysium.

By mentioning the above great men, Juvenal means, that they were examples, not only of the belief of a future state, which influenced them in the achievement of great and worthy deeds, dur-

Umbra venit, cuperent lustrari, si qua darentur Sulphura cum tædis, et si foret humida laurus. Illue, heu! miseri traducimur: arma quidem ultra Littora Juvernæ promovimus, et modo captas Orcadas, ac minima contentos nocte Britannos. Sed quæ nune populi fiunt victoris in urbe, Non faciunt illi, quos vicimus: et tamen unus Armenius Zelates cunctis narratur ephebis Mollior ardenti sese indulsisse Tribuno. Aspice quid faciant commercia: venerat obses.

165

160 in their lives, but, that now they experienced the certainty of it, in the enjoyment of its rewards.

156. As often as from hence, &c.] When the spirit of such a miscreant, as I have before described, goes from hence, leaves this world, and arrives among the venerable shades of these great and virtuous men, they would look upon themselves as defiled by such a one coming among them, they would call for lustrations, that they might purify themselves from the pollution which such company would bring with it.

157. If there could be given. i. e. If they could come at materials for purification in the place where they are.

Hic fiunt homines: nam si mora longior urbem

158. Sulphur with pines. Thumes of sulphur, thrown on a lighted torch made of the wood of the unctuous pine-tree, were used among the Romans as purifying. See Ainsw. Teda, No. 3.

Pliny says of sulphur—"Habet et in religionibus locum ad expi"andas suffitu donos." Lib. xxxv. c. 15.

— A wet laurel.] They used also a laurel-branch dipped in water, and sprinkling with it things or persons which they would purify.

159. Thither, alas! &c. We wretched mortals all must die, and be carried into that world of spirits, where happiness or misery will be our doom.

160. Juverna. Al. Juberna, hod. Hibernia, Ireland. thought by Camden, that the Romans did not conquer Ireland; this passage of Juvenal seems to imply the contrary. The poet might speak here at large, as a stranger to these parts, but according to the report of the triumphing Romans, who sometimes took discoveries for conquests, and thought those overcome, who were neighbours to those whom they overcame.

161. Orcades. A number of small islands in the north of Scotland, added to the Roman empire by the emperor Claudius.

the Orkneys.

—— The Britons content, &c.] At the summer solstice the nights are very short; there is scarce any in the most northern parts of Britain.

162. The things which, &c.] The abouninations which are committed in Rome, are not to be found among the conquered people,

A shade arrives, they would desire to be purified, if there could be given

Sulphur with pines, and if there were a wet laurel.

Thither, alas! we wretches are conveyed! our arms, indeed, beyond

The shores of Juverna we have advanced, and the lately captured 160 Orcades, and the Britons content with very little night.

But the things which now are done in the city of the conquering people,

Those whom we have conquered do not: and yet one Armenian, Zelates, more soft than all our striplings, is said

To have yielded himself to a burning tribune.

See what commerce may do: he had come an hostage. Here they become men: for if a longer stay indulges 165 at least not till they learn them by coming to Rome; instances, indeed, may be found of this, as may appear by what follows.

164. Zelates. An Armenian. youth, sent as an hostage from Armenia.

— More soft, &c.] More effeminate—made so, by being corrupted at an earlier period of life, than was usual among the Roman youths. Ephebus signifies a youth or lad from about fourteen to seventeen. Then they put on the toga virilis, and were reckoned men. The word is compounded of $\sigma_t$, at, and $\sigma_t$, puberty.

165. To have yielded himself. For the horrid purpose of unnatural lust.

— A burning tribune. VIRG. ecl. ii. 1. has used the verb ardeo in the same horrid sense. The tribune is not named, but some think the emperor Caligula to be hinted at, who, as Suetonius relates, used some who came as hostages, from far countries, in this detestable manner.

166. See what commerce may do.] Commercia here signifies in tercourse, correspondence, converse together. Mark the effects of bad intercourse. The poet seems to mean what St. Paul expresses, 1 Cor.

-xv. 33. "Evil communications corrupt good manners."

— He had come an hostage.] Obses—quia quasi pignus obsidetur, i. e. because kept, guarded, as a pledge. An hostage was given as a security or pledge, for the performance of something by one people to another, either in war or peace, and was peculiarly under the protection and care of those who received him. This youth had been sent to Rome from Artaxata, the capital of Armenia, a country of Asia, and was debauched by the tribune who had the custody of him. This breach of trust aggravates the crime.

167. Here they become men.] Here, at Rome, they soon lose their simplicity and innocence of manners, and though young in years, are soon old in wickedness, from the corruptions which they meet with. The word home is of the common gender, and significant both man and woman; and it is not improbable, but that Juvenal uses the word homines here, as intimating, that these youths were soon to be regarded as of either sex.

Indulsit pueris, non unquam deerit amator: Mittentur braccæ, cultelli, fræna, flagellum: Sic prætextatos referunt Artaxata mores.

167. If a longer stay, &c.] If they are permitted to stay a longer time at Rome, after their release as hostages, and are at large in the city, they will never want occasions of temptation to the worst of vices: at every turn, they will meet with those who will spare no pains to corrupt them.

169. Trowsers. Bracca-a sort of trowsers or breeches, worn by the Armenians, Gauls, Persians, Medes, and others. Here by synec.

put for the whole dress of the country from which they came.

- Knives. Cultelli-little knives-dim. from culter. should seem to mean some adjunct to the Armenian dress; not improbably the small daggers, or poignards, which the Easterns wore tucked into their girdles, or sashes, of their under vestments: such are seen in the East to this day.

--- Bridles, whip.] With which they managed, and drove on their horses, in their warlike exercises, and in the chace.

Will be laid aside.] The meaning of these lines is, that the dress of their country, and every trace of their simplicity, manliness. activity, and courage, will all be laid aside—they will adopt the dress The city boys, never will a lover be wanting. Trowsers, knives, bridles, whip, will be laid aside. Thus they carry back prætextate manners to Artaxata.

170

and manners, the effeminacy and debauchery of the Roman nobility, which they will carry home with them when they return to their own capital. See l. 166, note.

170. Prætextate manners.] See sat. i. 78, note. Rome's noble crimes. Holyday. As we should express it—the fashionable vices of the great. The persons who wore the prætexta, were magistrates, priests, and noblemen's children till the age of seventeen.

—— Artaxata.] The chief city of Armenia the Greater, (situate on the river Araxes,) built by Artaxias, whom the Armenians made their king. It was taken by Pompey, who spared both the city and the inhabitants: but, in Nero's reign, Corbulo the commander in chief of the Roman forces in the East, having forced Tiridates, king of Armenia, to yield up Artaxata, levelled it with the ground. See Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. ix. 484.

This city is called Artaxata-orum, plur. or Artaxata-æ, sing. See

AINSW.

It is probable that the poet mentions Artaxata, on account of the fact which is recorded, l. 164, 5; but he may be understood, by this instance, to mean, that every country and people would become corrupt, as they had less or more to do with Rome.

END OF THE SECOND SATIRE.

SATIRA III.

ARGUMENT.

Juvenal introduces Umbritius, an old friend of his, taking his departure from Rome, and going to settle in a country retirement at Cuma. He accompanies Umbritius out of town: and, before they take leave of each other, Umbritius tells his friend Juvenal

UAMVIS digressu veteris confusus amici, Laudo tamen vacuis quod sedem figere Cumis Destinet, atque unum civem donare Sibyllæ, Janua Baiarum est, et gratum littus amœni Secessûs. Ego vel Prochytam præpono Suburræ. Nam quid tam miserum, tam solum vidimus, ut non Deterius credas horrere incendia, lapsus Tectorum assiduos, ac mille pericula sævæ

Line 2. Cumæ. An ancient city of Campania near the sea. Some think it had its name from xvuxxx, waves: the waves, in rough weather, dashing against the walls of it. Others think it was so called from its being built by the Cumai of Asia. Plin. iii. 4. Juvenal calls it empty in comparison with the populousness of Rome: it was, now, probably, much decayed, and but thinly inhabited: on this account it might be looked upon as a place of leisure, quiet, and retirement; all which may be understood by the word vacuis.

3. The Sibyl. Quasi ous Burn, Dei consilium. Ainsw. The Sibyls were women, supposed to be inspired with the spirit of prophecy. Authors are not agreed as to the number of them; but the most famous was the Cumæan, so called from having her residence Umbritius was now going to bestow, donare, one citizen on this abode of the Sibyl, by taking up his residence there.

Virg. Æn. vi. l. 10. et seq.
4. The gate of Baiæ.] Passengers from Rome to Baiæ were to pass through Cumæ; they went in on one side, and came out on the other, as through a gate.

- Baiæ. A delightful city of Campania, of which Hor. lib.

i. epist. i. l. 83.

Nullus in orbe sinus Baiis prælucet amænis.

Here were fine warm springs and baths, both pleasant and healthful; on which account it was much resorted to by the nobility and

SATIRE III.

ARGUMENT.

the reasons which had induced him to retire from Rome: each of which is replete with the keenest satire on its vicious inhabitants.—
Thus the Poet carries on his design of inveighing against the vices and disorders which reigned in that city.

THO' troubled at the departure of an old friend, I yet approve that to fix his abode at empty Cumæ He purposes, and to give one citizen to the Sibyl. It is the gate of Baiæ, and a grateful shore of pleasant Retirement. I prefer even Prochyta to Suburra: For what so wretched, so solitary do we see, that you Would not think it worse to dread fires, the continual Falling of houses, and a thousand perils of the fell gentry of Rome, many of whom had villas there for their summer residence. It forms part of the bay of Naples.

5

4. A grateful shore.] Gratum—grateful, here, must be understood in the sense of agreeable, pleasant. The whole shore, from Cume to Baiæ, was delightfully pleasant, and calculated for the most agreeable retirement. See the latter part of the last note.

5. Prochyta.] A small rugged island in the Tyrrhenian sea, desert and barren.

—— Suburra.] A street in Rome, much frequented, but chiefly by the vulgar, and by women of ill fame. Hence Mart. vi. 66.

Famæ non nimium bonæ puella, Quales in media sedent Suburra.

6. For what so wretched, &c.] Solitary and miserable as any place may be, yet it is better to be there than at Rome, where you have so many dangers and inconveniences to apprehend.

7. Fires. House-burnings-to which populous cities, from many various causes, are continually liable.

8. Falling of houses.] Owing to the little care taken of old and ruinous buildings. Propertius speaks of the two foregoing dangers.

Præterea domibus flammam, domibusque ruinam.

8-9. The fell city.] That habitation of daily cruelty and mischief.

Urbis, et Augusto recitantes mense poëtas?
Sed dum tota domus rhedâ componitur unâ,
Substitit ad veteres arcus, madidamque Capenam:
Hîc, ubi nocturnæ Numa constituebat amicæ,
Nunc sacri fontis nemus, et delubra locantur
Judæis: quorum cophinus, fœnumque supellex.

10

9. And poets reciting.] Juvenal very humourously introduces this circumstance among the calamities and inconveniences of living at Rome, that even in the month of August, the hottest season of the year, when most people had retired into the country, so that one might hope to enjoy some little quiet, even then you were to be teazed to death, by the constant din of the scribbling poets reciting their wretched compositions, and forcing you to hear them. Comp. sat. i. l. 1—14. where our poet expresses his peculiar aversion to this.

10. His whole house, &c.] While all his household furniture and goods were packing up together in one waggon, (as rheda may here signify). Umbritius was moving all his bag and baggage, (as we say,) and, by its taking up no more room, it should seem to have been very moderate in quantity.

11. He stood still.] He may be supposed to have walked on out of the city, attended by his friend Juvenal, expecting the vehicle with the goods to overtake him, when loaded: he now stood still to wait for its coming up; and in this situation he was, when he began to tell his friend his various reasons for leaving Rome, which are just so many strokes of the keenest satire upon the vices and follies of its inhabitants.

----- At the old arches.] The ancient triumphal arches of Romulus, and of the Horatii, which were in that part. Or perhaps the old arches of the aqueducts might here be meant.

— Wet Capena.] One of the gates of Rome, which led towards Capua: it was sometimes called Triumphalis, because those who rode in triumph passed through it—it was also called Fontinalis, from the great number of springs that were near it, which occasioned building the aqueducts, by which the water was carried by pipes into the city; hence Juvenal calls it madidam Capenam. Here is the spot where Numa used to meet the goddess Ægeria.

12. Numa.] Pompilius—successor to Romulus.

— Nocturnal mistress.] The more strongly to recommend his laws, and the better to instil into the Romans a reverence for religion, he persuaded them, that, every night, he conversed with a goddess, or nymph, called Ægeria, from whose mouth he received his whole form of government, both civil and religious; that their place of meeting was in a grove without the gate Capena, dedicated to the muses, wherein was a temple consecrated to them and to the goddess Ægeria, whose fountain waters the grove—for she is fabled to have wept herself into a fountain, for the death of Numa. This fountain, grove, and temple, were let out to the Jews, at a yearly rent, for habitation; they having been driven out of the city by

City, and poets reciting in the month of August?
But while his whole house is put together in one vehicle,
He stood still at the old arches, and wet Capena;
Here, where Numa appointed his nocturnal mistress,
Now the grove of the sacred fountain, and the shrines are hired
To the Jews: of whom a basket and hay are the household stuff.

Domitian, and compelled to lodge in these places, heretofore sacred to the muses. Delubra is a general term for places of worship. See Ainsw. By the phrase nocturnæ amicæ constituebat, Juvenal speaks as if he were describing an intrigue, where a man meets his mistress by appointment at a particular place; from this we can be at no loss to judge of our poet's very slight opinion of the reality of the transaction.

14. A basket and hay, &c.] These were all the furniture which these poor creatures had—the sum total of their goods and chattels.

This line has been looked upon as very difficult to expound. Some commentators have left it without any attempt to explain it. Others have rather added to, than diminished from, whatever its difficulty may be. They tell us, that these were the marks, not of their poverty, but, by an ancient custom, of their servitude in Ægypt, where, in baskets, they carried hay, straw, and such things, for the making of brick, and in such like labours. See Exod. v. 7—18. This comment, with the reasons given to support it, we can only say, is very far fetched, and is not warranted by any account we have of the Jewish customs.

Others say, that the hay was to feed their cattle—But how could these poor Jews be able to purchase, or to maintain, cattle, who were forced to beg in order to maintain themselves? Others—that the hay was for their bed on which they lay—but neither is this likely; for the poet, sat. vi. 541. describes a mendicant Jewess, as coming into the city, and leaving her basket and hay behind her; which implies, that the basket and hay were usually carried about with them when they went a begging elsewhere. Now it is not to be supposed that they should carry about so large a quantity of hay.

as served them to lie upon when at home in the grove.

It is clear that the basket and hay are mentioned together here, and in the other place of sat. vi. from whence I infer, that they had little wicker baskets in which they put the money, provisions, or other small alms which they received of the passers by, and, in order to stow them the better, and to prevent their dropping through the interstices of the wicker, put wisps of hay, or dried grass, in the inside of the baskets. These Jew beggars were as well known by baskets with hay in them, as our beggars are by their wallets, or our soldiers by their knapsacks. Hence the Jewess, sat. vi. left her basket and hay behind her when she came into the city, for fear they should betray her, and subject her to punishment for infringing the emperor's order against the Jews coming into the city. Her manner of begging too, by a whisper in the ear, seems to confirm this supposition. The Latin cophinus is the same as Gr. xoques—

you. I.

Omnis enim populo mercedem pendere jussa est

Arbor, et ejectis mendicat sylva Camænis.

In vallem Ægeriæ descendimus, et speluncas

Dissimiles veris: quanto præstantius esset

Numen aquæ, viridi si margine clauderet undas

Herba, nec ingenuum violarent marmora tophum?

Hic tunc Umbritius: quando artibus, inquit, honestis

Nullus in urbe locus, nulla emolumenta laborum,

Res hodie minor est, here quam fuit, atque eadem cras

Deteret exiguis aliquid; proponimus illuc

Ire, fatigatas ubi Dædalus exuit alas:

25

Dum nova canities, dum prima, et recta senectus, which is used several times in the New Testament to denote a provision-basket, made use of among the Jews. See Matt. xiv. 20. Matt. xvi. 9, 10. Mark vi. 43. Mark viii. 19, 20. Luke ix. 17.

Joh. vi. 13. .

15. To pay a rent.] The grove being let out to the Jews, every tree, as it were, might be said to bring in a rent to the people at Rome. The poet seems to mention this, as a proof of the public avarice, created by the public extravagance, which led them to hire out these sacred places, for what they could get, by letting them to the poor Jews, who could only pay for them out of what they got by begging.

16. The wood begs, &c.] i. e. The Jews, who were now the inhabitants of the wood, (meton.) were all beggars; nothing else was to be seen in those once sacred abodes of the muses, who were now banished.

17. We descend, &c.] Umbritius and Juvenal sauntered on, till they came to that part of the grove which was called the vale of Ægeria, so called, probably, from the fountain, into which she was changed, running there.

17—18. And into caves unlike the true.] These caves, in their primitive state, were as nature formed them, but had been profuned with artificial ornaments, which had destroyed their native beauty and simplicity.

18. How much better. How much more suitably situated.

19. The deity of the water. Each fountain was supposed to have a nymph, or naiad, belonging to it, who presided over it as the goddess of the water—Ægeria may be supposed to be here meant.

——If, with a green margin, &c.] If, instead of ornamenting the banks with artificial borders made of marble, they had been left in their natural state, simple and unadorned by human art, having no other margin but the native turf, and the rude stone (tophum) which was the genuine produce of the soil. These were once consecrated in honour of the fountain-nymph, but had now been violated and destroyed, in order to make way for artificial ornaments of marble, which Roman luxury and extravagance had put in their place.

For every tree is commanded to pay a rent to the people:

And the wood begs, the muses being ejected.

We descend into the vale of Ægeria, and into caves Unlike the true; how much better might have been

The deity of the water, if, with a green margin, the grass inclosed. The waters, nor had marbles violated the natural stone?

Here then Umbritius:—Since for honest arts, says he,

There is no place in the city, no emoluments of labour,

One's substance is to-day less than it was yesterday, and the same, to-morrow,

Will diminish something from the little: we propose thither To go, where Dædalus put off his weary wings, While greyness is new, while old age is fresh and upright,

25

21. Here then Umbritius.] Juvenal and his friend Umbritius, being arrived at this spot, at the profanation of which they were both equally scandalized, Umbritius there began to inveigh against the city of Rome, from which he was now about to depart, and spake as follows.

— Honest arts.] Liberal arts and sciences, such as poetry, and other literary pursuits, which are honourable. Comp. sat. vii. 1—6. Honestis artibus, in contradistinction to the dishonest and shameful methods of employment, which received countenance and encouragement from the great and opulent. Umbritius was himself a poet. See this sat. 1. 321, 2.

22. No emoluments of labour.] Nothing to be gotten by all the pains of honest industry.

[23. One's substance, &c.] Instead of increasing what I have, I find it daily decrease; as I can get nothing to replace what I spend, by all the pains I can take.

—— And the same, to-morrow, &c.] This same poor pittance of mine, will to-morrow be wearing away something from the little that is left of it to-day; and so I must find myself growing poorer from day to day. Deteret is a metaphorical expression, taken from the action of the file, which gradually wears away and diminishes the bodies to which it is applied. So the necessary expenses of Umbritius and his family were wearing away his substance, in that expensive place, which he determines to leave, for a more private and cheaper part of the country.

24. We propose.] i. e. I and my family propose-or proponimus for propono. Synec.

25—6. Thither to go.] i. e. To Cumæ, where Dædalus alighted after his flight from Crete.

26. Greyness is new.] While grey hairs, newly appearing, warn me that old age is coming upon me.

Fresh and upright. While old age in its first stage appears, and I am not yet so far advanced as to be bent double, but am able to hold myself upright. The ancients supposed old age first to commence about the 46th year. Cic. de Senectute, Philosophers

Dum superest Lachesi quod torqueat, et pedibus me Porto meis, nullo dextram subeunte bacillo, " Cedamus patria; vivant Arturius istic, Et Catulus: maneant qui nigra in candida vertunt, Queis facile est ædem conducere, flumina, portus, Siccandam eluviem, portandum ad busta cadaver, Et præbere caput domina venale sub hasta.

(says Holyday) divide man's life according to its several stages .-First: infantia to three or four years of age. - Secondly: pueritia, thence to ten. From ten to eighteen, pubertas. Thence to twentyfive, adolescentia. Then juventus, from twenty-five to thirty-five or forty. Thence to fifty, ætas virilis. Then came senectus prima et recta till sixty-five; and then ultima et decrepita till death.

27. While there remains to Lachesis, &c. One of the three destinies: she was supposed to spin the thread of human life.

The Parcæ, or poetical fates or destinies, were Clotho, Lachesis, and Atropos. The first held the distaff—the second drew out, and spun the thread, which the last cut off when finished.

- And on my feet, &c.] While I can stand on my own legs, and walk without the help of a staff.

29. Let us leave, &c. Let me, and all that belongs to me, take an everlasting farewell of that detested city, which, though my native place, I am heartily tired of, as none but knaves are fit to live there.

29-30. Arturius and Catulus. Two knaves, who, from very low life, had raised themselves to large and affluent circumstances. Umbritius seems to introduce them as examples, to prove that such people found more encouragement in Rome, than the professors of the liberal arts could hope for. See before, l. 21. note 2.

"30. Let those stay, &c.] He means those, who by craft and subtlety could utterly invert and change the appearances of things, making virtue appear as vice, and vice as virtue-falsehood as truth; and truth as falsehood.—Such were Arturius and Catulus.

31. To hire a building. The word ædem, here being joined with other things of public concern, such as rivers, ports, &c. seems to imply their hiring some public buildings, of which they made money; and it should seem, from these lines, that the several branches of the public revenue and expenditure, were farmed out to certain contractors, who were answerable to the ædiles, and to the other magistrates, . for the due execution of their contracts. Juvenal here seems to point at the temples, theatres, and other public buildings, which were thus farmed out to these people, who, from the wealth which they had acquired, and of course from their responsibility, could easily procure such contracts, by which they made an immense and exorbitant profit. Ædis-is-signifies any kind of edifice. AINSW. Omne ædeticium ædis dicitur.

-- Rivers.] Fisheries perhaps, by hiring which, they monopo-

While there remains to Lachesis what she may spin, and on my feet Myself I carry, no staff sustaining my hand,

Let us leave our native soil: let Arturius live there,

And Catulus: let those stay who turn black into white.

30

To whom it is easy to hire a building, rivers, ports, A sewer to be dried, a corpse to be carried to the pile, And to expose a venal head under the mistress-spear.

lized them, so as to distress others, and enrich themselves—or the carriage of goods upon the rivers, for which a toll was paid—or, by flumina, may here be meant, the beds of the rivers, hired out to be cleaned and cleared at the public expense.

*,31. Ports.] Where goods were exported and imported; these they rented, and thus became farmers of the public revenue, to the great grievance of those who were to pay the duties, and to the great emolument of themselves, who were sure to make the most of their bargain.

32. A sewer to be dried.] Eluvies signifies a sink or commonsewer; which is usual in great cities, to carry off the water and filth that would otherwise incommode the houses and streets. From eluo, to wash out, wash away.

These contractors undertook the opening and clearing these from the stoppages to which they were liable, and by which, it not cleansed, the city would have been in many parts overflowed. There was nothing so mean and filthy, that these two men would not have undertaken for the sake of gain. Here we find them scavengers.

— A corpse, &c.] Busta were places where dead bodies were burned—also graves and sepulchres. Alway. Bustum from ustum. Sometimes these people hired or farmed funerals, contracting for the expense at such a price. In this too they found their account.

[33. And to expose, &c.] [These fellows sometimes were mangones, sellers of slaves, which they purchased, and then sold by auction.

See Pers. vi. 76, 7.

— The mistress-spear. Domina hasta. It is difficult to render these two, substantives literally into English, unless we join them, as we frequently do some of our own—as in master-key, queen-bee, &c.

We read of the hasta decemviralis which was fixed before the courts of justice. So of the hasta centumviralis, also fixed there. A spear was also fixed in the forum where there was an auction, and was a sign of it: all things sold there were placed near it, and were said to be sold—under the spear. Hence (by meten.) hasta is used, by Cicero and others, to signify an auction, or public sale of goods. The word domina seems to imply, the power of disposal of the property in persons and things sold there, the possession and dominion over which were settled by this mode of sale, in the several

= Old Janes - The

Quondam hi cornicines, et municipalis arenæ
Perpetui comites, notæque per oppida buccæ,
Munera nunc edunt, et verso politice vulgi
Quemlibet occidunt populariter: inde reversi
Conducunt foricas: et cur non omnia? cum sint
Quales ex humili magna ad fastigia rerum
Extollit, quoties voluit Fortuna jocari.
Quid Romæ faciam? mentiri nescio: librum,
Si malus est, nequeo laudare, et poscere: motus Astrorum ignoro: funus promittere patris purchasers. So that the spear, or auction, might properly be called domina, as ruling the disposal of persons and things.

34. These, in time past, horn-blowers.] Such was formerly the occupation of these people; they had travelled about the country, from town to town, with little paltry shows of gladiators, fencers, wrestlers, stage-players, and the like, sounding horns to call the people together—like our trumpeters to a puppet-show.

— Municipal theatre.] Municipium signifies a city or town-corporate, which had the privileges and freedom of Rome, and at the same time governed by laws of its own, like our corporations. Municipalis denotes any thing belonging to such a town. Most of these had arenæ, or theatres, where strolling companies of gladiators, &c. (like our strolling players,) used to exhibit. They were attended by horn-blowers and trumpeters, who sounded during the performance.

35. Cheeks known, &c.] Blowers on the horn, or trumpet, were sometimes called buccinatores; from the great distension of the cheeks in the action of blowing. This, by constant use, left a swollen appearance on the cheeks, for which these fellows were well known in all the country towns. Perhaps bucca is here put for buccinæ, the horns, trumpets, and such wind instruments as these fellows strolled with about the country. See Ainsw. Bucca, No. 3.

36. Now set forth public shows.] Munera, so called because given to the people at the expense of him who set them forth. These fellows, who had themselves been in the mean condition above described, now are so magnificent, as to treat the people with public shows of gladiators at the Roman theatre.

The people's thumb, &c.] This alludes to a barbarous usage at fights of gladiators, where, if the people thought he that was overcome behaved like a coward, without courage or art, they made a sign for the vanquisher to put him to death, by clenching the hand, and holding or turning the thumb upward. If the thumb were turned downward, it was a signal to spare his life.

37. Whom they will, &c.] These fellows, by treating the people with shows, had grown so popular, and had such influence among the vulgar, that it was entirely in their power to direct the spectators, as to the signal for life or death, so that they either killed or

These, in time past, horn-blowers, and on a municipal theatre Perpetual attendants, and cheeks known through the towns, Now set forth public shows, and, the people's thumb being turned, Kill whom they will, as the people please: thence returned They hire jakes: and why not all things? since they are Such, as, from low estate, to great heights of circumstances Fortune raises up, as often as she has a mind to joke. 40 What can I do at Rome? I know not to lie: a book If bad, I cannot praise, and ask for: the motions Of the stars I am ignorant of: the funeral of a father to promise saved by directing the pleasure of the people. See Ainsw.

lariter, No. 2.

37. Thence returned, &c.] Their advancement to wealth did not alter their mean pursuits; after returning from the splendour of the theatre, they contract for emptying bog-houses of their soil and filth. Such were called at Rome-foricarii and latrinarii-with us-nightmen.

38. Why not all things?

Why hire they not the town, not every thing, Since such as they have fortune in a string?

39. Such, as, from low estate.] The poet here reckons the advancement of such low people to the height of opulence, as the sport of fortune, as one of those frolics which she exercises out of mere caprice and wantonness, without any regard to desert. See Hor. lib. i. ode xxxiv. l. 14—16, and lib. iii. ode xxix. l. 49—52.

40. Fortune. Had a temple and was worshipped as a goddess. The higher she raised up such wretches, the more conspicuously contemptible she might be said to make them, and seemed to joke, or divert herself, at their expense. See sat. x. 366.

41. I know not to lie. Dissemble, eant, flatter, say what I do not mean, seem to approve what I dislike, and praise what in my judgment I condemn. What then should I do at Rome, where this is one of the only means of advancement?

42. Ask for.] It was a common practice of low flatterers, to commend the writings of rich authors, however bad, in order to ingratiate themselves with them, and be invited to their houses: they also asked, as the greatest favour, for the loan or gift of a copy, which highly flattered the composers. This may be meant by poscere, in this place. See Hor. Art. Poet. l. 419-37. has an epigram on this subject. Epgr. xlviii. lib. vi.

> Quod tam grande σορως clamat tibi turba togata, Non tu, Pomponi, cæna diserta tua est.

Pomponius, thy wit is extoll'd by the rabble. Tis not thee they commend—but the cheer at thy table.

42-3. Motions of the stars. &c. I have no pretensions to skill in astrology.

43. The funeral of a father, &c. He hereby hints at the profi-

Nec volo, nec possum: ranarum viscera nunquam
Inspexi i ferre ad nuptam quæ mittit adulter,
Quæ mandat, norint alii: me nemo ministro
Fur erit; aque ideo nulli comes exeo, tanquam
Mancus, et extinctæ corpus non utile dextræ.
Quis nunc diligitur, nisi conscius, et cui fervens
Æstuat occultis annimus, semperque tacendis?
Nil tibi se debere putat, nil conferet unquam,
Participem qui te secreti fecit honesti.
Carus erit Verri, qui Verrem tempore, quo vult, Accusare potest. Tanti tibi non sit opaci gacy and want of natural affection in the young men who wished the death of their fathers, and even consulted astrologers about the time when it might happen; which said pretended diviners cozened the youths out of their money, by pretending to find out the certainty of such events by the motions or situations of the planets.

This, says Umbritius, I neither can, nor will do.

44. The entrails of toads.] Rana is a general word for all kinds of frogs and toads.

The language here is metaphorical, and alludes to augurs inspecting the entrails of the beasts slain in sacrifice, on the view of which they drew their good or ill omens.

Out of the bowels of toads, poisons, charms, and spells, were supposed to be extracted. Comp. sat. i. 70. sat. vi. 658. Umbritus seems to say—"I never foretold the death of fathers, or of "other rich relations; nor searched for poison, that my predictions "might be made good by the secret administration of it." Comp. sat. vi. 563—7.

sat. vi. 563—7.

45. To carry to a married woman. I never was pimp, or gobetween, in carrying on adulterous intrigues, by secretly conveying love-letters, presents, or any of those matters which gallants give in charge to their confidents. I leave this to others.

46. I assisting, &c. No villainy will ever be committed by my advice or assistance.

47. I go forth, & c.] For these reasons I depart from Rome, quite alone, for I know none to whom I can attach myself as a companion, so universally corrupt are the people.

48. Maimed.] Like a maimed limb, which can be of no service in any employment: just as unfit am I for any employment which is now going forward in Rome.

—— A useless body, &c.] As the body, when the right-hand, or any other limb that once belonged to it, is lost and gone, is no longer able to maintain itself by laborious employment, so I, having no inclination of talents, to undergo the drudgery of vice of any kind, can never thrive at Rome.

Some copies read-extincta dextra-abl. abs. the right-hand being lost. .. The sense amounts to the same.

49. Unless conscious.] Who now has any favour, attention, or

I neither will, nor can: the entrails of toads I never Have inspected: to carry a married woman what an adulterer sends 45
What he commits to charge, let others know: nobody, I assisting, Shall be a thief; and therefore I go forth a companion to none, as Maimed, and the useless body of an extinct right-hand.
Who now is loved, unless conscious, and whose fervent Mind boils with things hidden, and ever to remain in silence?
He thinks he owes you nothing, nothing will he bestow,
Who hath made you partaker of an honest secret.
He will be dear to Verres, who Verres, at any time he will,
Can accuse. Of so much value to you let not of shady regard shewn him, but he who is conscious, privy to, acquainted with, the wicked secrets of others?

49—50. Fervent mind boils, &c.] Is in a ferment, agitated between telling and concealing what has been committed to its confidence. The words fervens and astuat are, in this view, metaphorical, and taken from the raging and boiling of the sea, when agitated by a stormy wind. Fervet vertigine pontus. Ov. Met. xi. 549. So, astuare semper fretum. Curt. iv. 9. Ainsw. Æstuo, No. 4.

Hence assuans signifies—boiling with any passion, when applied to the mind. Animo assuante reditum ad vada retulit. Catuli. See Ainsw. See Is. Ivii. 20.

Or we may give the words another turn, as descriptive of the torment and uneasiness of mind which these men must feel, in having become acquainted with the most flagitious crimes in others, by assisting them, or partaking with them in the commission of them, and which, for their own sakes, they dare not reveal, as well as from the fear of those by whom they are intrusted.

Who now is lov'd but he who loves the times,
Conscious of close intrigues, and dipp'd in crimes:
Lab'ring with secrets which his bosom burn,
Yet never must to public light return.

DRYDEN,

51. He thinks he owes you nothing, &c.] Nobody will think himself obliged to you for concealing honest and fair transactions, or think it incumbent on him to buy your silence by conferring favours on you.

53. Verres. See sat. ii. 26, note. Juvenal mentions him here as an example of what he has been saying. Most probably, under the name of Verres, the poet means some characters then living, who made much of those who had them in their power by being acquainted with their secret villainies, and who, at any time, could have ruined them by a discovery.

54—5. Shady Tagus.] A river of Spain, which discharges itself into the ocean near Lishon, in Portugal. It was anciently said to have golden sands. It was called opacus, dark, obscure, or shady, from the thick shade of the trees on its banks.

VOL. I.

Omnis arena Tagi, quodque in mare volvitur aurum, Ut somno careas, ponendaque præmia sumas Tristis, et a magno semper timearis amico.

Quæ nunc divitibus gens acceptissima nostris, Et quos præcipue fugiam, properabo fateri; Nec pudor obstabit. Non possum ferre, Quirites, Græcam urbem: quamvis quota portio fæcis Achææ? Jampridem Syrus in Tiberim defluxit Orontes, Æstus serenos aureo franges Tago Obscurus umbris arborum.

60

55

MART. lib. i. epigr. 50.

Or opacus may denote a dusky turbid appearance in the water.
56. That you should want sleep, & c.] O thou, whoe'er thou art, that may be solicited to such criminal secrecy by the rich and great, reflect on the misery of such flagitious confidence, and prefer the reflect on the misery of such flagitious confidence, and prefer the repose of a quiet and easy conscience, to all the golden sands of Tagus, to all the treasures which it can roll into the sea! These would make you but ill amends for sleepless nights, when kept awake by guilt and fear.

——Accept rewards to be rejected.] i. e. Which ought to be rejected—by way of hush-money, which, so far, poor wretch, from making you happy, will fill you with shame and sorrow, and which, therefore, are to be looked upon as abominable, and to be utterly refused, and laid aside. Ponenda, lit.—to be laid down—but here it has the sense of—abominanda—respuenda—rejicienda—abneganda.

See Hor. lib. iii. od. ii. l. 19.

57. Feared, &c.] The great man who professes himself your friend; and who has heaped his favours upon you in order to bribe you to silence, will be perpetually betraying a dread of you, lest you should discover him. The consequence of which, you may have reason to apprehend, may be his ridding himself of his fears by ridding the world of you, lest you should prove like others—magni delator amici. See sat. i. 33. But whether the great man betrays this fear or not, you may be certain he will be constantly possessed with it; and a much greater proof of this you cannot have, than the pains he takes to buy your silence. When he grows weary of this method, you know what you may expect. Alas! can all the treasures of the whole earth make it worth your while to be in such a situation! Comp. l. 113.

58. What nation, &c, Umbritius proceeds in his reasons for retiring from Rome. Having complained of the sad state of the times, insomuch that no honest man could thrive there, he now attacks the introduction of Grecians and other foreigners, the fondness of the rich and great towards them, and the sordid arts by which they raised themselves.

60. Nor shall shame hinder.] In short, I'll speak my mind without reserve, my modesty shall not stand in my way.

—— O Romans.] Quirites—this anciently was a name for the Sabines, from the city Cures, or from quiris, a sort of spear used by them: but after their union with the Romans this appellation

Tagus the whole sand be, and the gold which is rolled into the sea, 55
That you should want sleep, and should accept rewards to be rejected,

Sorrowful, and be always feared by a great friend.
What nation is now most acceptable to our rich men,

And whom I would particularly avoid, I will hasten to confess:

Nor shall shame hinder. O Romans, I cannot bear

60

A Grecian city: tho' what is the portion of Achæan dregs? Some while since Syrian Orontes has flow'd into the Tiber, was used for the Roman people in general. The name Quirinus was first given to Romulus. See sat. ii. 133.

Probably the poet used the word Quirites here, as reminding them of their ancient simplicity of manners and dress, by way of contrast to their present corruption and effeminacy in both; owing, very much, to their fondness of the Greeks and other foreigners, for some time past introduced among them.

61. A Grecian city. Meaning Rome—now so transformed from what it once was, by the rage which the great people had for the language, manners, dress, &c. of those Greeks whom they invited and entertained, that, as the inferior people are fond of imitating their superiors, it was not unlikely that the transformation might become general throughout the whole city; no longer Roman, but Grecian. Umbritius could not bear the thought.

— Tho' what is the portion, &c.] Though, by the way, if we consider the multitudes of other foreigners, with which the city now abounds, what, as to numbers, is the portion of Greeks? they are comparatively few. See sat. xiii. 157. Hæe quota pars scelerum, &c. What part is this (i. e. how small a part or portion) of the crimes, &c.

—— Achæan dregs.] Achæa, or Achaia, signifies the whole country of Greece, anciently called Danaë, whence the Greeks are called Danaë. Ainsw. Dregs—metaph. taken from the foul, turbid, filthy sediment which wine deposits at the bottom of the cask. A fit emblem of these vile Greeks, as though they were the filth and refuse of all Greece.

Sometimes the word Achæa, or Achaia, is to be understood in a more confined sense, and denotes only some of that part of Greece called Peloponnesus, or Pelops' island, now the Morea, anciently divided into Arcadia, and Achaia, of which Corinth was the capital: the inhabitants of this city were proverbially lewd and wicked—xogrotic fur was a usual phrase to express doing acts effeminacy, lewdness, and debauchery—what then must the dregs of Corinth, and its environs have been? See 1 Cor. vi. 9—11, former part.

62. Syrian Orontes.] Orontes was the greatest river of Syria, a large country of Asia. Umbritius had said (at l. 61.) that the portion of Grecians was small in comparison; he now proceeds to explain himself, by mentioning the inundation of Syrians, and other Et linguam, et mores, et cum tibicine chordas Obliquas, necnon gentilia tympana secum Vexit, et ad Circum jussas prostare puellas. Ite, quibus grata est pictà lupa Barbara mitrà.

-Rusticus ille tuus sumit trechedipna, Quirine,

Et ceromatico fert niceteria collo.

Asiatic strangers, who had for some time been flocking to Rome: these were in such numbers from Syria, and they had so introduced their eastern manners, music, &c. that one would fancy one's self on the banks of the Orontes, instead of the Tiber. The river Orontes is here put for the people who inhabited the tract of country through which it ran. Meton. So the Tiber for the city of Rome, which stood on its banks.

62. Has flow'd.] Metaph. This well expresses the idea of the numbers, as well as the mischies they brought with them, which were now overwhelming the city of Rome, and utterly destroying the morals of the people.

63. With the piper. Tibicen signifies a player on a flute, or pipe. A minstrel. They brought eastern musicians, as well as musical instruments. The flute was an instrument whose soft sound tended to mollify and enervate the mind.

63—4. Harps oblique.] Chordas, literally strings; here it signifies the instruments, which, being in a crooked form, the strings must of course be obliquely placed.

64. National timbrels.] Tabours, or little drums, in form of a hoop, with parchment distended over it, and bits of brass fixed to it to make a jingling noise; which the eastern people made use of, as they do to this day, at their feasts and dancings, and which they beat with the fingers.

64—5. With itself hath brought.] As a river, when it breaks its bounds, carries along with it something from all the different soils through which it passes, and rolls along what it may meet with in its way; so the torrent of Asiatics has brought with it, from Syria to Rome, the language, morals, dress, music, and all the enervating and effeminate vices of the several eastern provinces from whence it came.

65. And girls bidden to expose, &c.] Prosto, in this connexion, as applied to harlots, means to be common, and ready to be hired of all comers for money. For this purpose, the owners of these Asiatic female slaves ordered them to attend at the Circus, where they might pick up gallants, and so made a gain of their prostitution. Or perhaps they had stews in the cells and vaults which were under the great Circus, where they exercised their lewdness. See Holyday on the place, note f.

The word jussas may, perhaps, apply to these prostitutes, as expressive of their situation, as being at every body's command. Thus

Ov. lib. i. eleg. 10.

Stat meretrix certo cuivis mercabilis are, Et miseras jusso corpore quarit opes. And its language, and manners, and, with the piper, harps Oblique, also its national timbrels, with itself

Hath brought, and girls bidden to expose themselves for hiring at the Circus.—

Go ye, who like a Barbarian strumpet with a painted mitre.

That rustic of thine, O Quirinus, assumes a Grecian dress,

And carries Grecian ornaments on his perfumed neck.

65. Circus.] There were several circi in Rome, which were places set apart for the celebration of several games: they were generally oblong, or almost in the shape of a bow, having a wall quite round, with ranges of seats for the convenience of spectators. The Circus maximus, which is probably meant here, was an immense building; it was first built by Tarquinius Priscus, but beautified and adorned by succeeding princes, and enlarged to such a prodigious extent, as to be able to contain, in their proper seats, two hundred and sixty thousand spectators. See Kennett, Ant. part II. book i. c. 4.

66. Go ye, &c.] Umbritius may be supposed to have uttered this with no small indignation.

——Strumpet.] Lupa literally signifies a she-wolf—but an appellation fitly bestowed on common whores or bawds, whose profession led them to support themselves by preying at large on all they could get into their clutches. Hence a brothel was called lupanar. The Romans called all foreigners barbarians.

—— A painted mitre.] A sort of turban, worn by the Syrian women as a part of their head-dress, ornamented with painted linen.

- 67. O Quirinus.] O Romulus, thou great founder of this now degenerate city! See note on l. 60.

— That rustic of thine.] In the days of Romulus, and under his government, the Romans were an hardy race of shepherds and husbandmen. See sat. ii. l. 74, and 127. Sat. viii. l. 274, 5. rough in their dress, and simple in their manners. But, alas! how changed!

— A Grecian dress.] Trechedipna—from τρίχω, to run, and δωτνον, a supper. A kind of garment in which they ran to other people's suppers. Ainsw. It was certainly of Greek extraction, and though the form and materials of it are not described, yet we must suppose it of the soft, effeininate, or gawdy kind, very unlike the garb and dress of the ancient rustics of Romulus, and to speak a sad change in the manners of the people. Dryden renders the passage thus:

O Romulus, and father Mars, look down! Your herdsman primitive, your homely clown, Is turn'd a beau in a loose tawdry gown.

68. Grecian ornaments.] Niceteria—rewards for victories, as rings, collars of gold, &c. Prises. From Gr. vun, victory.

--- On his perfuned neck.] Ceromatico collo. The ceroma (Gr. κηρωμα, from κηρος, cera) was an oil tempered with wax. wherein wrestlers anointed themselves.

70

Hic altà Sicyone, ast hic Amydone relictà, Hic Andro, ille Samo, hic Trallibus, aut Alabandis, Esquilias, dietumque petunt a vimine collem: Viscera magnarum domuum, dominique futuri.

75

Ingenium velox, audacia perdita, sermo Promptus, et Isæo torrentior; ede quid illum Esse putes? quemvis hominem secum attulit ad nos: Grammaticus, Rhetor, Geometres, Pictor, Aliptes, Augur, Scheenobates, Medicus, Magus: omnia novit. Græculus esuriens in cœlum, jusseris, ibit.

But what proofs of effeminacy, or depravation, doth the poet set forth in these intances?

Using wrestlers' oil, and wearing on the neck collars of gold, and other insignia of victory, if to be understood literally, seems but ill to agree with the poet's design, to charge the Romans with a loss of all former hardiness and manliness: therefore we are to understand this line in an ironical sense, meaning, that, instead of wearing collars of gold as tokens of victory, and rewards of courage and activity, their niceteria were tinkets and gewgaws, worn merely as ornaments, suitable to the effeminacy and luxury into which, after the example of the Grecians, Syrians, &c. they were sunk. By the ceroma he must also be understood to mean, that, instead of wrestlers' oil, which was a mere compound of oil and wax, their eeroma was some curious perfumed unguent with which they anointed their persons, their hair particularly, merely out of luxury. See sat. ii. 40-2. Thus Mr. Dryden:

His once unkem'd and horrid locks, behold Stilling sweet oil, his neck enchain'd with gold: Aping the foreigners in every dress, Which, bought at greater cost, becomes him less.

69. High Sicyon.] An island in the Ægean sea, where the ground was very high. The Ægean was a part of the Mediterranean sea, near Greece, dividing Europe from Asia. It is now called the Archipelago, and by the Turks, the White sea.

- Amydon.] A city of Macedonia.

70. Andros. An island and town of Phrygia the Lesser, situate in the Ægean sea.

- Samos. An island in the Ionian sea, west of the bay of Corinth, now under the republic of Venice, now Cephalonie.

- Tralles.] A city of Lesser Asia between Caria and Lydia.

— Alabanda.] A city of Caria in the Lesser Asia.
71. Esquilia.] The mons esquilinus, one of the seven hills in Rome; so called from esculus—a beech-tree, of which many grew upon it. See AINSW.

- The hill named, &c. The collis vininalis, another of the seven hills on which Rome was built; so called from a wood or grove of osiers which grew upon it. There was an altar there to Jupiter, under the title of Jupiter Viminalis.

One leaving high Sicyon, but another, Amydon,

He from Andros, another from Samos, another from Tralles, or Alabanda, 70

Seek the Esquiliæ, and the hill named from an osier;

The bowels, and future lords, of great families.

A quick wit, desperate impudence, speech

Ready, and more rapid than Isæus. Say-what do you Think him to be? He has brought us with himself what man you please:

Grammarian, Rhetorician, Geometrician, Painter, Anointer, Augur, Rope-dancer, Physician, Wizard: he knows all things.

A hungry Greek will go into heaven, if you command.

These two parts of Rome may stand (by synec.) for Rome itself; or perhaps these were parts of it where these foreigners chiefly settled.

72. The bowels, &c.] Insinuating themselves, by their art and subtlety, into the intimacy of great and noble families, so as to become their confidents and favourites, their vitals as it were, insomuch that, in time, they govern the whole: and, in some instances, become their heirs, and thus lords over the family possessions. See sat, ii. 58, notes. The wheedling and flattering of rich people, in order to become their heirs, are often mentioned in Juvenal—such people were called captatores.

73. A quick wit.] Ingenium velox—Ingenium is a word of many meanings: perhaps, here, joined with velox, it might be rendered, a ready invention.

— Desperate impudence.] That nothing can abash or dismay.

73-1. Speech ready.] Having words at will.

74. Isœus.] A famous Athenian orator, preceptor of Demosthenes. Torrentior, more copious, flowing with more precipitation and fulness, more like a torrent.

—— Say, &c.] Now by the way, my friend, tell me what you imagine such a man to be—I mean of what calling or profession, or what do you think him qualified for?

75. What man, &c.] Well, I'll not puzzle you with guessing, but at once inform you, that, in his own single person, he has brought with him every character that you can imagine: in short, he is a jack of all trades. As the French say—C'est un valet à tout faire. Or, as is said of the Jesuits—Jesuitus est omnis homo.

76. Anointer.] Aliptes, (from Gr. αλειρω, to anoint,) he that anointed the wrestlers, and took care of them. Ainsw.

77. He knows all things.] Not only what I have mentioned, but so versatile is his genius, that nothing can come amiss to him. There is nothing that he does not pretend to the knowledge of.

78. A hungry Greek. The diminutive Graeulus is sarcastical, q. d. Let my little Greeian be pinched with hunger, he would undertake any thing you bade him, however impossible or improbable—like another Dædalus, he would even attempt to fly into the air.

Ad summum non Maurus erat, nec Sarmata, nec Thrax,
Qui sumpsit pennas, mediis sed natus Athenis.

Horum ego non fugiam conchylia? me prior ille
Signabit? fultusque toro meliore recumbet,
Advectus Romam, quo pruna et coctona, vento?
Usque adeo nihil est, quod nostra infantia cœlum
Hausit Aventini, baccà nutrita Sabinà?

Quid!—quod adulandi gens prudentissima laudat
Sermonem indocti, faciem deformis amici,
Et longum invalidi collum cervicibus æquat
Herculis, Antæum procul a tellure tenentis—
Miratur vocem augustam, quà deterius nec

79. In fine, &c.] Ad summum—upon the whole, be it observed, that the Greeks of old were a dexterous people at contrivance; for the attempt at flying was schemed by Dædalus, a native of Athens. No man of any other country has the honour of the invention.

81. The splendid dress.] Conchylia—shell-fish—the liquor thereof made purple, or scarlet colour: called also murex.—Conchylium, by meton. signifies the colour itself; also garments dyed therewith, which were very expensive, and worn by the nobility and other great people.

Shall not I fly, fugiam, avoid the very sight of such garments, when worn by such fellows as these, who are only able to wear them by the wealth which they have gotten by their craft and imposition?

81-2. Sign before me.] Set his name before mine, as a witness to any deed, &c. which we may be called upon to sign.

82. Supported by a better couch, &c.] The Romans lay on couches at their convivial entertainments—these couches were ornamented more or less, some finer and handsomer than others, which were occupied according to the quality of the guests. The middle couch was esteemed the most honourable place, and so in order from thence. Must this vagabond Greek take place of me at table, says Umbritius, as if he were above me in point of quality and consequence? As we should say—Shall he sit above me at table? Hore lib. ii. sat. viii. l. 20—3. describes an arrangement of the company at table.

83. Brought to Rome.] Advectus—imported from a foreign country, by the same wind, and in the same ship, with prunes, and little figs, from Syria. These were called coctona, or cottana, as supposed, from Heb. pp little. Mart. lib. xiii. 28. parva cottana.

Syria peculiares habet arbores, in ficorum genere. Caricas, et minores ejus generis, quæ coctana vocant. Plin. lib. xiii. c. 5.

Juvenal means to set forth the low origin of these people; that they, at first, were brought out of Syria to Rome, as dealers in small and contemptible articles. Or he may mean, that as slaves they made a part of the cargo, in one of these little trading vessels. See sat. i. 110, 11.

In fine—he was not a Moor, nor Sarmatian, nor Thracian,
Who assumed wings, but born in the midst of Athens.
Shall I not avoid the splendid dress of these? before me shall he Sign? and supported by a better couch shall he lie at table,
Brought to Rome by the same wind as plumbs and figs?
Is it even nothing that our infancy the air
Of Aventinus drew, nourished by the Sabine berry?
What!—because a nation, most expert in flattery, praises
The speech of an unlearned, the face of a deformed friend.
And equals the long neck of the feeble, to the neck of Hercules, holding Antæus far from the earth—
Admires a squeaking voice: not worse than which,

85. Aventinus, &c.] One of the seven hills of Rome; so called from Avens, a river of the Sabines. Ainsw. Umbritius here, with a patriotic indignation at the preference given to foreigners, asks—What! is there no privilege in having drawn our first breath in Rome? no pre-eminence in being born a citizen of the first city in the world, the conqueror and mistress of all those countries from whence these people came? Shall such fellows as these not only vie with Roman citizens, but be preferred before them?

Sabine berry.] A part of Italy on the banks of the Tiber, once belonging to the Sabines, was famous for olives, here called bacca Sabina. But we are to understand all the nutritive fruits and produce of the country in general. Pro specie genus. Syn. In contradistinction to the pruna et coctona, l. 83.

86. What!] As if he had said—What! is all the favour and preference which these Greeks meet with, owing to their talent for flattery?—are they to be esteemed more than the citizens of Rome, because they are a nation of base sycophants?

87. The speech, &c.] Or discourse, talk, conversation, of some ignorant, stupid, rich patron, whose favour is basely courted by the most barefaced adulation.

- Face of a deformed, &c. Persuading him that he is handsome; or that his very deformities are beauties.

88. The long neck, &c.] Compares the long crane-neck of some puny wretch, to the brawny neck and shoulders (cervicibus) of Hercules.

89. Holding, &c.] This relates to the story of Antæus, a giant of prodigious strength, who, when knocked down by Hercules, recovered himself by lying on his mother earth; Hercules therefore held him up in his left hand, between earth and heaven, and with his right hand dashed his brains out.

90. Admires a squeaking voice. A squeaking, hoarse, croaking kind of utterance, as if squeezed in its passage by the narrowness of the throat—this he applands with admiration.

--- Not worse, &c.] He assimilates the voice so commended, to the harsh screaming sound of a cock when he crows; or rather to the noise which he makes when he seizes the hea, on approaching to

FOL. I.

Ille sonat, quo mordetur gallina marito!
Hæc eadem licet et nobis laudare: sed illis Creditur. An melior cum Thaida sustinet, aut cum Uxorem comœdus agit, vel Dorida nullo
Cultam palliolo? mulier nempe ipsa videtur,
Non persona loqui: vacua et plana omnia dicas
Infra ventriculum, et tenui distantia rimâ.
Nec tamen Antiochus, nec erit mirabilis illic
Aut Stratocles, aut cum molli Demetrius Hæmo:
Natio comæda est: rides? majore eachinno
Concutitur: flet, si lachrymas conspexit amici,
Nec dolet: igniculum brumæ si tempore poscas
Accipit endromidem: si dixeris, æstuo, sudat.

100

tread her, when he nips her comb in his beak, and holds her down under him. This must be alluded to by the mordetur gallina, &c. Claverius, paraph. in Juv. iv. reads the passage:

Illa sonat, quum mordetur gallina marito.

Doth that sound, when a hen is bitten by her husband.

Meaning—that voice which was so extolled with admiration by the flatterer, was as bad as the screaming which a hen makes when trodden by the cock, who seizes and bites her comb with his beak, which must be very painful, and occasion the noise which she makes. However this reading may be rather more agreeable to the fact, yet there does not seem to be sufficient authority to adopt it.

92. We may praise also.] To be sure we Romans may flatter, but without success; we shall not be believed: the Greeks are the only people in such credit as to have all they say pass for truth.

93. Whether is he better when he plays, &c.] Sustinet—sustains the part of a Thais, or courtezan, or the more decent character of a matron, or a naked sea nymph: there is no saying which a Grecian actor excels most in—he speaks so like a woman, that you'd swear the very woman seems to speak, and not the actor. Persona signifies a false face, a mask, a vizor, in which the Grecian and Roman actors played their parts, and so by meton, became to signify an actor.

This passage shews, that women's parts were represented by men: for which these Greeks had no occasion for any alteration of voice;

they differed from women in nothing but their sex.

94. Doris, &c.] A sea nymph represented in some play. See Ainsw. Doris. Palliolum was a little upper garment; the sea nymphs were usually represented naked, nullo palliolo, without the least covering over their bodies. Palliolum, dim, of pallium.

98. Yet neither will Antiochus.] This person, and the others mentioned in the next line, were all Grecian comedians; perhaps Hamus, from the epithet molli, may be understood to have been pecuharly adapted to the performance of female characters.

He utters, who, being husband, the hen is bitten! These same things we may praise also: but to them

Credit is given. Whether is he better when he plays Thais, or when

The comedian acts a wife, or Doris with no

Cloak dressed? truly a woman herself seems to speak,

95

Not the actor: you would declare

It was a real woman in all respects.

Yet neither will Antiochus, nor admirable there will Either Stratocles, or Demetrius, with soft Hæmus, be:

The nation is imitative. Do you laugh? with greater laughter 100

Is he shaken: he weeps, if he has seen the tears of a friend,

Not that he grieves: if in winter-time you ask for a little fire,

He puts on a great coat: if you should say—"I am hot"—he sweats.

All these, however we may admire them at Rome, would not be at all extraordinary in the country which they came from—illic—for all the Grecians are born actors; there is therefore nothing new, or wonderful, there, in representing assumed characters, however well: it is the very characteristic of the whole nation to be personating and imitative. See Ainsw. Comædus-a-um.

100. Do you laugh?] The poet here illustrates what he had said, by instances of Grecian adulation of the most servile and meanest kind.

If one of their patrons happens to laugh, or even to smile, for so rideo also signifies, the parasite sets up a loud horse-laugh, and laughs aloud, or, as the word concutitur implies, laughs ready to split his sides, as we say.

101, He weeps, &c.] If he finds his friend in tears, he can humour this too; and can squeeze out a lamentable appearance of sorrow, but without a single grain of it.

102. If in winter-time you ask, &c.] If the weather be cold enough for the patron to order a little fire, the versatile Greek instantly improves on the matter, and puts on a great thick gownendromidem—a sort of thick rug, used by wrostlers, and other gymnasiasts, to cover them after their exercise, lest they should cool too fast.

103. I am hot, &c.] If the patron complains of heat—the other vows that he is all over in a sweat.

Shakespeare has touched this sort of character something in the way of Juvenal—Hamlet, act V. sc. ii.—where he introduces the short but well-drawn character of Osrick, whom he represents as a complete temporizer with the humours of his superiors.

HAM. Your bonnet to his right use—'tis for the head,

Osn. I thank your lordship, 'tis very hot.

HAM. No, believe me, 'tis very cold—the wind is northerly.

Non sumus ergo pares: melior qui semper, et omni Nocte dieque potest alienum sumere vultum: A facie jactare manus, laudare paratus, Si bene ructavit, si rectum minxit amicus, Si trulla inverso crepitum dedit aurea fundo. Præterea sanctum nihil est, et ab inguine tutum :

Non matrona laris, non filia virgo, neque ipse Sponsus lævis adhuc, non filius ante pudicus.

Osr. It is indifferent cold, my lord, indeed. HAM. But yet, methinks, it is very sultry, and hot, for my complexion. Osn. Exceedingly, my lord, it is very sultry, as it were, I can't tell how .-

But Terence has a full length picture of one of these Grecian parasites, which he copied from Menander. See TER. Eun. the part of Gnatho throughout: than which nothing can be more exquisitely drawn, or more highly finished.

This, by the way, justifies Juvenal in tracing the original of such characters from Greece. Menander lived about 350 years before Terence died about 159 years before Christ.

104. We are not therefore equals. We Romans are no match for them-they far exceed any thing we can attempt in the way of flat-

- Better is he, &c. He who can watch the countenance of another perpetually, and, night and day, as it were, practise an imitation of it, so as to coincide, on all occasions, with the particular look, humour, and disposition of others, is better calculated for the office of a sycophant, than we can pretend to be.

106. Cast from the face, & c.] This was some action of complimentary address, made use of by flatterers. He who did this, first brought the hand to his mouth, kissed his hand, then stretched it out towards the person whom he meant to salute, and thus was understood to throw, or reach forth, the kiss which he had given to his

To this purpose Salmasius explains the phrase—a facie jactare

This exactly coincides with what we call kissing the hand to one. This we see done frequently, where persons see one another at a distance in crowded public places, or are passing each other in carriages, and the like, where they cannot get near enough to speak together: and this is looked upon as a token of friendly courtesy and civility. The action is performed much in the manner above described, and is common among us.

It is so usual to look on this as a token of civility, that it is one of the first things which children, especially of the higher sort, are taught-sometimes it is done with one hand, sometimes with both.

According to this interpretation, we may suppose, that these flat-

We are not therefore equals: better is he, who always, and all Night and day, can assume another's countenance,

Cast from the face the hands, ready to applaud;

If his friend hath belched well, or rightly made water;

If the golden cup hath given a crack, from the inverted bottom.

Moreover, nothing is sacred or safe from their lust;

Not the matron of an household, not a virgin daughter, not terers were very lavish of this kind of salutation, towards those whose favour they courted.

The wooer himself, as yet smooth, not the son before chaste.

Bringing the hand to the mouth and kissing it, as a token of respect, is very ancient; we read of it in Job xxxi. 26, 27. as an action of even religious worship, which the idolators paid to the host of heaven.

107. Hath belched well.] By these ridiculous instances, the poet means to shew that their adulation was of the most servile and abject kind.

108. If the golden cup, &c.] Trulla signifies a vessel, or cup, to drink with; they were made of various materials, but the rich had them of gold.

When the great man had exhausted the liquor, so that the cup was turned bottom upwards before he took it from his mouth, and then smacked his lips so loud as to make a kind of echo from the bottom of the cup, (an action frequent among jovial companions,) this too was a subject of praise and commendation. This passage refers to the Grecian custom of applauding those who drank a large vessel at a draught.

Perhaps such parasites looked on such actions as are above mentioned, passing before them, as marks of confidence and intimacy, according to that of Martial, lib. x.

Nil aliud video quo te credamus amicum, Quam quod me coram pedere, Crispe, soles,

A sense like that of these lines of Martial is given to Juvenal's crepitum dedit by some commentators; but as dedit has the aurea trulla for its nominative case, the sense above given seems to be nearest the truth.

Such servile flatterers as these have been the growth of all climes, the produce of all countries. See Hor. Art. Poet. l. 428-33.

109. Moreover, &c.] In this and the two following lines, Un-britius inveighs against their monstrous and mischievous lust.

111. As yet smooth.] Sleek, smooth-faced, not yet having hair on his face.—Sponsus here means a young wooer who is supposed to be paying his addresses to a daughter of the family, in order to marry her; even he can't be safe from the attempts of these vile Greeks.

Before chaste.] i. e. Before some filthy Grecian came into the family.

Horum si nihil est, aulam resupinat amici: Scire volunt secreta domûs, atque inde timeri. Et quoniam cœpit Græcorum mentio, transi Gymnasia, atque audi facinus majoris abollæ. Stoïcus occîdit Baream, delator amicum, Discipulumque senex, ripâ nutritus in illâ, Ad quam Gorgonei delapsa est penna caballi. Non est Romano cuiquam locus hic, ubi regnat Protogenes aliquis, vel Diphilus, aut Erimanthus, 112. He turns the house, &c. Aula signifies a fore-court, or an hall, belonging to a house: here it is put (by synec.) for the house itself: by catachresis for the family in the house.

Resupino is a word rather of an obscene import, and here used metaphorically, for prying into the secrets of the family.

AINSW. Resupino.

Holyday observes, that the scholiast reads aviam, (not aulam,) as if these fellows, sooner than fail, would attack the grandmother if there were nobody else. But though this reading gives a sense much to our poet's purpose, yet as it is not warranted by copy, as aulam is, the latter must be preferred. Amici here means—of his patron, who has admitted him into his family.

113. And thence be feared. Lest they should reveal and publish the secrets which they become possessed of. See before, l. 50-7.

Farnaby, in his note on this place, mentions an Italian proverb, which is much to the purpose.

Servo d'altrui si fà, chi dice il suo secreto a chi no 'l sa.

"He makes himself the servant of another, who tells his secret to "one that knows it not."

114. And because mention, &c.] q. d. And, by the way, as I have begun to mention the Greeks.

Pass over, &c.] Transi-imp. of transeo, to pass over or through—also to omit—or say nothing of—to pass a thing by, or

Each of these senses is espoused by different commentators. Those who are for the former sense, make the passage mean thus: "Talking of Greeks, let us pass through their schools, so as to see "and observe what is going forward there."

The others make the sense to be: "Omit saying any thing of "the schools; bad as they may be, they are not worth mentioning,

"in comparison of certain other worse things."

I rather think with the former, whose interpretation seems best to suit with the—et audi—in the next sentence. q. d. " As we are "talking of the Grecians, I would desire you to pass from the "common herd, go to the schools, take a view of their philosophers, "and hear what one of their chiefs was guilty of."

115. The schools. Gymnasia here signifies those places of exercise, or schools, where the philosophers met for disputation, and for-the instruction of their disciples. See Arnsw. Gymnasium,

If there be none of these, he turns the house of his friend upside down:

They will know the secrets of the family, and thence be feared.

And because mention of Greeks has begun, pass over

The schools, and hear a deed of the greater abolla.

115

A Stoic killed Bareas, an informer his friend,

And an old man his disciple, nourished on that bank,

At which a feather of the Gorgonean horse dropped down.

No place is here for any Roman, where reigns Some Protogenes, or Diphilus, or Erimanthus, 115. A deed. Facinus, in a bad sense, means a foul act, a villainous deed, a scandalous action.

120

--- Greater abolla.] Abolla was a sort of cloak, worn by soldiers, and also by philosophers. The abolla of the soldiers was less than the other, and called minor abolla—that of the philosopher, being larger, was called major abolla.

Juvenal also uses the word abolla (sat. iv. 76.) for a senator's robe.

Here, by meton, it denotes the philosopher himself.

116. Stoic. One of the straitest sects of philosophers among the

See Ainsw. Stoici-orum.

— Killed, &c.] By accusing him of some crime for which he was put to death. This was a practice much encouraged by the emperors Nero and Domitian, and by which many made their fortunes. See note on sat. i. 32, 3.

--- Bareas.] The fact is thus related by Tacitus, Ann. vi. "P. "Egnatius (the Stoic above mentioned) circumvented by false tes-"timony Bareas Soranus, his friend and disciple, under Nero."

· 117. His disciple.] To whom he owed protection.

- Nourished on that bank, &c.] By this periphrasis we are to understand, that this Stoic was originally bred at Tarsus, in Cilicia, a province of ancient Greece, which was built by Perseus, on the banks of the river Cydnus, on the spot where his horse Pegasus dropped a feather out of his wing. He called the city Taggos, which signifies a wing, from this event.

118. Gorgonean.] The winged horse Pegasus was so called, because he was supposed to have sprung from the blood of the gorgon

Medusa, after Perseus had cut her head off.

119. For any Roman. We Romans are so undermined and supplanted by the arts of these Greek sycophants, that we have no chance left us of succeeding with great men.

120. Same Protogenes.] The name of a famous and cruel persecutor of the people under Caligula. See ANT. Univ. Hist. vol. xiv.

Diphilus.] A filthy favourite and minion of Domitian.

Erimanthus.] From ερις strife, and μαντις, a prophet—i. e. a foreteller of strife. This name denotes some notorious informer.

The sense of this passage seems to be: "There is now no room

Qui gentis vitio nunquam partitur amicum; Solus habet. Nam cum facilem stillavit in aurem Exiguum de naturæ, patriæque veneno, Limine summoveor: perierunt tempora longi Servitii: nusquam minor est jactura clientis. Quod porro officium, (ne nobis blandiar,) aut quod Pauperis hic meritum, si curet nocte togatus Currere, cum Prætor lictorem impellat, et ire Præcipitem jubeat, dudum vigilantibus orbis,

"for us Romans to hope for favour and preferment, where nothing "but Greeks are in power and favour, and these such wretches as "are the willing and obsequious instruments of cruelty, lust and "persecution." 121. Vice of his nation. [See before, l. 86.] That mean and wicked art of engrossing all favour to themselves. - Never shares a friend. With any body else.

122. He alone hath him. Engages and keeps him wholly to himself.

- He has dropped, &c. | Stillavit-hath insinuated by gentle, and almost imperceptible degrees.

- Into his easy ear.] i. e. Into the ear of the great man, who easily listens to all he says.

123. The poison of his nature. Born, as it were, with the malicious propensity of advancing themselves by injuring others.

And of his country. Greece—the very characteristic of which is this sort of selfishness.

124. I am removed, &c. No longer admitted within my patron's or friend's doors.

125. Past and gone. Perierunt-lit.—have perished. My long and faithful services are all thrown away, forgotten, perished out of remembrance, and are as if they had never been.

- No where, &c. There is no part of the world, where an old client and friend is more readily cast off, and more easily dismissed, than they are at Rome: or where this is done with less ceremony, or felt with less regret.

Look round the world, what country will appear, Where friends are left with greater ease than here?

The word jactura signifies any loss or damage, but its proper meaning is, loss by shipwreck, casting goods overboard in a storm. The old friends and clients of great men, at Rome, were just as readily and effectually parted with.

126. What is the office.] Officium—business—employment—service.

— That I may not flatter, &c.] q. d. Not to speak too highly in our own commendation, or as over-rating ourselves and our services.

126, 7. What the merit, &c.] What does the poor client deserve for the assiduous and punctual execution of his office towards his patron.

Who, from the vice of his nation, never shares a friend;
He alone hath him: for, when he has dropp'd into his easy ear
A little of the poison of his nature, and of his country,
I am removed from the threshold:—times of long service
Are past and gone—no where is the loss of a client less.

125
Moreover, what is the office, (that I may not flatter ourselves,) or what

The merit of a poor man here, if a client takes care by night To run, when the Prætor drives on the lictor, and to go Precipitate commands him, (the childless long since awake.)

127. If a client.] So togatus signifies here. It was usual for great men, on these occasions, to have a number of their dependents and clients to attend them: those who went before, were called anteambulones—those who followed, clientes togati, from the toga, or gown, worn by the common people.

— Takes care. Makes it his constant business.

127-8. By night to run.] To post away after his patron before day-break, to the early levees of the rich.

These early salutations or visits were commonly made with a view to get something from those to whom they were paid; such as persons of great fortune who had no children, rich widows who were childless, and the like. He who attended earliest, was reckoned to shew the greatest respect, and supposed himself to stand fairest in the good graces, and perhaps, as a legatee in the wills of such persons as he visited and complimented.

The word currere implies the haste which they made to get first.

128. The Prator drives on, &c.] The Prator was the chief magistrate of the city. He was preceded by officers called lictors, of which there were twelve, who carried the insignia of the Prator's office—viz. an axe tied up in a bundle of rods, as emblems of the punishment of greater crimes by the former, and of smaller crimes by the latter. The lictors were so called from the axe and rods bound or tied (ligati) together. So lector, from lego, to read.

So corrupt were the Romans, that not only the nobles, and other great men, but even their chief magistrates, attended with their state officers, went on these mercenary and scandalous errands, and even hastened on the lictors (who, on other occasions, marched slowly and solemply before them) for fear of being too late.

128-9. To go precipitate. Headlong, as it were, to get on as fast as they could.

129. The childless, &c.] Orbus signifies a child that has lost its parents, parents that are bereaved of their children, women who have lost their husbands without issue, &c.—this last (as appears from the next line) seems to be the sense of it here.

These ladies were very fond of being addressed and complimented at their levees, by the flattering visitors who attended there, and were ready very soon in the morning, even up before day-light, for their reception. The Prætor drives on his attendants as fast as he can,

Ne prior Albinam, aut Modiam collega salutet?

Divitis hic servi Claudit latus ingenuorum

Filius; alter enim quantum in legione Tribuni

Accipiunt, donat Clavinæ, vel Catienæ,

Ut semel atque iterum super illam palpitet: at tu

Cum tibi vestiti facies scorti placet, hæres,

Et dubitas altà Chionem deducere sellà.

lest he should not be there first, or should disablige the ladies by making them wait.

The childless matrons are long since awake, And for affronts the tardy visits take.

DRYDEN.

130. Lest first his colleague.] Another reason for the Prætor's being in such a hurry, was to prevent his colleague in office from being there before him.

It is to be observed, that, though at first there was but one Prætor, called Prætor Urbanus, yet, as many foreigners and strangers settled at Rome, another Prætor was appointed to judge causes between them, and called Prætor Peregrinus.

Juvenal gives us to understand, that, on such occasions, both were equally mean and mercenary.

—— Albina or Modia.] Two rich and childless old widows, to whom these profligate fellows paid their court, in hopes of inheriting their wealth.

This passage, from l. 126 to 130, inclusive, relates to what Umbritius had just said about the very easy manner in which the great men at Home got rid of their poor clients, notwithstanding their long and faithful services: q. d. "I don't mean to boast, or to rate our "services too high: but yet, as in the instance here given, and in many others which might be mentioned, when what we do, and what we deserve, are compared together, and both with the ungrateful return we meet with, in being turned off to make room for the Grecian parasites, surely this will be allowed me as another good reason for my departure from Rome."

131. Here. At Rome.

The son of a rich slave, &c.] A person of mean and servile extraction, whose father, originally a slave, got his freedom, and by some means or other acquired great wealth.

The sons of such were called libertini.

—— Closes the side.] Walks close to his side in a familiar manner: perhaps, as we say, arm in arm, thus making himself his equal and intimate.

131-2. The free born.] Of good extraction-a gentleman of liberal birth, of a good family—such were called ingenui.

The poet seems alike to blame the insolence of these upstarts, who aimed at a freedom and intimacy with their betters; and the meanness of young men of family, who stooped to intimacies with such low people.

130 Lest first his colleague should salute Albina or Modia? Here, the son of a rich slave closes the side of the Free-born: but another, as much as in a legion Tribunes Receive, presents to Calvina, or Catiena, That once and again he may enjoy her: but thou,

When the face of a well-dressed harlot pleases thee, hesitatest, 135 And doubtest to lead forth Chione from her high chair.

132. Another. Of these low-born people, inheriting riches from his father.

- Tribunes. He means the Tribuni Militum, of which there were six to each legion, which consisted of ten regiments or cohorts.

See sat. i. l. 58, n.

133. Presents to Calvina, or Catiena. He scruples not to give as much as the pay of a tribune amounts to, to purchase the favours of these women—who probably, were courtezans of notorious characters, but held their price very high.

134. But thou. q. d. But thou, my friend Juvenal, and such prudent and frugal people as thou art, if thou art taken with the pretty face of some harlot, whose price is high, thou dost hesitate upon it, and hast doubts upon thy mind concerning the expediency of lavishing away large sums for such a purpose.

135. Well dressed. Vestitus means, not only apparelled—but decked and ornamented. Ainsw. Some are for understanding vestiti, here, as synonymous with togati, to express a low strumpet, (see sat. ii. 1. 70, and note,) but I find no authority for such a meaning of the word vestitus.

136. Chione.] Some stately courtezan of Rome, often spoken of by Martial. See lib. i. epigr. 35, 6, et al. So called from Gr. xiar,

--- Her high chair. Sella signifies a sedan chair, borne aloft on men's shoulders: which, from the epithet alta, I take to be meant in this place—q. d. While these upstart fellows care not what sums they throw away upon their whores, and refrain from no expense, that they may carry their point, their betters are more prudent, and grudge to lavish away so much expense upon their vices, though the finest, best-dressed, and most sumptuously attended woman in Rome were the object in question.

--- To lead forth.] Deducere-to hand her out of her sedan, and to attend her into her house.

Many other senses are given of this passage, as may be seen in Holyday, and in other commentators; but the above seems, to me, best to apply to the poet's satire on the insolent extravagance of these low-born upstarts, by putting it in opposition to the more decent prudence and frugality of their betters.

Dryden writes as follows:

But you, poor sinner, tho' you love the vice, And like the whore, demur upon the price : And, frighted with the wicked sum, forbear To lend an hand, and help her from the chair. Da testem Romæ tam sanctum, quam fuit hospes Numinis Idæi: procedat vel Numa, vel qui Servavit trepidam flagranti ex æde Minervam;
Protinus ad censum; de moribus ultima fiet
Quæstio: quot pascit servos? quot possidet agri Jugera? quam multâ, magnâque paropside cœnat?
QUANTUM QUISQUE SUA NUMMORUM SERVAT IN ARCA, TANTUM HABET ET FIDEI. Jures licet et Samothracum,
Et nostrorum aras, contemnere fulmina pauper
Creditur, atque Deos, Dis ignoscentibus ipsis.
Quid, quod materiam præbet causasque jocorum
Omnibus hic idem, si fæda et scissa lacerna,

As to translating (as some have done) vestiti by the word—masked, it is totally incongruous with the rest of the sentence; for how can a face, with a mask on, be supposed to please, as it must be concealed from view?—Besides, it is not said vestita facies, but facies vestiti scorti.

Si toga sordidula est, et ruptà calceus alter

However, it seems not very probable, that the poet only means to say, that the man hesitated, and doubted about coming up to the price of Chione, because he was so poor that he had it not to give her, as some would insinuate; for a man can hardly hesitate, or doubt, whether he shall do a thing that it is out of his power to do.

137. Produce a witness.] Umbritius here proceeds to fresh matter of complaint against the corruption of the times, insomuch that the truth of a man's testimony was estimated, not according to the goodness of his character, but according to the measure of his property.

137—8. The host of the Idean deity.] Scipio Nasica, adjudged by the senate to be one of the best of men. He received into his house an image of the goddess Cybele, where he kept it until a temple was built for it. She had various names from the various places where she was worshipped, as Phrygia, Idwa, &c. Ida was a high hill in Phrygia, near Troy, sacred to Cybele. See Virg. Æn. x. 252.

138. Numa.] See before, notes on l. 12. he was a virtuous and religious prince.

139. Preserved trembling Minerva.] Lucius Metellus, the high priest, preserved the palladium, or sacred image of Minerva, out of the temple of Vesta, where it stood trembling, as it were, for its safety when that temple was on fire. Metellus lost his eyes by the flames.

140. Immediately as to income, &c.] q. d. Though a man had all their sanctity, yet would be not gain credit to his testimony on the score of his integrity, but in proportion to the largeness of his income; this is the first and immediate object of inquiry. As to his moral character, that is the last thing they ask after.

Produce a witness at Rome, as just as was the host Of the Idean deity: let even Numa come forth, or he who Preserved trembling Minerva from the burning temple:

Immediately as to income, concerning morals will be the last 140 Inquiry: how many servants he maintains? how many acres of land

He possesses? in how many and great a dish he sups? As MUCH MONEY AS EVERY ONE KEEPS IN HIS CHEST,

So MUCH CREDIT TOO HE HAS. Tho' you should swear by the altars, both

Of the Samothracian, and of our gods, a poor man to contemn thunder 145

Is believed, and the gods, the gods themselves forgiving him.

What, because this same affords matter and causes of jests

To all, if his garment be dirty and rent,

If his gown be soiled, and one of his shoes with torn 142. In how many, &c.] What sort of a table he keeps. See

AINSW.—Paropsis.

144. Swear by the alters.] Jurare aras—signifies to lay the hands on the altar, and to swear by the gods. See Hor. Epist. lib. ii. epist. i. l. 16. Ainsw. Juro. Or rather, as appears from Hor. to swear in or by the name of the god to whom the altar was dedicated.

145. Samothracian.] Samothrace was an island near Lemnos, not far from Thrace, very famous for religious rites. From hence Dardanus, the founder of Troy, brought into Phrygia the worship of the DII MAJORES; such as Jupiter, Minerva, Mercury, &c. From Phrygia, Æneas brought them into Italy.

— Our gods.] Our tutelar deities—Mars and Romulus. See 2at. ii. l. 126-128. q. d. Were you to swear ever so solemnly.

A poor man, &c.] As credit is given, not in proportion to a man's morals, but as he is rich or poor; the former will always gain credit, while the latter will be set down as not having the fear, either of the gods, or of their vengeance, and therefore doesn't scruple to perjure himself.

146. The gods themselves, &c.] Not punishing his perjury, but excusing him, on account of the temptations which he is under from his poverty and want.

147. What. Quid is here elliptical, and the sense must be supplied.—q. d. What shall we say more? because it is to be considered, that, besides the discrediting such a poor man as to his testimony, all the symptoms of his poverty are constant subjects of jests and raillery. See Ainsw. Quid, No. 2.

- This same. Hic idem—this same poor fellow.

148. His garment.] Lacerna—here, perhaps, means what we call a surtout, a sort of cloak for the keeping off the weather. See Ainsw. Lacerna.

149. Gown.] Toga-the ordinary dress for the poorer sort. See

sat. i. 3.

Pelle patet: vel si consuto vulnere crassum

Atque recens linum ostendit non una cicatrix?

NIL HABET INFELIX PAUPERTAS DURIUS IN SE,
QUAM QUOD RIDICULOS HOMINES FACIT. Exeat, inquit,
Si pudor est, et de pulvino surgat equestri,
Cujus res legi non sufficit, et sedeant hic
Lenonum pueri, quocunque in fornice nati.
Hic plaudat nitidi præconis filius inter
Pinnirapi cultos juvenes, juvenesque lanistæ:
Sic libitum vano, qui nos distinxit, Othoni.
Quis gener hic placuit censu minor, atque puellæ

150

149. Soiled.] Sordidula, dim. of cordidus—and signifies somewhat dirty or nasty.

— With torn leather, &c.] One shoe gapes open with a rent in the upper leather.

150—1. The poet's language is here metaphorical—he humourously, by vulnere, the wound, means the rupture of the shoe; by cicatrix, (which is, literally, a scar, or seam in the flesh,) the awkward seam on the patch of the cobbled shoe, which exhibited to view the coarse thread in the new-made stitches.

153. Says he.] i. e. Says the person who has the care of placing the people in the theatre.

Let him go out, &c. Let the man who has not a knight's revenue go out of the knight's place or seat.

It is to be observed that, formerly, all persons placed themselves, as they came, in the theatre, promiscuously: now, in contempt of the poor, that licence was taken away. Lucius Roscius Otho, a tribune of the people, instituted a law, that there should be fourteen rows of seats, covered with cushions, on which the knights were to be seated. If a poor man got into one of these, or any other, who had not 400 sestertia a year income, which made a knight's estate, he was turned out with the utmost contempt.

155. Is not sufficient for the law.] i. e. Who has not 400 sestertia a year, according to Otho's law.

156. The sons of pimps, &c.] The lowest, the most base-born fellows, who happen to be rich enough to answer the conditions of Otho's law, are to be seated in the knights' seats; and persons of the best family are turned out, to get a seat where they can, if they happen to be poor. See Hor. epod. iv. l. 15, 16.

157. Crier.] A low office among the Romans, as among us, who proclaimed the edicts of magistrates, public sales of goods, &c. The poet says—nitidi præconis, intimating that the criers got a good deal of money, lived well, were fat and sleek in their appearance, and affected great spruceness in their dress.

—— Applaud.] Take the lead in applauding theatrical exhibitions.—Applause was expressed, as among us, by clapping of hands.

158. Of a sword-player.] Pinnirapi—denotes that sort of gladiator, called also Retiarius, who, with a net which he had in his Leather be open: or if not one patch only shews the coarse And recent thread in the stitched-up rupture?

UNHAPPY POVERTY HAS NOTHING HARDER IN ITSELF

THAN THAT IT MAKES MEN RIDICULOUS. Let him go out, says he, If he has any shame, and let him rise from the equestrian cushion, Whose estate is not sufficient for the law, and let there sit here 155

The sons of pimps, in whatever brothel born.

Here let the son of a spruce crier applaud, among

The smart youths of a sword-player, and the youths of a fencer:

Thus it pleased vain Otho, who distinguished us.

What son-in-law, here, inferior in estate, hath pleased, and un-hand, was to surprise his adversary, and catch hold on the crest of his helmet, which was adorned with peacock's plumes: from pinna, a plume or feather, and rapio, to snatch. See sat. ii. l. 142, note, where we shall find the figure of a fish on the helmet; and as pinna also means the fin of a fish, perhaps this kind of gladiator was called Pinnirapus, from his endeavouring to catch this in his net.

158. The youths.] The sons—now grown young men—juvenes. Such people as these were entitled to scats in the fourteen rows of the equestrian order, on account of their estates: while sons of nobles, and gentlemen of rank, were turned out because their income did not come up to what was required, by Otho's law, to constitute a knight's estate.

—— A fencer. Lanista signifies a fencing-master, one that taught boys to fence.

159. Thus it pleased vain Otho.] q. d. No sound or good reason could be given for this; it was the mere whim of a vain man, who established this distinction, from his own caprice and fancy, and to gratify his own pride and vanity.

However, Otho's law not only distinguished the knights from the plebeians, but the knights of birth from those who were advanced to that dignity by their fortunes or service; giving to the former the first rows on the equestrian benches. Therefore Hor. epod. iv. where he treats in the severest manner Menas, the freedman of Co. Pompeius, who had been advanced to a knight's estate, mentions it as one instance of his insolence and pride, that he sat himself in one of the first rows after he became possessed of a knight's estate.

Sedilibusque magnus in primis eques, Othone contempto, sedet.

See Faancis, notes in loc.

160. What son-in-law.] Umbritius still proceeds in shewing the miseries of being poor, and instances the disadvantages which men of small fortunes lie under with respect to marriage.

Inferior in estate.] Census signifies a man's estate, wealth or yearly revenue. Also a tribute, tax, or subsidy, to be paid according to men's estates.

According to the first meaning of census-censu minor may sig-

Sarcinulis impar? quis pauper scribitur hæres? Quando in consilio est Ædilibus? agmine facto Debuerant olim tenues migrâsse Quirites. HAUD FACILE EMERGUNT, QUORUM VIRTUTIBUS OBSTAT RES ANGUSTA DOMI: sed Romæ durior illis Conatus: magno hospitium miserabile, magno Servorum ventres, et frugi cœnula magno. Fictilibus cœnare pudet, quod turpe negavit

165

nify, that a man's having but a small fortune, unequal to that of the girl to whom he proposes himself in marriage, would occasion his being rejected, as by no means pleasing or acceptable to her father for a son-in-law.

According to the second interpretation of the word census, censu minor may imply the man's property to be too small and inconsiderable for entry in the public register as an object of taxation. The copulative atque seems to favour the first interpretation, as it unites the two sentences—as if Umbritius had said—Another instance, to shew how poverty renders men contemptible at Rome, is, that nobody will marry his daughter to one whose fortune does not equal hers; which proves that, in this, as in all things else, money is the grand and primary consideration.

Themistocles, the Athenian general, was of another mind, when he said—"I had rather have a man for my daughter without money, "than money without a man."

161. Written down heir? Who ever remembered a poor man in his will, so as to make him his heir?

162. Ædiles.] Magistrates in Rome, whose office it was to oversee the repairs of the public buildings and temples-also the streets and conduits—to look to weights and measures—to regulate the price of corn and victuals—also to provide for solemn funerals and plays.

This officer was sometimes a senator, who was called Curulis, a sellà curuli, a chair of state made of ivory, carved, and placed in curru, in a chariot, in which the head officers of Rome were wont to be carried into council.

But there were meaner officers called Ædiles, with a similar jurisdiction in the country towns, to inspect and correct abuses in weights and measures, and the like. See sat. x. 101, 2.

When, says Umbritius, is a poor man ever consulted by one of the magistrates? his advice is looked upon as not worth havingmuch less can he ever hope to be a magistrate himself, however deserving or fit for it.

In a formed body.] Agmine facto—i. e. collected together in one body, as we say. So Ving. Georg. iv. 167. of the bees flying out in a swarm against the drones. And again, Æn. i. S6. of the winds rushing forth together from the cave of Æolus.

163. Long ago.] Alluding to the sedition and the defection of the plebeians, called here tenues Quirites-when oppressed by the

To the bags of a girl? what poor man written down heir?
When is he in counsel with Ædiles? In a formed body,
The mean Romans ought long ago to have migrated.
THEY DO NOT EASILY EMERGE, TO WHOSE VIRTUES NARROW
FORTUNE IS A HINDRANCE; but at Rome more hard to them is 165

FORTUNE IS A HINDRANCE; but at Rome more hard to them is 165. The endeavour; a miserable lodging at a great price, at a great price

The bellies of servants, and a little frugal supper at a great price. It shameth to sup in earthen ware: which he denied to be disgraceful, nobles and senators, they gathered together, left Rome, and retired to the Mons Sacer, an hill near the city consecrated to Jupiter, and talked of going to settle elewhere; but the famous apologue of Menenius Agrippa, of the belly and the members, prevailed on them to return. This happened about 500 years before Juvenal was born. See Ant. Un. Hist. vol. xi. 383-403.

163. Ought long ago to have migrated.] To have persisted in their intention of leaving Rome, and of going to some other part, where they could have maintained their independency. See before, I. 60.

Quirites.

164. Easily emerge. Out of obscurity and contempt.

— Whose virtues, &c.] The exercise of whose faculties and good qualities is cramped and hindered by the narrowness of their circumstances: and, indeed, poverty will always prevent respect, and be an obstacle to merit, however great it may be. So Hon. sat. v. lib. ii. l. 8.

Et genus et virtus, nisi cum re, vilior alga est.

But high descent and meritorious deeds, Unblest with wealth, are viler than sea-weeds.

FRANCIS.

166. The endeavour.] But to them—illis—to those who have small incomes, the endeavouring to emerge from contempt, is more difficult at Rome than in any other place: because their little is, as it were, made less, by the excessive dearness of even common necessaries—a shabby lodging, for instance; maintenance of slaves, whose food is but coarse; a small meal for one's self, however frugal—all these are at an exorbitant price.

168. It shameth, &c.] Luxury and expense are now got to such an height, that a man would be ashamed to have earthen ware at his table.

— Which he denicd, &c.] The poet is here supposed to allude to Curius Dentatus, who conquered the Sammites and the Marsi, and reduced the Sabellans (descendents of the Sabines) into obedience to the Romans. When the Sammite ambassadors came to him to treat about a league with the Romans, they found him among the Marsi, sitting on a wooden seat near the fire, dressing his own dinner, which consisted of a few roots, in an earthen vessel, and offered

170

175

Translatus subito ad Marsos, mensamque Sabellam, Contentusque illic Veneto, duroque cucullo.

Pars magna Italiæ est, si verum admittimus, in quâ Nemo togam sumit, nisi mortuus. Ipsa dierum Festorum herboso colitur si quando theatro Majestas, tandemque redit ad pulpita notum Exodium, cum personæ pallentis hiatum In gremio matris formidat rusticus infans:

Æquales habitas illic, similemque videbis Orchestram, et populum : clari velamen honoris, him large sums of money-but he dismissed them, saying, "I had " rather command the rich, than be rich myself; tell your country-" men, that they will find it as hard to corrupt as to conquer me."

Curius Dentatus was at that time consul with P. Corn. Rufinus, and was a man of great probity, and who, without any vanity or ostentation, lived in that voluntary poverty, and unaffected contempt of riches, which the philosophers of those times were wont to recommend. He might, therefore, well be thought to deny that the use of earthen ware was disgraceful, any more than of the homely and coarse clothing of those people, which he was content to wear.

See Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. xii. p. 139.

But, among commentators, there are those, who, instead of negavit, are for reading negabit-not confining the sentiment to any particular person, but as to be understood in a general sense, as thus-However it may be reckoned disgraceful, at Rome, to use earthen ware at table, yet he who should suddenly be conveyed from thence to the Marsi, and behold their plain and frugal manner of living, as well as that of their neighbours the Sabellans, will deny that there is any shame or disgrace in the use of earthen ware at meals, or of wearing garments of coarse materials.

This is giving a good sense to the passage—but as Juvenal is so frequent in illustrating his meaning, from the examples of great and good men who lived in past times, and as negavit is the reading of the copies, I should rather think that the first interpretation is what the poet meant.

169. Translated suddenly.] On being chosen consul, he was immediately ordered into Samnium, where he and his colleague acted separately, each at the head of a consular army. The Marsi lay between the Sabelli and the Samnites.

170. A Venetian and coarse hood. Venetus-a-um, of Venicedyed in a Venice-blue, as the garments worn by common soldiers and sailors were. Ausw. This colour is said to be first used by the Venetian fishermen.

The cucullus was a cowl, or hood, made of very harsh and coarse cloth, which was to pull over the head, in order to keep off the rain.

172. Unless dead. It was a custom among the Romans to put a gown on the corpse when they carried it forth to burial. In many parts of Italy, where they lived in rustic simplicity, they went Who was translated suddenly to the Marsi, and to the Sabellan ta-

And there was content with a Venetian and coarse hood.

There is a great part of Italy, if we admit the truth, in which Nobody takes the gown, unless dead. The solemnity itself of Festal days, if at any time it is celebrated in a grassy Theatre, and at length a known farce returns to the stage, When the gaping of the pale-looking mask

The rustic infant in its mother's bosom dreads:

Habits are equal there, and there alike you will see

The orchestra and people: the clothing of bright honour, dressed in the tunica, or jacket, never wearing the toga, the ordinary habit of the men at Rome, all their life time. Umbritius means to prove what he had before asserted, (l. 165—7.) that one might live in other places at much less expense than at Rome. Here he is instancing in the article of dress.

172. The solemnity, & c.] The dies festi—were holidays, or festivals, observed on some joyful occasions; when people dressed in their best apparel, and assembled at plays and shows.

173—1. A grassy theatre.] He here gives an idea of the ancient simplicity which was still observed in many parts of Italy, where, on these occasions, they were not at the expense of theatres built with wood or stone, but with turves dug from the soil, and heaped one upon another, by way of seats for the spectators. See Virg. Æn. v. 286—90.

174. A known farce. Exodium (from Gr. 25055, exitus) was a farce, or interlude, at the end of a tragedy, exhibited to make the people laugh. Notum exordium signifies some well known, favourite piece of this sort, which had been often represented.

- Stage. So pulpitum signifies, i. e. that part of the theatre where the actors recited their parts.

175. The gaping of the pale-looking mask. Persona—a false face, vizard, or mask, which the actors were over the face;—they were painted over with a pale flesh-colour, and the mouth was very wide open, that the performer might speak through it the more easily. Their appearance must have been very hideous, and may well be supposed to affright little children. A figure with one of these masks on may be seen in Holyday, p. 55. col. 2. Also in the copperplate, facing the title of the ingenious Mr. Colman's translation of Terence. See also Juv. edit. Casaulson, p. 73.

177. Habits are equal there.] All dress alike there; no finical distinctions of dress are to be found among such simple people.

178. The orchestra.] Among the Greeks this was in the middle of the theatre, where the Chorus danced. But, among the Romans, it was the space between the stage and the common seats, where the nobles and senators sat.

No distinction of this sort was made, at those rustic theatres, be-iween the gentry and the common people.

178. The clothing of bright honour.] The chief magistrates of Sufficient tunicæ summis Ædilibus albæ

Hic ultra vires habitûs nitor: hic aliquid plus Quam satis est; interdum alienâ sumitur areà
Commune id vitium est: hic vivimus ambitiosâ
Paupertate omnes; quid te moror? Omniæ Romæ Cum pretio. Quid das, ut Cossum aliquando salutes?
Ut te respiciat clauso Veiento labello?

Illa metit barbam, crinem hio deponit amsti:
Plena domus libis venalibus: accipe, et illud these country places did not wear, as at Rome, fine robes decked with purple; but were content to appear in tunics, or jackets, white and plain, even when they gave or presided at these assemblies. See Airsw. Tunica, No. 1, letter b, under which this passage is quoted.

179. Ædiles. See before, l. 162, and note.

180. Here, &c.] Here at Rome people dress beyond what they can afford.

180-1. Something more than enough.] More than is sufficient for the purpose of any man's station, be it what it may—in short, people seem to aim at nothing but useless gawdy show.

181. Sometimes it is taken, &c.] This superfluity in dress is sometimes at other people's expense: either these fine people borrow money to pay for their extravagant dress, which they never repay; or they never pay for them at all—which, by the way, is a vice very common among such people.

182—3. Ambitious poverty.] Our poverty, though very great, is not lowly and humble, content with husbanding, and being frugal of the little we have, and with appearing what we really are—but it makes us ambitious of appearing what we are not, of living like men of fortune, and thus disguising our real situation from the world. This is at the root of that dishonesty before mentioned, so common now-a-days, of borrowing money, or contracting debts, which we never mean to pay. See I. 181.

183. Why do I detain you?] Quid te moror? So Hon. sat. i.

lib. i. l. 14, 15.

Quo rem deducam

This is a sort of phrase like our—" In short—not to keep you too

184. With a price.] Every thing is dear at Rome; nothing is to be had without paying for it—viz. extravagantly. See l. 166, 7.

What give you, &c.] What does it cost you to bribe the servants of Cossus, that you may get admittance? Cossus was some wealthy person, much courted for his riches. Here it seems to mean any such great and opulent person.

185. Veiento.] Some other proud nobleman, hard of access, who, though suitors were sometimes with difficulty admitted to him, seldom condescended to speak to them.—Hence Umbritius describes him—clauso labello. Yet even to get at the favour of a look only, a cost money in bribes to the servants for admittance.

White tunics, suffice for the chief Ædiles.

Here is a finery of dress beyond ability: here is something more 180

Than enough: sometimes it is taken from another's chest:

That vice is common. Here we all live in ambitious Poverty—why do I detain you? All things at Rome

Are with a price. What give you that sometimes you may salute

Cossus?

That Veiento may look on you with shut lip?

One shaves the beard, another deposits the hair of a favourite:

The house is full of venal cakes: take, and that

186. One shaves the beard.] On the day when they first shaved their beard, they were reckoned no longer youths but men. A festival was observed on the occasion among the richer sort, on which presents were made: and the misery was, that the poor were expected to send some present, on pain of forfeiting the favour of the great man. But the poet has a meaning here, which may be gathered from the next note, and from the word amati at the end of this line.

——Another deposits the hair.] It was usual for great men to cut off the hair of their minions, deposit it in a box, and consecrate it to some deity. On this occasion, too, presents were made. It was, indeed, customary for all the Romans to poll their heads at the age of puberty. See sat. ii. l. 15, and note.

Umbritius still is carrying on his design of lashing the vices of the great, and of setting forth the wretchedness of the poor—q. d. "A "great man can't shave his minion for the first time, or poll his "head, but presents are expected on the occasion from his poor "clients, ill as they can afford them, and presently there's a house-

"ful of cakes sent in, as offerings to the favourite."

187. Venal cakes.] These were made of honey, meal, and oil, and sent, as presents or offerings, from the poorer to the richer sort of people, on their birth-days, (hence some read here libis genialibus,) and on other festal occasions. They came in such numbers as to be an object of profit, insomuch that the new trimmed favourite slave, to whom they were presented, sold them for some considerable sum. Hence the text says—libis venalibus.

Take, &c.] The language here is metaphorical; cakes have just been mentioned, which were leavened, or fermented, in order to make them light. Umbritius is supposed, from this, to use the word fermentum, as applicable to the ideas of anger and indignation, which ferment, or raise the mind into a state of fermentation.

Accipe—"there," says Umbritius, "take this matter of indigna"tion, let it work within your mind as it does in mine, that the poor
"clients of great men are obliged, even on the most trivial, and
"most infamous occasions, to pay a tribute lowards the emolument of their servants, on pain and peril, if they do it not, of incur"ring their displeasure, and being shut out of their doors."

By cultis servis the poet means to mark those particular slaves of great men, whose spruce and gay apparel bespake their situation as Fermentum tibi habe: præstare tributa clientes Cogimur, et cultis augere peculia servis.

Quis timet, aut timuit gelidà Præneste ruinam;
Aut positis nemorosa inter juga Volsiniis, aut
Simplicibus Gabiis, aut proni Tiburis arce?
Nos urbem colimus tenui tibicine fultam
Magnà parte sui: nam sic labentibus obstat
Villicus, et veteris rimæ contexit hiatum:
Securos pendente jubet dormire ruinà

195

190

Vivendum est illic, ubi nulla incendia, nulli Nocte metus: jam poscit aquam, jam frivola transfert Ucalegon: tabulata tibi jam tertia fumant:

Tu nescis; nam si gradibus trepidatur ab imis, favourites—and, indeed, the word cultis may very principally allude to this last circumstance—for the verb colo not only signifies to trim, deck, or adorn, but also to love, to favour, to be attached to. See Ainsw.

200

Peculia seems here to imply what we call-vails,

190. Cold Præneste.] A town in Italy, about twenty miles from Rome. It stood on a hill, and the waters near it were remarkably cold; from which circumstance, as well as its high situation, it was called gelida Præneste. Virg. Æn. vii. 682.

191. Volsinium. A town in Tuscany, the situation of which was pleasant and retired.

192. Simple Gabii.] A town of the Volscians, about ten miles from Rome; it was called simple, because deceived into a surrender to Tarquin the proud, when he could not take it by force; or perhaps from the simple and unornamented appearance of the houses.

— The tower of prone Tibur.] A pleasant city of Italy, situate about sixteen miles from Rome, on the river Anio: it stood on a precipice, and had the appearance of hanging over it. Arx signifies the top, summit, peak, or ridge of any thing, as of a rock, hill, &c. also a tower, or the like, built upon it.

193. We. Who live at Rome.

——Supported, &c.] In many parts of it very ruinous, many of the houses only kept from falling, by shores or props set against them, to prevent their tumbling down.

194. The steward.] Villicus here seems to mean some officer, like a steward or bailiff, whose business it was to overlook these matters; a sort of city surveyor, (see sat. iv. 77.) who, instead of a thorough repair, only propped the houses, and plastered up the cracks in their walls, which had been opened by their giving way—so that, though they might to appearance be repaired and strong, yet they were still in the utmost danger of falling. Villicus may perhaps mean the steward, or bailiff, of the great man who was landlord of these houses: it was the steward's duty to see that repairs were timely and properly done.

196. He bids us to sleep, &c.] If we express any apprehension of Leaven have to thyself: we clients to pay tributes

Are compelled, and to augment the wealth of spruce servants.

Who fears, or hath feared the fall of a house in cold Præneste, 190 Or at Volsinium placed among shady hills, or at Simple Gabii, or at the tower of prone Tibur?

We inhabit a city supported by a slender prop In a great part of itself; for thus the steward hinders

What is falling, and has covered the gaping of an old chink: 195

He bids us to sleep secure, ruin impending.

There one should live, where there are no burnings, no fears In the night.—Already Ucalegon asks for water, already

Removes his lumber: already thy third floors smoke:

Thou know'st it not: for if they are alarmed from the lowest steps, danger, or appear uneasy at our situation, he bids us dismiss our fears, and tells us, that we may sleep in safety, though at the same time the houses are almost tumbling about our ears.

Umbritius urges the multitude of ruinous houses, which threaten the lives of the poor inhabitants, as another reason why he thinks it safest and best to retire from Rome.

197. There one should live, &c.] As a fresh motive for the removal of Umbritius from Rome, he mentions the continual danger of fire, especially to the poor, who being obliged to lodge in the uppermost parts of the houses in which they are inmates, run the risk of being burnt in their beds—for which reason he thought it best to live where there was no danger of house-burning, and nightly alarms arising from such a calamity.

198. Already Ucalegon.] He seems here to allude to Virg. Æn. ii. 310—12. where he is giving a description of the burning of the city of Troy:

Jam Deiphobi dedit ampla ruinam,
Vulcano superante, domus: jam proximus ardet Ucalegon.

Some unhappy Ucalegon, says Umbritius, who sees the ruin of his neighbour's house, and his own on fire, is calling out for water, is removing his wretched furniture (frivola—trifling, frivolous, of little value) to save it from the flames.

199. Thy third floors.] Tabulatum—from tabula, a plank, signifies any thing on which planks are laid—so the floors of a house.

200. Thou know'st it not.] You a poor inmate, lodged up in the garret, are, perhaps, fast asleep, and know nothing of the matter: but you are not in the less danger, for if the fire begins below, it will certainly reach upwards to the top of the house.

—— If they are alarmed.] Trepidatur—impers. (like concurritur, Hor. sat. i. l. 7.) if they tremble—are in an uproar—(Ainsw.)

-from the alarm of fire.

From the lowest steps.] Gradus is a step or stair of a house,

Ultimus ardebit, quem tegula sola tuetur

A pluviâ; molles ubi reddunt ova columbæ.

Lectus erat Codro Proculâ minor: urceoli sex

Ornamentum abaci; necnon et parvulus infra

Cantharus, et recubans sub eodem marmore Chiron;

Jamque vetus Græcos servabat cista libellos,

Et divina Opici rodebant carmina mures.

Nil habuit Codrus: quis enim negat? et tamen illud

Perdidit infelix totum nil: ultimus autem

Ærumnæ cumulus, quod nudum, et frusta rogantem

Nemo cibo, nemo hospitio, tectoque juvabit.

-imis gradibus, then, must denote the bottom of the stairs, and signify what we call the ground-floor.

201. The highest. Ultimus, i. e. gradus, the last stair from the ground, which ends at the garret, or cock-loft, (as we call it,)—the wretched abode of the poor. This will be reached by the ascending flames, when the lower part of the house is consumed.

- The roof. Begula, lit. signifies a tile-a tego, quod tegat ædes-hence it stands for the roof of a house.

202. Where the soft pigeons.] The plumage of doves and pigeons is remarkably soft. Perhaps molles here has the sense of gentle, tame; for this sort love to lay their eggs and breed in the roofs of buildings.

203. Codrus had a bed, &c.] Umbritius still continues to set forth the calamities of the poor, and shews that, under such a calamity as is above mentioned, they have none to relieve or pity them.

Codrus, some poor poet-perhaps he that is mentioned, sat. i.

1. 2. which see, and the note.

The furniture of his house consisted of a wretched bed, which was less, or shorter, than his wife Procula, who is supposed to have been a very little woman. Minor signifies less in any kind, whether in length, breadth, or height.

Six little pitchers.] Urceoli, (dim. of urceus,) little waterpitchers made of clay, and formed on the potter's wheel.

Institui, currente rota cur urceus exit? Hor. ad Pis. I. 21, 2.

204—5. A small jug.] Cantharus—a sort of drinking vessel, with a handle to it—Attrità pendebat cantharus ansâ.—Ving. ecl. vi. 17.

205. A Chiron reclining, &c.] A figure of Chiron the centaur in a reclining posture under the same marble, i. e. under the marble slab, of which the cupboard was formed, perhaps by way of support to it.

Some suppose Umbritius to mean by sub eodem marmore, that this was a shabby figure of Chiron made of the same materials with the cantharus—viz. of clay—which he jeeringly expresses by marmore, for of this images were usually made.

206. An old chest, &c. This is another instance of the poverty

The highest will burn, which the roof alone defends From the rain: where the soft pigeons lay their eggs.

Codrus had a bed less than Procula; six little pitchers The ornament of his cupboard; also, underneath, a small

Jug, and a Chiron reclining under the same marble.

205

And now an old chest preserved his Greek books,

And barbarous mice were gnawing divine verses.

Nothing had Codrus-who forsooth denies it? and yet all that Nothing unhappy he lost. But the utmost

Addition to his affliction was, that, naked, and begging scraps, 210 Nobody will help him with food, nobody with entertainment, and an house.

of Codrus—he had no book-case, or library, but only a few Greek books in an old worm-eaten wooden chest.

207. Barbarous mice, &c.] Opicus is a word taken from the Opici, an ancient, rude, and barbarous people of Italy. Hence the adjective opicus signifies barbarous, rude, unlearned.-The poet, therefore, humourously ealls the mice opici, as having so little respect for learning, that they gnawed the divine poems, perhaps even of Homer himself, which might have been treasured up, with others, in the chest of poor Codrus. See opicus used in the above sense, sat. vi. 454.

Some suppose opici to be applied to mice, from Gr. own, a cavern -alluding to the holes in which they hide themselves.

208. Who forsooth denies it?] By this it should appear that the Codrus mentioned here, and in sat. i. l. 2. are the same person; whose poverty was so great, and so well known, as to be proverbial.

See note, sat: i. l. 2.

209-10. The utmost addition; &c.] Ultimus cumulus—the utmost height—the top—of his unhappiness—as the French say—Le comble de son malheur.—The French word comble evidently comesfrom Lat. cumulus, which signifies, in this connexion, that which is over and above measure—the heaping of any measure—when the measure is full to the brim, and then more put on, till it stands on an heap above, at last it comes to a point, and will hold no more. BOYER explains comble to mean—Ce qui peut tenir par dessus unem 331ce déja pleine. We speak of accumulated affliction, the height of sorrow, the completion of misfortune, the finishing stroke, and the like, but are not possessed of any English phrase, which literally expresses the Latin ultimus cumulus, or the French comble du malheur.

210. Naked.] Having lost the few clothes he had by the fire.

Scraps.] Frusta—broken victuals, as we say.—In this sense the word is used, sat. xiv. 128.

211. With entertainment. So hospitium seems to mean here, and is to be understood, in the sense of hospitality, friendly or charitable reception and entertainment: -- some render it lodging -- but this is implied by the next word.

VOL. I.

Si magna Asturii cecidit domus: horrida mater, Pullati proceres, differt vadimonia Prætor: Tunc gemimus casus urbis, tunc odimus ignem: Ardet adhuc—et jam accurrit qui marmora donet, Conferat impensas: hic nuda et candida signa; Hic aliquid præclarum Euphranoris, et Polycleti; Phæcasianorum vetera ornamenta deorum. Hic libros dabit, et forulos, mediamque Minervam; Hic modium argenti: meliora, ac plura reponit Persicus orborum lautissimus, et merito jam

215

220

211. And an house.] Nobody would take him into their house, that he might find a place where to lay his head, secure from the inclemency of the weather.

Having shewn the miserable estate of the poor, if burnt out of house and home, as we say, Umbritius proceeds to exhibit a strong contrast, by stating the condition of a rich man under such a calamity—by this he carries on his main design of setting forth the abominable partiality for the rich, and the wicked contempt and neglect of the poor.

212. Asturius. Perhaps this may mean the same person as is spoken of, l. 29. by the name of Artureus. However, this name may stand for any rich man, who, like Asturius, was admired and courted for his riches.

— Hath fallen.] A prey to flames—hath been burnt down.

——The mother is ghastly.] Mater may here mean the city itself.
—All Rome is in a state of disorder and lamentation, and puts on a ghastly appearance, as in some public calamity—Or, the matrons of Rome, with torn garments and dishevelled hair, appear in all the horrid signs of woo. See Virg. Æn. ii. 1. 489.

213. The nobles sadly clothed. Pullati-clad in sad-coloured apparel, as if in mourning.

The Prætor, &c.] The judge adjourns his court, and respites the pledges, or bonds, for the suitors' appearances to a future day.

214. Then we lament, &c.] Then we lament the accidents to which the city is liable—particularly the loss of so noble an edifice as the house of Asturius, as if the whole city was involved in the misfortune.

— We hate fire.] We can't bear the very mention of fire. It was customary for mourners to have no fire in their houses.—Perhaps this may be meant.

215. It burns yet.] i. e. While the house is still on fire, before the flames have quite consumed it.

—— And now runs one, &c.] Some officious flatterer of Asturius loses no time to improve his own interest in the great man's favour, but hastens to offer his services before the fire has done smootking, and to let him know, that he has marble of various kinds, which he wishes to present him with, for the rebuilding of the house.

216. Can contribute expenses.] i. c. Can contribute towards the

215

If the great house of Asturius hath fallen; the mother is ghastly, The nobles sadly clothed, the Prætor defers recognizances:

Then we lament the misfortunes of the city: then we hate fire:

It burns yet—and now runs one who can present marbles,

Can contribute expenses: another naked and white statues,

Another something famous of Euphranor and Polycletus;

The ancient ornaments of Phæcasian gods.

This man will give books, and book-cases, and Minerva down to the waist :

Another a bushel of silver; better and more things doth The Persian, the most splendid of destitutes lay up, and now deservedly expense of repairing the damage, by presenting a large quantity of this fine marble, which was a very expensive article.

216. Another, &c. Of the same stamp—as one furnishes marble to rebuild the outside of the house, another presents ornaments for the inside—such as Grecian statues, which were usually naked, and made of the finest white marble.

217. Another something famous, &c.] Some famous works of Euphranor and Polycletus, two eminent Grecian statuaries. 218. Of Phacasian gods.] The ancient images of the Grecian deities were called Phacasian, from $\varphi_{\alpha\mu\alpha\alpha\sigma\eta\tau}$, calceus albus; because they were represented with white sandals:-probably the statues here mentioned had been ornaments of Grecian temples.

219. Minerva down to the waist.] Probably this means a bust of Minerva, consisting of the head, and part of the body down to the middle.

--- Pallas to the breast.

Grangius observes, that they had their imagines aut integræ, aut dimidiatæ-of which latter sort was this image of Minerva.

Britannicus expounds mediam Minervam—" Statuam Minervæ in " medio reponendam, ad exornandam bibliothecam"-" A statue of " Minerva to be placed in the middle, by way of ornamenting his " library."

220. A bushel of silver. A large quantity—a definite for an indefinite—as we say—" such a one is worth a bushel of money"— So the French say—un boisseau d'écus. Argenti, here, may either mean silver to be made into plate, or silver plate already made, or it may signify money. Either of these senses answers the poet's design, in setting forth the attention, kindness, and liberality shewn to the rich, and forms a striking contrast to the want of all these towards the poor.

221. The Persian, &c.] Meaning Asturius, who either was a Persian, and one of the foreigners who came and enriched himself at Rome, (see l. 72.) or so called, on account of his resembling the Persians in splendor and magnificence.

The most splendid of destitutes.] Orbus means one that is deprived of any thing that is dear, necessary, or useful—as children

Suspectus, tanquam ipse suas incenderet ædes.

Si potes avelli Circensibus, optima Soræ,
Aut Fabrateriæ domus, aut Frusinone paratur,
Quanti nunc tenebras unum conducis in annum:
Hortulus hic, puteusque brevis, nec reste movendus,
In tenues plantas facili diffunditur haustu.
Vive bidentis amans, et culti villicus horti,
Unde epulum possis centum dare Pythagoræis.
Est aliquid quocunque loco, quocunque recessu,
Unius sese dominum fecisse lacertæ.

225

090

Plurimus hic æger moritur vigilando; (sed illum Languorem peperit cibus imperfectus, et hærens

of their parents—men of their friends—or of their substance and property, as Asturius, who had lost his house, and every thing in it, by a fire. But, as the poet humourously styles him, he was the most splendid and sumptuous of all sufferers, for he replaced and repaired his loss, with very considerable gain and advantage, from the contributions which were made towards the rebuilding and furnishing his house, with more and better (meliora et plura) materials for both, than those which he had lost.

The contrast to the situation of poor Codrus is finely kept up, as well as the poet's design of exposing the moustrous partiality which was shewn to riches.

221-2. Now deservedly suspected.] See Martial, epigr. 51. lib. iii.

The satire upon the venality, self-interestedness, and mercenary views of those who paid their court to the rich and great, is here greatly heightened, by supposing them so notorious, as to encourage Asturius to set his own house on fire, on the presumption that he should be a gainer by the presents which would be made him from those who expected, in their turn, to be richly repaid by the entertainments he would give them during his life, and, at his death, by the legacies he might leave them in his will. Such were called captatores. See sat. x. 202. Hor. lib. ii. sat. v. l. 57.

As for poor Codrus, he was left to starve; nobody could expect any thing from him, either living or dying, so he was forsaken of all —orborum misserrimus—whereas Asturius was, as the poet calls him-orborum lautissimus.

223. The Circuses.] The Circusian games—so called, because exhibited in the Circus. See Kennett, Antiq. book v. part ii. chap. ii. These shows were favourite amusements, and therefore the Romans could hardly be prevailed on to absent themselves from them

-Hence he says, Si potes avelli.

224. Sora, &c.] These were pleasant towns in Campania, where, says Umbritius to Juvenal, a very good house and little garden is purchased (paratur) for the same price (quanti) as you now, in these dear times, hire (conducis) a wretched, dark, dog-hole (tenebras) at Home for a single year.

230

Suspected, as if he had himself set fire to his own house.

Could you be plucked away from the Circenses, a most excellent house

At Sora, or Fabrateria, or Frusino, is gotten

At the price for which you now hire darkness for one year: 225

Here is a little garden, and a shallow well, not to be drawn by a rope,

It is poured with an easy draught on the small plants, Live fond of the fork, and the farmer of a cultivated garden, Whence you may give a feast to an hundred Pythagoreans.

It is something in any place, in any retirement, To have made one's self master of one lizard.

Here many a sick man dies with watching; (but that Languor food hath produced, imperfect, and sticking

226. A shallow well, &c.] The springs lying so high, that there is no occasion for a rope for letting down a bucket to fetch up the water; the garden may be watered with the greatest ease, by merely dipping, and thus, facili haustu, with an easy drawing up by the hand, your plants be refreshed. This was no small acquisition in Italy, where, in many parts, it seldom rains.

228. Live fond of the fork. i. e. Pass your time in cultivating your little spot of ground.—The bidens, or fork of two prongs, was used in husbandry—here, by met. it is put for husbandry itself.

229. An hundred Pythagoreans.] Pythagoras taught his disciples to abstain from flesh, and to live on vegetables.

231. Of one lizard.] The green lizard is very plentiful in Italy, as in all warm climates, and is very fond of living in gardens, and among the leaves of trees and shrubs.

Seu virides rubum

Dimovêre lacertæ Hor. lib. i. od. xxiii. l. 7, 8.

The poet means, that, wherever a man may be placed, or wherever retired from the rest of the world, it is no small privilege to be able to call one's self master of a little spot of ground of one's own, however small it may be, though it were no bigger than to contain one poor lizard. This seems a proverbial or figurative kind of expression.

232. With watching.] With being kept awake. Another inconvenience of living in Rome, is, the perpetual noise in the streets, which is occasioned by the carriages passing at all hours, so as to prevent one's sleeping. This, to people who are sick, is a deadly evil.

232—3. But that languor, &c.] q. d. Though, by the way, it must be admitted, that the weak, languishing, and sleepless state, in which many of these are, they first bring upon themselves by their own intemperance, and therefore their deaths are not wholly to be set down to the account of the noise by which they are kept awake, however this may help to finish them.

233. Food-imperfect. i.e. Imperfectly digested-indigested-Ardenti stomacho,) nam quæ meritoria somnum . Admittunt? magnis opibus dormitur in urbe. Inde caput morbi: rhedarum transitus arcto Vicorum inflexu, et stantis convicia mandræ Eripiunt somnum Druso, vitulisque marinis. Si vocat officium, turba cedente vehetur Dives, et ingenti currét super ora Liburno, Atque obiter leget, aut scribet, aut dormiet intus; Namque facit somnum clausâ lectica fenestrâ. Ante tamen veniet: nobis properantibus obstat and lying hard at the stomach-hærens, adhering, as it were, to the coats of the stomach, so as not to pass, but to ferment, and to occasion a burning or scalding sensation.—This seems to be a description of what we call the heart-burn, (Gr. nagdianyia,) which arises from indigestion, and is so painful and troublesome as to prevent sleep: it is attended with risings of sour and sharp fumes from the stomach into the throat, which occasion a sensation almost like that of scalding water.

235

240

234. For what hired lodgings, &c.] The nam, here, seems to join this sentence to vigilando, l. 232. I therefore have ventured to put the intermediate words in a parenthesis, which, as they are rather digressive, makes the sense of the passage more easily understood.

Meritorium-a merendo-locus qui mercede locatur, signifies any place or house that is hired.—Such, in the city of Rome, were mostly, as we may gather from this passage, in the noisy part of the town, in apartments next to the street, so not very friendly to repose.

235. With great wealth. Pormitur is here used impersonally, like trepidatur, l. 200.—None, but the rich, can afford to live in houses which are spacious enough to have bed-chambers remote from the noise in the streets-those who, therefore, would sleep in Rome, must be at a great expense, which none but the opulent can af-

236. Thence- the source, &c.] One great cause of the malady complained of (morbi, i. e. vigilandi, 1. 232.) must be attributed to the narrowness of the streets and turnings, so that the carriages must not only pass very near the houses, but occasion frequent stoppages; the consequence of which is, that there are perpetual noisy disputes, quarrels, and abuse (convicia) among the drivers. Rheda signifies any carriage drawn by horses, &c.

237. Of the standing team.] Mandra signifies, literally, a hovel for cattle, but, by meton, a company or team of horses, oxen, mules, or any beasts of burden—these are here supposed standing still, and not able to go on, by reason of meeting others in a narrow pass; hence the bickerings, scoldings, and abusive language which the drivers bestow on each other for stopping the way.

238. Drusus. Some person remarkable for drowsiness.

Sea-calves. These are remarkably sluggish and drowsy;

To the burning stomach,) for what hired lodgings admit

Sleep?—With great wealth one sleeps in the city.

235

Thence the source of the disease: the passing of carriages in the narrow

Turning of the streets, and the foul language of the standing team, Take away sleep from Drusus, and from sea-calves.

If business calls, the crowd giving way, the rich man will be Carried along, and will pass swiftly above their faces with a huge Liburnian, 240

And in the way he will read, or write, or sleep within;

For a litter with the window shut causeth sleep.

But he will come before us: us hastening the crowd before they will lay themselves on the shore to sleep, in which situation they are found, and thus easily taken.

Sternunt se somno diversæ in littore phocæ. Virg. Geor. iv. 432.

239. If business calls.] Umbritius, having shewn the advantages of the rich, in being able to afford themselves quiet repose notwithstanding the constant noises in the city, which break the rest of the poorer sort, now proceeds to observe the advantage with which the opulent can travel along the crowded streets, where the poorer sort are inconvenienced beyond measure.

Si vocat officium—if business, either public or private, calls the rich man forth, the crowd makes way for him as he is carried along in his litter.

240. Pass swiftly, &c.] Curret—lit. will run—while the common passengers can hardly get along for the crowds of people, the rich man passes on without the least impediment, being exalted above the heads of the people, in his litter, which is elevated on the shoulders of tall and stout Liburnian bearers.

The word ora properly means faces or countenances—the super ora may denote his being carried above the faces of the crowd, which are turned upwards to look at him as he passes.

—— A huge Liburnian.] The chairmen at Rome commonly came from Liburnia, a part of Illyria, between Istria and Dalmatia.

They were remarkably tall and stout.

241. Read, or write, or sleep.] He is carried on with so much ease to himself, that he can amuse himself with reading—employ himself in writing—or if he has a mind to take a nap, has only to shut up the window of his litter, and he will be soon composed to sleep. All this he may do—obiter—in going along—En chemin faisant—en passant, as the French say.

243. But he will come before us.] He will lose no time by all this, for, however he may employ himself in his way, he will be sure to arrive before us foot passengers, at the place he is going to.

— Us hastening.] Whatever hurry we may be in, or whatever haste we wish to make, we are sure to be obstructed—the crowd that is before us, in multitude and turbulence, like waves, closes in Unda prior, magno populus premit agmine lumbos Qui sequitur: ferit hic cubito, ferit assere duro Alter; at hic tignum capiti incutit, ille metretam. Pinguia crura luto: planta mox undique magna Calcor, et in digito clavus milii militis haret.

Nonne vides quanto celebretur sportula fumo?

250

Centum convivæ; sequitur sua quemque culina: Corbulo vix ferret tot vasa ingentia, tot res Impositas capiti, quot recto vertice portat Servulus infelix; et cursu ventilat ignem.

upon us, as soon as the great man, whom they made way for, is passed, so that we can hardly get along at all.

244. The people who follow, &c.] As the crowd which is before us stops up our way, that which is behind presses upon our backs, so that we can hardly stir either backward or forward.

245. One strikes with the elbow.] To jostle us out of his way.

245—6. Another—with a large joist.] Which he is carrying along, and runs it against us. Asser signifies a pole, or piece of wood, also the joist of an house; which, from the next word, we may suppose to be meant here, at least some piece of timber for building, which, being carried along in the crowd, must strike those who are not aware of it, and who stand in the way.

Some understand asser in this place to mean a pole of so ne litter that is passing along—a chair-pole, as we should call it.

246. Drives a beam, &c.] Another is carrying tignum, a beam, or rafter, or some other large piece of wood used in building, which, being carried on the shoulder, has the end level with the heads of those it meets with in its way, and must inflict a severe blow.

—— A tub.] Metreta—signifies a cask of a certain measure, which, in being carried through the crowd, will strike and hurt those who don't avoid it.

247. Thick with mud.] Bespattered with the mire of the streets, which is kicked up by such a number of people upon each other.

247—8. On all sides—the nail, &c.] I can hardly turn myself but some heavy, splay-footed fellow tramples upon my feet; and at last some soldier's hob-nail runs into my toe. The soldiers wore a sort of harness on their feet and legs, called caliga, which was stuck full of large nails. See sat. xvi. 24, 5.

Such are the inconveniences which the common sort of people meet with in walking the streets of Rome.

249. Do not you see, &c.] Umbritius proceeds to enumerate farther inconveniences and dangers, which attend passengers in the streets of Rome.

Some understand fumo, here, in a figurative sense—q. d. With how much bustle—with what crowds of people, like clouds of smoke, is the sportula frequented? Others think it alludes to the smoke of the chafing dishes of hot coals which were put under the

Obstructs: the people who follow press the loins with a large Concourse: one strikes with the elbow, another strikes with a large 245

Joist, but another drives a beam against one's head, another a tub. The legs thick with mud: presently, on all sides, with a great foot

I'm trodden on, and the nail of a soldier sticks in my toe.

Do not you see with how much smoke the sportula is frequented? An hundred guests: his own kitchen follows every one: 250 Corbulo could hardly bear so many immense vessels, so many things Put on his head, as, with an upright top, an unhappy little Slave carries; and in running ventilates the fire.—

victuals, to keep them warm as they were carried along the street:

this, from the number, must have been very offensive.

249. The sportula. Of this, see sat. i. 95, note. But, from the circumstances which are spoken of in the next four lines of this passage, it should seem, that the sportula mentioned here was of another kind than the usual poor dole-basket. Here are an hundred guests invited to partake of it, and each has such a share distributed to him as to be very considerable.

250. His own kitchen follows.] Each of the hundred sharers of this sportula had a slave, who, with a chafing-dish of coals on his head, on which the victuals were put, to keep them hot, followed his master along the street homewards: so that the whole made a long procession.

Culina denotes a place where victuals are cooked; and as the slaves followed their masters with vessels of fire placed under the dishes so as to keep them warm, and, in a manner, to dress them as they went along, each of these might be looked upon as a moveable or travelling kitchen: so that the masters might each be said to be followed by his own kitchen.

251. Corbulo.] A remarkable strong and valiant man in the time of Nero. Tacitus says of him—Corpore ingens erat, et supra experientiam sapientiamque erat validus.

252. An upright top.] The top of the head, on which the vessels of fire and provision were carried, must be quite upright, not bending or stooping, lest the soup, or sauce, which they contained, should be spilt as they went along, or vessels and all slide off. The tot vasa ingentia, and tot res—shew that the sportula above mentioned was of a magnificent kind, more like the splendor of a cena recta—a set and full supper, than the scanty distribution of a dole-basket.

252—3. Unhappy little slave.] Who was hardly equal to the burden which he was obliged to carry in so uneasy a situation, as not daring to stir his head.

253. In running ventilates, &c.] He blew up, or fanned, the fire vol. 1.

Scinduntur tunicæ sartæ: modo longa coruscat Sarraco veniente abies, atque altera pinum 255 Plaustra vehunt, nutant alte, populoque minantur. Nam si procubuit, qui saxa Ligustica portat Axis, et eversum fudit super agmina montem, Quid superest de corporibas? quis membra, quis ossa Invenit? obtritum vulgi perit omne cadaver More animæ. Domus interea secura patellas Jam lavat, et bucca foculum excitat, et sonat unctis. Strigilibus, pleno et componit lintea gutto. Hæc inter pueros varie properantur; at ille under the provisions, by the current of air which he excited in hastening on with his load. These processions Umbritius seems to reckon among other causes of the street being crowded, and made disagreeable and inconvenient for passengers.

254. Botched coats are torn. Some refer this to the old botched clothes of these poor slaves—but I should rather imagine, that Umbritius here introduces a new circumstance, which relates to the poor in general, whose garments being old, and only hanging together by being botched and mended, are rent and torn off their backs, in getting through the crowd, by the violence of the press, which is increased by the number of masters and servants, who are hurrying along with the contents of the sportula.

- A long fir-tree.] Another inconvenience arises from the passing of timber-carriages among the people in the streets. Seneca, epist. xl. Longo vehiculorum ordine, pinus aut abies deferebatur vicis intrementibus.

- Brandishes. Corusco signifies to brandish or shake; also neut. to be shaken, to wave to and fro-which must be the case of a long stick of timber, of the ends especially, on a carriage. This may be very dangerous if approached too near.

255. The waggon coming.] Moving on its way—sarracum signi-.

fies a waggon, or wain, for the purpose of carrying timber.

256. They nod on high.] These trees being placed high on the carriages, and lying out beyond them at each end, tremble aloft, and threaten the destruction of the people.

257. But if the axle, &c. i. e. If the stone-carriage has overturned, by the breaking of the axle-tree.

____ Ligustian stones. Which were hewn, in vast masses, in Liguria, from the quarries of the Apennine mountains.

258. The overturned mountain.] Hyperbole, denoting the immensity of the block of stone.

— Upon the crowd. Agmen denotes a troop or company; also a number of people walking together, as in a crowded street.

259. What remains, &c. If such an immense mass should, in its fall, light upon any of the people, it must grind them to atoms: no trace of a human body, its limbs, or bones could be found.

261. In the manner of the soul. i. e. The particles which com-

255

Betched coats are torn.—Now a long fir-tree brandishes,

The waggon coming, and a pine other

Carts carry, they nod on high, and threaten the people.

But if the axle, which carries the Ligustian stones,

Hath fallen down, and hath poured forth the overturned mountain upon the crowd,

What remains of their bodies? who finds members-who Bones? every carcase of the vulgar, ground to powder, perishes 250 In the manner of the soul. Mean while, the family secure now washes

The dishes, and raises up a little fire with the cheek, and makes a sound with anointed

Scrapers, and puts together the napkins with a full cruise.

These things among the servants are variously hastened: but he posed the body could no more be found, than could the soul which is immaterial; both would seem to have vanished away, and disappeared together.

261. Mean while.] Interea—q. d. While the slave is gone to bring home the provisions, and is crushed to pieces, by the fall of a stone-carriage, in his way. See l. 264, 5.

— The family.] The servants of the family (Comp. l. 261.) safe at home, and knowing nothing of what had happened, set about preparing for supper.

262. The dishes.] Patella signifies any sort of dish, to hold meat.

One washes and prepares the dishes which are to hold the meat when it arrives.

— Raises up a little fire, &c.] Another, in order to prepare the fire for warming the water for bathing before supper, blows it with his mouth. Hence it is said—bucca foculum excitat—alluding to the distension of the cheeks in the act of blowing.

262—3. With anointed scrupers.] Strigil—denotes an instrument for scraping the body after bathing—It had some oil put on it, to make it slide with less friction over the skin. Scrapers were made of gold, silver, iron, or the like, which, when gathered up, or thrown down together, made a clattering sound.

263. Puts together the napkins.] Lintea—linen napkins, or towels, made use of to dry the body after bathing: these he folds and lays in order.

—— A full cruise.] Gutto—a sort of oil-cruet, with a long and narrow neck, which poured the oil, drop by drop, on the body after bathing, and then it was rubbed all over it.

264. These things among the servants, &c.] Each servant, in his department, made all the haste he could, to get things ready against the supper should arrive.

But he.] Ille—i. e. The servulus infelix, (which we read of, 1. 253.) in his way home with his load of provisions, is killed by the full of a block of stone upon him,

265

270

275

Jam sedet in ripâ, tetrumque novitius horret Porthmea; nec sperat cœnosi gurgitis alnum Infelix, nec habet quem porrigat ore trientem.

Respice nunc alia, ac diversa pericula noctis: Quod spatium tectis sublimibus, unde cerebrum Testa ferit, quoties rimosa et curta fenestris Vasa cadunt, quanto percussum pondere signent, Et lædant silicem: possis ignavus haberi, Et subiti casûs improvidus, ad cœnam si Intestatus eas; adeo tot fata, quot illà Nocte patent vigiles, te prætereunte, fenestræ. Ergo optes, votumque feras miserabile tecum, Ut sint contentæ patulas effundere pelves.

Ebrius, ac petulans, qui nullum forte cecidit,

265. Sits on the bank.] Of the river Styx.—By this account of the deceased, it is very clear, that Juvenal was no Epicurean, believing the soul to perish with the body, which some have wrongly inferred, from what he says, l. 261, more animæ. Comp. sat. ii. l. 149—59.

_____A novice.] Just newly arrived, and now first beholding such a scene.

265—6. The black ferryman.] Porthmea—from Gr. πος θμευς, a ferryman, one who ferries people over the water. Charon, the fabled ferryman of hell, is here meant.

266. Nor does he hope for the boat, &c.] Alnus properly signifies an alder-tree; but as the wood of this tree was used in making boats, it therefore—by met.—signifies a boat.

As the poor deceased had died a violent death, and such a one as dissipated all the parts of his body, so as that they could not be collected for burial, he could not pass over the river Styx, but must remain on its banks an hundred years, which was held to be the case of all unburied bodies. See Virg. Æn. vi. 325—29. 365, 6. and Hor. lib. i. ode xxviii. 35, 6. This situation was reckoned to be very unhappy,

267. Nor hath he a farthing, &c.] The triens was a very small piece of money—the third part of the As, which was about three farthings of our money. It was a custom among the Greeks, to put a piece of money into the mouth of a dead person, which was supposed to be given to Charon, as his fare, for the passage in his boat, over the river Styx. This unhappy man, being killed in the manner he was, could not have this done for him.

Though Juvenal certainly believed a future state of rewards and punishments, (see sat. ii. l. 153.) yet he certainly means here, as he does elsewhere, to ridicule the idle and foolish superstitions, which the Romans had adopted from the Greeks, upon those subjects, as well as on many others relative to their received mythology.

268. Now consider, &c.] Umbritius still pursues his discourse, and adds fresh reasons for his departure from Rome: which, like

Now sits on the bank, and, a novice, dreads the black

Ferryman; nor does he hope for the boat of the muddy gulph,

Wretch [that he is]—nor hath he a farthing which he can reach forth from his mouth.

Now consider other, and different dangers of the night:

What space from high roofs, from whence the brain

A potsherd strikes, as often as from the windows cracked and broken 270

Vessels fall, with what weight they mark and wound

The stricken flint: you may be accounted idle,

And improvident of sudden accident, if to supper

You go intestate; there are as many fates as, in that Night, there are watchful windows open, while you pass by. 275 Therefore you should desire, and carry with you a miserable wish,

That they may be content to pour forth broad basons.

One drunken and petulant, who haply hath killed nobody, the former, already given, arise from the dangers which the inhabitants, the poorer sort especially, are exposed to, in walking the streets by night.—These he sets forth with much humour.

268. Other, and different dangers.] Besides those already mentioned, l. 196-202.

269. What space from high roofs.] How high the houses are, and, consequently, what a long way any thing has to fall, from the upper windows into the street, upon people's heads that are passing by; and therefore must come with the greater force; insomuch that pieces of broken earthen ware, coming from such a height, make a mark in the flint pavement below, and, of course, must dash out the brains of the unfortunate passenger on whose head they may happen to alight.

272. Idle.] Ignavus—indolent—negligent of your affairs. q. d. A man who goes out to supper, and who has to walk home through the streets at night, may be reckoned very indolent, and careless of his affairs, as well as very improvident, if he does not make his will before he sets out.

274. As many fates.] As many chances of being knocked on the head, as there are open windows, and people watching to throw down their broken crockery into the street, as you pass along.

* 276. Therefore you should desire, &c.] As the best thing which you can expect, that the people at the windows would content themselves with emptying the nastiness which is in their pots upon you, and not throw down the pots themselves.

Pelvis is a large bason, or vessel, wherein they washed their feet, or put to more filthy uses.

278. One drunken, & c.] Umbritius, among the nightly dangers of Rome, recounts that which arises from meeting drunken rakes in their cups.

Drunken and petulant. We may imagine him in his way from

Dat pœnas, noctem patitur lugentis amicum Pelidæ; cubat in faciem, mox deinde supinus: 280 Ergo non aliter poterit dormire: QUIBUSDAM SOMNUM RIXA FACIT: sed quamvis improbus annis, Atque mero fervens, cavet hunc, quem coccina læna Vitari jubet, et comitum longissimus ordo; 285 Multum præterea flammarum, atque ænea lampas. Me quem Luna solet deducere, vel breve lumen Candelæ, cujus dispenso et tempero filum, Contemnit: miseræ cognosce proæmia rixæ, Si rixa est, ubi tu pulsas ego vapulo tantum. 290 Stat contra, starique jubet; parere necesse est; Nam quid agas, cum te furiosus cogat, et idem Fortior? unde venis? exclamat: cujus aceto, Cujus conche tumes? quis tecum sectile porrum some tavern, very much in liquor, and very saucy and quarrelsome, hoping to pick a quarrel, that he may have the pleasure of beating somebody before he gets home—to fail of this, is a punishment to him.

Sutor, et clixi vervecis labra comedit?

279. The night of Pelides.] The poet humourously compares the uneasiness of one of these young fellows, on missing a quarrel, to the disquiet of Achilles (the son of Peleus) on the loss of his friend Patroclus; and almost translates the description which Homer gives of that hero's restlessness on the occasion. Il. ω' . l. 10, 11.

Αλλοτ' επι πλευρας κατακειμενος, αλλοτε δ' αυτε 'Υπτιος, αλλοτε δε πρηνης.

Nunc lateri incumbens, iterum post paulo supinus Corpore, nunc pronus.

So the poet describes this rakehelly youth, as tossing and tumbling in his bed, first on his face, then on his back (supinus)—thus endeavouring to amuse the restlessness of his mind, under the disappointment of having met with nobody to quarrel with and beat—thus wearying himself, as it were, into sleep.

281—2. To some a quarrel, &c.] This reminds one of Prov. iv. 16.

281—2. To some a quarrel, &c. This reminds one of Prov. iv. 16.

"For they (the wicked and evil men, ver. 14.) sleep not, except "they have done mischief, and their sleep is taken away unless they

" cause some to fall."

282. Wicked from years.] Improbus also signifies lewd, rash, violent, presumptuous.—Though he be all these, owing to his young time of life, and heated also with liquor, yet he takes care whom he assaults.

283. A scarlet cloak.] Instead of attacking, he will avoid any rich man or noble, whom he full well knows from his dress, as well as from the number of lights and attendants which accompany him.

The læna was a sort of cloak usually worn by soldiers: but

Is punished; suffers the night of Pelides mourning

His friend; he lies on his face, then presently on his back:

280

For otherwise he could not sleep: 'To some

A QUARREL CAUSES SLEEP: but tho' wicked from years

And heated with wine, he is aware of him whom a scarlet cloak

Commands to avoid, and a very long train of attendants,

285

Besides a great number of lights, and a brazen lamp. Me whom the moon is wont to attend, or the short light

Of a candle, the wick of which I dispose and regulate, He despises: know the preludes of a wretched quarrel,.

If it be a quarrel where you strike and I only am beaten.

He stands opposite, and bids you stand; it is necessary to obey; 290 For what can you do, when a madman compels, and he

The stronger? "Whence come you," he exclaims, "with whose " vinegar,

"With whose bean, swell you? What cobbler with you

"Sliced leek, and a boiled sheep's head, hath eaten?

only the rich and noble could afford to wear those which were dyed in scarlet. Coccus signifies the shrub which produced the scarlet grain, and coccinus implies what was dyed with it of a scarlet co-

285. Brazen lamp. This sort of lamp was made of Corinthian brass: it was very expensive, and could only fall to the share of the opulent.

286. Me whom the moon, &c.] Who walk by moon-light, or at most, with a poor, solitary, short candle, which I snuff with my fingers—such a one he holds in the utmost contempt.

298. Know the preludes, &c. Attend a little, and hear what the preludes are of one of these quarrels, if that can properly be called a quarrel, where the beating is by the assailant only,

Rixa signifies a buffeting, and fighting, which last seems to be the best sense in this place, viz. if that can be called fighting, where the battle is all on one side.

290. He stands opposite.] Directly in your way, to hinder your passing-and orders you to stop.

291. What can you do, - & c. You must submit, there's no making any resistance; you are no match for such a furious man.

292. With whose vinegar, &c.] Then he begins his taunts, in hopes to pick a quarrel. Where have you been? with whose sour wine have you being filling yourself?

293. With whose bean, &c.] Conchis means a bean in the shell, and thus boiled-a common food among the lower sort of people, and very filling, which is implied by tumes.

--- What cobbler. He now falls foul of your company, as well as your entertainment.

294. Sliced leek.] Sectilis signifies any thing that is or may be easily cut asunder. But see sat. xiv. l. 133, note.

Nil mihi respondes? aut dic, aut accipe calcem:

Ede ubi consistas: in quâ te quæro proseuchâ?

Dicere si tentes aliquid, tacitusve recedas,

Tantundem est: feriunt pariter: vadimonia deinde

Irati faciunt. Libertas pauperis hæc est:

Pulsatus rogat, et pugnis concisus adorat,

Ut liceat paucis cum dentibus inde reverti.

Nec tamen hoc tantum metuas: nam qui spoliet te

Non decrit, clausis domibus, postquam omnis ubique

Fixa catenatæ siluit compago tabernæ.

Interdum et ferro subitus grassator agit rem,

305

Armato quoties tutæ custode tenentur

294. A boiled sheep's head.] Vervex particularly signifies a wether sheep.—Labra, the lips, put here, by synec. for all the flesh about the jaws.

295. A kick. Calx properly signifies the heel—but by meton. a spurn or kick with the heel.

Et Pontina palus, et Gallinaria pinus.

296. Where do you abide.] Consisto signifies to abide, stay, or keep in one place—here I suppose it to allude to taking a constant stand, as beggars do, in order to beg: as if the assailant, in order to provoke the man more, whom he is wanting to quarrel with, meant to treat him as insolently as possible, and should say—"Pray "let me know where you take your stand for begging?"—This idea seems countenanced by the rest of the line.

——In what begging-place, &c.] Proseucha properly signifies a place of prayer, (from the Gr. @gosevxto au.) in the porches of which beggars used to take their stand. Hence by met. a place where beggars stand to ask alms of them who pass by.

298. They equally strike.] After having said every thing to insult and provoke you, in hopes of your giving the first blow, you get nothing by not answering; for their determination is to beat you—therefore either way, whether you answer, or whether you are silent, the event will be just the same—it will be all one.

Then angry, &c.] Then, in a violent passion, as if they had been beaten by you, instead of your being beaten by them—away they go, swear the peace against you, and make you give bail, as the aggressor, for the assault.

299. This is the liberty, &c.] So that, after our boasted freedom, a poor man at Rome is in a fine situation—All the liberty which he has, is, to ask, if beaten, and to supplicate earnestly, if bruised unmercifully with fisty-cuffs, that he may return home, from the place where he was so used, without having all his teeth beat out of his head—and perhaps he is to be prosecuted, and ruined at law, as the aggressor.

302. Yet neither, &c.] Umbritius, as another reason for retiring from Rome, describes the perils which the inhabitants are in from house and street-robbers.

" Do you answer me nothing !-either tell or take a kick:

"Tell where you abide-in what begging-place shall I seek you?"-If you should attempt to say any thing, or retire silent,

It amounts to the same: they equally strike: then, angry, they Bind you over. This is the liberty of a poor man. Beaten he asks, bruised with fists he entreats.

300

That he may return thence with a few of his teeth.

Yet neither may you fear this only: for one who will rob you will not

Be wanting, the houses being shut up, after, every where, every Fixed fastening of the chained shop hath been silent:

And sometimes the sudden footpad with a sword does your business. 305

As often as, with an armed guard, are kept safe Both the Pontinian marsh, and the Gallinarian pine;

303. The houses being shut up. The circumstance mentioned here, and in the next line, mark what he says to belong to the alia et diversa pericula noctis, l. 268.

304. The chained shop. Taberna has many significations; it denotes any house made of boards, a tradesman's shop, or warehouse; also an inn or tavern. By the preceding domibus he means private houses.-Here, therefore, we may understand tabernæ to denote the shops and taverns, which last were probably kept open longer than private houses or shops; yet even these are supposed to be fastened up, and all silent and quiet within .- This marks the lateness of the hour, when the horrid burglar is awake and abroad, and when there is not wanting a robber to destroy the security of the sleeping inha-

Compago signifies a joining or closure, as of planks, or boards, with which the tabernæ were built-fixa compago denotes the fixed and firm manner in which they were compacted or fastened together—Inducta etiam per singulos asseres grandi catena—Vet. Schol.
—" with a great chain introduced through every plank"—in order to keep them from being torn asunder, and thus the building broken open by robbers.

The word siluit, here, shews that the building is put for the inhabitants within. Meton.—The noise and hurry of the day was over, and they were all retired to rest.

305. The sudden footpail. Grassator means an assailant of any kind, such as highwaymen, footpads, &c. One of these may leap on a sudden from his lurking-place upon you, and do your business by stabbing you. Or perhaps the poet may here allude to what is very common in Italy at this day, namely, assassins, who suddenly attack and stab people in the streets late at night.

307. Pontinian marsh.] Strabo describes this as in Campania, a champain country of Italy, in the kingdom of Naples; and Suet. says, that Julius Cæsar had determined to dry up this marsh-it was a noted harbour for thieves.

320

Sic inde huc omnes tanquam ad vivaria currunt.

Quâ fornace graves, quâ non incude catenæ? Maximus in vinclis ferri modus; ut timeas, ne Vomer deficiat, ne marræ et sarcula desint. Felices proavorum atavos, felicia dicas Secula, quæ quondam sub regibus atque tribunis Viderunt uno contentam carcere Romam.

His alias poteram, et plures subnectere causas: Sed jumenta vocant, et sol inclinat; eundum est: Nam mihi commotâ jamdudum mulio virgâ Innuit : ergo vale nostri memor ; et quoties te Roma tuo refici properantem reddet Aquino, Me quoque ad Helvinam Cererem, vestramque Dianam

307. Gallinarian pine.] i. e. Wood, by synec. This was situated near the bay of Cumæ, and was another receptacle of robbers.

When these places were so infested with thieves, as to make the environs dangerous for the inhabitants, as well as for travellers, a guard was sent there to protect them, and to apprehend the offenders; when this was the case, the rogues fled to Rome, where they thought themselves secure—and then these places were rendered safe.

308. As to vivaries. Vivaria are places where wild creatures live, and are protected, as deer in a park, fish in a stew-pond, &c. The poet may mean here, that they are not only protected in Rome, but easily find subsistence, like creatures in vivaries. See sat. iv. l. 51.

What Rome was to the thieves, when driven out of their lurking places in the country, that London is to the thieves of our time. This must be the case of all great cities.

309. In what furnace, &c. In this and the two following lines, the poet, in a very humourous hyperbole, describes the numbers of thieves to be so great, and to threaten such a consumption of iron in making fetters for them, as to leave some apprehensions of there being none left to make ploughshares, and other implements of husbandry.

312. Our great-grandfathers, &c.] i. e. Our ancestors of old time—proavorum atavos—old grandsires, or ancestors indefinitely.

313. Kings and tribunes. After the expulsion of the kings, tribunes, with consular authority, governed the republic.

314. With one prison. Which was built in the forum, or market-place, at Rome, by Ancus Martius, the fourth king. Robberies. and the other offences above mentioned, were then so rare, that this: one gaol was sufficient to contain all the offenders.

315. And more causes. i. e. For my leaving Rome.

316. My cattle call. Summon me away.—It is to be supposed, that the carriage, as soon as the loading was finished, (see l. 10.) had set forward, had overtaken Umbritius, and had been some time waiting for him to proceed.

Thus from thence hither all run as to vivaries.

In what furnace, on what anvil are not heavy chains?

The greatest quantity of iron (is used) in fetters, so that you may fear, lest 310

The ploughshare may fail, lest hoes and spades may be wanting.

You may call our great-grandfathers happy, happy

The ages, which formerly, under kings and tribunes,

Saw Rome content with one prison.

To these I could subjoin other and more causes,

315

But my cattle call, and the sun inclines, I must go: For long since the muleteer, with his shaken whip,

Hath hinted to me: therefore farewell mindful of me: and as often

Rome shall restore you, hastening to be refreshed, to your Aquinum,

Me also to Helvine Ceres, and to your Diana,

320

316. The sun inclines.] From the meridian towards its setting.

Sentis— Inclinare meridiem

Hor. lib. iii. od. xxviii. 1. 5.

317. The muleteer.] Or driver of the mules, which drew the carriage containing the goods, (see l. 10.) had long since given a hint, by the motion of his whip, that it was time to be gone. This Unbritius, being deeply engaged in his discourse, had not adverted to till now.

318. Mindful of me.] An usual way of taking leave. See Hor.

lib. iii. ode xxvii. l. 14.

Et memor nostri Galatea vivas.

319. Hastening to be refreshed.] The poets, and other studious persons, were very desirous of retiring into the country from the noise and hurry of Rome, in order to be refreshed with quiet and repose.

Hor. lib. i. epist. xviii. l. 104.

Me quoties reficit gelidus Digentia rivus, &c.

See also that most beautiful passage—O Rus, &c.—lib. ii. sat. vi. l. 60—2.

— Your Aquinum.] A town in the Latin way, famous for having been the birth-place of Juvenal, and to which, at times, he retired.

320. Helvine Ceres.] Helvinam Cererem—Helvinus is used by Pliny, to denote a sort of flesh-colour. Ainsw. Something perhaps approaching the yellowish colour of corn. Also a pale red-colour—Helvus. Ainsw. But we may understand Ceres to be called Helvinus or Elvinus, which was near Aquinum. Near the fons Helvinus was a temple of Ceres, and also of Diana, the vestiges of which are said to remain till this day.

Convelle a Cumis: Satirarum ego (nî pudet illas) Adjutor gelidos veniam caligatus in agros.

321. Rend from Cumæ. Convelle-pluck me away-by which expression Umbritius describes his great unwillingness to be taken from the place of his retreat, as if nothing but his friendship for Juvenal could force him (as it were) from it.

322. Armed, &c.] Caligatus—the caliga was a sort of harness for the leg, worn by soldiers, who hence were called caligati. It is used here metaphorically.

Rend from Cumæ: I of your Satires (unless they are ashamed) An helper, will come armed into your cold fields.

"I, (says Umbritius,) unless your Satires should be ashamed of my assistance, will come, armed at all points, to help you in your attacks upon the people and manners of the times." By this it appears that Umbritius was himself a poet.

Your cold fields.] Aquinum was situated in a part of Campania, much colder than where Cumæ stood.

END OF THE THIRD SATIRE.

SATIRA IV.

ARGUMENT.

From the luxury and prodigality of Crispinus, whom he lashes so severely, sat. i. 26—9, Juvenal takes occasion to describe a ridiculous consultation, held by Domitian over a large turbot; which was too big to be contained in any dish that could be found. The Poet, with great wit and humour, describes the senators being summoned in this exigency, and gives a particular account of their characters, speeches, and advice. After long consultation,

Ad partes; monstrum nullà virtute redemptum A vitiis, æger, solaque libidine fortis:
Delicias viduæ tantum aspernatur adulter.
Quid refert igitur quantis jumenta fatiget.
Porticibus, quanta nemorum vectetur in umbra,
Jugera quot vicina foro, quas emerit ædes?

Line 1. Again Crispinus.] Juvenal mentions him before, sat. i. 27. He was an Ægyptian by birth, and of very low extraction; but having the good fortune to be a favourite of Domitian's, he came to great riches and preferment, and lived in the exercise of all kinds of vice and debauchery.

2. To his parts.] A metaphor, taken from the players, who, when they had finished the scene they were to act, retired, but were called again to their parts, as they were successively to enter and carry on the piece.

Thus Juvenal calls Crispinus again, to appear in the parts, or characters, which he has allotted him in his Satires.

— By no virtue, &c.] He must be a monster indeed, who had not a single virtue to rescue him from the total dominion of his vices. Redemptum here is metaphorical, and alludes to the state of a miserable captive, who is enslaved to a tyrant master, and has none to ransom him from bondage.

3. Sick.] Diseased—perhaps full of infirmities from his luxury and debauchery. Æger also signifies weak—feeble.—This sense too is to be here included, as opposed to fortis.

—— And strong in lust, &c. Vigorous and strong in the gratification of his sensuality only.

4. The adulterer despises, &c.] q. d. Crispinus, a common adult

SATIRE IV.

ARGUMENT.

it was proposed that the fish should be cut to pieces, and so dressed: at last they all came over to the opinion of the senator Montanus, that it should be dressed whole; and that a dish, big enough to contain it, should be made on purpose for it. The council is then dismissed, and the Satire concludes; but not without a most severe censure on the emperor's injustice and cruelty towards some of the best and most worthy of the Romans.

BEHOLD again Crispinus! and he is often to be called by me To his parts: a monster by no virtue redeemed From vices—sick, and strong in lust alone:
The adulterer despises only the charms of a widow.
What signifies it, therefore, in how large porches he fatigues
His cattle, in how great a shade of groves he may be carried,
How many acres near the forum, what houses he may have bought?

terer, sins only from the love of vice; he neither pretends interest or necessity, like those who sold their favours to lascivious widows, in hopes of being their heirs. Sat. i. 38—42. He was too rich for this, but yet too wicked not to gratify his passions in the most criminal manner: he would not intrigue with a widow, lest he should be suspected to have some other motives than mere vice; therefore he despises this, though he avoided no other species of lewdness.

5. In how large porches, &c.] It was a part of the Roman luxury to build vast porticos in their gardens, under which they rode in wet or hot weather, that they might be sheltered from the rain, and from the too great heat of the sun. Jumentum signifies any labouring beast, either for carriage or draught. Sat. iii. 316.

6. How great a shade, &c.] Another piece of luxury was to be carried in litters among the shady trees of their groves, in sultry weather.

7. Acres near the forum.] Where land was the most valuable, as being in the midst of the city.

What houses, &c.] What purchases he may have made of houses in the same lucrative situation. Comp. sat. i. l. 105, and note.

10

15

NEMO MALUS FELIX; minime corruptor, et idem Incestus, cum quo nuper vittata jacebat Sanguine adhuc vivo terram subitura sacerdos. Sed nunc de factis levioribus: et tamen alter Si fecisset idem, caderet sub judice morum. Nam quod turpe bonis, Titio, Seioque, decebat Crispinum: quid agas, cum dira, et fœdior omni Crimine persona est? mullum sex millibus emit, Æquantem sane paribus sestertia libris, Ut perhibent, qui de magnis majora loquuntur.

8. No bad man, &c. This is one of those passages, in which Juvenal speaks more like a Christian, than like an heathen. Comp. Is. lvii. 20, 21.

- A corrupter. A ruiner, a debaucher of women.

9. Incestuous. Incestus—from in and castus—in general is used. to denote that species of unchastity, which consists in defiling those who are near of kin-but, in the best authors, it signifies unchaste -also guilty-profanc. As in Hor. lib. iii. ode ii. l. 29.

- Sape Diespiter Neglectus incesto addidit integrum.

In this place it may be taken in the sense of profane, as denoting that sort of unchastity which is mixed with profaneness, as in the instance which follows, of defiling a vestal virgin,

9-10. A filletted priestess. The vestal virgins, as priestesses of Vesta, had fillets bound round their heads, made of ribbons, or the like.

10. With blood as yet alive.] The vestal virgins vowed chastity, and if any broke their vow, they were buried alive; by a law of Numa Pompilius their founder.

11. Lighter deeds.] i. e. Such faults as, in comparison with the preceding, are trivial, yet justly reprehensible, and would be so deemed in a character less abandoned than that of Crispinus, in whom they are in a manner eclipsed by greater.

12. Under the judge, &c.] This seems to be a stroke at the partiality of Domitian, who punished Maximilla, a vestal, and those who had defiled her, with the greatest severity. Surr. Domit. ch. viii. See note 2, on l. 60.

Crispinus was a favourite, and so he was suffered to escape punishment, however much he deserved it, as was the vestal whom he defiled, on the same account.

Suet. says, that Domitian, particularly-Morum correctionem exercuit in vestales.

13. What would be base, &c.] So partial was Domitian to his favourite Crispinus, that what would be reckoned shameful, and be punished as a crime, in good men, was esteemed very becoming in him.

- Titius, or Seius. It does not appear who these were; but

No BAD MAN IS HAPPY: least of all a corrupter, and the same Incestnous, with whom there lay, lately, a filletted Priestess, about to go under ground with blood as yet alive. 10 But now concerning lighter deeds: and yet another,

If he had done the same, would have fallen under the judge of manners:

For what would be base in good men, in Titius, or Seius, became Crispinus: what can you do, since dire, and fouler than every Crime, his person is ?—He bought a mullet for six sestertia, 15. Truly equalling the sestertia to a like number of pounds, As they report, who of great things speak greater.

probably they were some valuable men, who had been persecuted by the emperor for some supposed offences. See this sat. 1. 151, 2.

14. What can you do, &c.] q. d. What can one do with such a fellow as Crispinus ? what signifies satirizing his crimes, when his person is more odious and abominable than all that can be mentioned? What he is, is so much worse than what he DOES, that one is at a loss how to treat him.

This is a most severe stroke, and introduces what follows on the gluttony and extravagance of Crispinus.

15. A mullet. Mullus-a sea fish, of a red and purple colour, therefore called mullus, from mulleus, a kind of red or purple shoe, worn by senators and great persons. Ainsw. I take take this to be what is called the red mullet, or mullus barbatus, by some rendered barbel. Horace speaks of this fish as a great dainty;

Laudas, insane, trilibrem Mullum -Hon. sat. ii. lib. ii. l. 33, 4,

So that about three pounds was their usual weight:-that it was a rarity to find them larger, we may gather from his saying, 1. 36,-His breve pondus.

But Crispinus meets with one that weighed six pounds, and, rather than not purchase it, he pays for it the enormous sum of six thousand sestertii, or six sestertia, making about 46l. 17s. 6d. of our money.

For the manner of reckoning sesterces, see before, sat. i. l. 106, and note.

This fish, whatever it strictly was, was in great request, as a dainty, among the Romans. Asinius Celer, a man of consular dignity under the emperor Claudius, is said to have given 8000 nummi (i. e. eight sestertia) for one. See Senec. epist. xcv.

16. Truly equalling, &c.] That is, the number of sestertia were exactly equal to the number of pounds which the fish weighed, so that it cost him a sestertium per pound.

17. As they report, &c.] So Crispinus's flatterers give out, who, to excuse his extravagance, probably represent the fish bigger than it was, for it is not easily credible that this sort of fish ever grows so large. Pliny says, that a mullet is not to be found that weighs more than two pounds.-Hor. ubi supr. goes so far as three pounds-so Consilium laudo artificis, si munere tanto Præcipuam in tabulis ceram senis abstulit orbi. Est ratio ulterior, magnæ si misit amicæ, Quæ vehitur clauso latis specularibus antro. Nil tale expectes: emit sibi: multa videmus, Quæ miser et frugi non fecit Apicius: hoc tu Succinctus patrià quondam, Crispine, papyro. Hoc pretium squamæ? potuit fortasse minoris Piscator, quam piscis, emi. Provincia tanti Vendit agros: sed majores Appulia vendit.

11

25

that probably these embellishers of Crispinus made the fish to be

'twice as big as it really was.

18. I praise the device, &c.] If this money had been laid out in buying such a rarity, in order to present it to some childless old man, and, by this, Crispinus had succeeded so well as to have become his chief heir, I should commend such an artifice, and say that the contriver of it deserved some credit.

19. Had obtained the chief wax, &c.] It was customary for wills to consist of two parts: the first named the primi hardes, or chief heirs, and was therefore called cera præcipua, from the wax which was upon it, on which was the first seal. The other contained the secundi hæredes, or lesser heirs: this was also sealed with wax—this was called cera secunda.

20. There is further reason, &c.] There might have been a reason for his extravagance, even beyond the former; that is, if he had purchased it to have presented it to some rich woman of quality, in order to have ingratiated himself with her as a mistress, or to induce her to leave him her fortune, or perhaps both. Comp. sat. iii. 129, 30, and ib. 132—4.

21. Carried in a close litter.] Antrum properly signifies a den, cave, or the like—but there it seems to be descriptive of the lectica, or litter, in which persons of condition were carried close shut up.

——Broud windows.] Latis specularibus.—Specularis means any thing whereby one may see the better, belonging to windows, or spectacles. The specularis lapis was a stone, clear like glass, cut into small thin panes, and in old times used for glass.

This was made use of in the construction of the litters, as glass is with us in our coaches and sedan chairs, to admit the light, and to keep out the weather.

The larger these windows were, the more expensive they must be,

and the more denote the quality of the owner.

22. Expect no such thing, &c.] If you expect to hear that something of the kind above mentioned was a motive for what he did, or that he had any thing in view, which could in the least excuse it, you will be mistaken; for the truth is, he bought it only for himself, without any other end or view than to gratify his own selfishness and gluttony.

23. Apicius.] A noted epicure and glutton in the days of Nero.

I praise the device of the contriver, if, with so large a gift, He had obtained the chief wax on the will of a childless old man.

There is further reason, if he had sent it to a great mistress,

Who is carried in a close litter with broad windows.

Expect no such thing: he bought it for himself: we see many things

Which the wretched and frugal Apicius did not: this thou [didst] Crispinus, formerly girt with your own country flag.
Is this the price of a scale? perhaps, at less might

25

The fisherman, than the fish, be bought. At so much a province Sells fields: but Apulia sells greater.

He wrote a volume concerning the ways and means to provoke appetite, spent a large estate on his guts, and growing poor and despised, hanged himself.

The poet means, that even Apicius, glutton as he was, was yet a mortified and frugal man in comparison of Crispinus.

"Thou, Crispinus, hast done, what Apicius never did."

24. Formerly girt, &c.] q. d. Who wast, when thou first camest to Rome, a poor Ægyptian, and hadst not a rag about thee, better than what was made of the flags that grow about the river Nile. Of the papyrus, ropes, mats, and, among other things, a sort of clothing was made.

This flag, and the leaves of it, were equally called papyrus. See sat. i. l. 26, 7, where Crispinus is spoken of much in the same terms.

25. The price of a scale.] Squame, here, by synec. put for the fish itself; but, by this manner of expression, the poet shews his contempt of Crispinus, and means to make his extravagance as contemptible as he can.

26. A province, &c.] In some of the provinces which had become subject to Rome, one might purchase an estate for what was laid out on this mullet.

27. But Apulia, &c. A part of Italy near the Adriatic gulph, where land, it seems, was very cheap, either from the barrenness and craggy height of the mountains, or from the unwholesomeness of the air, and the wind atabulus:

Montes Apulia notos Quos torret atabulus.

Hog. lib. i. sat. y. l. 77, 8.

q. d. The price of this fish would purchase an estate in some of the provinces; but, in Apulia, a very extensive one.

For less some provinces whole acres sell:
Nay, in Apulia, if you bargain well,
A manor would cost less than such a meal.

DUKE.

30

35

Quales tunc epulas ipsum glutisse putemus
Induperatorem, cum tot sestertia, partem
Exiguam, et modicæ sumptam de margine cænæ
Purpureus magni ructårit scurra palatî,
Jam princeps equitum, magnâ qui voce solebat
Vendere municipes pactâ mercede siluros?
Incipe Calliope, licet hie considere: non est
Cantandum, res vera agitur: narrate puellæ
Pierides; prosit mihi vos dixisse puellas.

Cum jam semianimum laceraret Flavius orbem

28. The emperor, &c.] Domitian.—q. d. What must we suppose to be done by him, in order to procure dainties? how much expense must he be at to gratify his appetite, if Crispinus can swallow what cost so many sertertia in one dish, and that not a principal one; not taken from the middle, but merely standing as a side-dish at the edge of the table; not a part of some great supper, given on an extraordinary occasion, but of a common ordinary meal.

31. A purple buffoon.] No longer clad with the papyrus of Ægypt, (see note on l. 24.) but decked in sumptuous apparel, ornamented with purple. So sat. i. 27.

Crispinus, Tyrias humero revocante lacernas.

Though advanced to great dignity, by the favour of the emperor, yet letting himself down to the low servility and meanness of a court-jester, or buffoon,

—— Belched.] The indigestions and crudities, which are generated in the stomachs of those who feed on various rich and luscious dainties, occasion flatulencies, and nauseous eructations. The poet, here, to express the more strongly his abhorrence of Crispinus's extravagant gluttony, uses the word ructarit—the effect for the cause. See sat. iii. 233, note.

32. Chief of knights.] i. e. Chief of the equestrian order.

Horace liath a thought like this, concerning a low-born slave, who, like Crispinus, had been advanced to equestrian dignity.

Sedilibusque in primis eques Othone contempto sedet.

Epod. iv. l. 15, 16.

See before, sat. iii. 159, and note.

32-3. Who used to sell, &c. Who used formerly, in his flag-jacket (l. 24.) to cry fish about the streets.

33. Shads. What the siluri were I cannot find certainly defined; but must agree that they were a small and cheap kind of fish, taken in great numbers out of the river Nile—hence the poet jeeringly styles them municipes, q. d. Crispinus's own countrymen.—Ainsw.

For hire. Various are the readings of this place—as fracta de merce—pacta de merce—but I think, with Casaubon, that pacta mercede gives the easiest and best sense: it still exaggerates the wretchedness and poverty of Crispinus at his outset

35

What dainties then can we think the emperor himself
To have swallowed, when so many sestertia, a small Part, and taken from the margin of a moderate supper,
A purple buffoon of the great palace belehed?
Now chief of knights, who used, with a loud voice,
To sell his own country shads for hire.

Regin Callians, here was many dwells, was most not Begin Calliope, here you may dwell: you must not Sing, a real matter is treated: relate it ye Pierian Maids—let it avail me to have called ye maids—

When now the last Flavius had torn the half-dead in life, as it denotes, that he not only got his living by bawling fish about the streets, but that these fish were not his own, and that he sold them for the owners, who bargained with him to pay him so much for his pains—pacta mercede—ht.—for agreed wages or hire.

34. Calliope.] The mother of Orpheus, and chief of the nine muses: said to be the inventress of heroic verse.

To heighten the ridicule, Juvenal prefaces his narrative with a burlesque invocation of Calliope, and then of the rest of the muses.

—— Here you may dwell.] A subject of such importance requires all your attention, and is not lightly to be passed over, therefore, here you may sit down with me.

34—5. Not sing.] Not consider it as a matter of mere invention, and to be treated, as poetical fictions are, with flights of fancy: my theme is real fact, therefore—non est cantandum—it is not a subject for heroic song—or, tibi understood, you are not to sing—

Begin Calliope, but not to sing:

Plain honest truth we for our subject bring. Duke.

35. Relate.] Narrate corresponds with the non est cantandum-

q. d. deliver it in simple narrative.

35—6. Pierian maids.] The muses were called Pierides, from Pieria, a district of Thessaly, where was a mountain, on which Jupiter, in the form of a shepherd, was fabled to have begotten them on Mnemosyne. See Ov. Met. vi. 114.

36. Let it avail me, &c.] He banters the poets who gave the appellations of nymphæ and puellæ to the muses, as if complimenting them on their youth and chastity. It is easily seen that the whole of this invocation is burlesque.

37. When now.] The poet begins his narrative, which he introduces with great sublimity, in this and the following line; thus finely continuing his irony; and at the same time dating the fact in such terms, as reflect a keen and due severity on the character of Domitian.

— The last Flavius.] The Flavian family, as it was imperial, began in Vespasian, and ended in Domitian, whose monstrous cruelties are here alluded to, not only as affecting the city of Rome, but as felt to the utmost extent of the Roman empire, tearing, as it were, the world to pieces. Semianimum—half dead under oppression. Metaph.

Ultimus, et calvo serviret Roma Neroni,
Incidit Adriaci spatium admirabile rhombi,
Ante domum Veneris, quam Dorica sustinet Ancon,
Implevitque sinus: neque enim minor hæserat illis,
Quos operit glacies Mæotica, ruptaque tandem Solibus effundit torpentis ad ostia Ponti,
Desidiâ tardos, et longo frigore pingues.

Destinat hoc monstrum cymbæ linique magister. 45
Pontifici summo: quis enim proponere talem.
Aut emere auderet? cum plena et littora multo

Delatore forent: dispersi protinus algæ

38: Was in bondage to bald Nero.] Was in bondage and slavery to the tyrant Domitian. This emperor was bald; at which he was so displeased, that he would not suffer baldness to be mentioned in his presence. He was called Nero, as all the bad emperors were, from his cruelty. Servire—implies the service which is paid to a tyrant: parere—that obedience which is paid to a good prince.

39. There fell, &c.] Having related the time when, he now mentions the place where, this large turbot was caught. It was in the Adriatic sea, near the city of Ancon, which was built by a people originally Greeks, who also built there a temple of Venus. This city stood on the shore, at the end of a bay which was formed by two promontories, and made a curve like that off the elbow when the arm is bent—hence it was called arms, the elbow. The poet, by being thus particular, as if he were relating an event, every circumstance of which was of the utmost importance, enhances the irony.

The Syracusans, who fled to this part of Italy from the tyranny of Dionysius, were originally from the Dorians, a people of Achaia: hence Ancon is called Dorica: it was the metropolis of Picenum. Ancona is now a considerable city in Italy, and belongs to the papacy.

40. Sustains.] Sustinct does not barely mean, that this temple of Venus stood at Ançon, but that it was upheld and maintained, in all its worship, rites and ceremonies, by the inhabitants.

41. Into a net. Sinus, lit. means the bosom or bow of the net, which the turbot was so large as entirely to fill.

Stuck. Haserat had entangled itself, so as to stick fast.

42. The Maotic ice. The Maotis was a vast lake, which in the winter was frozen over, and which, when thawed in summer, discharged itself into the Euxine sea, by the Cimmerian Bosphorus.

Here vast quantities of fine fish were detained while the frosts lasted, and then came with the flowing waters into the mouth of the Pontus Euxinus. These fish, by lying in a torpid state during the winter, grew fat and bulky.

43. The dull Pontic.] So called from the slowness of its tide. This night, in part, be occasioned by the vast quantities of broken ice, which came down from the lake Mæotis, and retarded its course.

World, and Rome was in bondage to bald Nero,
There fell a wondrous size of an Adriatic turbot,
Before the house of Venus which Doric Ancon sustains,
Into a net and filled it, for a less had not stuck than those
Which the Mæotic ice covers, and at length, broken
By the sun, pours forth at the entrance of the dull Pontic,
Slow by idleness, and, by long cold, fat.
The master of the boat and net destines this monster

The master of the boat and net destines this monster

For the chief pontiff—for who to offer such a one to sale,

Or to buy it would dare? since the shores too with many

An informer might be full: the dispersed inquisitors of sea-weed

The Euxine, or Pontic sea, is sometimes called Pontus only. See vAlmsw. Euxinus and Pontus.

45. Net.] Linum—lit. signifies flax, and, by meton thread, which is made of flax—but as nets are made of thread, it frequently, as here, signifies a net. Meton. See Virg. Georg. ii. l. 142.

46. For the chief pontiff.] Domitian, whose tide, as emperor, was Pontifex Summus, or Maximus. Some think that the poet alludes to the gluttony of the pontifis in general, which was so great as to be proverbial.—The words glutton and priest were almost synonymus—Coenæ pontificum, or the feasts which they made on public occasions, surpassed all others in luxury. Hence Hor. lib. ii. ode xiii, ad fin.

Pontificum potiore cœnis.

Juvenal, therefore, may be understood to have selected this title of the emperor, by way of equivocally calling him what he durst not plainly have expressed—the chief of gluttons.—Comp. sat. ii. l. 113.

—He was particularly the Pontifex Summus of the college at Alba.

See note on l. 60. ad fin.

The poor fisherman, who had caught this monstrous fish, knew full well the gluttony, as well as the cruelty of Domitian: he therefore determines to make a present of it to the emperor, not daring to offer it to sale elsewhere, and knowing that, if he did, nobody would dare to buy it; for both buyer and seller would be in the utmost danger of Domitian's resentment, at being disappointed of such a rarity.

47. Since the shores, &c.] The reign of Domitian was famous for the encouragement of informers, who sat themselves in all places to get intelligence. These particular people, who are mentioned here, were officially placed on the shore to watch the landing of goods, and to take care that the revenue was not defrauded. They appear to have been like that species of revenue officers amongst us, which are called tide-waiters.

48. Inquisitors of sea-weed.] Alga signifies a sort of weed, which the tides cast up and leave on the shore. The poet's calling these people algae inquisitores, denotes their founding accusations on the merest trifles, and thus oppressing the public. They dispersed themselves in such a manner as not to be avoided.

Inquisitores agerent cum remige nudo;
Non dubitaturi fugitivum dicere piscem,
Depastumque diu vivaria Cæsaris, inde
Elapsum, veterem ad dominum debere reverti.
Si quid Palphurio, si credimus Armillato,
Quicquid conspicuum, pulchrumque est æquore toto,
Res fisci est, ubicunque natat. Donabitur ergo,
Ne pereat. Jam lethifero cedente pruinis
Autumno, jam quartanam sperantibus ægris,
Stridebat deformis hyems, prædamque recentem
Servabat: tamen hic properat, velut urgeat Auster:
Utque lacus suberant, ubi, quanquam diruta, servat

49. Would immediately contend, &c.] They would immediately take advantage of the poor fisherman's forlorn and defenceless condition, to begin a dispute with him about the fish; and would even have the impudence to say, that, though the man might have caught the fish, yet he had no right to it—that it was astray, and ought to return to the right owner.

51. Long had fed, &c.] Vivarium, as has been before observed, denotes a place where wild beasts or fishes are kept, a park, a warren, a stew or fish-bond.

The monstrous absurdity of what the poet supposes these fellows to advance, in order to prove that this fish was the emperor's property, (notwithstanding the poor fisherman had caught it in the Adriatic sea,) may be considered as one of those means of oppression, which were made use of to distress the people, and to wrest their property from them, under the most frivolous and groundless pretences, and at the same time under colour of legal claim.

53. Palphurius—Armillatus.] Both men of consular dignity; lawyers, and spies, and informers, and so favourites with Domitian.

Here is another plea against the poor fisherman, even granting that the former should fail in the proof; namely, that the emperor has, by his royal prerogative, and as part of the royal revenue, a right to all fish which are remarkable in size or value, wheresoever caught in any part of the sea; and as this turbot came within that description, the emperor must have it, and this on the authority of those great lawyers above mentioned. By the law of England, whale and sturgeon are called royal fish, because they belong to the king, on account of their excellence, as part of his ordinary revenue, in consideration of his protecting the seas from pirates and robbers. See Blacks. Com. 4to. p. 290.

55. Therefore it shall be presented.] The poor fisherman, aware of all this, rather than incur the danger of a prosecution at the suit of the emperor, in which he could have no chance but to lose his fine turbot, and to be ruined into the bargain, makes a virtue of necessity, and therefore wisely determines to carry it as a present to Domitian, who was at that time at Alba.

56. Lest it should be lost.] Lest it should be seized, and taken from him by the informers.

Would immediately contend with the naked boatman, Not doubting to say that the fish was a fugitive, 50 And long had fed in Cæsar's ponds, thence had Escaped, and ought to return to its old master. If we at all believe Palphurius, or Armillatus, Whatever is remarkable, and excellent in the whole sea, Is a matter of revenue, wherever it swims.—Therefore it shall be presented 55 Lest it should be lost. Deadly autumn was now yielding to Hoar-frosts, the unhealthy now expecting a quartan, Deformed winter howled, and the recent prey Preserved: yet he hastens as if the south wind urged. And as soon as they had got to the lakes, where, tho' demolished,

Alba 60

The boatman then shall a wise present make, . And give the fish, before the seizers take. DUKE.

Or—It shall be presented, and that immediately, lest it should grow stale and stink.

56. Deadly autumn, &c. By this we learn, that the autumn, in that part of Italy, was very unwholesome, and that, at the beginning of the winter, quartan agues were expected by persons of a weakly and sickly habit. Spero signifies to expect either good or evil. This periphrasis describes the season in which this matter happened, that it was in the beginning of winter, the weather cold, the heats of autumn succeeded by the hoar-frosts, so that the fish was in no danger of being soon corrupted.

59. Yet he hastens, &c. Notwithstanding the weather was so favourable for preserving the fish from tainting, the poor fisherman made as much haste to get to the emperor's palace, as if it had been now summer-time.

60. They.] i. e. The fisherman, and his companions the informers—they would not leave him.

Got to the lakes. The Albanian lakes—these are spoken of by Hor. lib. iv. od. i. l. 19, 20.

> Albanos prope te lacus Ponet marmoream sub trabe citres.

The city of Alba was built between these lakes and the hills, which, for this reason, were called Colles Albani; hence these lakes were also called Lacus Albani. Alba was about fifteen miles from

- Tho' demolished, &c. Tullus Hostilius, king of Rome, took away all the treasure and relics which the Trojans had placed there in the temple of Vesta; only, out of a superstitious fear, the fire was left; but he overthrew the city. See Ant. Un. Hist. vol. xi. p. 310. All the temples were spared. Liv. l. i.

The Albans, on their misfortunes, neglecting their worship, were commanded, by various prodigies, to restore their ancient rites, the chief of which was, to keep perpetually burning the vestal fire which

POL. I.

Ignem Trojanum, et Vestam colit Alba minorem,
Obstitit intranti miratrix turba parumper:
Ut cessit, facili patuerunt cardine valvæ:
Exclusi spectant admissa opsonia patres.
Itur ad Atridem: tum Picens, accipe, dixit,
Privatis majora focis; genialis agatur
Iste dies; propera stomachum laxare saginis, was brought there by Æneas, and his Trojans, as a fatal pledge of the perpetuity of the Roman empire.

03

Alba Longa was built by Ascanius the son of Æneas, and called Alba, from the white sow which was found on the spot. See Virg.

Æn. iii. 390-3. Æn. viii. 43-8.

Domitian was at this time at Alba, where he had instituted a college of priests, hence called Sacerdotes, or Pontifices Albani. As he was their founder and chief, it might be one reason of his being called Pontifex Summus, 1. 46. when at that place. The occasion of his being there at that time, may be gathered from what Pliny says in his epist. to Corn. Munatianus.

"Domitian was desirous to punish Corn. Maximilla, a vestal, by burying her alive, she having been detected in unchastity; he went to Alba, in order to convoke his college of priests, and there, in abuse of his power as chief, he condemned her in her absence, and "unheard," See before, l. 12, and note.

Suctonius says, that Domitian went every year to Alba, to celebrate the Quinquatria, a feast so called, because it lasted five days, and was held in honour of Minerva, for whose service he had also instituted the Albanian priests—this might have occasioned his being at Alba at this time.

61. The lesser Vesta.] So styled, with respect to her temple at Alba, which was far inferior to that at Rome built by Numa.

62. Wondering crowd.] A vast number of people assembled to view this fine fish, insomuch that, for a little while, parumper, they obstructed the fisherman in his way to the palace.

63. As it gave way.] i. e. As the crowd, having satisfied their curiosity, retired, and gave way for him to pass forward.

— The gates, & c.] Valvæ—the large folding doors of the palace are thrown open, and afford a ready and welcome entrance to one who brought such a delicious and acceptable present. Comp. Hor. lib. i. od. xxv. l. 5, 6.

64. The excluded futhers.] Patres—i. e. patres conscripti, the senators, whom Domitian had commanded to attend him at Alba, either out of state, or in order to form his privy-council on state affairs.

There is an antithesis here between the admissa opsonia and the exclusi patres, intimating, that the senators were shut out of the palace, when the doors were thrown open to the fisherman and his turbot: these venerable personages had only the privilege of looking at it, as it was carried through the crowd.

Many copies read expectant-q. d. The senators are to wait,

Preserves the Trojan fire, and worships the lesser Vesta,

A wondering crowd, for a while, opposed him as he entered:

As it gave way, the gates opened with an easy hinge:

The excluded fathers behold the admitted dainties.

He comes to Atrides: then the Picenian said-" Accept

65

"What is too great for private kitchens: let this day be passed

"As a festival; hasten to release your stomach from its erammings, while the business of the turbot is settled, before they can be admitted—lit. they await the admitted victuals. See expectant used in this sense. Virg. Æn. iv. l. 134.

Casaubon reads spectant, which seems to give the most natural and easy sense.

64. Dainties.] Opsonium-ii—signifies any victuals eaten with bread, especially fish. Arnsw. Gr. of proprie, piscis. Hed.— So likewise in S. S. John vi. 9. δυο οψαρία, two little fishes. Here

Juvenal uses opsonia for the rhombus.

65. Atrides.] So the poet here humourously calls Domitian, in allusion to Agamemnon, the son of Atrcus, whose pride prompted him to be styled the commander over all the Grecian generals. Thus Domitian affected the titles of Dux ducum-Princeps principum, and even Deus.

- The Picenian.] i. e. The fisherman, who was an inhabitant of Picenum.

---- Accept. Thus begins the fisherman's abject and fulsome address to the emperor, on presenting the turbot.

66. What is too great.] Lit. greater than private fires. Focus is properly a fire-hearth, by met. fire. Focis here, means the fires by which victuals are dressed, kitchen fires; and so, by met. kitchens. q. d. The turbot which he presented to the emperor was too great and valuable to be dressed in any private kitchen.

67. As a festival.] The adj. genialis signifies cheerful—merry—festival—so, genialis dies—a day of festivity, a festival—such as was observed on marriage or on birth-days: on these latter, they held a yearly feast in honour of their genius, or tutelar deity, which was supposed to attend their birth, and to live and die with them. See Pers. sat, ii. l. 3, and note. Probably the poet here means much the same as Horace, lib. iii. ode xvii.-by genium curabisyou shall indulge yourself-make merry.

— Hasten to release, &c.] The poet here lashes Domitian's gluttony, by making the fisherman advise him to unload, and set his stomach at liberty from the dainties which it contained, (which was usually done by vomits,) in order to whet it, and to make room for this turbot. Sagina lit. means any meat wherewith things are crammed or fatted, and is well applied here to express the emperor's stuffing and cramming himself, by his daily gluttony, like a beast or a fowl that is put up to be fattened.

Et tua servatum consume in sæcula rhombum: Ipse capi voluit. Quid apertius? et tamen illi Surgebant cristæ: nihil est, quod credere de se Non possit, cum laudatur Dîs æqua potestas. Sed deerat pisci patinæ mensura: vocantur Ergo in concilium proceres, quos oderat ille; In quorum facie miseræ, magnæque sedebat Pallor amicitiæ. Primus, clamante Liburno, Currite, jam sedit, raptâ properabat abollâ Pegasus, attonitæ positus modo villicus urbi: Anne aliud tunc Præfecti? quorum optimus, atque

75

68. Reserved for your age.] As if Providence had purposely formed and preserved this fish for the time of Domitian.

69. Itself it would be taken.] The very fish itself was ambitious to be caught for the entertainment and gratification of your Majesty.

- What could be plainer?] What flattery could be more open, more palpable than this? says Juvenal.

70. His crest arose. This flattery, which one would have thought too gross to be received, yet pleased Domitian, he grew proud of it—surgebant cristæ. Metaph. taken from the appearance of a cock when he is pleased, and struts and sets up his comb.

There is nothing, & c,] i. e. When a prince can believe himself equal in power to the gods, (which was the case with Domitian,) no flattery can be too gross, fulsome, or palpable to be received; he will believe every thing that can be said in his praise, and grow still the vainer for it.

Mr. Dryden, in his ode called Alexander's Feast, has finely imagined an instance of this, where Alexander is almost mad with pride, at hearing himself celebrated as the son of Jupiter by Olympia.

With ravish'd ears
The monarch hears;
Assumes the god,
Affects to nod,
And seems to shake the spheres.

72. But—a size, & c.] They had no pot capacious enough, in its dimensions, to contain this large turbot, so as to dress it whole. Patina is a pot of earth or metal, in which things were boiled, and brought to table in their broth. Alnsw.

73. The nobles.] Procees—the senators—called patres, 1.64.

- Are called into council. To deliberate on what was to be done in this momentous business.

--- Whom he hated. From a consciousness of his being dreaded and hated by them.

74. The paleness.] We have here a striking representation of a tyrant, who, conscious that he must be hated by all about him, hates them, and they, knowing his capricious cruelty, never approach him without horror and dread, lest they should say or do something,

" And consume a turbot reserved for your age:

"Itself it would be taken."—What could be plainer? and yet

His crest arose: there is nothing which of it itself it may not Believe, when a power equal to the gods is praised.

But there was wanting a size of pot for the fish: therefore

The nobles are called into council, whom he hated:

In the face of whom was sitting the paleness of a miserable

And great friendship.—First, (a Liburnian crying out— 75 "Run—he is already seated,") with a snatched-up gown, hastened

Pegasus, lately appointed bailiff to the astonished city-

Were the Præfects then any thing else?—of whom [he was] the best, and however undesignedly, which may cost them their lives. Comp. l. 86 —8.

75. A Liburnian.] Some have observed that the Romans made criers of the Liburnians, a remarkable lusty and stout race of men, (see sat. iii. 240.) because their voices were very loud and strong. Others take Liburnus here for the proper name of some particular man who had the office of crier.

76. Run, &c.] "Make haste—lose no time—the emperor has al"ready taken his seat at the council-table—don't make him wait."

With a snatched-up gown.] Abolla, here, signifies a senator's robe. In sat. iii. 115. it signifies a philosopher's gown.—On hearing the summons, he caught up his robe in a violent hurry, and huddled it on, and away he went.

This Pegasus was an eminent lawyer, who had been appointed præfect or governor of the city of Rome. Juvenal calls him villicus, or bailiff, as if Rome, by Domitian's tyranny, had so far lost its liberty and privileges, that it was now no better than an insignificant village, and its officers had no more power or dignity than a country bailiff—a little paltry officer over a small district.

The præfectus urbis (says Kennett, Ant. lib. iii. part ii. c. 13.) was a sort of mayor of the city, created by Augustus, by the advice of his favourite Mæcenas, upon whom at first he conferred the new honour. He was to precede all other city magistrates, having power to receive appeals from the inferior courts, and to decide almost all causes within the limits of Rome, or one hundred miles round. Before this, there was sometimes a præfectus urbis created, when the kings, or the greater officers, were absent from the city, to administer justice in their room.

But there was an end of all this, their hands were now tied up, their power and consequence were no more; Domitian had taken every thing into his own hands, and no officer of the city could act farther than the emperor deigned to permit, who kept the whole city in the utmost terror and astonishment at his cruelty and oppression.

78. Of whom, &c.] This Pegasus was an excellent inagistrate, the best of any that had filled that office—most conscientious and Interpres legum sanctissimus; omnia quanquam Temporibus diris tractanda putabat inermi Justitià. Venit et Crispi jucunda senectus, Cujus erant mores, qualis facundia, mite Ingenium. Maria, ac terras, populosque regenti Quis comes utilior, si clade et peste sub illà Sævitiam damnare, et honestum afferre liceret Consilium? sed quid violentius aure tyranni, Cum quo de nimbis, aut æstibus, aut pluvioso Vere locuturi fatum pendebat amici? Ille igitur nunquam direxit brachia contra Torrentem: nec civis erat, qui libera posset Verba animi proferre, et vitam impendere vero. Sic multas hyemes, atque octogesima vidit Solstitia: his armis, illa quoque tutus in aula. Proximus ejusdem properabat Acilius avi Cum juvene indigno, quem mors tam sæva maneret, Et domini gladiis jam festinata: sed olim faithful in his administration of justice—never straining the laws to oppress the people, but expounding them fairly and honestly.

80—1. With unarmed justice.] Such was the cruelty and tyranny of Domitian, that even Pegasus, that good and upright magistrate, was deterred from the exact and punctual administration of justice, every thing being now governed as the emperor pleased; so that the laws had not their force; nor dared the judges execute them, but according to the will of the emperor—justice was disarmed of its powers.

81. Crispus.] Vibius Crispus, who, when one asked him, if any body was with Cæsar? answered, "Not even a fly." Domitian, at the beginning of his reign, used to amuse himself with catching flies, and sticking them through with a sharp pointed instrument. A sure presage of his future cruelties.

82—3. A gentle disposition.] He was as remarkable for sweetness of temper, as for his eloquence, pleasantry, and good nature. Comp.

Hon. lib. ii. sat. i. l. 72. Mitis sapientia Læli.

84. Who a more useful companion.] The meaning is, who could have been a more salutary friend and companion, as well as counsellor, to the emperor, if he had dared to have spoken his mind, to have reprobated the cruelty of the emperor's proceedings, and to have given his advice to a man, who, like sword and pestilence, destroyed all that he took a dislike to.

86. What is more violent, & c.] More rebellious against the dictates of honest truth—more impatient of advice—more apt to imbibe the most fatal prejudices.

87. Speak of showers, &c.] Such was the capriciousness and cruelty of Domitian, that it was unsafe for his friends to converse with him, even on the most indifferent subjects, such as the weather, and the like: the least word misunderstood, or taken ill, might cost a

Most upright interpreter of laws: tho' all things, In direful times, he thought were to be managed with unarmed Justice. The pleasant old age of Crispus also came, Whose manners were, as his eloquence, a gentle Disposition; to one governing seas, and lands, and people,

Who a more useful companion, if, under that slaughter and pesti-

It were permitted to condemn cruelty, and to give honest 85 Counsel? But what is more violent than the ear of a tyrant, With whom the fate of a triend, who should speak of showers, Or heats, or of a rainy spring, depended?

He therefore never directed his arms against

The torrent: nor was he a citizen, who could utter 90

The free words of his mind, and spend his life for the truth. Thus he saw many winters, and the eightieth

Solstices; with these arms, safe also in that court.

Next of the same age, hurried Acilius

With a youth unworthy, whom so cruel a death should await, 95 And now hastened by the swords of the tyrant: but long since man his life, though to that moment he had been regarded as a friend.

89. Never directed, &c. Never attempted to swim against the stream, as we say.-He knew the emperor too well ever to venture an opposition to his will and pleasure.

91. Spend his life, &c.] Crispus was not one of those citizens who dared to say what he thought; or to hazard his life in the cause of truth, by speaking his mind.

92-3. Eightieth solstices. Eighty solstices of winter and summer

-i. e. he was now eighty years of age.

93. With these arms, &c.] Thus armed with prudence and caution, he had lived to a good old age, even in the court of Domitian, where the least offence or prejudice would, long since, have taken him off.

94. Acilius. Glabrio—a senator of singular prudence and fide-

95. With a youth, &c. Domitius, the son of Acilius, came with his father; but both of them were soon after charged with designs against the emperor, and were condemned to death. The father's sentence was changed into banishment, the more to grieve him with the remembrance of his son's death.

- Unworthy. Not deserving that so cruel a death should await him.

This unhappy young man, to save his life, affected madness, and fought naked with wild beasts in the amphitmeatre at Alba, where Domitian every year celebrated games in honour of Minerva; but he was not to be deceived, and he put Domitius to death in a cruel manner. See l. 99, 100.

96. The swords. Gladies, in the plur, either by syn. for gladio, Prodigio par est in nobilitate senectus:

Unde fit, ut malim fraterculus esse gigantum.
Profuit ergo niliil misero, quod cominus ursos
Figebat Numidas, Albanâ nudus arenâ
100
Venator: quis enim jam non intelligat artes
Patricias? quis priscum illud miretur acumen,
Brute, tuum? facile est barbato imponere regi,
Nec melior vultu, quamvis ignobilis ibat
Rubrius, offensæ veteris reus, atque tacendæ;
Et tamen improbior satiram scribente cinædo.
Montani quoque venter adest, abdomine tardus;
Et matutino sudans Crispinus amomo;

sing. or perhaps to signify the various methods of torture and death used by this emperor.

96. Of the tyrant. Domini, lit. of the lord-i. e. the emperor

Domitian, who thus lorded it over the lives of his subjects.

97. Old age in nobility.] q. d. From the days of Nero, till this hour, it has been the practice to cut off the nobility, when the emperor's jealousy, fear, or hatred, inclined him so to do; insomuch that, to see a nobleman live to old age, is something like a prodigy; and indeed this has long been the case.

and indeed this has long been the case.

98. Of the giants. These fabulous beings were supposed to be the sons of Titan and Tellus. These sons of Earth were of a giguntic size, and said to rebel and fight against Jupiter. See Ov.

Met. lib. 1. fab. vi.

q. d. Since to be born noble is so very dangerous, I had much rather, like these Terræ filii, claim no higher kindred than my parent Earth, and though not in size, yet as to origin, be a brother of theirs, than be descended from the highest families among our nobility.

101. Who cannot now, &c.] Who is ignorant of the arts of the nobility, either to win the emperor's favour, or to avoid his dislike, or to escape the effects of his displeasure? these are known to every body—therefore it can hardly be supposed that they are unknown to the emperor—hence poor Domitius miscarried in his stratagem. See note on 1. 95.

Domitian could perceive, yet could swallow down the grossest flattery, and thus far deceive himself, (comp. l. 70.) yet no shift, of trick, to avoid his destructive purposes could ever deceive him.

102. Who can wonder, &c.] Lucius Junius Brutus saved his life by affecting to play the fool in the court of Tarquin the Proud, when many of the nobility were destroyed, and, among the rest, the brother of Brutus. Hence he took the surname of Brutus, which signifies senseless—void of reason.

q. d. This old piece of policy would not be surprising now; it would be looked upon but as a shallow device; therefore, however it might succeed in those days of ancient simplicity, we

100

Old age in nobility is equal to a prodigy:

Hence it is, that I had rather be a little brother of the giants.

Therefore it nothing availed the wretch that he pierced

Numidian bears in close fight, a naked hunter in the Alban

Theatre: for who cannot now understand the arts

Of the nobles? who can wonder at that old subtlety of thine,

O Brutus? It is easy to impose on a bearded king.

Nor better in countenance, tho' ignoble, went

Rubrius, guilty of an old crime, and ever to be kept in silence: 105

And yet more wicked than the pathic writing satire.

The belly of Montanus too is present, slow from his paunch:

'And Crispinus sweating with morning perfume:

find it would not do now, as the wretched Domitius sadly experienced.

103. On a bearded king.] Alluding to the simplicity of ancient times, when Rome was governed by kings, who, as well as their people, wore their beards; for shaving and cutting the beard were not in fashion till later times. Barbatus was a sort of proverbial term for simple, old-fashioned. See Alnsw.

It is remarkable that, long before the days of Brutus, we have an instance of a like device, by which David saved himself at the court of Achish, king of Gath. 1 Sam. xxi. 10-15.

104. Nor better in countenance.] He looked as dismal as the rest.

See 1. 74.

— Tho' ignoble.] Though he was of plebeian extraction, and therefore could not be set up as a mark for Domitian's envy and suspicions, as the nobles were, yet he well knew that no rank or degree was safe: as none were above, so none were below his displeasure and resentment.

105. Guilty, &c.] What this offence was, is not said particularly; however, its not being to be named, must make us suppose it something very horrible; or that it was some offence against the emperor, which was kept secret.

Some commentators have supposed it to have been debauching Julia, Domitian's wife.

106. And yet more wicked, &c.] More lewd, more abandoned, than even that unnatural wretch, the emperor Nero, who, though himself a monster of lewdness, yet wrote a satire against Quintianus, in which he censures him severely for the yery abominations which Nero himself was guilty of. See Ainsw. Improbus, No. 7.

1.7. The belly, &c.] As if his belly were the most important thing belonging to him, it, rather than himself, is said to be present. This Montanus was some corpulent glutton, fat and unwieldy.

108. Crispinus, &c.] Here we find Crispinus brought forward again-vocatus ad partes-See l. 1 and 2.

— With morning perfume.] The amount was a shrub which the Easterns used in embalming. Of this a fine perfumed ointment was made, with which Crispinus is described as anointing himself.

VOL. I.

Quantum vix redolent duo funera: sævior illo
Pompeius tenui jugulos aperire susurro:
Et, qui vulturibus servabat viscera Dacis,
Fuscus, marmorea meditatus prælia villa:
Et cum mortifero prudens Veiento Catullo,
Qui nunquam visæ flagrabat amore puellæ,
Grande, et conspicuum nostro quoque tempore monstrum!
Cæcus adulator, dirusque a ponte satelles,
Dignus Aricinos qui mendicaret ad axes,
Blandaque devexæ jactaret basia rhedæ.
Nemo magis rhombum stupuit: nam plurima dixit
Iu lævum conversus: at illi dextra jacebat Bellua: sic pugnas Cilicis laudabat, et ictus.

early in a morning, and in such profusion, as that he seemed to weat it out of his pores.

Some think that the word matutino, here, alludes to the part of the world from whence the amonum came—i. e. the East, where the sun first arises: but I find no example of such a use of the word.

109. Two funerals, &c.] Crispinus had as much perfume about him as would have served to anoint-two corpses for burial. It was a custom among the ancients to anoint the bodies of persons who died with sweet ointments. See Matt. xxvi. 12. This custom, among others, was derived from the Easterns to the Romans.

110. Than him more cruel, &c.] Pompeius was another of this assembly, more cruel than Crispinus, in getting people put to death, by the secret accusations which he whispered against them into the emperor's ear.

111. Fuscus, who was preserving, &c.] Cornelius Fuscus was sent by Domitian general against the Dacians, where his army and himself were lost, and became food for the birds of prey.

112. Meditated wars, &c.] An irony, alluding to his being sent to command, without having any other ideas of war, than he conceived amid the sloth and luxury of his sumptuous villa.

113. Prudent Veiento.] See sat. iii. 185. The poet gives Veiento the epithet of prudent, from his knowing how to conduct himself wisely, with regard to the emperor, so as not to risk his displeasure, and from his knowing when, and how, to flatter to the best advantage. See f. 123.

—— Deadly Catullus.] So called from his causing the death of many by secret accusations. He was raised by Domitian from begging at the foot of the Aricine hill, in the Via Appia, to be a mi-mister of state.

114. Who burn'd, &c.] Catullus was blind, but his lust was so great, that he could not hear a woman mentioned without raging with desire. Or perhaps this alludes to some particular mistress which he kept, and was very fond of.

115. In our times, &c.] He was so wicked, as, even in the most degenerate times, to appear a monster of iniquity.

Two funerals scarcely smell so much. Pompeius too,
Than him more cruel to cut throats with a gentle whisper.
And Fuscus, who was preserving his bowels for the Dacian
Vultures, having meditated wars in his marble villa.
And prudent Veiento, with dealy Catullus,
Who burn'd with the love of a girl never seen;
A great, and also, in our times, a conspicuous monster!
A blind flatterer, a dire attendant from the bridge,
Worthy that he should beg at the Aricinian axles,
And throw kind kisses to the descending carriage.
Nobody more wonder'd at the turbot: for he said many things
Turned to the left, but on his right hand lay

The fish: thus he praised the battles and strokes of the Cilician,

116. A blind flatterer.] As he could admire a woman without seeing her, so he could flatter men whom he never saw; rather than fail, he would flatter at a venture.

— A dire attendant, &c.] There was a bridge in the Appian way, which was a noted stand for beggars. From being a beggar at this bridge, he was taken to be an attendant on the emperor, and a most direful one he was, for he ruined and destroyed many by secret accusations.

117. Worthy that he should beg.] This he might be allowed to deserve, as the only thing he was fit for. See note 2, on l. 113.

—— Aricinian axles.] Axes—by syn. for currus or rhedas—i. e. the carriages which passed along towards or from Aricia, a town in the Appian way, about ten miles from Rome, a very public road, and much frequented; so very opportune for beggars.—See Hor. lib. i. sat. v. l. 1. Hod. la Ricea.

118. Throw kind kisses.] Kissing his hand, and throwing it from his mouth towards the passengers in the carriages, as if he threw them kisses, by way of soothing them into stopping, and giving him alms. See sat. iii. l. 106, and note.

— The descending carriage.] Aricia was built on the top of an high hill, which the carriages descended in their way to Rome: this seems to be the meaning of devexæ. See Arnsw. Devexus-a-

um. From de and veho, q. d. Deorsum vehitur.

119. Nobody more wonder'd.] That is, nobody pretended more to do so, out of flattery to Domitian; for as for the fish, which Juvenal here calls bellua, (speaking of it as of a great beast,) he could not see it, but turned the wrong way from it, and was very loud in its praises: just as he used to flatter Domitian, by praising the fencers at the games he gave, and the machinery at the theatre, when it was not possible for him to see what was going forward. Juvenal might well call him, 1. 116, cæcus adulator.

121. The Cilician.] Some famous gladiator, or fencer, from Cilicia, who, probably, was a favourite of Domitian.

Et pegma, et pueros inde ad velaria raptos. Non cedit Veiento, sed ut fanaticus œstro Percussus, Béllona, tuo divinat; et ingens Omen habes, inquit, magni clarique triumphi: 125 Regem aliquem capies, aut de temone Britanno Excidet Arviragus: peregrina est bellua, cernis Erectas in terga sudes? hoc defuit unum Fabricio, patriam ut rhombi memoraret, et annos. Quidnam igitur censes? conciditur? absit ab illo 130 Dedecus hoc, Montanus ait; testa alta paretur, Quæ tenui muro spatiosum colligat orbein. Debetur magnus patinæ subitusque Prometheus! Argillam, atque rotam citius properate: sed ex hoc · Tempore jam, Cæsar, figuli tua castra sequantur. 135

122. The machine. Pegnia—(from Gr. myoput*, figo) a sort of wooden machine used in scenical representations, which was so contrived, as to raise itself to a great height—Boys were placed upon it, and on a sudden carried up to the top of the theatre.

The coverings.] Velaria—were sail-cloths, extended over the top of the theatre, to keep out the weather. Ainsw.

123. Veiento.] We read of him, sat, iii. l. 185, as observing great silence towards those who were his inferiors; but here we find him very lavish of his tongue when he is flattering the emperor. See l. 113.

Does not yield. Is not behindhand to the others in flattery.

not even to blind Catullus who spoke last.

124. O Bellona.] The supposed sister of Mars; she was fabled to preside over war—Virg. Æn. viii. 1. 703. describes her with a bloody scourge. Her priests, in the celebration of her feasts, used to cut themselves, and dance about as if they were mad, pretending also to divine or prophesy future events.

Estrus signifies a sort of fly, which we call a gad-fly; in the summer-time it bites or stings cattle, so as to make them run about as if they were mad. See Ving, G, iii. l. 146—53. By meton, inspired fury of any kind. Hence our poet humourously calls the spirit which inspired the priests of Bellona by this name. For fa-naticus—see sat. ii. l. 112.

—— Divines.] In flattery to Domitian, he treats the event of the turbot as something ominous, as if the taking it predicted some signal and glorious victory, the taking some monarch prisoner—perhaps Arviragus, then king of the Britons, with whom Domitian was at war, might be prefigured, as falling wounded from his chariot into the hands of the emperor.

127. Is foreign.] Therefore denotes some foreign conquest.

128. Spears, &c.] Sudes—properly signifies a stake—a pile driven into the ground in fortifications, also a spear barbed with iron.—Hence Exercizes, the fin of a fish. Ainsw.

q. d. Do you perceive his sharp fins rising on his back; they look

And the machine, and the boys snatched up to the coverings. Veiento does not yield: but as a fanatic stung with thy gad-fly,

O Bellona, divines, and says, "A great omen

"You have, of a great and illustrious triumph:

125

"You will take some king, or from a British chariot

" Arviragus will fall: the fish is foreign: do you perceive

" The spears erect on his back ?" This one thing was wanting To Fabricius, that he should tell the country of the turbot, and its

"What thinkest thou then?-Must it be cut?" "Far from it

" This disgrace," says Montanus; let a deep pot be prepared,

"Which, with its thin wall, may collect the spacious orb.

" A great and sudden Prometheus is due to the dish:

" Hasten quickly the clay, and the wheel: but now, from this "Time, Cæsar, let potters follow your camps."

135

like so many spears, and portend and signify the spears which you shall stick in the backs of vanquished foes.

129. Fabricius.] i. e. Fabricius Veiento. He was so diffuse in his harangue, that, in short, there wanted nothing but his telling where it was bred, and how old it was, to complete and establish his prophetic history of the fish.

130. What thinkest thou then? &c. The words of Domitian, who puts the original question for which he assembled these senators, 1. 72, viz. as no pot could be got large enough to dress the turbot in, that they should advise what was to be done; this they had said nothing about—therefore Domitian asks, if it should be cut in pieces.

131. Montanus. The glutton-See l. 107. He concludes the debate, with expressing a dislike of disfiguring this noble fish, by dividing it, and, at the same time, by flattering the emperor, and raising his vanity.

Let a deep pot. Testa-signifies a pot, or pan, made of clay. He advises that such a one be immediately made, deep and wide enough to hold the fish within its thin circumference, (tenui muro:) by this means the fish will be preserved entire, as in such a pot it might be dressed whole.

133. Prometheus, &c.] The poets feigned him to have formed men of clay, and to have put life into them by fire stolen from heaven. Juvenal humourously represents Montanus as calling for Prometheus himself, as it were, instantly to fashion a pot on so great an occasion, when so noble a fish was to be dressed, and that for so great a prince.

134. Hasten. That the fish may not be spoiled before it can be dressed.

--- The clay, and the wheel. Clay is the material, and a wheel, which is solid, and turns horizontally, the engine on which the potter makes his ware. This was very ancient. Jer. xviii. 3. 135. Let potters follow, &c.] This is a most ludicrous idea, and

Vicit digna viro sententia: noverat ille Luxuriam imperii veterem, noctesque Neronis Jam medias, aliamque famem, cum pulmo Falerno Arderet: nulli major fuit usus edendi Tempestate mea. Circeis nata forent, an Lucrinum ad saxum, Rutupinove edita fundo Ostrea, callebat primo deprendere morsu; Et semel aspecti littus dicebat echini. Surgitur, et misso proceres exire jubentur Concilio, quos Albanam dux magnus in arcem Traxerat attonitos, et festinare coactos, Tanquam de Cattis aliquid, torvisque Sicambris Dicturus: tanquam diversis partibus orbis Anxia præcipiti venisset epistola penna. Atque utinam his potius nugis tota illa dedisset 150

Illustresque animas inpune, et vindice nullo.

Sed periit, postquam cerdonibus esse timendus seems to carry with it a very sharp irony on Domitian, for having Tempora sævitiæ, claris quibus abstulit urbi called his council together on such a subject as this—but, however it might be meant, the known gluttony of Montanus, which is described, l. 136—43, made it pass for serious advice, and as such Domitian understood it, as the next words may inform us.

136. The opinion, &c.] What Montanus had said about dressing the fish whole, was thoroughly worthy his character; just what might have been expected from him, and as such prevailed.

— He had known, &c.] He was an old court glutton, and was well acquainted with the luxury of former emperors, here meant by —luxuriam imperii. No man understood eating, both in theory and practice, better than he did, that has lived in my time, says Juvenal.

137. Nero.] As Suetonius observes, used to protract his feasts from mid-day to mid-night.

138. Another hunger, &c.] i. e. What could raise a new and fresh appetite, after a drunken debauch.

140. Circai.] -orum. A town of Campania, in Italy, at the foot of mount Circello on the sea coast,

141. The Lucrine rock.] The Lucrine rocks were in the bay of Lucrinum, in Campania. All these places were famous for different sorts of oysters.

——Rutupian bottom.] Rutupæ-arum, Richburrow in Kent—Rutupina littora, the Foreland of Kent. The luxury of the Romans must be very great, to send for oysters at such a distance, when so many places on the shores of Italy afforded them.

143. Sea-urchin.] Echinus, a sort of crab with prickles on its shell, reckoned a great dainty. q. d. So skilled in eating was Montanus, that at the first bite of an oyster, or at the first sight of a crab, he could tell where they were taken.

The opinion, worthy the man, prevailed: he had known The old luxury of the empire, and the nights of Nero

Now half spent, and another hunger, when the lungs with Falernan

Burned: none had a greater experience in eating

In my time. Whether oysters were bred at Circæi, or At the Lucrine rock, or sent forth from the Rutupian bottom,

140

He knew well to discover at the first bite;

And told the shore of a sea-urchin once looked at.

They rise—and the senators are commanded to depart from the dismissed

Council, whom the great general into the Alban tower

145

150

Had drawn astonished, and compelled to hasten,

As if something concerning the Catti, and the fierce Sicambri He was about to say; as if from different parts of the world An alarming epistle had come with hasty wing.

And I wish that rather to these trifles he had given all those Times of cruelty, in which he took from the city, renowned, And illustrious lives, with impunity, and with no avenger.

But he perished, after that to be fear'd by cobblers

144. They rise.] Surgitur, imp. the council broke up. See l. 65, itur.

145. The great general.] Domitian, who gave the word of command for them to depart, as before to assemble.

—— Into the Alban tower.] To the palace at Alba, where the emperor now was. The word traxerat is very expressive, as if they had been dragged thither sorely against their wills.

146. Astonished—compelled, &c.] Amazed at the sudden summons, but dared not to delay a moment's obedience to it. Comp. l.

76.

147. Catti.] A people of Germany, now subject to the Land-grave of Hesse—Sicambri, inhabitants of Guelderland.—Both these people were formidable enemies.

149. An alarming epistle, &c.] Some sorrowful news had been dispatched post-haste from various parts of the empire.

Little could the senators imagine, that all was to end in a consultation upon a turbot.

The satire here is very fine, and represents Domitian as anxious about a matter of gluttony, as he could have been in affairs of the utmost importance to the Roman empire.

150. And I wish, &c.] i. e. It were to be wished that he had spent that time in such trifles as this, which he passed in acts of cruelty and murder, which he practised with impunity, on numbers of the greatest and best men in Rome, nobody daring to avenge their sufferings.

153. But he perished, &c.] Cerdo signifies any low mechanics, such as cobblers, and the like. Cerdonibus stands here for the rabble in general.

White Domitian only cut off, now and then, some of the nobles, the people were quiet, however amazed they might be, (comp. l. 77.)

Cœperat: hoc nocuit Lamiarum cæde madenti.

but when he extended his cruelties to the plebeians, means were devised to cut him off, which was done by a conspiracy formed against him. See Ant. Un. Hist. vol. xv. p. 87.

154. The Lamia. The Lamian family was most noble. See Hor. lib. iii. ode xvii. Of this was Ælius Lama, whose wife, Domitia Longina, Domitian took away, and afterwards put the husband

The Lamiæ, here, may stand for the nobles in general, (as before

He had begun: this hurt him reeking with slaughter of the Lamiæ.

the cerdones for the rabble in general,) who had perished under the cruelty of Domitian, and with whose blood he might be said to be reeking, from the quantity of it which he had shed during his reign.

He died ninety-six years after Christ, aged forty-four years, ten months, and twenty-six days. He reigned fifteen years and five days, and was succeeded by Nerva; a man very unlike him, being a good man, a good statesman, and a good soldier.

END OF THE FOURTH SATIRE.

SATIRA V.

ARGUMENT.

The Poet dissuades Trebius, a parasite, from frequenting the tables of the great, where he was certain to be treated with the utmost scorn and contempt. Juvenal then proceeds to stigmatize the

SI te propositi nondum pudet, atque eadem est mens, Ut bona summa putes aliena vivere quadra; Si potes illa pati, quæ nec Sarmentus iniquas Cæsaris ad mensas, nec vilis Galba tulisset, Quamvis jurato metuam tibi credere testi. Ventre nihil novi frugalius: hoc tamen ipsum Defecisse puta, quod inani sufficit alvo, Nulla Crepido vacat? nusquam pons, et tegetis pars Argument, line 1, Parasite.] From Taga, to, and Titos, corn—anciently signified an officer under the priests, who had the care of the sacred corn, and who was invited as a guest to eat part of the sacrifice. Afterwards it came to signify a sort of flatterer, a buffoon, who was invited to great men's tables by way of sport, and who, by coaxing and flattery, often got into favour. See sat. i. l. 139, and note.

1. Of your purpose.] Your determination to seek for admittance at the tables of the great, however ill you may be treated.

2. Highest happiness.] Summa bona.—Perhaps Juvenal here adverts to the various disputes among the philosophers about the summum bonum, or chief good of man. To inquire into this, was the design of Cicero in his celebrated five books De Finibus, wherein it is supposed all along, that man is capable of attaining the perfection of happiness in this life, and he is never directed to look beyond it; upon this principle, this parasite sought his chief happiness in the present gratification of his sensual appetite, at the tables of the rich and great.

——Another's trencher.] Quadra signifies, literally, a square trencher, from its form; but here, aliena vivere quadra, is to be taken metonymically, to signify—living at another's table—or at another's expense.

3. Sarmentus.] A Roman knight, who, by his flattery and buffeonery, insinuated himself into the favour of Augustus Cæsar, and ă

SATIRE V.

ARGUMENT.

insolence and luxury of the nobility, their treatment of their poor dependents, whom they almost suffer to starve, while they themselves fare deliciously.

IF you are not yet ashamed of your purpose, and your mind is the same,

That you can think it the highest happiness to live from another's trencher;

If you can suffer those things, which neither Sarmentus at the unequal

Tables of Cæsar, nor vile Galba could have borne,

I should be afraid to believe you as a witness, the upon oath.

I know nothing more frugal than the belly: yet suppose even that

To have failed, which suffices for an empty stomach,

Is there no hole vacant? no where a bridge? and part of a rug is there no note vacant: no where a bridge: and part of a rug often came to his table, where he bore all manner of scoffs and affronts. See Hon. lib. i. sat. v. l. 51, 2.

3—4. The unequal tables.] Those entertainments were called inique mense, where the same food and wine were not provided for the guests as for the master. This was often the case, when great men invited parasites, and people of a lower kind; they sat before them a coarser sort of food, and wine of an inferior kind.

4. Galba.] Such another in the time of Tiberius.

5. Afraid to believe.] q. d. If you can submit to such treatment as this, for no other reason than because you love eating and drinking, I shall think you so void of all right and honest principle, that I would not believe what you say, though it were upon oath.

6. Nothing more frugal.] The mere demands of nature are easily supplied-hunger wants not delicacies.

—— Suppose even that, &c.] However, suppose that a man has not wherewithal to procure even the little that nature wants to satisfy his hunger.

8. Is there no hole, &c.] Crepido—a hole or place by the highway, where beggars sit.

--- A bridge.] The bridges on the highways were common stands for beggars. Sat. iv. 116.

Dimidià brevior? tantine injuria cœnæ? Tam jejuna fames; cum possis honestius illic Et tremere, et sordes farris mordere canini?

10

Primo fige loco, quod tu discumbere jussus
Mercedem solidam veterum capis officiorum:
Fructus amicitiæ magnæ cibus: imputat hunc Rex,
Et quamvis rarum, tamen imputat. Ergo duos post
Si libuit menses neglectum adhibere clientem,
Tertia ne vacuo cessaret culcitra lecto,

15

 Shorter by the half. Teges—signifies a coarse rug, worn by beggars to keep them warm. q. d. Is no coarse rug, or even a bit of one, to be gotten to cover your nakedness?

- Is the injury of a supper, &c. Is it worth while to suffer the scoffs and affronts which you undergo at a great man's table? Do you prize these so highly as rather to endure them than be excluded ?—or than follow the method which I propose? Comp. l. 10, 11.-I should observe, that some are for interpreting injuria conz by injuriosa cœna: so Grangius, who refers to Virg. Æn. iii. 256, injuria eædis-pro-cæde injuriosa; but I cannot think that this comes up to the point, as the reader may see by consulting the passage, which the Delphin interpreter expounds by injuria cædis nobis illatæ-and so I conceive it ought to be; and if so, it is no precedent for changing injuria cœnæ into injuriosa cœna. However, it is certain that this is adopted in the Variorum edition of Schrevelius-Tantine tibi est injuriosa et contumeliosa cœna; ut propter eam turpissimum adulatorem velis agere, et tot mala, tot opprobria et contumelias potius perferre velis, quam mendicare? Lubin. To this purpose Marshall, Prateus, and others. Doubtless this gives an excellent sense to the passage; but then this is come at, by supposing that Juvenal says one thing and means another: for he says, injuria cone-literally, the injury of a supper—i. e. the injury sustained by Navolus, the indignity and affronts which he met with when he went to Virro's table. The poet asks-tantine injuria, not tantine cœnæ, meaning, as I conceive, a sarcasm on the parasite for his attendance where he was sure to undergo all manner of contempt and ill treatment, as though he were so abject as to prefer this, and hold it in high estimation, in comparison with the way of life which Juvenal recommends as more honourable. Hence the explanation of the passage which I have above given, appears to me to be most like the poet's meaning, as it exactly coincides with his manner of expression. I would lastly observe, that Prateus, Delph. edit. interprets—tantine injuria cœnæ? by—an tanti est contumelia convivii?

10. Is hunger so craving.] As to drive you into all this, when you might satisfy it in the more honourable way of begging?

More honestly.] With more reputation to yourself.

___ There.] At a stand for beggars.

.11. Tremble.] Shake with cold, kaving nothing but a part of a Shorter by the half? is the injury of a supper of so great value?

Is hunger so craving, when you might, more honestly, there

Both tremble, and gnaw the filth of dogs'-meat?

Fix in the first place, that you, bidden to sit down at table,

Receive a solid reward of old services:

Food is the fruit of great friendship: this the great man reckons,

And tho' rare, yet he reckons it. Therefore it, after two Months, he likes to invite a neglected client, rug to cover you, l. 8, 9. Or, at least, pretending it, in order to Lest the third pillow should be idle on an empty bed, move compassion.

11, Gnaw the filth, &c.] Far—literally signifies all manner of corn; also meal and flour—hence bread made thereof. A coarser sort was made for the common people, a coarser still was given to dogs. But perhaps the poet, by farris canini, means what was spoiled, and grown musty and hard, by keeping, only fit to be thrown to the dogs.

The substance of this passage seems to be this—viz. that the situation of a common beggar, who takes his stand to ask alms—though half naked—shaking with cold—and forced to satisfy his langer with old hard crusts, such as were given to the dogs, ought to be reckoned far more reputable, and therefore more eligible, than those abject and scandalous means, by which the parasite subsisted.

12. Fix, &c.] Fix it in your hand, as a certain thing, in the first place.

--- To sit down at table.] Discumbere—lit. means to lie down, as on a couch, after the manner of the Romans at their meals.

13. A solid reward.] Whatever services you may have rendered the great man, he thinks that an invitation to supper is a very solid and full recompence.

14. Food is the fruit, &c.] A meal's meat (as we say) is all you get by your friendly offices, but then they must have been very great. Or magnæ amicitiæ may mean, as in sat. iv. l. 74, 5. the friendship of a great man, the fruit of which is an invitation to

The great man reckons, &c.] Rex—lit. a king, is often used to denote any great and high personage. See sat. i. 136.—He sets it down to your account; however seldom you may be invited, yet he reckons it as a set-off against your services. Hunc relates to the preceding cibus.

17. Lest the third pillow, &c.] q. d. Only invites you to fill up a place at his table, which would be otherwise vacant.

In the Roman dining-room was a table in fashion of an half-moon, against the round part whereof they sat three beds, every one containing three persons, each of which had a (culcitra) pillow to lean upon: they were said, discumbere, to lie at meat upon a bed We say—sit at table, because we use chairs, on which we sit.

See Virg. Æn. i. 1. 712.—Toris jussi discumbere pictis.

Una simus, ait: votorum summa; quid ultra Quæris? habet Trebius, propter quod rumpere somnum
Debeat, et ligulas dimittere; sollicitus, ne
Tota salutatrix jam turba peregerit orbem
Sideribus dubiis, aut illo tempore, quo se
Frigida circumagunt pigri sarraca Boötæ.
Qualis cœna tamen? vinum quod succida nolit
Lana pati: de convivà Corybanta videbis.

25

20

18. "Let us be together," says he.] Supposed to be the words of some great man, inviting in a familiar way, the more to enchance the obligation.

The sum of your wishes.] The sum total of all your desires

-whiat can you think of farther?

Jurgia proludunt: sed mox et pocula torques

19. Trebius. The name of the parasite with whom Juvenal is supposed to be conversing.

For which he ought, &c.] Such a favour as this is sufficient to make him think that he ought, in return, to break his rest, to rise before day, to hurry himself to the great man's levee in such a man. Tras to forget to the his shoes; to run slip-shod, as it were, for fear he should seem tardy in paying his respects, by not getting there before the circle is completely formed, who meet to pay their compliments to the great man. See sat. iii. 127—30, where we find one of these early levees, and the hurry which people were in to get to them.

Ligula means not only a shoe-latchet, or shoe-tie, but any ligature which is necessary to tie any part of the dress; so a lace, or point

-ligula cruralis, a garter. Ainsw.

22. The stars dubious.] So early, that it is uncertain whether the little light there is, be from the stars, or from the first breaking of the morning.—"What is the night?"—"Almost at odds with "morning, which is which."—Shak. Macb. act III. sc. iv.

23. Bootes.] A constellation near the Ursa Major, or Great Bear—Gr. βοωτης—Lat. bubulcus, an herdsman—he that ploughs with oxen, or tends them. Called Bootes, from its attending, and seeming to drive on, the Ursa Major, which is in form of a wais drawn by oxen. Cic. Nat. Deor. lib. ii. 42, Arctophylax, vulgo qui dicitur esse Boötes, Quod quasi temone adjunctum præ se quatit Arctum.

Arctophylax, who commonly in Greek Is termed Boötes, because he drives before him The greater Bear, yoked (as it were) to a wain.

Arctophylax—from αρετος, a bear, and φυλαξ, a keeper. We call the Ursa Major—Charles's wain, (see Ainsw. Arctos,) seven stars being so disposed, that the first two represent the oxen, the other five represent a wain, or waggon, which they draw. Bootes seems to follow as the driver.

22-3. The cold wains] Sarraca, plur.—the wain consisting of

"Let us be together," says he .- It is the sum of your wisheswhat more

Do you seek? Trebius has that, for which he ought to break His sleep, and leave loose his shoe-ties; solicitous lest The whole saluting crowd should have finished the circle, The stars dubious, or at that time, in which the Cold wains of slow Bootes turn themselves round. Yet, what sort of a supper? wine which moist wool Wou'd not endure: from a guest you will see a Corybant. 25 They begin brawls; but presently you throw cups, many stars .- Frigida, cold-because of their proximity to the north pole, which, from thence, is called Arcticus polus. See AINSW.

23. Slow Bootes:

Sive est Arctophylax, sive est piger ille Boötes. --- Nunquid te pigra Boöte Plaustra vehunt. MARTIAL.

The epithet piger, so often applied to Bootes, may relate to the slowness of his motion round the north pole, his circuit being very small; or in reference to the slowness with which the neat-herd drives his ox-wain. Virg. Ecl. x. l. 19. Tardi venère bubulci. See Ovin. Met. lib. i. fab. i. l. 176, 7.

— Turn themselves round.] Not that they ever stand still, but they, and therefore their motion, can only be perceived in the nighttime.

This constellation appearing always above the horizon, is said by the poets never to descend into the sea.

Juvenal means, that Trebius would be forced out of his bed at break of day-stellis dubiis-see note on l. 22.-Or, perhaps, at that time, when Bootes, with his wain, would be to light him—i. c. while it was yet night:

" When Charles's wain is seen to roll

" Slowly about the north pole."

DUNSTER.

24. What sort, &c.] After all the pains which you may have taken to attend this great man's levee, in order to ingratiate yourself with him, and after the great honour which you think is done you by his invitation to supper-pray how are you treated? what kind of entertainment does he give you?

--- Wine, &c.] Wine that is so poor, that it is not fit to soak wool, in order to prepare it for receiving the dye, or good enough to scour the grease out of new-shorn wool. See Ainsw. Succidus.

25. A Corybant.] The Corybantes were priests of Cybele, and who danced about in a wild and frantic manner.

So this wine was so heady, and had such an effect on the guests who drank it, as to make them frantic, and turn them, as it were, into priests of Cybele, whose mad and strange gestures they imitated.

26. They begin brawls.] Or brawls begin .- Proludo (from pro and ludo) is to flourish, as fencers do, before they begin to play in

Saucius, et rubrà deterges vulnera mappà:
Inter vos quoties, libertorumque cohortem
Pugna Saguntinà fervet commissa lagenà?
Ipse capillato diffusum consule potat,
Calcatamque tenet bellis socialibus uvam,
Cardiaco nunquam cyathum missurus amico.
Cras hibet Albanis aliquid de montibus, aut de Setinis, cujus patriam, titulumque senectus
Delevit multà veteris fuligine testæ:
Quale coronati Thrasea, Helvidiusque bibebant,
Brutorum et Cassì natalibus. Ipse capaces Heliadum crustas, et inæquales beryllo good earnest—to begin, to commence. Brawls, or strifes of words, are begun by way of preludes to blows.

27. With a red napkin. Stained with the blood of the combatants. See Hon. lib. i. od. xxvii.

28. Troop of freedmen.] The liberti were those, who, of slaves, or bondmen, were made free: the great people had numbers of these about them, and they were very insolent and quarrelsome on these occasions.

29. Saguntine pot. Saguntum was a city of Spain, famous for its earthen ware.

This city was famous for holding out against Hannibal; rather than submit, they burnt themselves, their wives, and children. Pugnam committere, is a military term for engaging in fight.

30. He. Ipse—the patron himself,

--- What was racked.] Diffusum-poured, racked, or filled out, from the wine-vat into the cask.

--- When the consul, &c.] Capillato consule-In old time, when the consuls wore long hair. Ainsw. See sat. iv. 103.

31. Social wars.] The civil war, or the war of the allies, sometimes called the Marsian war, (of which, see Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. xiii. p. 34.) which broke out ninety years before Christ.—So that this wine must have been very old when this satire was written,

32. Cholicky.] Cardiaco—(a xaedia, cor.)—sick at heart—also one that is griped, or had a violent pain in the stomach. Good old wine is recommended by Celsus, as highly useful in such a complaint. Pliny says, lib. xxiii. c. 1. Cardiacorum morbo unicam spem in vino esse certum est.

But so selfish is this great man supposed to be, that he would not spare so much as a single cup of it to save one's life.

33. From the Alban mountains.] The Alban hills bore a pleasant grape, and the vines have not yet degenerated, for the vino Albano is still in great esteem.

34. The Setine. Setia, the city which gave name to these hills, lies not far from Terracina, in Campania.

35. Thick Mouldiness.] Multa-lit. much. See Arrsw. Multuz, No. 2.

Wounded, and wipe wounds with a red napkin.

How often, between you and a troop of freedmen,
Does the battle glow, which is fought with a Saguntine pot?

He drinks what was racked off when the consul wore long hair,
And possesses the grape trodden in the social wars,
Never about to send a cup [of it] to a cholicky friend.

To-morrow he'll drink something from the Alban mountains,
Or from the Setine, whose country, and title, old-age
Has blotted out, by the thick mouldiness of the old cask.

Such Thraseas and Helvidius drank, crowned,
On the birth-day of the Bruti and Cassius. Virro himself
Holds capacious pieces of the Heliades, and cups with beryl

Casks which are long kept in cellars contract a mouldiness, which so overspreads the outside, as to conceal every mark and character which may have been impressed on them—as where the wine grew, and the name (titulum) by which it is distinguished.

36. Thraseus—Helvidius.] Thraseas was son-in-law to Helvidius. They were both patriots, and opposers of Nero's tyranny. Thraseas bled to death by the command of Nero—Helvidius was banished.

—— Crowned.] The Romans in their carousals, on festival-days, were crowns or garlands of flowers upon their heads. See Hor.

lib. ii. od. vii. l. 7, 8. and 23-5.

37. Of the Bruti, &c.] In commemoration of Junius, and of Decius Brutus: the former of which expelled Tarquin the Proud; the latter delivered his country from the power of Julius Cæsar, by assassinating him in the senate-house. Cassius was also one of the conspirators and assassins of Cæsar. These men acted from a love of liberty, and therefore were remembered, especially in after-times of tyranny and oppression, with the highest honour. The best of wine was brought forth on the occasion.

The master of the feast—perhaps a fictitious name.

38. Pieces of the Heliades.] Drinking cups made of large pieces of amber. The Heliades (from ηλιος, the sun) were the daughters of Phæbus and Clymene, who, bewailing their Phaëton, were turned into poplar-trees: of whose tears came amber, which distilled continually from their branches. 'See Ov. Met. lib. i. fab. ii. and iii.

Inde sluunt lachrymæ: stillataque sole rigescunt De ramis electra novis: quæ lucidus amnis Excipit; et nuribus mittie gestanda Latinis.

FAB. iii.

— Holds.] Tenet—holds them in his hands when he drinks.
— Cups.] Phiala—means a gold cup, or beaker, to drink out of. Sometimes drinking cups, or vessels, made of glass. See Ainsw.
— Beryl.] A sort of precious stone, cut into pieces, which were inlaid in drinking cups, here said to be inæquales, from the inequality or roughness of the outward surface, owing to the protuberances of the pieces of beryl with which it was inlad.

Virro tenet phialas: tibi non committitur aurum;
Vel si quando datur, custos affixus ibidem,
Qui numeret gemmas, unguesque observet acutos:
Da veniam, præclara illic laudatur iaspis;
Nam Virro (ut multi) gemmas ad pocula transfert
A digitis; quas in vaginæ fronte solebat
Ponere zelotypo juvenis prælatus Hiarbæ.
45
Tu Benéventani sutoris nomen habentem
Siccabis calicem nasorum quatuor, ac jam
Quassatum, et rupto poscentem sulphura vitro.

Si stomachus domini fervet vinove cibove, Frigidior Geticis petitur decocta pruinis.

Con eadem vobis poni modo vina querebar?

Vos aliam potatis aquam. Tibi pocula cursor Gætulus dabit, aut nigri manus ossea Mauri,

39. Gold is not committed.] You are looked upon in too despicable a light, to be intrusted with any thing made of gold. But if this should happen, you will be narrowly watched, as if you were suspected to be capable of stealing it.

41. Who may count, &c. To see that none are missing.

Sharp nails.] Lest you should make use of them to pick out the precious stones with which the gold cup may be inlaid.

42. A bright jasper, &c.] Præclara, very bright or clear—is commended by all that see it, for its transparency and beauty, as well as for its size, therefore you must not take it ill that Virro is so watchful over it.

The jasper is a precious stone of a green colour; when large it was very valuable.

43, Virro (as many, &c.] The poet here censures the vanity and folly of the nobles, who took the gems out of their rings to ornament their drinking-cups—this, by the ut multi, seems to have been growing into a fashion.

44. Such as, in the front, &c. Alluding to Virg. Æn. iv. 1.

261, 2.

Atque illi stellatus Iäspide fulva

Virro had set in his cups such precious stones, as Æneas, whom Dido preferred as a suitor to Hiarbas, king of Getulia, had his sword decked with; among the rest, that sort of jasper, which though not yellow throughout, was sprinkled with drops of gold, which sparkled like stars, something like the appearance of the spots in the lapis lazuli.

By the frons vaginæ, we may understand the hilt of the sword, and upper part of the scabbard; for Virgil says ensis, and Juvenal, vaginæ.

47. The Beneventane cobbler, & c.] We read in Plaut. of nasiterna, a vessel with three handles; here one is mentioned of four handles, nasorum quatuer.—Perhaps it had four ears, or spouts, which

40

Unequal: to you gold is not committed:

Or if at any time it be given, a guard is fixed there,

Who may count the gems, and observe your sharp nails: Excuse it, for there a bright jasper is commended;

For Virro (as many do) transfers his gems to his cups

From his fingers; such as, in the front of his scabbard, The youth preferr'd to jealous Hiarbas used to put.

You shall drain a pot with four handles, having

The name of the Beneventane cobbler, and now Shattered, and requiring sulphur for the broken glass.

If the stomach of the master is hot with wine, or meat, Boiled [water] is sought, colder than Getic hoar-frosts.

Was I just now complaining that not the same wines were set before you?

You drink other water. To you the cups a Getulian Lackey will give, or the bony hand of a black Moor, stood out like noses. The cobbler of Beneventum was named Vatinius, and was remarkable for a large nose, as well as for being a drunkard.

Vilia sutoris calicem monumenta Vatini Accipe, sed nasus longror ille fuit. MART. lib. xiv. epigr. 96.

Hence those glass cups which had four noses, handles, or spouts, which resembled so many large noses, were called calices Vatiniani: as also because they were such as he used to drink out of.

48. Shattered.] So cracked as hardly to be fit for use.

— Sulphur for the broken glass.] It was the custom at Rome to change away broken glass for brimstone matches.

Qui pallentia sulfurata fractis Permutant vitreis.

MART. lib. i. epigr. 42.

And lib. x. epigr. 3.

Quæ sulfurato nolit empta ramento, Vatiniorum proxeneta fractorum, &c.

49. If the stomach of the master.] i. e. Of the master of the feast—the patron. If he finds any unusual heat in his stomach from what he eats or drinks. Comp. sat. iii. l. 233, 4.

50. Boiled water, &c.] Decocta.—It was an invention of Nero's to have water boiled, and then set in a glass vessel to cool, in heaps of snow, which the Romans had the art of preserving in caverns and places, like our ice-houses, in order to cool their liquors in the summer-time.

— Getic, &c.] The Getes were neighbours to the Scythians; their country was very cold, and their frosts exceedingly severe.

52. Other water.] While the master of the house regaled himself with this iced-water, his meaner guests had only common water to drink.

53-4. A Getulian lackey.] Not one of those delicate domestics, described 1. 56, but a low servant, a foot-boy, a mere runner of er-

Et cui per mediam nolis occurrere noctem, Clivosæ veheris dum per monimenta Latinæ. Flos Asiæ ante ipsum, pretio majore paratus Quam fuit et Tullî census pugnacis, et Anci; Et, ne te teneam, Romanorum omnia regum Frivola. Quod cum ita sit, tu Gætulum Ganymedem Respice, cum sities: nescit tot millibus emptus Pauperibus miscere puer : sed forma, sed ætas Digna supercilio. Quando ad te pervenit ille? Quando vocatus adest calidæ, gelidæve minister? Quippe indignatur veteri parere clienti; Quodque aliquid poscas, et quod se stante recumbas. MAXIMA QUÆQUE DOMUS SERVIS EST PLENA SUPERBIS. Ecce alius quanto porrexit murmure panem Vix fractum, solidæ jam mucida frusta farinæ, Quæ genuinum agitent, non admittentia morsum, rands. Or who, like a running footman, ran before his master's horses and carriages. Getulia was a country of Africa, where the inhabitants were blacks, or, as we call them, negroes.

53. The bony hand of a black Moor, &c.] Agreat, hideous, and raw-boned Moor, so frightful as to terrify people who should happen to meet with him in the night-time, when travelling among those mansions of the dead, which are in the Latin way. See sat. i. l. 171.—He might be taken for some hideous spectre that haunts the monuments.

56. A flower of Asia.] The master of the feast has for his cupbearer an Asiatic boy, beautiful, and blooming as a flower, and who had been purchased at an immense price. The poet here exhibits a striking contrast. Comp. l. 53.

57. Tullus and Ancus. The third and fourth of the Roman kings, whose whole fortunes did not amount to what Virro gave for this Asiatic boy.

58. Not to detain you, i. e. To be short, as we say. Comp.

sat. iii. l. 183.

— Trifles, &c.] The price given for this boy was so great, as to make the wealth of all the ancient Roman kings frivolous and trifling in comparison of it.

The poet means, by this, to set forth the degree of luxury and expense of the great men in Rome.

59. Ganymede.] The poet alludes to the beautiful cup-bearer of Jupiter, and humourously gives his name to the Getulian negro footboy, mentioned l. 52, 3.—Respice—look back at the Ganymede behind you, and call to him, if you want to be helped to some drink.

61. To mingle, &c.] It was the office of the cup-bearer to pour the wine into the cup in such proportion, or quantity, as every one chose.—This was called miscere. So MART. lib. xiii. epigr. 108.

And whom you would be unwilling to meet at midnight,

While you are carried thro' the monuments of the hilly Latin 55

A flower of Asia is before him, purchased at a greater price, Than was the estate of warlike Tullus, and of Ancus:

And, not to detain you, all the trifles of the Roman

Kings. Which since it is so, do thou the Getulian Ganymede

Look back upon, when you are thirsty: a boy bought for so 60 many Thousands knows not to mingle [wine] for the poor: but his form,

Are worthy disdain. When, does he come to you?

When, being called, does he attend [as] the minister of hot or cold

For he scorns to obey an old client;

And that you should ask for any thing, or that you should lie down, himself standing. 65

EVERY VERY GREAT HOUSE IS FULL OF PROUD SERVANTS. Behold, with what grumbling another has reached out bread, Hardly broken, pieces of solid meal already musty, Which will shake a grinder, not admitting a bite.

62. Worthy disdain. q. d. His youth and beauty justify his contempt: they deserve that he should despise such guests.

63. When does he attend-] Adest-lit. when is he present? As the minister. To serve you with—to help you to—cold or hot water. Both these the Romans, especially in winter-time, had at their feasts, that the guests might be served with either, as they might choose.

64. He scorns, &c. This smart favourite looks down with too much contempt on such a poor needy spunger, as he esteems an old hanger-on upon his master to be, to think of giving him what he calls for. He is affronted that such a one should presume to expect his attendance upon him, and that he should be standing at the table as a servant, while the client is lying down at his ease, as one of the

66. Every very great house, &c.] And, therefore, where can you find better treatment, than you do at Virro's, at any of the tables of the rich and great?

67. Has reached out, &c.] When you have called for bread, it has indeed been brought, but with what an ill-will have you been served-how has the slave that reached, or held it out for you to take, murmured at what he was doing!

68. Hardly broken.] With the utmost difficulty broken into pieces.

Of solid meal.] Grown into hard, solid lumps, by being so old and stale, and now grown mouldy.

69. Will shake a grinder.] Genuinus—from gena, the cheek—

Sed tener, et niveus, mollique siligine factus Servatur domino: dextram cohibere memento: Salva sit artoptæ reverentia: finge tamen te Improbulum; superest illic qui ponere cogat. Vin' tu consuctis, audax conviva, canistris' Impleri, panisque tui novisse colorem? Scilicet hoc fuerat, propter quod sæpe relicta Conjuge, per montem adversum, gelidasque cucurri Esquilias, fremeret sævå cum grandine vernus Jupiter, et multo stillaret penula nimbo. Aspice, quam longo distendat pectore lancem, what we call the grinders, are the teeth next the cheeks, which grind So far from being capable of being bitten, and thus divided, it would loosen a grinder to attempt it.

70. Soft flour. The finest flour, out of which the bran is entirely sifted, so that no hard substance is left.

71. To restrain, &c.] Don't let the sight of this fine white, and new bread, tempt you to filch it-mind to keep your hands to your-

72. The butler.] Artopta-Gr. agrowing-from agros, bread, and вятим, to bake—signifies one that bakes bread—a baker. Or artopta may be derived from agros, bread, and on rouns, to see i. e. an inspector of bread-a pantler, or butler-one who has the care and oversight of it. This I take to be the meaning here. q. d. Have all due respect to the dispenser of the bread; don't offend him by putting your hand into the wrong basket, and by taking some of the fine

——Suppose yourself, &c.] But suppose you are a little too bold, and that you make free with some of the fine bread, there's one remains upon the watch, who will soon make you lay it down again, and chide you for your presumption.

74. Wilt thou, &c.] The words of the butler on seeing the poor client filch a piece of the white bread, and on making him lay it down again.

--- The accustomed baskets. i. e. Those in which the coarse bread is usually kept—and do not mistake, if you please, white for brown.

75. Filled. Fed-satisfied.

76. Well, this has been, &c. The supposed words of Trebius, vexed at finding himself so ill repaid for all his services and attendances upon his patron. q. d. "So-this is what I have been toiling " for-for this I have got out of my warm bed, leaving my wife, at " all hours of the night, and in all weathers," &c.

77. The adverse mount.] The Esquiline hill had a very steep ascent, which made it troublesome to get up, if one were in haste It must be supposed to have lain in the parasite's way to his patron's house, and, by its steepness, to have been a hindrance to his speed.

But the tender and white, and made with soft flour, 70 Is kept for the master. Remember to restrain your right hand: Let reverence of the butler be safe.—Yet, suppose yourself A little knavish; there remains one who can compel you to lay it

"Wilt thou, impudent guest, from the accustomed baskets

"Be filled, and know the colour of your own bread?"

"Well, this has been that, for which often, my wife being left,

"I have run over the adverse mount, and the cold

"Esquiliæ, when the vernal air rattled with cruel

"Hail, and my cloak dropped with much rain."

See with how long a breast, a lobster, which is brought 80

75

Hence he calls it adversum montem. Adversus signifies oppositeadversum may mean, that it was opposite to the parasite's house.

77-8. The cold Æsquiliæ.] Its height made it very bleak and cold at the top, especially in bad weather. See sat. iii. l. 71.

78. The vernal air.] Vernus Jupiter—The Romans called the air Jupiter. See Hon. lib. i. od. i. l. 25 .- The air, in the spring of the year, is often fraught with storms of hail and rain, with which the poor parasite often got wet to the skin, in his nightly walks to attend on his patron.

"A pretty business, truly, to suffer all this for the sake of being "invited to supper, and then to be so treated!"

All this Juvenal represents as the treatment which Trebius would meet with, on being invited to Virro's house to supper-and as the mournful complaints which he would have to make on finding all his attendances and services so repaid—therefore Trebius was sadly mistaken in placing his happiness in living at the tables of the great, and in order to this to take so much pains. Comp. l. 2.

80. With how long a breast, &c.] Such a length is his chest, or forepart, as to fill the dish, so as to seem to stretch its size.

- A lobster. Squilla. It is hardly possible to say, with precision, what fish is here meant. Mr. Bowles translates it-a sturgeon, and says, in his note, "The authors, whom I have the op-"portunity to consult, are not agreed what fish is meant: I have translated it a sturgeon, I confess at random, but it may serve as "well." See trans. of Juv. by DRYDEN, and others.

AINSWORTH calls it a lobster without legs.

Hor. lib. ii. sat. viii. 412. seems to use squillas for prawns or shrimps.

Affertur squillas inter muræna natantes In patina porrecta.

In a large dish an out-stretch'd lamprey lies With shrimps all floating round.

FRANCIS.

Perhaps what we call a shrimp, or prawn, may be the pinnothera, or pinnophylax, of PLIN. iii. 42.—the squilla parva. The shrimp is a sort of lobster in miniature; and if we understand the word parva to distinguish it from the fish which is simply called Quæ fertur domino, squilla; et quibus undique septa Asparagis, quâ despiciat convivia caudâ, Cum venit excelsi manibus sublata ministri. Sed tibi dimidio constrictus Cammarus ovo Ponitur, exiguâ feralis cœna patellâ.

85

Ipse Venafrano piscem perfundit: at hic, qui Pallidus offertur misero tibi caulis, olebit Laternam; illud enim vestris datur alveolis, quod Canna Micipsarum prorâ subvexit acutâ; Propter quod Romæ cum Bocchare nemo lavatur; Quod tutos etiam facit a serpentibus Afros.

90

Mullus erit domino, quem misit Corsica, vel quem

squilla, the latter may probably signify a lobster, particularly here, from what is remarked of the tail (l. 82.) which is the most delicious part of a lobster.

81. Asparagus. Asparagis, plur. may here denote the young shoots, or buds, of various herbs.—See Ainsw. Asparagus, No. 2.

With these it was perhaps usual to garnish their dishes.

82. With what a tail, &c.] What a noble tail he displays—with what contempt does he seem to look down upon the rest of the banquet, when lifted on high, by a tall slave, over the heads of the guests, in order to be placed on the table.

84. A crab.] Caminarus—a sort of crab-fish, called also Gammarus—a very vile food, as we may imagine by its being opposed to the delicious squilla, which was set before the master of the feast.

—— Shrunk.] I think Holyday's rendering of constrictus nearest the sense of the word, which lit. signifies straitened—narrow.— Crabs, if kept long out of water, will waste and shrink up in the shell, and when boiled will be half full of water; so lobsters, as every day's experience evinces.

Farnaby explains it by semiphlenus-half-full, or spent, as he calls it, which conveys the same idea.

This sense also contrasts this fish with the plumpness of the foregoing. Comp. 1. 80—3.

— With half an egg.] To mix with it when you eat it—a poor allowance. Many construe constrictus in the sense of paratus—coctus—conditus, and the like—q. d.. dressed or seasoned with half an egg.

85. Funeral supper, &c.] The Romans used to place, in a small dish on the sepulchres of the dead, to appease their manes, milk, honey, water, wine, flowers, a very little of each; which circumstances, of the smallness of the dish and of the quantity, seem to be the reason of this allusion.

— A little platter.] Patella is itself a diminutive of patera; but the poet, to make the matter the more contemptible, adds exigua.

This is a contrast to the lancem, 1. 80.—which signifies a great broad plate—a deep dish to serve meat up in.

86. He. Virro, the master of the feast.

To the master, distends the dish, and with what asparagus

On all sides surrounded; with what a tail he can look down on the banquet,

When he comes borne aloft by the hands of a tall servant.

But to you is set a shrunk crab, with half an egg,

A funeral supper in a little platter.

85

90

He besmears his fish with Venafran (oil)—but this Pale cabbage, which is brought to miserable you, will smell

Of a lamp, for that is given for your saucers, which

A canoe of the Micipsæ brought over in its sharp prow.

For which reason, nobody at Rome bathes with a Bocchar, Which also makes the Africans safe from serpents.

A mullet will be for the master, which Corsica sent, or which 86. Venafran oil.] Venafrum was a city of Campania, famous for the best oil. Hor. lib. ii. od. vi. l. 15, 16.

87. Pale cabbage.] Sickly looking, as if it was half withered.
88. Your saucers.] Alveolus signifies any wooden vessel made

88. Your saucers.] Alveolus signifies any wooden vessel made hollow—here it may be understood of wooden trays, or saucers, in which the oil was brought, which was to be poured on the cabbage.

89. A canoe.] Canna—a small vessel made of the cane, or large reed; which grew to a great size and height, and which was a principal material in building the African canoes.

— Micipsæ.] It seems to have been a general name given to all the Numidians, from Micipsa, one of their kings. These were a barbarous people on the shore of Africa, near Algiers, from whence came the oil which the Romans used in their lamps.

Sharp prow.] Alluding to the shape of the African canoes, which were very sharp-beaked.

90. Bocchar.] Or Bocchor—a Mauritanian name, but here, probably, for any African. This was the name of one of their kings, and hence the poet takes occasion to mention it, as if he said, that "the Numidians and Moors, who anointed themselves with this oil, stunk so excessively, that nobody at Rome would go into the same bath with one of them; no, though it were king Bocchar himself."

91. Sufe from serpents.] So horrid is the smell of these Africans, that, in their own country, their serpents would not come near them. "What then must you endure, in having this same oil to "pour on your cabbage, while you have the mortification of seeing "your patron soak his fish with the fine and sweet oil of Vena-"frum!—I should think this another instance of that sort of treat-"ment, which should abate your rage of being invited to the table "of a great man."

92. A mullet. See sat. iv. 15, and note.

— The master.] Virro, the master of the feast.

— Corsica sent.] Which came from Corsica, an island in the Mediterranean, famous perhaps for this sort of fish.

Taurominitanæ rupes, quando omne peractum est, Et jam defecit nostrum mare; dum gula sævit. Retibus assiduis penitus scrutante macello Proxima; nec patitur Tyrrhenum crescere piscem: Instruit ergo focum provincia; sumitur illinc Quod captator emat Lenas, Aurelia vendat.

Virroni muræna datur, quæ maxima venit Gurgite de Siculo: nam dum se continct Auster, Dum sedet, et siccat madidas in carcere pennas, Contemnunt mediam temeraria lina Charybdim. Vos anguilla manet, longæ cognata colubræ, Aut glacie aspersus maculis Tiberinus, et ipse Vernula riparum, pinguis torrente cloaca,

100

105

93. Taurominitinian rocks. On the sea-coast, near Taurominium, in Sicily.

—— Our sea is exhausted, &c.] Such is the luxury and gluttony of the great, that there is now no more fine fish to be caught at home.

94. While the appetite, &c.] While gluttony is at such an height, as not to be satisfied without such dainties.

95. The market. The market-people who deal in fish, and who supply great tables.

- With assiduous nets, &c. Are incessantly fishing in the neighbouring seas, upon our own coasts, leaving no part unsearched, that they may supply the market.

96. A Tyrrhene fish.] The Tyrrhene sea was that part of the Mediterranean which washes the southern parts of Italy.

So greedy were the Roman nobility of delicate fish, and they were caught in such numbers, that they were not suffered to grow to their proper size.

97. Therefore a province, &c. They were forced, therefore, to go to the coasts of some of the foreign provinces, which were subject to the Romans, in order to catch such fish as they wanted for the kitchens of the nobles. Comp. sat. iv. 66, and note.

--- From thence. From some of the foreign coasts.

98. What the wheedler Lenas, &c.] Some famous captator, or legacy hunter, one of the people called hæredipetæ, who courted and made presents to the rich and childless, in hopes to become their heirs: they also took care to buy whatever was rare and curious for this purpose.

- Aurelia sell. This may probably be the name of some famous dealer in fine fish. The commentators suppose also, that this might have been the name of some rich childless widow, who had so many presents of fine fish, that she could not dispose of them to her own use, and therefore sold them, that they might not be spoiled and thrown away.

99. To Virro a lamprey is given.] i. e. Is given him to eat-is set before him at table.

The Taurominitinian rocks, since all our sea is exhausted, And now has failed: while the appetite rages, The market, with assiduous nets, is searching thoroughly 95 The neighbouring (seas,) nor suffers a Tyrrhene fish to grow: Therefore a province furnishes the kitchen: from thence is taken What the wheedler Lenas might buy, Aurelia sell.

To Virro a lamprey is given, the largest that came From the Sicilian gulph: for while the south contains itself, 100 While it rests, and in its prison dries its wet wings, The rash nets despise the middle of Charybdis. An eel remains for you, a relation of a long snake; Or a Tiberine sprinkled with spots by the ice, and that An attendant of the banks, fat with the rushing common-sewer, 105

100. The Sicilian gulph.] That part of the sea which formed the Straits of Sicily, which, at times, was most formidable and dangerous, especially with a strong wind from the south. But, by what follows, f. 102, the dreadful whirlpool of Charybdis seems to be incant; where, in fine weather, the fishermen would venture to go, and fish for lampreys.

101. It rests. Refrains from blowing—is perfectly quiet. In its prison, &c.] Alluding to VIRG. Æn. i. l. 56-8.

--- Vasto rex Æolus antro Luctantes ventos tempestatesque sonoras. Imperio premit, ac vinc'lis et carcere frænat.

___ Its wet wings.] It was usually attended with heavy rains and storms.

102. The rash nets.] Lina—see sat. iv. l. 45. Lina here means the persons who use the nets—the fishermen. METON.—They would, in calm weather, despise the danger of Charybdis itself, in order to catch the fish which lay within it, so good a market were they sure to have for what they caught. Charybdis was a dangerous whirlpool in the Straits of Sicily, near the coast of Taurominium, over against Scylla, a dreadful rock. See Virg. Æn. iii. 414—32. 103. An eel, &c.] The contrast between Virro's fine lamprey, and Trebius's filthy eel, is well imagined.

- Relation of a long snake.] Perhaps we are to understand the eel and snake to appear as related, from the likeness of their form. Some have supposed, that eels and water-snakes will engender together.

104. A Tiberine.] Tiberinus, i. e. piscis-a pike, or some other fish, out of the river Tiber.

Unde datum sentis, Lupus hic Tiberinus-Hor. lib. ii. sat. ii. 1. 31.

Some common, coarse, and ordinary fish is here meant, which, in the winter-time, when the Tiber was frozen, contracted spots, perhaps from some disorder to which it might be liable-this was reckoned the worst sort of pike.

105. An attendant, &c.] Vernula-lit, signifies a little bond-

Et solitus mediæ cryptam penetrare Suburræ.

Ipsi pauca velim, facilem si præbeat aurem:
Nemo petit, modicis quæ mittebantur amicis
A Senecâ; quæ Piso bonus, quæ Cotta solebat
Largiri: namque et titulis, et fascibus olim
Major habebatur donandi gloria: solum
Poscimus, ut cænes civiliter: hoc face, et esto,
Esto (ut nunc multi) dives tibi, pauper amicis.

Anseris ante ipsum magni jecur, anseribus par Altilis, et flavi dignus ferro Meleagri Fumat aper: post hunc raduntur tubera, si ver 110 slave, or servant. Hence this fish is so called, from its constant attendance on the banks of the river, in some of the holes of which it was usually found.

115

105. Fat, &c.] From this circumstance, one would be inclined to think that a pike is here meant, which is a voracious, foul-feeding fish. Juvenal, to carry on his description of the treatment which Trebius must expect at a great man's table, adds this circumstance—that the fish set before Trebius would be a pike, that of the worst sort, and fatted with the filthy contents of the common-sewer, into which the ordure and nastiness of the city were conveyed, and which ran under the Suburra, down to the Tiber, and there emptied itself into the river.

106. Accustomed to penetrate, &c.] This fish is supposed to enter the mouth of the drain, that it might meet the filth in its way, and feed upon it. For Suburra—see sat. iii. 5.

107. To himself, &c.] To Virro the master of the feast. Ipsi pauca velim—like Ter. And. act I. sc. i. l. 2. paucis te volo—a word with you. COLMAN.

109. Seneca.] L. Annæus Seneca, the tutor of Nero; he was very rich, and very munificent towards his poor clients. See sat. x.

16. where Juvenal styles him prædives-very rich.

—— Piso.] L. Calphurnius Piso, one of the Calphurnian family descended from Numa; he lived in the time of Claudius, and was famous for his liberality. Hor. Ar. Poet. 291, 2. addressing the Pisones, says—Vos O Pompilius sanguis.

- Cotta.] Aurelius Cotta, another munificent character in the time of Nero.

110. Titles and offices, &c.] High titles of nobility, or the en-signs of magistracy. See sat. iii. 128, note.

112. That you would sup civilly.] Civiliter—courteously—with so much good manners towards your poor friends, as not to affront and distress them, by the difference you make between them and yourself when you invite them to supper.

- Do this.] Consult the rulers of civility, and then you will accommodate yourself to the condition of your guests.

113. Be, as many now are, &c.] When you sup alone, then, as many are, be—dives tibi, i. e. fare as expensively and as sumptu-

And accustomed to penetrate the drain of the Suburra.

I would say a few words to himself, if he would lend an easy."

Nobody seeks, what were sent to his mean friends

By Seneca; what good Piso, what Cotta used

To bestow: for, than both titles and offices, formerly,

110

Greater was the glory of giving esteemed: only

We ask that you would sup civilly: do this, and be,

Be (as many now are) rich to yourself, poor to your friends. Before himself (is placed) the liver of a great goose: equal to geese,

A crammed fowl, and, worthy the spear of yellow Meleager, Smokes a boar: after him truffles are scraped, if then ously as you please; spare no expense to gratify yourself. when you invite your poor friends, then fare as they do: if you treat them as poor and mean, so treat yourself, that you and they may be upon the same footing—thus be pauper amicis.

q. d. This is all we ask: we don't require of you the munificence of Seneca, Piso, Cotta, or any of those great and generous patrons, who esteemed a service done, or a kindness bestowed, on their poor friends, beyond the glory of titles of nobility, or of high offices in the state; this, perhaps, might be going too far-therefore, we desire no more, than that, when you invite us, you would treat us civilly at least, if not sumptuously; fare as we fare, and we shall be content.

This little apostrophe to Virro contains a humourous, and, at the same time, a sharp reproof of the want of generosity, and of the indignity with which the rich and great treated their poorer friends.

114. Before himself.] i. e. Before Virro himself

- The liver, &c. This was reckoned a great dainty; and in order to increase the size of the liver, they fatted the goose with figs, mixed up with water, wine, and honey; of this a sort of paste was made, with which they crammed them until the liver grew to a very large size. See Pers. vi. l. 71. Hor. lib. ii. sat. viii. l. 88. and MART. epigr. lviii. lib. xiii.

Aspice quam tumeat magno jecur ansere majus.

115. A crammed fowl. Altilis—from alo-ere—fatted, fed, crammed. Probably a fat capon is here meant, which grows to a large size; Juvenal says here, equal in size to geese-par anseribus.

- Yellow, &c.] Yellow-haired .- See Ainsw. - The story of Meleager.

Golden-haired. Holyday.—See Virg. Æn. iv. 698. Hor. lib. iii. od. ix. l. 19. lib. iv. od. iv. l. 4.

116. Smokes a boar. See sat. i. 140, 1.

After him, &c. The next dish, which comes after the boar, is composed of truffles—tuber signifies a puff, or what we call a toadstool, from tumeo, to swell-but it seems to denote mushrooins, truffles, and other fungous plants, which are produced from the earth. Tubera terræ, sat. xiv. 7.

Tunc erit, et facient optata tonitrua cœnas
Majores; tibi habe frumentum, Alledius inquit,
O Libya, disjunge boves, dum tubera mittas.
Structorem interea, ne qua indignatio desit,
Saltantem spectes, et chironomonta volanti
Cultello, donec peragat dictata magistri
Omnia; nec minimo sane discrimine refert,
Quo gestu lepores, et quo gallina secetur.
Ducêris plantâ, velut ictus ab Hercule Cacus,
Et ponêre foris, si quid tentaveris unquam
Hiscere, tanquam habeas tria nomina. Quando propinat
Virro tibi, sumitque tuis contacta labellis
Pocula? quis vestrûm temerarius usque adeo, quis

Here some understand truffles, others mushrooms; which last, rainy and thundering springs produce in abundance, and therefore were desired. But the same weather may also have the same effect on truffles, which are a sort of subterraneous mushroom, and so on all fungous excrescences of the earth. PLIN. xix.

117-18. Make suppers greater.]. By a plentiful addition of truffles.

118. Alledius.] Some famous glutton.—Rome was supplied with great quantities of corn from Libya, a part of Africa, which borders upon Ægypt; "and, it should seem," (says Mr. Brown,) "with mushrooms too." See Dryden's Juv. note on this place. However, from the circumstance of their being brought from Libya to Rome, I should apprehend that species of "under-ground edible" mushrooms" (as Bradley calls truffles) to be meant here, which grow best in dry chapped grounds, and will bear to be carried a great way, and to be kept a considerable time without being spoiled.—This is not the case with that species of tuber which is called boletus, or mushroom; they remain good but a little while, either growing or gathered. Hence, upon the whole, and from the circumstance of the word raduntur, l. 116, which may imply the scraping, or shaving off, the outward thick bark, or rind, which is peculiar to truffles, these are most probably meant in this passage. See Chambers. Truffle.

119. Unyoke your oxen.] Disjunge—lit. disjoin them. q. d. Plough and sow no more, that there may be the more land for truf-fles to grow. A fine speech for an epicure.

120. The carver.] Structor signifies a purveyor of victuals, a caterer; also a server, who setteth the meat upon the table—also a carver of meat:—this last seems to be meant here, and he is supposed to do it with some antic gestures, something like capering or dancing.

121 Flourishing.] Chironomon-ontis from 2012, manus, and vouces, lex) signifies one that sheweth nimble motions with his hands—hence chironomia, a kind of gesture with the hands, either in dancing, or in carving meat. Alnsw. Chironomonta is from the acc, sing. (Gr.

It be spring, and wished-for thunders make suppers Greater:—" Have thy corn to thyself," says Alledius,
"O Libya, unyoke your oxen, while you will send truffles."
Mean while the carver, lest any indignation be wanting,
You will behold dancing, and flourishing with a nimble Knife, till he can finish all the dictates of his Master; nor indeed is it a matter of the least concern,
With what gesture hares, and with what a hen should be cut,
You will be dragged by the foot, as the stricken Cacus by cules,

125

And put out of doors, if you ever attempt
To mutter, as if you had three names.—When does Virro Drink to you, and take the cup touched by your Lips? which of you is rash enough, who so χειζονομεντα) of the participle of the verb χειζονομέω—manus certalege motito-concinnos gestus edo-gesticulor.

q. d. That nothing may be wanting to mortify and vex you, you not only see all these fine things brought to table, but you will be a spectator of the festivity, art, and nimbleness, with which the carver does his office, till he has exhibited all that he has learned of his master in the art of carving. See the next note, ad fin. Dictata—See Ainsw.

123. Nor indeed is it a matter, &c.] It is now by no means reckoned an indifferent matter, or of small concern, in what manner, or with what gesture, a hare or a fowl is cut up; this, as well as gluttony itself, is become a science. This was so much the case, that we find people taking great pains to learn it under a master. See sat. xi. 1. 136—41.

126-7. If you ever attempt to mutter.] Hiscere—so much as to open your mouth, as it were, to speak upon the occasion, as betraying any dislike.

127. Three names.] i. e. As if you were a man of quality. The great men at Rome were distinguished by the prænomen, nomen, and cognomen, as Gaius Cornelius Scipio—Caius Marcus Coriolanus, and the like.

If you were to take upon you, like a nobleman, to complain or find fault with all this, you would be dragged with your heels foremost, and turned out of doors, as the robber Cacus was by Hercules. See Virg. Æn. viii. 219-65.

127—8. When does Virro drink to you.] The poet, having particularized instances of contempt, which were put upon the poorer guests, such as having bad meat and drink set before them, &c. here mentions the neglectful treatment which they meet with.

mentions the neglectful treatment which they meet with.

q. d. Does Virro ever drink your health"—or "does he ever take "the cup out of your hand in order to pledge you, after it has "once touched your lips?"—By this we may observe, that drinking to one another is very ancient.

129. Is rash enough, &c.] After all the pains which you take to Perditus, ut dicat regi, bibe? Plurima sunt quas

Non audent homines pertusà dicere lænà.
Quadringenta tibi si quis Deus, aut similis Dîs,
Et melior fatis, donaret; homuncio, quantus
Ex nihilo fieres! quantus Virronis amicus!
Da Trebio, pone ad Trebium: vis, frater, ab istis Ilibus? O Nummi, vobis hunc præstat honorem;
Vos estis fratres. Dominus tamen, et domini rex
Si vis tu fieri, nullus tibi parvulus aulà
Luserit Æneas, nec filia dulcior illo.
Jucundum et carum sterilis facit uxor amicum.

Sed tue nunc Micela periat licet, et pueres tree.

Sed tua nunc Micale pariat licet, et pueros tres In gremium patris fundat simul; ipse loquaci Gaudebit nido; viridem thoraca jubebit Afferri, minimasque nuces, assemque rogatum, be invited to great tables, is there one of you who dares venture to open his mouth to the great man, so much as to say—"drink"—as if you had some familiarity with him? As we should say—"put "the bottle about."

130. The great man. Regi-see before, l. 14.

132. Four hundred sestertia.] A knight's estate. See sat. i. l. 106, and note.

133. Better than the fates.] i. e. Better and kinder than the fates have been to you, in making you so poor.

—— Poor mortal. Homuncio means a poor sorry fellow—such was Trebius in his present state.

134. From nothing, &c.] The poet here satirizes the venality and profligate meanness of such people as Virro, whose insolence and contempt towards their poor clients, he has given us so many striking examples of. Here he shews the change of conduct towards them, which would be created immediately, if one of them should happen to become rich.

135 Give to Trebius, &c.] Then, says he, if you were invited to sup with Virro, nothing would be thought too good—you would be offered every choicest dainty upon the table, and the servants would be ordered to set it before you.

of which some very choice and dainty dishes were made; as of the goose's liver, and the like—see l. 114. He would in the most kind manner call you brother, and invite you to taste of the most delicate dainties.

Oriches! & c.] A natural exclamation on the occasion, by which he gives Trebius to understand, that all this attention was not paid to him on his own account, but solely on that of his money. See sat. i. l. 112, 3.

137. Ye are brethren. Ye, O ye four hundred sestertia, are the friends and brethren of Virro, to whom he pays his court. When he called Trebius brother, (l. 135.) he really meant you.

140

Desperate, as to say to the great man-drink? Many things there are,

Which men in a torn coat dare not say.

If to you four hundred (sestertia) any god, or one like the gods, And better than the fates, should present; poor mortal, how great

From nothing would you become! how great a friend of Virro!

From nothing would you become! how great a friend of Virro!

Give to Trebius—set before Trebius:—would you have, brother, some

135

"Of those dainties?"—O riches! he gives this honour to you—Ye are brethren. But if a lord, and sovereign of a lord

You would become, in your hall no little

Æneas must play, nor a daughter sweeter than he.

A barren wife makes a pleasant and dear friend.

But tho' your Micale should bring forth, and should pour

Three boys together into the bosom of their father, he in the prattling

Nest will rejoice; he'll command a green stomacher

To be brought, and small nuts, and the asked-for penny,

137. And sovereign of a lord, &c.] If you would be in a situation, not only of domineering over poor clients, but even over the lords of those clients—you must be childless, you must have neither son nor daughter to inherit your estate.

138. In your hall, &c.] See Dido's words to Æneas. VIRG.

Æn. iv. l. 328, 9,

Si quis mihi parvulus aula Luserit Æneas.

Which Juvenal applies on this occasion very humourously.

140. Abarren vife, &c.] While a wife remains without child-bearing, so that there is no ostensible heir to the estate, the husband will not want for people who will pay their court to him, and profess themselves his friends, in hopes of ingratiating themselves, so far as to be made his heirs.

141. But the your Micale. The name of Trebius's wife. -

q.d. But suppose it to happen otherwise, and your wife should not only have children, but bring you three at a birth—still as you are rich, they'll pay their court to you, by fondling your little ones. He, Virro himself, (ipse,) will pretend to rejoice in your young family—nido—a metaphorical expression, taken from a brood of young birds in a nest.

143. A green stomacher. Viridem thoraca—lit. breastplate.—What this was, cannot easily be determined, but it was, doubtless, some ornament which children were pleased with.

144. Small nuts.] Nuces—lit. signifies nuts: but here it denotes little balls of ivory, and round pebbles, which were the usual playthings of children; and which to ingratiate themselves with the parents, such mercenary persons as had a design upon their fortunes used to make presents of. See Hor. lib. ii. sat. iii. l. 171, 2. Francis' note; and Pers. sat. 1. l. 10.

VOL. I.

155

Ad mensam quoties parasitus venerit infans.

Vilibus ancipites fungi ponentur amicis,
Boletus domino; sed qualem Claudius edit,
Ante illum uxoris, post quem nihil amplius edit.
Virro sibi, et reliquis Virronibus illa jubebit
Poma dari, quorum solo pascaris odore;
Qualia perpetuus Phæacum autumnus habebat;
Credere quæ possis surrepta sororibus Afris.
Tu scabie frueris mali, quod in aggere rodit
Qui tegitur parmâ et galeâ; metuensque flagelli

144. The asked-for penny.] The as was about three farthings of our money. We are to suppose the little ones, children-like, to ask Virro for a small piece of money to buy fruit, cakes, &c. which he immediately gives them.

145. As often as, &c.] Virro not only goes to see the children, but invites them to his table, where they never come but they wheedle and coax him, in order to get what they want of him. Hence the poet says-Parasitus infans.

146. Doubtfut funguses.] There are several species of the mush-room-kind, some of which are poisonous, and it is sometimes difficult to distinguish them, therefore the eater cannot be certain that he is safe—hence Juvenal says, ancipites fungi.

Discit ab hirsuto jaculum torquere Capellà.

It is to be observed, that the poet, after his digression on the mean venality of such people as Virro, (who would pay their court to those whom they now use with the utmost contempt, if by any accident they became rich,) now returns to his main subject, which was to particularize those instances of ill treatment which the dependents on great men experienced at their tables, in order to dissuade Trebius from his present servile pursuits.

147. A mushroom. Boletus signifies a mushroom of the wholesome and best sort.

—— But such as, &c.] They were not only of the best sort, but the best of that sort; such as regaled the emperor Claudius, before the fatal catastrophe after mentioned.

148. That of his wife.] Agrippina, the mother of Nero, and sister to Caligula, the wife of Claudius, who succeeded Caligula in the empire, destroyed her husband, by mixing poison in a mushroom which she gave him to eat.

149. The rest of the Virros.] i. e. The rest of the great men at his table, who, like Virro, were very rich, and of course much respected by him.

150. Apples.] Poma is a general name for fruits of all kinds which grow on trees, as apples, pears, cherries, &c. and signifies, here, some of the most delicious fruits imaginable—which poor Trebius was to be regaled with nothing but the smell of at Virro's table.

151. Phaacians.] A people of the island of Corfu, or Corcyra,

As often as the infant-parasite comes to his table.

Doubtful funguses are put to mean friends,

A mushroom to the lord; but such as Claudius ate

Before that of his wife, after which he ate nothing more.

Virro will order to himself, and the rest of the Virros, those Apples to be given, with the odour alone of which you may be 150

Such as the perpetual autumn of the Phæacians had;

Which you might believe to be stolen from the African sisters. You will enjoy the scab of an apple, which in a trench he gnaws

Who is covered with a shield and helmet, and, fearing the whip, 155

Learns from the rough Capella to throw a dart.

in the Ionian sea, where there was feigned to be a perpetual autumn, abounding with the choicest fruits.

152. The African sisters.] Meaning the Hesperides, Ægle, Heretusa, Hespertusa, the three daughters of Hesperus, brother of Atlas, king of Mauritania, who are feigned to have had orchards in Africa, which produced golden fruit, kept by a watchful dragon, which Hercules slew, and obtained the prize.

153. The scab of an apple.] While Virro and his rich guests have before them fruits of the most fragrant and beautiful kinds, you, Trebius, and such as you, will be to enjoy scabby, specky, rotten apples, and such other fruit as a poor half-starved soldier in a fortress, who is glad of any thing he can get, is forced to take up with.

154. Fearing the whip. Being under severe discipline.

155. Learns-to throw, &c. Is training for arms, and learning to throw the javelin.

From the rough Capella.] This was probably the name of some centurion, or other officer, who, like our adjutant or scripeant, taught the young recruits their exercise, and stood over them with a twig or young shoot of a vine, (which flagellum sometimes signifies, see AINSW.) and with which they corrected them if they did amiss. See sat. viii. l. 247, 8, and note.

The epithet hirsuto, here, may intimate the appearance of this centurion, either from his dress, or from his person. As to the first, we may observe, that the soldiers were a sort of hair-cloth, or rough garment, made of goat's hair.—Virgit, G. iii. 311-13, says, that the shepherds shaved the beards of the he-goats for the service of the camps, and for coverings of mariners:

Nec minus interea barbas, incanaque menta Cyniphii tondent hirci, setasque comantes, Usum in castrorum, et miseris velamina nautis.

Usum in castrorum-may mean, here, coverings for the tents, but also (as Ruæus observes) hair cloths for the soldiers garments, as well as for those of mariners.

The roughness of his person must appear from the hairiness of its appearance-from the beard which he wore, from the neglected hair

Forsitan impensæ Virronem parcere credas: Hoc agit, ut doleas: nam quæ comædia-mimus Quis melior plorante gulà? ergo omnia fiunt, Si nescis, ut per lachrymas effundere bilem Cogaris, pressoque diu stridere molari. Tu tibi liber homo, et regis conviva videris; Captum te nidore suæ putat ille culinæ: Nec male conjectat: quis enim tam nudus, ut illum Bis ferat, Hetruscum puero si contigit aurum, Vel nodus tantum, et signum de paupere loro? Spes bene cœnandi vos decipit: ecce dahit jam Semesum leporem, atque aliquid de clunibus apri:

169

165

of his head, and, in short, from the general hairiness of his whole body. See sat, ii. l. 11, 12. and sat. xiv. l. 194, 5.

Sed caput intactum buxo, naresque pilosas Annotet, et grandes miretur Lælius alas.

Ad nos jam veniet minor altilis; inde parato,

This passage of Juvenal has been the occasion of various conjectures among commentators, which the reader may find in Holyday's note, who himself seems to have adopted the least probable. reading hirsuto Capella as the name and description of some person, appears to me, as it does to Marshal and others, the most simple and natural,

156. Perhaps you may think.] The poet, with much archness, and, at the same time, with due severity, concludes this Satire by setting the behaviour of the patron, as well as that of the parasite, in its true light, and, from thence, endeavours to shame Trebius out ei his mean submission to the indignities which he has to expect, if he pursues his plan of attending the tables of the great. A useful lesson is to be drawn from hence by all who affect an intimacy with. their superiors, and who, rather than not have the reputation of it, submit to the most insolent treatment; not seeing that every affront which they are forced to endure is only an earnest of still.

Virro spares, &c. Perhaps you will set all this down to a principle of parsimony in the great man, and that, to save expense, Virro lets you fare so ill—but you are mistaken.

157. He does this, &c.] All this is done, (ergo omnia fiunt,

1. 158.) first to yex you, and then to laugh at you.

- For what comedy, &c. There can be no higher comedy, or any buffoon or jester (mimus) more laughable, than a disappointed glutton (gula, lit. throat) bemoaning himself (plorante) with tears of anger and resentment at such ill fare, and gnashing and grating his teeth together, having nothing to put between them to keep them asunder.—This, if you know it not already, I now tell you, to be the motive of Virro's treatment of you, when he sends for you to sup with him.

Perhaps you may think Virro spares expense: He does this that you may grieve: for what comedy-what Mimic is better, than deploring gluttony? therefore all is done, If you know not, that by tears to pour forth vexation

You may be compell'd, and long to creek with a press'd grinder. 160 You seem to yourself a free man, and a guest of the great man; He thinks you are taken with the smell of his kitchen, Nor does he guess badly; for who so naked, that would Bear him twice if the Etruscan gold befel him when a boy, Or the nodus only, and the mark from the poor strap? The hope of supping well deceives you: "Lo-now he will give "An half-eaten hare, or something from the buttocks of a boar:

"To us will now come the lesser fat fowl"—then with prepared.

161. A free man, &c. A gentleman at large—as we say—and think that you are a fit guest for a rich man's table, and that, as such, Virro invites you.

162. He thinks, &c.] He knows you well enough, to suppose that you have no other view in coming but to gormandize, and that therefore the scent of his kitchen alone is what brings you to his house: in this he does not guess amiss, for this is certainly the case. Nidor signifies the savour of any thing roasted or burnt.

163. For who so naked, &c.] So destitute of all things, as after once being so used, would submit to it a second time? This plainly indicates your mean and sordid motives for coming.

164. If the Etruscan gold, &c.] The golden boss, or bulla, brought in among the Romans by the Etrurians, was permitted, at first, only to the children of nobles: afterwards to all free-born. It was an ornament, made in the shape of an heart, and worn before the breast, to prompt them to the study of wisdom—they left it off at the age of sixteen. See sat. xiii. l. 33.

165. The nodus only. A bulla or boss of leather, a sign or note of freemen, worn by the poorer sort of children, and suspended at the breast by a leathern thong.

The meaning of l. 164, 5. seems to be, that no man, one should think, could bear such treatment a second time, whatever situation of life he himself might be in, whether of a noble, or of a freedman's family.

166. The hope of supping well deceives. Your love of gluttony gets the better of your reflection, and deceives you into a notion, that however ill-treated you may have been before, this will not happen again.

"Lo-now he will give, &c. This is supposed to be their reasoning upon the matter.

167. An half-eaten hare. " Now," say they, " we shall have " set before us what Virro leaves of a hare-or part of the haunches " of a wild boar."

168. The lesser fat fowl. A fat hen or pullet—called minor al-

Intactoque omnes, et stricto pane tacetis.

Ille sapit, qui te sic utitur: omnia ferre
Si potes, et debes; pulsandum vertice raso
Præbebis quandoque caput, nec dura timebis
Flagra pati, his epulis, et tali dignus amico.

170

tilis, as distinguishing these smaller dainties from the larger, such as geese, &c.

168. Then with prepared, &c.] Then, with bread ready before you—which remains untouched, as you reserve it to eat with the expected dainties, and ready cut asunder into slices, or, as some, ready drawn out—metaph. from the drawing a sword to be ready against an attack.

169. Ye are silent. You wait in patient expectation of the good things which you imagine are coming to you.

170. He is wise, &c.] Mean while, Virro does wisely; he treats

And untouched, and cut bread, ye are silent. He is wise who uses you thus: all things, if you can, 170 You also ought to bear: with a shaven crown you will some time Offer your head to be beat, nor will you fear hard Lashes to endure, worthy these feasts, and such a friend.

you very rightly, by sending none of his dainties to your part of the table: for if you can bear such usage repeatedly, you certainly deserve to bear it.

171. With a shaven crown, &c.] q. d. You will soon be more abject still; like slaves, whose heads are shaven, in token of their servile condition, you will submit to a broken head; you'll not mind an hearty flogging.

173. Worthy these feasts, &c.] Thus you will prove yourself deserving of such scurvy fare as you are insulted with at Virro's table, and of just such a patron as Virro to give it you.

END OF THE FIFTH SATIRE.

SATIRA VI.

ARGUMENT.

This Satire is almost twice the length of any of the rest, and is a bitter invective against the fair sex. The ladies of Rome are here represented in a very shocking light. The Poet takes occasion

REDO pudicitiam Saturno rege moratam
In terris, visamque diu; cum frigida parvas
Præberet spelunca domos, ignemque, Laremque,
Et pecus, et dominos communi clauderet umbrà:
Silvestrem montana torum cum sterneret uxor
Frondibus et culmo, vicinarumque ferarum
Pellibus: haud similis tibi, Cynthia, nec tibi, cujus
Turbavit nitidos extinctus passer ocellos:
Sed potanda ferens infantibus ubera magnis,
Et sæpe horridior glandem ructante marito.
Quippe aliter tunc orbe novo, cæloque recenti
Vivebant homines; qui rupto robore nati,
Compositique luto nullos habuere parentes.
Multa pudicitiæ veteris vestigia forsan,

10

5

Line 1. Saturn.] The son of Cœlum and Vesta. Under his reign in Italy, the poets place the Golden Age, when the earth, not forced by plough or harrow, afforded all sorts of grain and fruit, the whole world was common, and without inclosure.

2. Was seen long. During the whole of the Golden Age.

3. The household god.] Lar signifies a god, whose image was kept within the house, and set in the chimney, or on the hearth, and was supposed to preside over and protect the house and land.

5. The mountain-wife. Living in dens and caves of the mountains.

7. Cynthia, Mistress to the poet Propertius.

7—8. Nor thee whose bright eyes, &c.] Meaning Lesbia, mistress to Catullus, who wrote an elegy on the death of her sparrow. The poet mentions these ladies in contrast with the simplicity of life and manners in ancient times.

9. Her great children.] According to Hesiod, in the Golden Age, men were accounted infants, and under the care of their mother, till near an hundred years old. Potanda well suits this idea, for such might rather be said to drink, than to suck.

SATIRE VI.

ARGUMENT.

to persuade his friend Ursidius Posthumus from marriage, at the expense of the whole sex. See Mr. Dryden's Argument.

BELIEVE that chastity, in the reign of Saturn, dwelt Upon earth, and was seen long: when a cold den afforded Small habitations, and fire, and the household-god,
And inclosed the cattle, and their masters, in one common shelter:
When the mountain-wife would make her rural bed
With leaves and straw, and with the skins of the neighbouring Wild beasts: not like thee, Cynthia, nor thee, whose bright Eyes a dead sparrow made foul (with weeping:)
But carrying her dugs to be drunk by her great children,
And often more rough than her husband belching the acorn.

10
For then, in the new orb of earth, and recent heaven,
Men lived otherwise—who, born from a bursten oak,
And composed out of clay, had no parents.
Perhaps many traces of chastity remained,

10. Belching the acorn.] The first race of men were supposed to have fed on acorns; a windy kind of food.

So DRYDEN:

" And fat with acorns belch'd their windy food."

11. Recent heaven.] Cœlum here means the air, firmament, or atmosphere.

12. From a bursten oak.] Antiquity believed men to have come forth from trees. So Ving. Æn. viii. 315.

Gensque virûm truncis et duro robore nata.

The notion came from their inhabiting the trunks of large trees, and from thence they were said to be born of them.

13. And composed out of clay.] Or mud—by Prometheus, the son of Japetus, one of the Titans. See Ainsw. Prometheus.

So this poet, sat. xiv. 35.

Et meliore luto finxit præcordia Titan.

See sat. iv. 133, and note.

VOL. I. DI

| Aut aliqua extiterant, et sub Jove, sed Jove nondum | 15 |
|---|------|
| Barbato, nondum Græeis jurare paratis | |
| Per caput alterius: cum furem nemo timeret | |
| Caulibus, aut pomis, sed aperto viveret horto. | |
| Paulatim deinde ad superos Astræa recessit | |
| Hâc comite, atque duæ pariter fugêre sorores. | 20 |
| Antiquum et vetus est alienum, Posthume, lectum | |
| Concutere, atque sacri Genium contemnere fulcri. | |
| Omne aliud crimen mox ferrea portulit ætas: | |
| Viderunt primos argentea sæcula mœchos. | h |
| Conventum tamen, et pactum, et sponsalia, nostrâ | 25 |
| Tempestate paras; jamque a tonsore magistro | |
| Pecteris, et digito pignus fortasse dedisti. | C.E. |
| Certe sanus eras: uxorem, Posthume, ducis? | um J |
| Dic, quâ Tisiphone, quibus exagitare colubris? | 4 |
| Ferre potes dominam salvis tot restibus ullam? | 30 |
| Cum pateant altæ, caligantesque fenestræ? | |
| Cum tibi vicinum sa prophast Emilius none? | |

15. Under Jupiter, &c.] When Jove had driven his father Saturn into banishment, the Silver Age began, according to the poets. Jove was the supposed son of Saturn and Ops.

16. Bearded. The most innocent part of the Silver Age was before Jove had a beard; for when once down grew upon his chin, what pranks he played with the female sex are well known: iron bars and locks could not hold against his golden key. See Hor. lib. iii. ode xvi. 1—8.

17. By the head of another.] The Greeks introduced forms of swearing, not only by Jupiter, who was therefore called Ogxios, but by other gods, and by men, by themselves, their own heads, &c.

Like Ascanius, Æn. ix. 300.

Per caput hoc juro, per quod pater ante solebat.

18. Lived with an open garden. They had no need of inclosures to secure their fruits from thieves.

19. Astraa.] The goddess of justice, who, with many other deities, lived on earth in the Golden Age, but, being offended with men's vices, she retired to the skies, and was translated into the sign Virgo, next to Libra, who holdeth her balance. See Ov. Met. lib. i. 1. 150.

20. The two sisters. Justice and Chastity.

22. Genius. Signifies a good or evil damon, attending each man or woman at every time and place; hence, to watch over the marriage bed, and to preserve it, or punish the violation of it.

Of the sacred prop.] Fulcrum not only denotes the prop which supports a bed, (i. e. the bedstead, as we call it,) but, by sy-nee. the couch or bed itself.

The poet is here describing the antiquity of the sin of adultory, or violation of the marriage bed.

30

Or some, even under Jupiter, but Jupiter not as yet

Bearded; the Greeks not as yet prepared to swear By the head of another: when nobody feared a thief For his herbs, or apples, but lived with an open garden.

Then, by little and little, Astræa retired to the gods,

With this her companion, and the two sisters fled away together. 20 It is an old ancient practice, O Posthumus, to violate the bed

Of another, and to despise the genius of the sacred prop. Every other crime the Iron Age presently brought in,

The Silver Age saw the first adulterers.

Yet a meeting, and a contract, and espousals, in our

25 Time you prepare: and already by a master barber

You are combed: and perhaps have given the pledge to the finger. You certainly was once sound (of mind.) Do you, Posthumus, Say, by what Tisiphone, by what snakes are you agitated? Can you bear any mistress, when so many halters are safe? When so many high and dizzening windows are open ? When the Æmilian bridge presents itself near you?

23-4. The Iron Age-the Silver Age. Of these, see Ovid. Met.

lib. i. fab. iv. and v.

25. Yet, &c.] Here Juvenal begins to expostulate with his friend Ursidius Posthumus on his intention to marry. You, says he, in these our days of profligacy, are preparing a meeting of friends, a marriage contract, and espousals. The word sponsalia sometimes denotes presents to the bride.

26. By a master barber. You have your hair dressed in the sprucest manner, to make yourself agreeable to your sweetheart. 27. Pledge to the finger.] The wedding-ring—this custom is very ancient.—See Chambers—Tit. Ring.

28. Once sound (of mind). You were once in your senses, before you took marriage into your head.

29. What Tisiphone.] She was supposed to be one of the furies. with snakes upon her head instead of hair, and to urge and irritate men to furious actions.

30. Any mistress. A wife to domineer and govern.

So many halters are safe. Are left unused, and therefore readily to be come at, and you might so easily hang yourself out of the way.

- 31. Dizzening windows.] Altæ, caligantesque-i. e. so high as to make one's head dizzy by looking down from them. Caligo-inis signifies sometimes dizziness. See Ainsw.

The poet insinuates, that his friend might dispatch himself by throwing himself out at window.

32. Æmilian bridge.] Built over the Tiber by Æmilius Scaurus about a mile from Rome.

Aut si de multis nullus placet exitus; illud Nonne putas melius, quod tecum pusio dormit? Pusio qui noctu non litigat: exigit a te 35 Nulla jaceus illic munuscula, nec queritur quod Et lateri parcas, nec, quantum jussit, anheles. Sed placet Ursidio lex Julia: tollere dulcem Cogitat hæredem, cariturus turture magno, Mullorumque jubis, et captatore macello. 40 Quid fieri non posse putes, si jungitur ulla Ursidio? si mœchorum notissimus olim Stulta maritali jam porrigit ora capistro, Quem toties texit periturum cista Latini? Quid, quod et antiquis uxor de moribus illi 45 Quæritur? O medici mediam pertundite venam: Delicias hominis! Tarpeium limen adora Pronus, et auratam Junoni cæde juvencam, Si tibi contigerit capitis matrona pudici. Paucæ adeo Cereris vittas contingere dignæ; 50 Quarum non timeat pater oscula. Necte coronam Postibus, et densos per limina tende corymbos.

Ursidius might throw himself over this, and drown himself in the river.

34—7. In these four lines our poet is carried, by his rage against the vicious females of his day, into an argument which ill suits with his rectitude of thought, and which had better be obscured by decent paraphrase, than explained by literal translation. See sat. ii. 1. 12, note.

38. The Julian law.] Against adultery. Vid. sat. ii. 37. Ursidius delights himself to think that, if he marries, the Julian law will protect the chastity of his wife.

39. An heir. To his fortune and estate.

—— About to want, &c.] Now, at a time of life to be courted, as a single man, he'll have no presents of fish, and other dainties, from people who wish to ingratiate themselves with him, in hopes of being his heirs. (Comp. sat. v. l. 136—140.) This was very usual, and the people who did it were called captatores. See sat. x. l. 202.—Ainsw. Turtur.

40. Inveigling market-place.] Macellum—the market-place for fish and other provisions, which were purchased by these flatterers to make presents of to those they wished to inveigle; and this seems to be the reason of the word captatore being placed as an epithet to macello in this line.

42. Once the most noted of adulterers.] From this it appears that Juvenal's friend, Ursidius, had been a man of very profligate character, a thorough debauchee, as we say.

43. Now reach, &c.] A metaphor, taken from beasts of burden, who quietly reach forth their heads to the bridle or halter.

50

Or if, of so many, no one death pleases you, do not you Think it better to live as you now do? With those who have no nightly quarrels with you, 35 Who exact no presents, nor complain that You don't comply with all their unreasonable desires? But the Julian law pleases Ursidius, he thinks To bring up a sweet heir, about to want a large turtle fish, And the crests of mullets, and the inveigling market-place. 40 What think you may not come to pass, if any woman

Be joined to Ursidius? If he, once the most noted of adulterers,

Now reach his foolish head to the marriage headstall,

Whom, so often, ready to perish, the chest of Latinus has concealed?

What (shall we say beside?)—that a wife of ancient morals too 45 Is sought by him-O physicians, open the middle vein!

Delightful man! adore the Tarpeian threshold

Prone, and slay for Juno a gilded heifer, If a matron of chaste life fall to your share.

There are so few worthy to touch the fillets of Ceres,

Whose kisses a father would not fear. Weave a crown

For your gates, and spread thick ivy over your threshold.

44. Chest of Latinus. The comedian Latinus played upon the stage the gallant to an adulteress, who, being in the utmost danger, upon the unexpected return of her husband, she locked him up in a chest; a part, it seems, that had been often realized by Ursidius in his younger days.

45. What. Sat. iii. l. 147, note.

That a wife, &c.] q. d. This we may say, that, moreover, he is mad enough to expect a chaste wife.

46. The middle vein. It was usual to bleed mad people in what was called the vena media—or middle vein of the arm. Pertundite -lit. bore through.

Juvenal is for having Ursidius treated like a madman, not only for intending to marry, but especially for thinking that he could find any woman of ancient and chaste morals.

- 47. The Tarpeian threshold.] The Capitoline hill, where there was a temple of Jupiter, was also called the Tarpeian hill, on account of Tarpeia, a vestal virgin, who was there killed, and buried by the Sabines.
- 48. For Juno a gilded heifer. Juno was esteemed the patroness of marriage, and the avenger of adultery. Farnab. See Æn. iv. 59. To her was sacrificed an heifer with gilded horns.

50. To touch the fillets of Ceres. The priestesses of Ceres were only to be of chaste matrons: their heads were bound with fillets, and none but chaste women were to assist at her feasts.

51. Whose kisses, &c.] So lewd and debauched were the Roman women, that it was hardly safe for their own fathers to kiss them.

--- Weave a crown, &c. Upon wedding-days the common peo-

Unus Iberinæ vir sufficit? ocyus illud

Extorquebis, ut hæc oculo contenta sit uno. Magna tamen fama est cujusdam rure paterno Viventis: vivat Gabiis, ut vixit in agro; Vivat Fidenis, et agello cedo paterno. Quis tamen affirmat nil actum in montibus, aut in Speluncis? adeo senuerunt Jupiter et Mars? Porticibusne tibi monstratur fæmina voto Digna tuo? cuneis an habent spectacula totis Quod securus ames, quodque inde excerpere possis? Chironomon Ledam molli saltante Batyllo, Tuccia vesicæ non imperat: Appula gannit Sicut in amplexu: subitum et miserabile longum 65 Attendit Thymele; Thymele tunc rustica discit. Ast aliæ, quoties aulæa recondita cessant, Et vacuo clausoque sonant fora sola theatro, Atque a plebeis longe Megalesia; tristes Personam, thyrsumve tenent, et subligar Acci. 70 ple crowned their doors and door-posts with ivy-boughs; but persons of fortune made use of laurel, and built scaffolds in the streets for people to see the nuptial solemnity. See l. 78.

53. Does one man suffice for Iberina?] i. e. For the woman you are going to marry.

56. Gabii.] A town of the Volscians, about ten miles from Rome.

57. Fidenæ. A city of Italy.

The poet means—" Let this innocent girl, who has such a reputation for living chastely in the country, be carried to some town, as Gabii, where there is a concourse of people, or to Fidenæ, which is still more populous, and if she withstands the temptations which she meets with there, then, says he, agello cedo paterno—I grant what you say about her chastity, while at her father's house in the country."

59. Are Jupiter and Mars, &c.] Juvenal alludes to the amours of these gods, as Jupiter with Leda, &c. Mars with Venus, the wife of Vulcan, &c. and hereby insinuates that, even in the most remote situations, and by the most extraordinary and unlikely means, women might be unchaste.

60. In the Porticos.] These were a sort of piazza, covered over to defend people from the weather, in some of which the ladies of Rome used to meet for walking—as ours in the Park, or in other public walks.

61. The spectacles.] Spectacula—the theatres, and other public places for shews and games.

63. When the soft Bathyllus, &c.] This was some famous dancer, who represented the character and story of Leda embraced by Jupiter, in the shape of a swan—in this Bathyllus exhibited such la-

Does one man suffice for Iberina? you will sooner that Extort, that she should be content with one eye.

But there is great fame of a certain (girl) living at her father's 55

Country house; let her live at Gabii as she lived in the country; Let her live at Fidenæ, and I yield the father's country seat.

But who affirms that nothing is done in mountains, or in Dens? Are Jupiter and Mars grown so old?

Is there a woman shewn to you in the Porticos worthy

Your wish? have the spectacles, in all the benches,

That which you might love securely, and what you might pick out from thence?

When the soft Bathyllus dances the nimble Leda,

Tuccia can't contain herself: Appula whines

As if embraced: the quick, the languishing, Thymele

65

60

Long attends: then the rustic Thymele learns.

But others, as soon as the lock'd-up curtains cease, And the courts alone sound, the theatre being empty and shut up,

And the Megalesian games, long from the Plebeian, sad

They possess the mask, or thyrsus, and sash of Accius.

70

scivious gestures as were very pleasing to the country ladies here mentioned. Chironomon—see sat. v. 121, and note.

65-6. Thymele long attends, Thymele pays the utmost and unwearied attention to the dances, as well to the quicker motions, as to the languishing expressions of distress.

66. Learns.] Becomes acquainted with all this, and practises accordingly.

67. The lock'd-up curtains, &c.] Aulæum—a piece of hanging, or curtain, as in the theatre. It may stand here for all the ornaments of the theatre, which were taken down and laid aside when the season came for the theatres to be shut up.

168. The courts alone sound.] The courts of justice with the pleadings of the lawyers.

69. The Megalesian games, &c.] The Megalesian games were instituted by Junius Brutus, in honour of Cybele, the mother of the gods. The Plebeian games were instituted either in remembrance of the people's liberty, upon the expulsion of their kings, or for the reconciliation of the people after secession to mount Aventine. See sat. iii. 163, and note. The Megalesian were celebrated in April, the Plebeian at the latter end of November: so that there was a long distance of time between them.

70. Possess the mask, &c.] During this long vacation from public entertainments, these ladies divert themselves with acting plays, dressing themselves in the garb of the actors. See DRYDEN.

The thyrsus. A spear twisted about with ivy, and proper to Bacchus, used by actors, when they personated him.

- The sash.] Subligar-a sort of clothing which the actors used to cover the lower parts of the body.

- Accius.] The name of some famous tragedian.

Urbicus exodio risum movet Atellanæ Gestibus Autonoës; hunc diligit Ælia pauper. Solvitur his magno comœdi fibula. Sunt, quæ Chrysogonum cantare vetent. Hispulla tragædo Gaudet; an expectas, ut Quintilianus ametur? Accipis uxorem, de quâ citharædus Echion Aut Glaphyrus fiat pater, Ambrosiusve choraules. Longa per angustos figamus pulpita vicos: Ornentur postes, et grandi janua lauro, Ut testudineo tibi, Lentule, conopeo

75

90

71. Urbicus. Some famous comedian or buffoon.

Excites laughter.] i. e. While he represents, in a ridiculous manner, the part of Autonoe, in some interlude written on the subject of her story, in the Atellan style; the drift of which was to turn serious matters into jest, in order to make the spectators laugh.—Something like what we call burlesque.

- Interlude. Exodio. See sat. iii. l. 174, and note.

72. Atellan.] This species of interlude was called Atellan, from Atella, a city of the Osci, where it was first invented. It was a kind of Latin drama, full of jokes, banters, and merriments, (see Ainsw.) the origin whereof may be seen in Liv. lib. vii. c. 2. See also Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. xii. p. 34, note l.

—— Autonoe.] Autonoe was the daughter of Cadmus, and mother of Actæon, who was turned into a stag, and eaten by his own hounds. There was an exordium, or farce, on this subject, in which it may be supposed, that Autonoe was a principal character, probably the chief subject of the piece.

Poor Ælia, &c.] Some woman of the Ælian family which had fallen into decay and poverty.

73. The button of the comedian. The fibula here denotes a circle of brass, put on the young singers, so as to prevent commerce with women, which was reckoned to spoil their voice. The lewd women, here spoken of, were at a great expense to get this impediment taken off, that they might be intimate with these youths. See 1. 378, note.

74. Will forbid Chrysogonus.] This was a famous singer, of whom the ladies were so fond, as to spoil his voice with their caresses, so that they hindered his singing.

--- Hispulla.] Some great lady, famous for her lewdness with players, of which she was very fond.

75. Quintilian.] A grave rhetorician, born at Caliguris, in Spain; he taught rhetoric at Rome, and was tutor to Juvenal. The meaning is—can it be expected, that any virtuous, grave, and sober man, can be admired, when the women are so fond of singers, players, and such low and profligate people?

76. You take a wife, &c.] The drift of this satire is to prejudice Ursidius, Juvenal's friend, so much against the women, as to make him afraid to venture on marriage. Here the poet intimates, that,

Urbicus excites laughter in an interlude by the gestures Of Atellan Autonoë; poor Ælia loves him.

The button of the comedian is loosen'd for these at a great price.

There are, who

Will forbid Chrysogonus to sing. Hispulla rejoices

In a tragedian: do you expect that Quintilian can be loved? 75

You take a wife, by whom the harper Echion,

Or Glaphyrus, will become a father; or Ambrosius the piper.

Let us fix long stages thro' the narrow streets, -

Let the posts be adorned, and the gate with the grand laurel,

That to thee, O Lentulus, in his vaulted canopy, if Ursidius should take a wife, she will probably be gotten with child by some of the musicians.

80

78. Let us fix, &c.] See before, l. 52, and note. 80. Vaulted canopy.] Testudineo conopeo. Testudineus—from testudo, significs—of, belonging to, or like a tortoise, vaulted: for such is the form of the upper shell.

Conopeum, from xxvv, a gnat. A canopy, or curtain, that hangs about beds, and is made of net-work, to keep away flies and gnats -an umbrella, a pavilion, a tester over a bed; which, from the epithet testudineo, we must suppose to be in a vaulted form.

But, probably, here we are to understand by conopeo the whole bed, synec, which, as the manner was among great people, such as Ursidius appears to have been, had the posts and props inlaid with ivory and tortoise-shell; so that, by testudineo, we are rather to understand the ornaments, than the form.

That the Romans inlaid their beds, or couches, with tortoise-shell.

appears—sat. xi. l. 94, 5.

Qualis in oceani fluctu testudo natarat, Clarum Trojugenis factura ac nobile fulcrum.

This more immediately refers to the beds, or couches, on which they lay at meals; but, if these were so ornamented, it is reasonable to suppose, by testudineo conopeo, we are to understand, that they extended their expense and luxury to the beds on which they slept; therefore, that this noble infant was laid in a magnificent bed-this heightens the irony of the word nobilis, as it the more strongly marks the difference between the apparent and real quality of the child; which, by the sumptuous bed, would seem the offspring of the noble Ursidius, whereas, in fact, it would be the bastard of a gladiator. Comp. 1. 89, which shows, that the beds, or cradles, in which they laid their children, were richly ornamented.

To thee O Lentulus.] The sense is—that if Ursidius should marry, and have a son, which is laid in a magnificent cradle, as the heir of a great family, after all, it will turn out to be begotten by some gladiator, such as Euryalus, and bear his likeness.—He calls Ursidius by the name of Lentulus, who was a famous fencer, inti-mating that, like the children of Lentulus, Ursidius's children

VOL. I.

Nobilis Euryalum mirmillonem exprimat infans. Nupta senatori comitata est Hippia ludium Ad Pharon et Nilum, famosaque mœnia Lagi, Prodigia et mores urbis damnante Canopo. 85 Immemor illa domûs, et conjugis, atque sororis Nil patriæ indulsit; plorantesque improba gnatos, Utque magis stupeas, ludos, Paridemque reliquit. Sed quanquam in magnis opibus, plumâque paterna, Et segmentatis dormisset parvula cunis, 90 Contempsit pelagus; famam contempserat olim, Cujus apud molles minima est jactura cathedras: Tyrrhenos igitur fluctus, lateque sonantem Pertulit Ionium, constanti pectore, quamvis Mutandum toties esset mare. Justa pericli Si ratio est, et honesta, timent: pavidoque gelantur 95 Pectore, nec tremulis possunt insistere plantis: Fortem animum præstant rebus, quas turpiter audent. Si jubeat conjux, durum est conscendere navem; Tunc sentina gravis; tunc summus vertitur aër.

would have a gladiator for their father. Exprimat-pourtray-resemble.

82. Hippia.] Was the wife of Fabricius Veiento, a man of senatorial dignity in the time of Domitian. See sat. iii. 185. sat. iv. 113.—She left her husband, and went away with Sergius, the gladiator, into Ægypt.

83. Pharos. A small island at the mouth of the Nile, where there was a lighthouse to guide the ships in the night.

--- Famous. Famosa, infamous, as we speak, for all manner of luxury and debauchery.

- Lagus.] i. e. Alexandria; so called from Ptolemy, the son of Lagus, who succeeded Alexandria, from which son of Lagus came the kingdom of Lagidæ, which was overthrown, after many years, on the death of Cleopatra.

84. Canopus condemning:] Even the city of Canopus, bad as it was, condemned, as prodigious and unusual, the manners of the citizens at Rome.

87. The games, and Paris. As if leaving her husband, children, &c. were not so extraordinary as leaving the theatres, and Paris, a handsome young actor, who was probably no small favourite of hers. This is a fine stroke of the poet, and exhibits a strong idea of the profligacy of such a woman's mind.

88. In great riches.] In the midst of a profusion of wealth.

— Paternal down.] Pluma signifies a small or soft feather—so, what we call down.—The poet is here describing the tender, as well as costly manner, in which Hippia was brought up from a child; and, among other particulars, he here alludes to the soft and downy bed on which she used to lie at her father's house. Notwithstanding which, when the gratification of her lust was in question, she could

The noble infant may express the sword-player Euryalus.

Hippia, married to a senator, accompany'd a gladiator

To Pharos and the Nile, and the famous walls of Lagus, Canopus condemning the prodigies and manners of the city,
She, unmindful of her family, of her husband, of her sister,

85
Indulged not (a thought) to her country, and, wicked, her weeping

children

Left, and, to astonish you the more, the games, and Paris.

But tho' in great riches, and paternal down,

And, when a little one, she had slept in an embroider'd cradle, She despised the sea: she had long ago contemn'd her character, 90 The loss of which, is the least of all things, among fine ladies:

The Tyrrhene waves therefore, and the widely-sounding

Ionian she bore, with a constant mind, altho'

The sea was so often to be changed. If there be a just

And honest cause of danger, they fear: and are frozen with timorous 95

Breast, nor can they stand on their trembling feet:

They shew a dauntless mind in things that they shamefully adventure.

If the husband command, it is hard to go aboard a ship;

Then the sink of the ship is burthensome—then the top air is turned round.

not only forget all this, but bid defiance to the boisterous sea, and contemn all its dangers and inconveniences.

91. Among fine ladies. Molles cathedras—literally soft or easy chairs, in which the fine ladies used to be carried—a sort of covered sedan. Here used metonymically, for the ladies themselves. See sat. i. 65.—Or by cathedras, here, may be meant the strate cathedrae, or soft chairs, or couches, on which the fine ladies reposed themselves. Meton. for the ladies. See sat. ix. 52, and note.

92. The Tyrrhene waves, &c.] The mare Tyrrhenum means that part of the Mediterranean sea which washes the southern part of — The Ionian.] Ionia was a country of Asia the Lesser, so called along the coast of the Archipelago; the sea which washed this coast was called Ionium mare—the Ionian sea.

Italy

93. With a constant mind.] Was quite firm in the midst of all the dangers which she underwent, and unmoved at the raging of the waves.

91. The sea was so often to be changed. i. e. She was to sail over so many different seas between Rome and Ægypt.

87. In things that, &c.] Juvenal here lashes the sex very severely; he represents women as bold and daring in the pursuits of their vices—timorous and fearful of every thing where duty calls them. See sat. viii. 165.

99. The sink, &c.] Sentina—the hold or part of the ship where Quæ mæchum sequitur, stomacho valet: illa maritum 100 Convomit: hæc inter nautas et prandet, et errat Per puppim, et duros gaudet tractare rudentes. Quâ tamen exarsit formâ? quâ capta juventâ Hippia? Quid vidit, propter quod ludia dici Sustinuit? nam Sergiolus jam radere guttur 105 Cœperat, et secto requiem sperare lacerto. Præterea multa in facie deformia; sicut Attritus galea, mediisque in naribus ingens Gibbus, et acre malum semper stillantis ocelli. Sed gladiator erat; facit hoc illos Hyacinthos: Hoc pueris, patriæque, hoc prætulit illa sorori, Atque viro: ferrum est, quod amant: hic Sergius idem Acceptâ rude cœpisset Veiento videri. Quid privata domus, quid fecerit Hippia curas ? Respice rivales Divorum: Claudius audi 115 Que tulerit: dormire virum cum senserat uxor, the pump is fixed, and where the bulge-water gathers together and putrifies.

99. The top air, &c.] Summus aër—the sky seems to run round over her head, and makes her giddy. All this can be complained of, as well as sea-sickness, and its effects, if with her husband: but if with a gallant, nothing of this is thought of.

103. She on fire, &c.] But let us consider a little the object of this lady's 'amorous flame—what sort of person it was that she was so violently fond of.

104. To be called an actress.] Ludia—properly signifies an actress, or woman who dances, or the like, upon the stage: it seems the feminine of ludius, which signifies a stage-player, or dancer, sword-player, &c.—Ludia, here, is used by Juvenal as denoting a stage-player's wife—which, Hippia, by going away with Sergius the gladiator, subjected herself to be taken for.

105. Sergy.] Sergiolus—the diminutive of Sergius, is used here in derision and contempt, as satirizing her fondness for such a fellow, whom probably she might wantonly call her little Sergius, when in an amorous mood.

—— To shave his throat.] i. c. Under his chin. The young men used to keep their beards till the age of twenty-one; then they were shaved. Here the poet means, that Sergius was an old fellow; and when he says—" he had already begun to shave"—he is to be understood ironically, not as meaning literally that Sergius now first begun this, but as having done it a great many years before.

106. Rest to his cut arm. He had been crippled in one of his arms, by cuts received in prize-fighting, which could not add much to the beauty of his figure.

107. Deformities in his face.] The poet in this, and the two following lines, sets forth the paramour of this lady in a most forbidding light, as to his person, the better to satirize the taste of the women

She that follows an adulterer, is well at her stomach: she be-100 spews

Her husband: this dines among the sailors and wanders About the ship, and delights to handle the hard cables.

But with what a form was she on fire? with what youth was Hippia taken ?-What did she see, for the sake of which to be called an actress

She endured! for Sergy to shave his throat already had 105

Begun, and to hope for rest to his cut arm.

Beside many deformities in his face; as, galled

With his helmet, and in the midst of his nostrils a great

Wen, and the sharp evil of his ever-dropping eye.

But he was a gladiator, this makes them Hyacinths. 110

This she preferr'd to her children, her country, her sister,

And her husband: it is the sword they love: but this very Sergius, The wand accepted, had begun to seem Veiento.

Care you what a private family, what Hippia has done?

Consider the rivals of the gods: hear what things

Claudius has suffered: the wife, when she had perceived her husband asleep, towards stage performers; as if their being on the stage was a sufficient recommendation to the favour of the sex, however forbidding their appearance might otherwise be.

107-8. Galled with his helmet. Which, by often rubbing and wearing the skin off his forehead, had left a scarred and disagreeable appearance.

108. Millst of his nostrils, &c. | Some large tumour, from repeated blows on the part.

109. The sharp evil, &c.] A sharp humour, which was continually distilling from his eyes-blear-eyed, as we call it-which fretted and disfigured the skin of the face.

110. Hyacinths. Hyacinthus was a beautiful boy, beloved by Apollo and Zephyrus: he was killed by a quoit, and changed into a flower.—See Ainsw.

113. The wand accepted. The rudis was a rod, or wand, given to sword-players, in token of their release, or discharge, from that exercise.

- Had begun to seem Veiento. But this very Sergius, for whom this lady sacrificed so much, had he received his dismission. and ceased to be a sword-player, and left the stage, she would have cared no more for, than she did for her husband Veiento. - Sergius would have seemed just as indifferent in her eyes.

114. A private family.] What happens in private families, or is done by private individuals, such as Hippia, is, comparatively, hardly worth notice, when we look higher.

115. The rivals of the gods. The very emperors themselves are served as ill as private husbands are.

116. Claudius. Cæsar, the successor of Caligula.

(Ausa Palatino tegetem præferre cubili, Sumere nocturnos meretrix Augusta cucullos,) Linquebat, comite ancillà non amplius unà; Et nigrum flavo crinem abscondente galero, 120 Intravit calidum veteri centone lupanar, Et cellam vacuam, atque suam: tunc nuda papillis Constitit auratis, titulum mentita Lyciscæ, Ostenditque tuum, generose Britannice, ventrem. Excepit blanda intrantes, atque æra poposcit: 125 Mox lenone suas jam dimittente puellas, Tristis abit; sed, quod potuit, tamen ultima cellam Clausit, adhuc ardens rigidæ tentigine vulvæ, Et lassata viris, nondum satiata recessit: Obscurisque genis turpis, fumoque lucernæ Fæda, lupanaris tulit ad pulvinar odorem. Hippomanes, carmenque loquar, coctumque venenum,

116. The wife, &c.] Messalina, who, as here related, took the opportunity, when her husband was asleep, to go to the common stews, like a prostitute.

117. The august harlot.] Augustus was an imperial title, which the poet sarcastically applies to this lewd empress—hence it may be rendered, the imperial harlot.

- A coarse rug. See note on l. 121.

118. The bed of state.] Palatino cubili—literally the Palatinian bed—i. e. the bed of her husband in the royal palace, which was on Mount Palatine.

— Nocturnal hoods.] Nocturnos cucullos—a sort of hood, with which the women used to cover their heads when it rained. Messalina made use of something of this kind to disguise herself, when on her nightly expeditions.

120. A yellow peruke.] What the galerus was, is not very easy to define; but it seems (on this occasion at least) to have been something of the peruke kind, and made with hair of a different colour from the empress's, the better to disguise her.

121. Warm with an old ratched quilt.] It is probable, that the only piece of furniture in the cell was an old patched quilt, or rug, on which she laid herself down.—Or this may be understood to mean, that the stew was warm from the frequent concourse of lewd people there; and that Messalina carried with her some old tattered and patched garment, in which she had disguised herself, that she might not be known in her way thither. See Ainsw. Cento.

122. Which was her's.] As hired and occupied by her, for her lewd purposes.

123. Lycisca.] The most famous courtezan of those times, whose name was chalked over the chamber-door, where Messalina entertained her gallants.

124. Thy belly, &c.] i. e. The belly which bare thee. - Britannicus was the son of Claudius and Messalina.

(The august harlot daring to prefer a coarse rug to the Bed of state, to take nocturnal hoods,)

Left him, attended by not more than one maid-servant,
And a yellow peruke hiding her black hair,

She enter'd the brothel warm with an old patched quilt,
And the empty cell which was hers; then she stood naked
With her breasts adorned with gold, shamming the name of Lycisca,
And shews thy belly, O noble Britannicus.

Kind she received the comers in, and asked for money:

Presently, the bawd now dismissing his girls,
She went away sad: but (which she could) she nevertheless
Last shut up her cell, still burning with desire,

131. To the pillow.] To the royal bed. Thus returning to her husband's bed, defiled with the reek and stench of the brothel.

And filthy with soiled cheeks, and with the smoke of the lamp 130

And she retired, weary, but not satiated with men:

Dirty, she carried to the pillow the stench of the brothel. Shall I speak of philtres and charms, and poison boiled, 132. Philtres and charms.] Hipponianes, (from 1770s, equus—and 1220pai, insanio,) according to Virgil, signifies something which comes from mares, supposed to be of a poisonous nature, and used as an ingredient in venetic potions, inixed with certain herbs, and attended with spells, or words of incantation.

Hinc demum hippomanes vero quod nomine dicunt Pastores, lentum distillat ab inguine virus: Hippomanes quod sæpe malæ legere novercæ, Miscueruntque herbas, et non innoxia verba. Georg. iii. 1. 280—3.

By the account of this, in the third line of the above quotation, we may understand it, in this passage of Juvenal, to denote a part of a poisonous mixture which step-mothers administered to destroy their husband's sons, that their own might inherit.

But the hippomanes seems to be of two sorts, for another is mentioned, Æn. iv. l. 515, 16.

Quæritur et nascentis equi de fronte revulsus. Et matri præreptus amor-

This was supposed to be a lump of flesh that grows in the forehead of a foal newly dropped, which the mare presently devours, else she loses all affection for her offspring, and denies it suck.—See Ainsw. Hippomanes, No. 3.—Hence Virgil calls it matris amor. This notion gave rise to the vulgar opinion of its efficacy in love-potions, or philtres, to procure love. In this view of the word, it may denote some love-potions, which the women administered to provoke unlawful love. The word carmen denotes a spell, or charm, which they made use of for the same purpose. Carmen, sing. for carmina, plur.—synecdoche.

- Poison boiled.] This signifies the most deadly and quickest

135

140

Privignoque datum? faciunt graviora coactæ Imperio sexûs, minimumque libidine peccant.

Optima sed quare Cesennia teste marito?
Bis quingenta dedit, tanti vocat ille pudicam:
Nec Veneris pharetris macer est, aut lampade fervet:
Inde faces ardent; veniunt a dote sagittæ.
Libertas emitur: coram licet innuat, atque
Rescribat vidua est, locuples quæ nupsit avaro.

Cur desiderio Bibulæ Sertorius ardet? Si verum excutias, facies, non uxor amatur. Tres rugæ subeant, et se cutis arida laxet, Fiant obscuri dentes, oculique minores; "Collige sarcinulas," dicet libertus, "et exi; "Jam gravis es nobis, et sæpe emungeris; exi "Ocyus, et propera; sicco venit altera naso."

Interea calet, et regnat, poscitque maritum poison, as boiling extracts the strength of the ingredients, much more than a cold infusion.

133. A son-in-law.] To put him out of the way, in order to make room for a son of their own. See l. 628.

134. The empire of the sex, &c.] i. e. That which governs, has the dominion over it. See imperium used in a like sense. Virg. En. i. l. 142. q. d. What they do from lust is less mischievous than what they do from anger, hatred, malice, and other evil principles that govern their actions, and may be said to rule the sex in general.

135. Cesennia.] The poet is here shewing the power which women got over their husbands, by bringing them large fortunes; insomuch that, let the conduct of such women be what it might, the husbands would gloss it over in the best manner they could; not from any good opinion, or from any real love which they bare them, but the largeness of their fortunes, which they retained in their own disposal, purchased this.

136. She gave twice five hundred.] i. e. She brought a large fortune of one thousand sestertia, which was sufficient to bribe the husband into a commendation of her chastity, though she had it not. See sat. i. l. 106, and note; and sat. ii. l. 117, and note.

137. Lean, &c.] He never pined for love, Pharetris-lit. qui-vers.

The lamp.] Or torch of Cupid, or of Hymen.

138. From thence the torches burn, &c.] He glows with no other flame than what is lighted up from the love of her money—nor is he wounded with any other arrows than those with which her large fortune has struck him.

139. Liberty is bought.] The wife buys with her large fortune the privilege of doing as she pleases, while the husband sells his liberty, so as not to dare to restrain her, even in her amours.

___ Tho' she nod.] Innuat—give a hint by some motion or nod

And given to a son-in-law? they do worse things, compelled By the empire of the sex, they sin least of all from lust.

But why is Cesennia the best (of wives) her husband being witness?

She gave twice five hundred, for so much he calls her chaste.

Nor is he lean from the shafts of Venus, nor does he glow with the lamp;

From thence torches burn; arrows come from her dowry.

Liberty is bought: tho' she nod before (her husband) and

Write an answer, she is a widow, who rich, hath married a miser. 140

Why doth Sertorius burn with the desire of Bibula;

If you examine the truth, the face, not the wife, is beloved.

Let three wrinkles come on, and her dry skin relax itself,

Let her teeth become black, and her eyes less-

"Collect together your bundles, the freedman will say, and go "forth: 145

- "You are now troublesome to us, and often wipe your nose, go
- "Quickly—and make haste—another is coming with a dry nose."

 In the mean time she is hot, and reigns, and demands of her husband of her head, or make signs to a lover, even before her husband's face.

140. Write an answer, &c.] Pen an answer to a billet-doux in the very presence of her husband. Comp. sat. i. 55—7.

____ She is a widow.] She is to be considered as such, and as responsible to nobody but to herself.

A miser.] For he is too anxious about her money to venture disobliging her by contradiction.

142. The fuce, not the wife, &c.] The poet is still satirizing the female sex. Having shewn that some women were only attended to for the sake of their money, he here lets us see that others had no other inducement than exterior beauty. While this lasted, they were admired and favoured, as well as indulged in a kind of sovereignty over the husband; but when their beauty decayed, they were repudiated, turned out of doors, and others taken in their room.

145. The freedman, &c.] "Pack up your alls," says the husband, now emancipated from his bondage to her beauty, by her loss of it.

146. You often wipe your nose.] From the rheum which distills from it-one symptom of old age.

147. Another is coming, &c.] Young and handsome, to supply your place, who has not your infirmities.

148. In the mean time, &c. i. e. In the days of her youth and beauty.

—— She is hot.] She glows, as it were, with the rage of dominion over her husband, which she exercises—regnat.

Pastores, et ovem Canusinam, ulmosque Falernas.
Quantulum in hoc? pueros omnes, ergastula tota,
Quodque domi non est, et habet vicinus, ematur.
Mense quidem brumæ, cum jam mercator Iason
Clausus, et armatis obstat casa candida nautis,
Grandia tolluntur crystallina, maxima rursus
Myrrhina, deinde adamas notissimus, et Berenices
In digito factus pretiosior: hunc dedit olim
Barbarus incestæ; dedit hunc Agrippa sorori,
Observant ubi festa mero pede sabbata reges,

148. Demands of her husband, &c.] In short, her husband must supply her with every thing she chooses to fancy.

149. Canusian sheep.] Canusium, a town of Apulia, upon the river Aufidus; it afforded the best sheep, and the finest wool in Italy, which nature had tinged with a cast of red.

-metonym. See Virg. Georg. i. l. 2.

150. All boys. All sorts of beautiful boys must be purchased to wait upon her.

— Whole workhouses.] Ergastula were places where slaves were sot to work—here the word seems to denote the slaves themselves, numbers of which (whole workhouses'-full) must be purchased to please the lady's fancy. See Ainsw. Ergastulum, No. 2.

151. And her neighbour has.] Whatsoever she has not, and her neighbour has, must be purchased.

152. The month of winter.] Bruma—qu. brevissima—the shortest day in the year, mid-winter—the winter solstice; this happens on the twenty-first of December—so that mensis brumæ means December. By synecdoche—winter.

— The merchant Jason.] This is a fictitious name for a merchant who goes through the dangers of the seas in all climates, for the sake of gain. Alluding to Jason's dangerous enterprise after the golden fleece.

153. Is shut up.] At his own home, it not being a season of the year to venture to sea. So clausum mare is a phrase to denote the winter-time. Cic. See Ainsw.—Clausus.

— The white house. All the houses covered with frost and snow.

· — Hinders.] Prevents their going to sea, from the inclemency of the season.

—— Armed sailors.] Armatis here means prepared for sea—i. e. as soon as the weather will permit.

So Virg. Æn. iv. l. 289, 90.

Classem aptent taciti, sociosque ad litora cogant, Arma parent.

Where we may suppose arma to signify the sails, masts, and other tackling of the ship. Arma nautica.

Shepherds, and Canusian sheep, and Falernan elms.

How little (is there) in this? all boys, whole workhouses,

And what is not at home, and her neighbour has, must be bought.

Indeed, in the month of winter, when now the merchant Jason

Is shut up, and the white house hinders the armed sailors,

Great crystals are taken up, and again large (vessels)

Of myrrh, then a famous adamant, and on the finger of Berenice 155

Made more precious: this formerly a Barbarian gave,

This Agrippa gave to his incestuous sister,

Where kings observe their festival-sabbaths barefoot,

154. Great crystals.] Crystallina—large vessels of crystal, which were very expensive.

—— Are taken up.] Tolluntur.—How, from this word, many translators and commentators have inferred, that this extravagant and termagant woman sent her husband over the seas, to fetch these things, at a time of year when they have just been told (l. 152, 3.) that the merchants and sailors did not venture to sea, I cannot say—but by tolluntur, I am inclined to understand, with Mr. Dryden, that these things were taken up, as we say, on the credit of the husband, who was to pay for them.

When winter shuts the seas, and fleecy snows
Make houses white, she to the merchant goes;
Rich crystals of the rock she takes up there,
&c. &c.
DRYDEN.

This is what is called in French—enlever de chez le marchand. Some have observed, that during the Saturnalia, a feast which was observed at Rome, with great festivity, for seven days in the month of December, there was a sort of fair held in the porches of some of the public baths, where the merchants made up shops, or booths, and sold toys and baubles. Vet. Schol. See Sigellaria. Alnsw.

"Tolluntur crystallina.] i. e. Ex mercatoris officina elevantur 2

"Bibula, solvente eo marito Sertorio." GRANG.

154—5. Vessels of myrrh.] Bowls to drink out of, made of. myrrh, which was supposed to give a fine taste to the wine.—So MARTIAL, lib. xiv. ep. cxiii.

Si calidum potas, ardenti myrrha Falerno Convenit, et melior fit sapor inde mero.

- 155. Berenice, &c.] Eldest daughter of Herod Agrippa, king of Judæa, a woman of infamous lewdness. She was first married to Herod, king of Chalcis, her uncle, and afterwards suspected of incest with her brother Agrippa. See Ant. Un. Hist. vol. x. p. 6, note e.
- 156. Made more precious.] The circumstance of Berenice's being supposed to have received this diamond ring from her brother, and having worn it on her finger, is here hinted at, as increasing its value in the estimation of this lewd and extravagant woman.

--- A barbarian.] The Romans, as well as the Greeks, were accustomed to call all people, but themselves, barbarians.

158. Their festival-sabbaths barefoot.] Meaning in Judæa, and Et vetus indulget senibus clementia porcis.

Nullane de tantis gregibus tibi digna videtur?

Sit formosa, decens, dives, fœcunda, vetustos
Porticibus disponat avos, intactior omni
Crinibus effusis bellum dirimente Sabinà:
(Rara avis in tertis, nigroque simillima cygno:)
Quis feret uxorem, cui constant omnia? malo,
Malo Venusinam, quam te, Cornelia, mater
Gracchorum, si cum magnis virtutibus affers
Grande supercilium, et numeras in dote triumphos.
Tolle tuum, precor, Hannibalem, victumque Syphacem
In castris, et cum totà Carthagine migra.

Parce, precor, Pæan; et tu, Dea, pone sagittas;

alluding to Agrippa and his sister's performing the sacred rites of sacrificing at Jerusalem without any covering on their feet. This was customary, in some parts of the Jewish ritual, to all the Jews—in imitation of Moses at the bush (see Exod. iii. 5, et seq.)—and is practised, on particular days, in the Jewish synagogues to this very time. Joseph. Bel. Jud. lib. ii. says of Berenice—" Queen Bere-" nice, that she might pay her vows for the recovery of her health, " came to Jerusalem, and, when the victims were slain according to " custom, with her hair shaved, she stood barefooted before the " sanctuary."

159. Clemency is indulgent to old swine.] The swine in Judæa, says Tacitus, lived to be very old, as, by the law of Moses, they were forbidden to be eaten, and consequently they were not killed for that purpose.

160. Herds. Numbers of such ladies as I have mentioned, and of which so many are to be found.

161—2. In porticos—dispose, &c.] It was usual for persons of noble families to place images of their ancestors in galleries, or porticos, about their houses—so that the poet means here—let her be of high rank, as well as handsome, decent, &c.

Italy, between the Umbrians and the Latins, famous for their gravity, sobriety, and chastity. Of the rape of the Sabine women, see Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. xi. p. 283. This occasioned a war between them and the Romans, which was put an end to by the intervention of the Sabine women, who, having laid aside their ornaments, and put on mourning, one token of which was dishevelling the hair, obtained a truce, after which a peace succeeded, and the Romans and Sabines became one people.

Ib. p. 287.

164. A rare bird, &c. A proverbial expression. See Pers. i.

46, alluding to the phænix.

166. A Venusian girl.] Some poor plain country wench, from Venusium, in Apulia.

Caius and Tiberius Gracchus, daughter to Scipio Africanus, that

And an ancient clemency is indulgent to old swine.

Does none from so great herds seem to you worthy?

Let her be handsome, decent, rich, fruitful: in porticos
Let her dispose her old ancestors, more chaste

Than every Sabine, with dishevelled hair, who put an end to the war:

(A rare bird in the earth, and very like a black swan)—
Who could bear a wife that has all these? I'd rather,
Rather have a Venusian (girl) than you, Cornelia, mother
Of the Gracchi, if, with great virtues, you bring

Great haughtiness, and you number triumplis as part of your dow'ry.

Take away, I pray, your Hannibal, and Syphax conquer'd

In his camp, and depart with the whole of Carthage.

170

"Spare, I pray, O Pæan; and thou, goddess, lay down thine arrows;

conquered Hannibal, and Syphax, king of Numidia, whose camp he burned, and subjected Carthage to the power of Rome, to which it first became tributary, and then was destroyed and rased to the ground by Scipio Æmilianus.

168. Great haughtiness.] The poet having before satirized the women, as not endowed with virtues sufficient to make a man happy in marriage, here allows that it might be possible for a large assemblage of virtues to meet together; but yet all these might be spoiled and counteracted by the pride which might attend the person possessed of them.

169—70. Your Hannibal—Syphax—Carthage.] See note on l. 166.—i. e. If, as part of her merit, she is to be for ever boasting of the victories and triumphs of her sons, assuming a very high respect on those accounts, her pride would make her troublesome and intolerable: a poor country girl, who had none of these things to putf her up, would be far more eligible than even Cornelia herself, under such circumstances. In short, Juvenal is not for allowing any such thing as a woman without some bad fault or other.

171. Paan.] Apollo—either from $\pi \alpha \iota \omega$, Gr. to strike, because he struck and slew the Python with his arrows—or from $\pi \alpha \iota \omega v$, a physician-medicus. Apollo was the fabled god of physic.

Thou goddess.] Diana, who slew the seven daughters of Niobe, as Apollo slew the seven sons. Niobe was the wife of Amphion, king of Thebes, by whom she had seven sons, (according to some, fourteen sons,) and seven daughters; of which, together with her high birth, she grew so proud, as to slight the sacrifices which the Theban women offered to Diana, comparing herself with Latona, and, because she had borne more children, even setting herself above her, which the children of Latona, Apollo, and Diana, resenting, he slew the males, together with the father, and she the females; on which Niobe was struck dumb with grief, and is feigned to have been turned into marble.

SAT. VI.

Nil pueri faciunt, ipsam configite matrem; Amphion clamat: sed Pæan contrahit arcum. Extulit ergo gregem natorum, ipsumque parentem, Dum sibi nobilior Latonæ gente videtur, 175 Atque eadem scrofà Niobe fœcundior albà. Quæ tanti gravitas? quæ forma, ut se tibi semper Imputet? hujus enim rari, summique voluptas Nulla boni, quoties animo corrupta superbo Plus aloës, quam mellis, habet. Quis deditus autem 180 Usque adeo est, ut non illam, quam laudibus effert, Horreat, inque diem septenis oderit horis? Quædam parva quidem; sed non toleranda maritis: Nam quid rancidius, quam quod se non putat ulla Formosam, nisi quæ de Tuscà Græcula facta est? 185 De Sulmonensi mera Cecropis? omnia Græce; Cum sit turpe minus nostris nescire Latine. Hoc sermone pavent; hoc iram, gaudia, curas. Hoc cuncta effundunt animi secreta. Quid ultra? Concumbunt Græce—dones tamen ista puellis: 190 Tune etiam, quam sextus et octogesimus annus Pulsat, adhuc Græce? non est hic sermo pudicus

172. The chidren do nothing, &c. To provoke thee. The poet is here shewing, in this allusion to the fable of Niobe and her children, that the pride of woman is such, as not only to harass mankind, but even to be levelled at, and provoke, the gods themselves, so as to bring ruin on whole families.

175. More noble.] On account of her birth, as the daughter of Tantalus, king of Corinth, or, according to some, of Phrygia, and as wife of Amphion.

176. Than the white sow. Found by Æneas near Lavinium, which brought thirty pigs at a litter, and which was to be his direction where to build the city of Alba. Virg. Æn. iii. 390—3. Æn. viii. 43-8.

177 What gravity.] Gravitas may here signify sedateness, sobriety of behaviour.

178. Impute. i. e. That she should be always reckoning up her good qualities to you, and setting them to your account, as if you were so much her debtor, on account of her personal accomplishments, that you have no right to find fault with her pride and ill-humour. A metaphorical expression, alluding to the person's imputing, or charging something to the account of another, for which the latter is made his debtor.

180. More of aloes, than of honey. More bitter than sweet in her temper and behaviour.

- Given up, &c. To his wife, so uxorious.

181. As not to abhor, &c. Though he may be lavish in her praises, in some respects, yet no man can be so blind to her pride and " The children do nothing, pierce the mother herself;"

Cries Amphion: but Apollo draws his bow,

And took off the head of children, and the parent himself,

While Niobe seems to herself more noble than the race of Latona, 175

And more fruitful than the white sow.

What gravity—what beauty is of such value, as that she should always herself to you

Impute? for of this rare and highest good there is

No comfort, as often as, corrupted with a proud mind,

She has more of aloes, than of honey. But who is given up 180

To such a degree, as not to abhor her whom he extols

With praises, and hate her for seven hours every day?

Some things indeed are small; but not to be borne by husbands:

For what can be more fulsome, than that none should think her-self

Handsome, tunless she who from a Tuscan becomes a Grecian? 185 From a Sulmonian, a mere Athenian? every thing in Greek;

Since it is less disgraceful to our ladies to be ignorant of speaking Latin.

In this dialect they fear, in this they pour forth their anger, joy, cares, In this all the secrets of their minds. What beside?

They prostitute themselves in Greek. Yet you may indulge those things to girls:

But do you too, whose eighty-sixth year

Beats, speak Greek still? This is not a decent dialect ill temper, as not to have frequent occasion to detest her many hours in the day.

185. From a Tuscan, &c.] The poet here attacks the affectation of the women, and their folly, in speaking Greek instead of their own language. Something like our ladies affectation of introducing French phrases on all occasions. The Greek language was much affected in Rome, especially by the higher ranks of people; and the ladies, however ignorant of their own language, were mighty fond of cultivating Greek, and affected to mix Greek phrases in their conversation.

186. A Sulmonian.] Sulmo, a town of Peligni, in Italy, about ninety miles from Rome-it was the birth-place of Ovid.

—— Athenian.] Cecropis.—Athens was called Cecropia, from Cecrops, who reigned in Attica, and was the first king of Athens. It may be supposed that the poet here means to ridicule some awkward country ladies, who, when they came to Rome, affected to speak Greek with elegance.

188. They fear, &c.] Express their fears, joys, anger, and, in short, all their passions.

190. To girls.] This may be allowable perhaps in giddy girls—in them such affectation may be forgiven.

192. Beats.] Pulsat—knocks at the door, as we say, or beats in the pulse.

205

In vetulà: quoties lascivum intervenit illud ZΩH KAI YYXH, modo sub lodice relictis Uteris in turbà: quod enim non excitat inguen 195 Vox blanda et nequam? digitos habet.—Ut tamen omnes Subsident pennæ (dicas hæc mollius Æmo Quanquam, et Carpophoro) facies tua computat annos. Si tibi legitimis pactam junctamque tabellis Non es amaturus, ducendi nulla videtur 200 Causa; nec est quare cœnam et mustacea perdas, Labente officio, crudis donanda: nec illud, Quod prima pro nocte datur; cum lance beatâ Dacicus, et scripto radiat Germanicus auro. Si tibi simplicitas uxoria, deditus uni Est animus: submitte caput crevice paratâ Ferre jugum: nullam invenies, quæ parcat amanti. Ardeat ipsa licet, tormentis gaudet amantis.

193-4. That wanton Zwn, &c. This was a wanton expressionmy life! my soul!-which the women affected to express in Greek. See Mart. lib. x. epigr. lxviii. l. 5-8.

194. Just now left, &c. The poet reproves the old women for ex pressing themselves in public, or in a crowd of company (turba), in phrases, which are made use of in the more private and retired scenes' of lasciviousness, from which these old women, if judged by their conversation, may be suspected to have newly arrived.

196. It has fingers.] Is as provocative as the touch.
196—7. All desires, &c.] Pennæ—lit. feathers. Metaph.—alluding to birds, such as peacocks, &c. which set up their feathers when pleased, and have a gay appearance; but they presently subside on approach of danger, or of any dislike. Thus, however lastivious words may tend to raise the passions, when uttered by the young and handsome; yet, from such an old hag, they will have a contrary effect—all will subside into calmness.

197. Though you may say, &c.] q. d. However you may excel in softness of pronunciation, when you use such phrases, even Æmus and Carpophorus, the two Grecian comedians, whose fame is so great for their soft and tender manner of uttering lascivious speeches on the stage, (see note on sat. iii. l. 98.) yet fourscore and six stands written on your face, which has at least as many wrinkles as you are years old-a sure antidote.

199. Lawful deeds. Tabellis legitimis-by such writings and contracts as were by law required-q. d. If, for the above reasons, you are not likely to love any woman you marry-l. 200.

201. Lose. i. e. Throw away the expense of a marriage-enter-

-- Bride-cakes.] Mustacea-were a sort of cakes made of meal, anise seed, cummin, and other ingredients, moistened with mustum, new wine-whence probably their name; they were of a carminative kind.—They were used at weddings. AINSW.

In an old woman: as often as intervenes that wanton Zan nat Juxa, words just now left under the coverlet

You use in public: for what passion does not a soft and lewd 195

Word excite? It has fingers.—Nevertheless, that all

Desires may subside (though you may say these things softer Than Æmus, and Carpophorus) your face computes your years.

If one, contracted, and joined to you by lawful deeds, You are not about to love, of marrying there appears no 200 Cause, nor why you should lose a supper, and bride-cakes, To be given to weak stomachs, their office ceasing; nor that Which is given for the first night, when the Dacic in the happy dish, And the Germanic shines with the inscribed gold. If you have uxorious simplicity, your mind is devoted 205 To her alone: submit your head, with a neck prepared To bear the yoke: you'll find none who can spare a lover.

202. To weak stomachs. To the guests who have raw and queasy stomachs, in order to remove the flatulency and indigestion occasioned by eating too copiously at the entertainment.

Tho' she should burn, she rejoices in the torments

- Their office ceasing.] Labente officio. - It was so much reckoned a matter of duty to attend the marriage-entertainments of friends, that those, who were guests on the occasion, were said ad officium venire. Labente officio here means the latter end of the feast, when the company was going to break up, their duty then almost being ended-it was at this period that the bride-cakes were carried about and distributed to the company. See sat. ii. l. 132-5.

203. The Dacic. Dacieus-a gold coin, having the image of Domitian, called Dacicus, from his conquest of the Dacians.

The happy dish. Alluding to the occasion of its being put to this use.

204. Germanic.] This was also a gold coin with the image of Domitian, called Germanicus, from his conquest of the Germans. A considerable sum of these pieces was put into a broad plate, or dish, and presented by the husband to the bride on the wedding night, as a sort of price for her person. This usage obtained among the Greeks, as among the Jews, and is found among many eastern nations.—See Parkh. Heb. Lex. אחדר, No. 3.—Something of this kind was customary in many parts of England, and perhaps is so still, under the name of dow-purse.

- Inscribed gold.] i. e. Having the name and titles of the emperor stamped on it.

205. Uxorious simplicity.] So simply uxorious—so very simple as to be governed by your wife.

206. Submit your head, &c.] Metaph. from oxen who quietly submit to the yoke. See l. 43, and note.

207. Who can spare a lover.] Who will not take the advantage of a man's affection for her to use him ill.

208. Tho' she should burn, &c.] Though she love to distraction, VOL. I.

Et spoliis: igitur longe minus utilis illi Uxor, quisquis erit bonus, optandusque maritus. 210 Nil unquam invità donabis conjuge: vendes Hâc obstante nihil: nihil, hæc si nolit, emetur. Hæc dabit affectus: ille excludetur amicus Jam senior, cujus barbam tua janua vidit. Testandi cum sit lenonibus, atque lanistis. 215 Libertas, et juris idem contingat arenæ, Non unus tibi rivalis dictabitur hæres.

" Pone crucem servo:" " meruit quo crimine servus " Supplicium? quis testis adest? quis detulit? audi, " Nulla unquam de morte hominis cunctatio longa est." 220" O demens, ita servus homo est? nil fecerit, esto: " Hoc volo, sic jubeo, sit pro ratione voluntas." Imperat ergo viro: sed mox hæc regna relinquit,

Permutatque domos, et flammea conterit: inde-

Avolat, et spreti repetit vestigia lecti.

225

she takes delight in plaguing and plundering the man who loves her.

209-10. Less useful to him, &c. The better husband a man is, the more will she tyrannize over him; therefore an honest man, who would make a good husband, will find that, of all men, he has the least reason to marry, and that a wife will be of less use to him than to a man of a different character.

213. She.] Hæc-this wife of yours.

--- Will give affections. Direct your affections-dictate to you in what manner you shall respect, or ill-treat, your friends-whom you are to like, and whom to dislike.

214. Whose beard your gate hath seen.] An old friend, who used always to be welcome to your house, ever since the time he had first a beard on his chin.

215. To make a will, &c.] q. d. Panders, prize-fighters, and gladiators, have liberty to make their wills as they please, but your wife will dictate yours, and name not a few of her paramours, your rivals, to enjoy your estate. N. B. All the Romans, even the most inferior and most infamous sort of them, had the power of making wills. DRYD.

216. The amphitheatre. Arenæ-metonym. the gladiators belonging to it.

218. " Set up, &c." Crucifixion was the usual way of putting slaves to death, and of this the masters had the power-here the wife bids her husband do it, only out of caprice.

- "For what crime, &c."] The words of the husband re-monstrating against this piece of wanton barbarity.

219. "Hear."] Attend-mark what I say.

220. "No delay," &c.] Surely where the death of a fellow-creature is depending, the matter should be well considered, and not

210

And spoils of a lover: therefore a wife is by far less useful To him, whoever will be a good and desirable husband.

You will never bestow any thing against your wife's will: you will

Nothing if she opposes: nothing, if she be unwilling, will be bought: She will give affections: that friend will be shut out,

Now grown old, whose beard your gate hath seen.

When there is liberty to pimps and fencers to make a will, 215

And the same right happens to the amphitheatre, Not one rival only will be dictated as your heir.

- " Set up a cross for your slave:"-" for what crime has the slave " deserved
- " Punishment? what witness is there? who accused?-hear-
- " No delay is ever long concerning the death of a man."
- " O madman !-so, a slave is a man! be it so-lie has done no-" thing,
- "This I will—thus I command—let my will stand as a reason."

Therefore she governs her husband: but presently leaves these realms.

And changes houses, and wears out her bridal veils: from thence She flies away, and seeks again the footsteps of her despised bed. 225 hastily transacted-no delay, for deliberation, should be thought long.

221. "O madman, &c."] The words of the imperious wife, who insists upon her own humour to be the sole reason of her actions. She even styles her husband a fool, or madman, for calling a slave a man. She seems to deny the poor slave human nature and human feelings, such is her pride and savage cruelty!

223. She governs, &c.] Therefore, in this instance, as in all others, it is plain that she exercises a tyranny over her husband.

"Leaves these realms." i. e. Her husband's territories, over which she ruled, in order to seek new conquests, and new dominion over other men.

224. Changes houses.] She clopes from her husband to others and so from house to house, as often as she chose to change from man to man.

- Wears out her bridal veils. The flameum was a bridal veil, with which the bride's face was covered, during the marriage ceremony: it was of a yellow, or flame-colour-whence its name.

She divorced herself so often, and was so often married, that she even wore out, as it were, her veil, with the frequent use of it.

225. She flies away, &c.] The inconstancy and lewdness of this woman was such, that, after running all the lengths which the law allowed, by being divorced eight times, she leaves her paramours, and even comes back again to the man whom she first left.

And seeks again. Traces back the footsteps which once led her from his bed.

Ornatas paulo ante fores, pendentia linquit Vela domûs, et adhuc virides in limine ramos. Sic crescit numerus; sic fiunt octo mariti Quinque per autumnos: titulo res digna sepulchri.

Desperanda tibi salva concordia socru:
Illa docet spoliis nudi gaudere mariti:
Illa docet, missis a corruptore tabellis,
Nil rude, nil simplex rescribere: decipit illa
Custodes, aut ære domat: tuno corpore sano
Advocat Archigenem, onerosaque pallia jactat.
Abditus interea latet accersitus adulter,
Impatiensque moræ silet, et præputia ducit.

235

240

230

Filiolam turpi vetulæ producere turpem.

Nulla fere causa est, in qua non fæmina litem

Moverit. Accusat Manilia, si rea non est.

Component ipsæ per se, formantque libellos,

Scilicet expectas, ut tradat mater honestos, Aut alios mores, quam quos habet? utile porro

226. The doors—adorned, &c.] See before, I. 52, and note—i. e. She lives but a very short time with each of her husbands, quitting them, as it were, while the marriage garlands, veils, &c. were hanging about the doors.

228. Eight husbands—in five autumns.] The Roman law allowed eight divorces—beyond that was reckoned adultery.

Of these divorces Seneca says—De Beneficiis, c. xvi. "Does any body now blush at a divorce, since certain illustrious and noble women compute their years, not by the number of consuls, but by the number of husbands they have had?"

Tertullian says, Apol. c. vi. "Divorce was now looked upon as " one fruit of marriage."

Whon Martial is satirizing Thelesina as an adulteress, he represents her as having exceeded the number of divorces allowed by law.

Aut minus, aut certe non plus tricesima lux est, Et nubit decimo jam Thelesina viro. Quæ nubit toties, non nubit, adultera lege est.

Lib. v. ep. vii.

229. The title of a sepulchre.] Such actions as these, like other great and illustrious deeds, are well worthy to be recorded by a monumental inscription. Iron.—It was usual, on the sepulchres of women, to mention the number of husbands to which they had been married.

230. Mother-in-law.] The poet seems willing to set forth the fernale sex, as bad, in every point of view.—Here he introduces one as a mother-in-law, disturbing the peace of the family, carrying on her daughter's infidelity to her husband, and playing tricks for this purpose.

231. She teaches.] Instructs her daughter.

To plunder, &c.] Till the poor husband is stripped of the has.

The doors, a little before adorned, the pendent veils
Of the house she leaves, and the boughs yet green at the threshold.
Thus the number increases, thus eight husbands are made
In five autumns—a matter worthy the title of a sepulchre.

You must despair of concord while a mother-in law lives: 230 She teaches to rejoice in the plunder of the stripped husband:

She teaches, to letters sent by a corrupter,

To write back nothing ill bred or simple: she deceives

Keepers, or quiets them with money. Then, while in health, She sends for Archigenes, and throws away the heavy clothes. 235

Mean while the sent-for adulterer lies hidden,

Is silent, impatient of delay, and prepares for the attempt.

But do you expect that a mother should infuse honest

Morals, or other than what she has herself? moreover, it is profitable. For a base old woman to bring up a base daughter. 240

There is almost no cause in which a woman has not stirr'd up
The suit. Manilia accuses, if she be not the accused.
They by themselves compose, and form libels,

232. A corrupter.] A gallant who writes billets-doux, in order to corrupt her daughter's chastity.

233. Nothing ill bred or simple.] To send no answers that can discourage the man from his purpose, either in point of courtesy or contrivance.

233-4. She deceives keepers, &c.] She helps on the amour with her daughter, by either deceiving, or bribing, any spies which the husband might set to watch her.

235. Archigenes.] The name of a physician.—The old woman shams sick, and, to carry on the trick, pretends to send for a physician, whom the gallant is to personate.

— Throws away the heavy clothes.] Pretending to be in a violent fever, and not able to bear the weight and heat of so many bed-clothes.

236. Mean while, &c.] The old woman takes this opportunity to secrete the adulterer in her apartment, that when the daughter comes, under a pretence of visiting her sick mother, he may accomplish his design.

238. A mother should infuse, &c.] It is not very likely that such a mother should bring up her daughter in any better principles than her own.

239. It is profitable, &c.] Since, by having a daughter as base as herself, she has opportunities of getting gain, and profit, by assisting in her prostitution, being well fee'd by her gallants.—He next attacks the litigiousness of women.

241. Almost no cause.] No action at law, which a woman has not fomented. If she be not defendant, she will be plaintiff, l. 242.

242. Manilia, &c.] An harlot, whom Hostilius Mancinus, the Curule Ædile, prosecuted for hitting him with a stone.

243. Compose, and form libels.] The libelli in the courts of law

SAT. VI.

Principium atque locos Celso dictare paratæ. 245 Endromidas Tyrias, et fæmineum ceroma Quis nescit? vel quis non vidit vulnera pali, Quem cavat assiduis sudibus, scutoque lacessit? Atque omnes implet numeros; dignissima prorsus Florali matrona tubâ; nisi si quid in illo 250 Pectore plus agitet, veræque paratur arenæ. Quem præstare potest mulier galeata pudorem, Quæ fugit a sexu, et vires amat? hæc tamen ipsa Vir nollet fieri: nam quantula nostra voluptas! Quale decus rerum, si conjugis auctio fiat, Balteus, et manicæ, et cristæ, crurisque sinistri 255 Dimidium tegmen: vel si diversa movebit at Rome, seem to answer to those pleadings among us, which are drawn up in writing by skilful lawyers on the part of the complainant. In our civil law-courts the term libellus is still in use, and answers to a declaration at common law, which contains the complaint.

244. Celsus, &c. He was a noble orator and eminent lawyer: he left behind him seven books of institutes, all written by himself. The women had the impudence to think that they could direct him in the management of a cause; viz.

— The beginning.] i. e. How to open it—the exordium.

— The places.] The sedes argumenti, or parts of the libel from which the arguments were taken, and on which they were grounded, were called loci-so that they not only dictated to Celsus how to open a cause, but how to argue and manage it.

245. The Tyrian rugs, wc.] Women had the impudence to practise fencing, and to anoint themselves with the ceroma, or wrestler's oil-like them they put on the endromidæ, or rugs, after their exercise, to keep them from catching cold; but, to shew their pride, they were dyed in Tyrian purple.

246. The wounds of the stake. This was the exercise of the palaria, used by the soldiers at their camp, but now practised by impudent women. 'The palus was a stake fixed in the ground, about six feet high, at which they went through all the fencer's art, as with an enemy, by way of preparation to a real fight.

247. She hollows, &c.] By fencing at this post they wore hollow places in it, by the continual thrusts of their weapons against it, which were swords made of wood, with which the soldiers and prizefighters practised the art of fencing, (as we do now with foils,)these were used by these masculine ladies.

And provokes with the shield. Presenting their shields to the post as to a real enemy, and as if provoking an attack.

248. Fills up all her parts. Omnes implet numeros.—This phrase may be understood-" goes through all the motions incident " to the exercise."

249. The Floralian trumpet. The Floral games, which were Prepared to dictate to Celsus, the beginning, and the places.

The Tyrian rugs, and the female ceroma, 245 Who knows not? or who does not see the wounds of the stake,

Who knows not? or who does not see the wounds of the stake,
Which she hollows with continual wooden-swords, and provokes with the shield?

And fills up all her parts; altogether a matron most worthy
The Floralian trumpet; unless she may agitate something more
In that breast of hers; and be prepared for the real theatre. 2

What modesty can an helmeted woman shew,

Who deserts her sex, and loves feats of strength? yet she herself

Would not become a man: for how little is our pleasure!

What a fine shew of things, if there should be an auction of your wife's,

Her belt, her gauntlets, and crests, and the half covering

Of her left leg? or, if she will stir up different battles, celebrated in honour of the goddess Flora, were exhibited by harlots with naked impudence, who danced through the streets to the sound of a trumpet.

250. In that breast of hers.] Unless she carry her impudence into another channel, and, by these preparations, mean seriously to engage upon the theatre; otherwise one should think that she was preparing to enter the lists with the naked harlots in the feasts of Flora.

251. An helmeted woman.] Who can so far depart from the decency and modesty of her sex as to wear an helmet.

252. Feats of strength.] Masculine exercises.

253. How little is our pleasure.] In intrigues, comparatively with that of the women—therefore, though such women desert their sex, yet they would not change it.

254. What a fine shew of things, &c.] Decus rerum—how creditable—what an honour to her husband and family, to have a sale of the wife's military accourtements, and the whole inventory to consist of nothing but warlike attire!

255. Her belt.] Balteus signifies the sword-belt worn by soldiers and prize-fighters.

Her gauntlets.] A sort of armed glove to defend the hand.

Crests.] The crests which were worn on the helmets, made of tufts of horse-hair, or plumes of feathers.

— The half covering, &c.] The buskin, with which the lower part of the left leg was covered, as most exposed; as in those days the combatants put forth the left leg when they engaged an enemy, and therefore armed it half-way with a stout buskin to ward off the blows to which it was liable—the upper part was covered by the shield. So Farnaby, and Jo. Britannicus. But this seems contrary to what Virgil says, Æn. vii. 1. 689, 90, of the Hernicians:

Instituêre pedis; crudus tegit altera pero.

256. If she will stir up, &c.] If, instead of the exercises above

Prælia, tu felix, ocreas vendente puellà.

Hæ sunt, quæ tenui sudant in cyclade, quarum

Delicias et panniculus bombycinus urit.

Aspice, quo fremitu monstratos perferat ictus,

Et quanto galeæ curvetur pondere; quanta

Poplitibus sedeat: quam denso fascia libro;

Et ride, scaphium positis cum sumitur armis.

Dicite vos neptes Lepidi, cæcive Metelli,

Gurgitis aut Fabii, quæ ludia sumpserit unquam

Hos habitus? quando ad palum gemat uxor Asylli?

Semper habet lites, alternaque jurgia lectus, described, she chooses other kinds of engagements, as those of the Retiarii or Mirmillones, who wore a sort of boots on their legs, it would, in such a case, make you very happy to see your wife's boots set to sale.

257. These are the women, &c.] He here satirizes the women, as complaining under the pressure of their light women's attire, and yet, when loaded with military arms, were very contented. In short, when they were doing wrong, nothing was too hard for them; but when they were doing right, every thing was a burden. See before, 1. 94.—102.

259. Burns.] Juvenal, in the preceding line, says that they sweat in a thin mantle, cyclade (made perhaps of light linen)—but here, that they complain they are quite on fire if they have a little silk on. Delicias means, lit. delights—by which we may understand their persons, in which they delighted, and which were also the delights of men—q. d. their charms.

260. With what a noise.] By this it should seem probable, that the custom of making their thrusts at the adversary, with a smart stamp of the foot, and a loud—"Hah"—was usual, as among us. These seem alluded to here, as instances of the indelicacy of these female fencers.

——She can convey.] Perfero—signifies to carry, or convey to a designed person or place—hence, perferre ictus may be a technical expression for a fencer's making his thrust, by which he conveys the hit or stroke to his adversary.

——The shewn hits.] Monstratos ictus—i. e. the artificial hits which have been shewn her by the fencing-master who taught her.

261. How great.] How firmly—how dexterously—with what an air.

262. On her hams.] She squats upon her hams, to avoid the blow which is made at her.

——Her swathe, &c.] Fascia—signifies a swathe, band, or roller, which the men used on their thighs and legs, instead of breeches, Ainsw. Such, on these occasions, were worn by these women.

—— A fold.] Libro—quasi volumine. They could complain when dressed like women, though in the thinnest attire; but when they engaged in these indecent and improper exercises, nothing was thought cumbersome.

Happy you, your wench selling her boots.

These are the women who sweat in a thin gown, whose Delicate bodies even a little piece of silk burns.

Behold, with what a noise she can convey the shewn hits,

260 And with what a weight of helmet she can be bent; how great

She can sit on her hams: her swathe with how thick a fold:

And laugh, when, her arms laid down, a female head-dress is taken. Say, ye grand-daughters of Lepidus, or of blind Metellus,

Or Fabius Gurges, what actress ever took 265

These habits? when would the wife of Asyllus groan at a post? The bed has always strifes, and alternate quarrels, 263. Female head-dress.] Scaphium.—From this seems derived the Fr. escossion, which Boyer explains by coiffure de tête pour des femmes-hence, perhaps, Engl. coif. See Ainsw. Scaphiumand Marshal in loc.

- Is taken. Sumitur .- i. e. When the lady puts off her heavy helmet, (l. 261.) and takes, i. e. puts on, her coif, or female headdress, thus changing from the appearance of a fierce gladiator to that of a delicate female, the sight must be highly ridiculous; -- ride, laugh—q. d. aspice et ride.—Comp. l. 260.

264. Ye grand-daughters of Lepidus.] The poet here intimates how much worse the women were grown, since the days of the great men here mentioned, who brought up their daughters to imitate their own severe and grave manners; not to expose themselves, like the women in more modern times; and, doubtless, it may be supposed, that the daughters of these respectable persons brought up theirs as they had been educated themselves.

By Lepidus is here meant-Am. Lepidus, who was chosen by the censors chief of the senate-he was twice consul, pont. maxi-mus, and colleague with Fulvius Flaccus, as censor.

- Blind Metellus. Who, when the temple of Vesta was on fire, lost his eyes in saving the palladium from the flames. See sat. iii. l. 139, and note.

265. Fabius Gurges. The son of Q. Fabius the censor; he fined some matrons for the crime of adultery, and with the money built a temple to Venus.-He was very extravagant when young, and his expenses almost swallowed up his fortune-hence he was named Gurges; but he afterwards grew sober, frugal, and an example of virtue.

--- What actress, &c. | Ever had so much impudence as to habit and exercise herself in the manner these matrons do? See l. 104,

and note.

266. The wife of Asyllus. Asyllus was a famous gladiator and prize-fighter; but when did his wile ever behave as these ladies do. fencing at a post, habited like men, and pushing at the mark with the same noise as the men make?

267. The bed, &c. Here the poet touches on what we call a curtain-lecture.

| In quo nupta jacet: minimum dormitur in illo. | |
|--|--------|
| Tunc gravis illa viro, tunc orbà tigride pejor, | |
| Cum simulat gemitus occulti conscia facti, | 270 |
| Aut odit pueros, aut fictà pellice plorat | |
| Uberibus semper lachrymis, semperque paratis | 11 100 |
| In statione suà, atque expectantibus illam, | |
| Quo jubeat manare modo: tu credis amorem; | |
| Tu tibi tunc, curruca, places, fletumque labellis | 275 |
| Exsorbes; quæ scripta, et quas lecture tabellas, | |
| Si tibi zelotypæ retegantur scrinia mæchæ! | |
| Sed jacet in servi complexibus, aut equitis: dic, | |
| Dic aliquem, sodes hic, Quintiliane, colorem. | |
| Heremus: dic ipsa: olim convenerat, inquit, | 230 |
| Ut faceres tu quod velles; necnon ego possem | |
| Indulgere mihi: clames licet, et maré cœlo | |
| Confundas, homo sum. Nihil est audacius illis | |
| Deprensis: iram atque animos a crimine sumunt. | |
| Unde hæc monstra tamen, vel quo de fonte requiris? | 285 |

269. A bereaved tigress. A tigress robbed of her whelps, than which nothing can be supposed more fierce and terrible. Comp. Prov. xvii. 12. Hos. xiii. 8.

270. Of an hidden fact.] Some secret adultery of her own—in this case she pretends some charge against her husband of the like kind.

271. Hates the servants.] Pueros—pretends to be angry at them as having misbehaved towards her, or perhaps as privy to their master's amours.

— A mistress being pretended.] Pretends that her husband keeps some other woman.

273. In their station, &c.] A metaphor taken from the order in which soldiers stand ready to obey the commands of their officers—so her tears wait upon her will, and flow as, and when, she pleases.

- Waiting for her, &c.] Entirely attending her pleasure-waiting her direction.

274. You think it love-] That it is all out of pure fondness and concern for you.

275: Hedge-sparrow.] The poor cuckold, Juvenal calls curruca, or hedge-sparrow, because that bird feeds the young cuckows that are laid in its nest. So the cuckold must bring up other people's children.

____ Suck up the tears.] Kiss them off her cheeks, and please yourself with thinking that all this is from her passion for you,

276. What writings, &c.] What a fine discovery of billets-doux and love-letters would be made, if the cabinet of this strumpet were to be opened, who all this while is endeavouring to persuade you that she is jealous of you, and that she grieves as an innocent and injured woman.

In which a wife lies: there is little sleep there.

Then she is grievous to her husband, then worse than a bereaved tigress,

When, conscious of an hidden fact, she feigns groans, 270

Or hates the servants, or, a mistress being pretended, she weeps

With ever fruitful tears, and always ready

In their station, and waiting for her,

In what manner she may command them to flow: you think (it) love—

You then, O hedge-sparrow, please yourself, and suck up the tears 275

With your lips: what writings and what letters would you read

If the desks of the jealous strumpet were opened!—

But she lies in the embraces of a slave, or of a knight; "Tell,

"Tell us, I pray, here, Quintilian, some colour."-

"We stick fast:"—"say yourself:" "formerly it was agreed," says she, 280

"That you should do what you would; and I also might "Indulge myself: though you should clamour, and confound

"The sea with heaven, I am a woman." Nothing is more bold

Than they are when discovered; they assume anger and courage from their crime.

Do you ask—whence these monstrous things, or from what source?

278. She lies in the embraces, &c.] Suppose her actually caught in the very act.

279. Tell us, Quintilian, some colour.] O thou great master of language and oratory, tell us, if you can, some colour of an excuse for such behaviour. See sat. vii. 155.

280. We stick fast.] Even Quintilian himself is at a loss. "We orators (Quintilian is supposed to answer) have nothing to say "in excuse for such a fact."

—— Say yourself.] Though none other could attempt to excuse or palliate such actions, yet women have impudence and presence of mind enough to find some method of answering—"So pray, madam, let us hear what you can say for yourself."

283. I am a woman.] Homo sum.—Homo is a name common to us both, and so are the frailties of human nature; hence, having agreed mutually to do as we liked, you have no right to complain.—Though you should bawl your heart out, and turn the world topsyturvy, I can say no more. Comp. sat. ii. 25, and note.

284. Anger. To resent reproofs.

- Courage. To defend what they have done.

So that, though, while undiscovered, they may affect a decent appearance, yet, when once discovered, they keep no measures with decency, either as to temper or behaviour.

285. Do you ask whence, &c.] The poet is now about to trace

Præstabat castas humilis fortuna Latinas Quondam, nec vitiis contingi parva sinebat Tecta labor, somnique breves, et vellere Tusco Vexatæ, duræque manus, ac proximus urbi Hannibal, et stantes Collina in turre mariti. Nunc patimur longæ pacis mala: sævior armis Luxuria incubuit, viotumque ulciscitur orbem. Nullum crimen abest, facinusque libidinis, ex quo Paupertas Romana perît: hinc fluxit ad istos Et Sybaris colles, hinc et Rhodos, atque Miletos, 295 Atque coronatum, et petulans, madidumque Tarentum. Prima peregrinos obscæna pecunia mores Intulit, et turpi fregerunt secula luxu Divitize molles. Quid enim Venus ebria curat? Inguinis et capitis quæ sint discrimina, nescit; 300 Grandia quæ mediis jam noctibus ostrea mordet, the vice and profligacy of the Roman women to their true source—viz. the banishment of poverty, labour, and industry, and the introduction of riches, idleness, and luxury. So the prophet Ezek. xvi. 49, concerning the profligacy of the Jewish women.

288. Short of sleep. Up early and down late, as we say.

- The Tuscan fleece. The wool which came from Tuscany, which was manufactured at Rome by the women.

289. Hannibal very near the city, &c.] This great Carthaginian general marched his army so nigh to Rome, that he encamped it within three miles of the city, which obliged the citizens to keep constant guard.

290. The Colline tower.] One of the gates of Rome was on an hill, and therefore called Porta Collina—here was probably some tower or other fortification, which, when an enemy was near, was garrisoned by the Roman people, some of which were constantly on duty. This made them sober and diligent.

292. Hath invaded us.] Incubuit. So Hor. lib. i. od. iii. l. 30, 1.

Nova sebrium terris incubuic cohors.

—— Avenges the conquer'd world.] Luxury, by destroying the manners of the Romans, plunged them into miseries, which might be truly said to revenge the triumphs of the Roman arms over the rest of the world.

:293. No crime is absent, &c.] The banishment of poverty occasioned also the banishment of that hardiness, plainness, and simplicity of living, for which the ancient Romans were remarkable; and this was the occasion of their introducing the vices of many of those countries which they had conquered, till every species of profligacy and lewdness overspread the city. Sat. ix. 131—3. As it follows—

294—5. Hence flowed to these hills, &c.] i. e. The seven hills of Rome, on which the city was built—here put for the city itself, or rather for the people.

300

An humble fortune rendered the Latin women chaste Formerly, nor did labour suffer their small houses

To be touched with vices; short of sleep, and with the Tuscan fleece

Their hands chafed and hard, and Hannibal very near the city,
And their husbands standing in the Colline tow'r.

290
Now we suffer the evils of a long peace; more cruel than arms,
Luxury hath invaded us, and avenges the conquer'd world.

No crime is absent, or foul deed of lust, since Roman poverty was lost. Hence flow'd to these Hills, Sybaris, hence Rhodes too, and hence Miletus,
And the crowned, and petulant, and drunken Tarentum.

Filthy money foreign manners first

Brought in, and soft riches weakened the ages with Base luxury. For what does a drunken woman regard?

She knows not the difference between her top and bottom.

She who eats large oysters at midnights,

295. Sybaris.] A city of Calabria, so addicted to pleasure and effeminacy, as to become proverbial.

— Khodes—Miletus (or Malta).] Were equally famous for lewdness and debauchery. See sat. iii. 69—71; and sat. viii. l. 113.

296. Tarentum.] A city of Calabria.

--- Crowned.] Alluding to the garlands and chaplets of flowers which they put on at their feasts.

—— Petulant.] The poet here alludes, not only to the insolence with which they refused to restore some goods of the Romans, which they had seized in their port, but also to their having sprinkled urine on one of the ambassadors which the Romans sent to demand them.

—— Drunken.] This may either allude to their excessive drinking, for sometimes madidus signifies drunk; or to their wetting or moistening their hair with costly continents. See Hor. ode iii. lib. ii. l. 13, et al. This piece of luxury, Juvenal here seems to insinuate, was adopted by the Romans from the people of Tarentum, and was one of the delicacies of the Romans at their feasts and convivial meetings.

297. Filthy money.] Obscena pecunia—so called, because of its defilement of the minds of the people, by inviting them to luxury, and of the obscene and vile purposes to which it is applied.

298. Soft riches.] Molles divitiæ—because the introducers of softness and efferninacy of all kinds.

299. A drunken woman.] Lit. a drunken Venus—q. d. a woman adding drunkenness to lewdness.

300. She knows not, &c.] Whether she stands on her head or her heels, as the saying is.

301. Who eats large oysters.] Which were reckoned incentives to level practices.

Cum perfusa mero spumant unguenta Falerno,
Cum bibitur conchâ, cum jam vertigine tectum
Ambulat, et geminis exurgit mensa lucernis.
I nunc, et dubita quà sorbeat aëra sannâ
305
Tullia; quid dicat notæ Collacia Mauræ;
Maura Pudicitiæ veterem cum præterit aram.
Noctibus hic ponunt lecticas, micturiunt hic;
Effigiemque Deæ longis siphonibus implent;
Inque vices equitant, ac lunâ teste moventur:
Inde domos abeunt. Tu calcas, luce reversà,
Conjugis urinam, magnos visurus amicos.
Nota Bonæ secreta Deæ, cum tibia lumbos

Acta Bonæ secreta Deæ, cum tiola lumbos
Incitat; et cornu pariter, vinoque feruntur
Attonitæ, crinemque rotant, ululantque Priapi
Mænades: ô quantus tunc illis mentibus ardor
Concubitûs! quæ vox saltante libidine! quantus
Ille meri veteris per crura madentia torrens!
Lenonum ancillas positâ Laufella coronâ
Provocat, et tollit pendentis præmia coxæ:

320

315

302. When ointments mixed, &c.] To such a pitch of luxury were they grown, that they mixed these ointments with their wine, to give it a perfume. See l. 155, and l. 418.

Foam. From the fermentation caused by the mixture.

303. Drinks out of a shell. The shell in which the perfume was kept. So concha is sometimes to be understood.—See Hor. lib. ii. ode vii. l. 22—3.

Or it may mean, here, some large shell, of which was made (or which was used as) a drinking cup: but the first sense seems to agree best with the preceding line.

304. Walks round, &c.] When a person is drunk, the house, and every thing in it, seems to turn round.

— With double candles.] The table seems to move upwards, and each candle appears double.

305. Go now.] After what you have heard, go and doubt, if you can, of the truth of what follows.

— With what a scoff, &c.] With what an impudent scoff she turns up her nose, in contempt of the goddess, mentioned l. 307—9.

306. What Collacia may say, &c.] What a filthy dialogue passes between the impudent Collacia and her confident Maura. These two, and Tullia above mentioned, were probably well-known strumpets in that day.

307. The old altar, &c.] Chastity had an altar, and was long worshipped as a goddess, but now despised and affronted by the beastly discourses and actions of these women.

308. Here they put their sedans, &c.] When they went on these nightly expeditions, they ordered their chairs to be set down here for the purpose. See şat. i. l. 32, and note; and this sat. l. 91, note.

310. The moon being witness.] Diana, the goddess of chastity, in 305

310

When ointments, mixed with Falernan wine, foam,

When she drinks out of a shell, when now, with a whirl, the house

Walks round, and the table rises up with double candles.

Go now, and doubt with what a scoff Tuliia sups up

The air; what Collacia may say to her acquaintance Maura,

When Maura passes by the old altar of Chastity.

Here they put down their sedans o' nights, here they stain

And defile the image of the goddess, and each other,

With their impurities, the moon being witness.

Thence they go away home. You tread, when the light returns, In the urine of your wife, as you go to see your great friends.

The secrets of the good goddess are known, when the pipe the loins

Incites; and also with the horn, and with wine, the Mænads of Priapus

Are driven, astonished, and toss their hair and howl.

315

O what unchaste desires in their minds are raised!

What a voice do they utter forth! how great

A torrent of filthiness flows all about them.

Laufella proposes a prize among the most impudent strumpets,

And, in the impure contention, obtains the victory:

320

heaven was called Phœbe, the moon, the sister of Phæbus, or the sun. So that this circumstance greatly heightens and aggravates their crimes, and shews their utter contempt of all modesty and chastity.

312. Of your wife.] This is argumentum ad hominem, to make Ursidius the less eager to marry.

— To see your great friends.] People went early in the morning to the levees of their patrons. See sat. iii. 127—30, and sat. v. 76—9.

313. The secrets of the good goddess. Secreta—the secret rites —i. e. the profanation and abuse of them by these women; these are now notorious. See before, sat. ii. l. 86, and note.

313—14. The pipe—horn—] These rites were observed with music and dancing, which, among these adandoned women, served to excite the horrid lewdness mentioned afterwards. See sat. ii. 1. 90.

314. Manads of Priapus.] Manades Priapi.—The Manades were women sacrificers to Bacchus; called Manades, from the Gr. paropus, to be mad—for so they appeared by their gestures and actions. Thus, these women, from their horrid acts of lewdness, might well be called the Manades, or mad votaries of the obscene Priapus.

With wine, &c.] All these circumstances were observable in the Mænades, in their frantic worship of Bacchus.

316. O what unchaste desires, &c.; This, and the following lines down to l. 333, exhibit a scene of lewdness, over which I have drawn the veil of paraphrase, in the words principally of a late ingenious translator.

Ipsa Medullinæ frictum crissantis adorat. Palmam inter dominas virtus natalibus æquat. Nil tibi per ludum simulabitur, omnia fient Ad verum, quibus incendi jam frigidus ævo Laomedontiades, et Nestoris hernia possit. 325 Tunc prurigo moræ impatiens: tunc fæmina simplex: Et pariter toto repetitus clamor ab antro: Jam fas est, admitte viros: jam dormit adulter? Illa jubet sumpto juvenem properare cucullo: Si nihil est, servis incurritur: abstuleris spem 330 Servorum, veniet conductus aquarius: hic si Quæritur, et desunt homines; mora nulla per ipsam, Quo minus imposito clunem submittat asello. Atque utinam ritus veteres, et publica saltem His intacta malis agerentur sacra: sed omnes 335 Noverunt Mauri, atque Indi, quæ psaltria penem Majorem, quam sint duo Cæsaris Anticatones, Illuc, testiculi sibi conscius unde fugit mus, Intulerit; ubi velari pictura jubetur, Quæcunque alterius sexûs imitata figuram est. 340 Et quis tune hominum contemptor numinis? aut quis Sympuvium ridere Numæ, nigrumque catinum, Et Vaticano fragiles de monte patellas

325. Priam.] The last king of Troy; he lived to a great age, and was slain by Pyrrhus at the siege of that city. Priam was the son of Laomedon; hence he is called Laomedontiades.

--- Nestor.] King. of Pylos; he is said to have lived three ages, and to have had an hernia, or rupture.

Ausus crat? sed nunc ad quas non Clodius aras?

327. The den.] Antrum is a den, or cave, or privy lurking-place.—Such, no doubt, was chosen by these abandoned women to meet in.

329. Hood.] -l. 118, note, to disguise him.

336. What singing wench, &c.] This, as plainly appears from what follows, alludes to P. Clodius, who, under the disguise of a singing-girl, in order to get at Pompeia, Cæsar's wife, went into the house of Cæsar, where the women were celebrating the rites of the Bona Dea. See a full account of this, Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. xiii. p. 145—7, and note b.

The Moors and Indians.] The inhabitants of the western and eastern parts of the world—q. d. This transaction of Clodius was public enough to be known all the world over.

337. Anticutes of Casar.] J. Casar, to reflect on the memory of Cato Major, wrote two books, which he called Anti-Catos; and when they were rolled up in the form of a cylinder, as all books then were, they made a considerable bulk.

341. Who of men was then, &c.] While the rites of the Bona Dea

She is all in rapture when Medullina acts her part.

The more vile, the more honour they obtain.

Nothing is feigned, all things are done

To the truth, by which might be fired, now cold with age,

Priam, and the hernia of Nestor.

325

Then their situation makes them impatient: then the woman is undisguised,

And a clamour is repeated together thro' all the den:

"Now 'tis right, admit the men: is the adulterer asleep already?" She bids a youth hasten, with an assumed hood:

If there be none, she rushes on slaves: if you take away the hope 380

Of having slaves, let an hired water-bearer come: if he Be sought, and men are wanting, there's no delay thro' her,

That she cannot prostitute herself to an ass.

I could wish the ancient rites, and the public worship,

Might at least be observed untouched by these evils: but all 335

The Moors, and Indians, know what singing weuch brought A stock of impudence, more full than the two Anticatos of Casar,

Thither, from whence a mouse flieth, conscious that he is a male;

Where every picture is commanded to be cover'd,

Which imitates the figure of the other sex.

340

And who of men was then a despiser of the deity? or who Dared to deride the wooden bowl of Numa, and the black dish, And the brittle ware from the Vatican mount?

But now at what alters is there not a Clodius?

were observed with such decency and purity as are hinted at in the preceding lines, where was there a man to be found hardy enough to act in contempt of the goddess?

342. The wooden bowl of Numa.] Numa was the second king of the Romans; he instituted many religious orders, and among the rest that of the vestals, who were the appointed priestesses of the Bona Dea: these were obliged, by vow, to chastity, which, if they violated, they were buried alive. The sympuvium was a wooden, or, according to some, an earthen bowl, used in their sacrifices by the institution of Numa. See an account of the vestals, Kennett, Ant. book ii. part ii. chap. 6.

—— The black dish. Some other of the sacrificial implements. 313. From the Vatican mount. Vessels made from the clay of this hill, which were also used in the sacrifices, and held formerly in the highest veneration.

344. At what altars, &c.] However these rites were venerated in times past, so that no man, but the debauched and impudent Clodius, would have violated them by his presence, yet, so depraved are mankind grown, just such as he was are now every day to be found, and who shew their impleties at every altar.

350

355

Audio quid veteres olim moneatis amici: 345 Pone seram, cohibe. Sed quis custodiet ipsos Custodes?, cauta est, et ab illis incipit uxor. Jamque eadem summis pariter minimisque libido; Nec melior, silicem pedibus quæ conterit atrum, Quam quæ longorum vehitur cervice Syrorum. Ut spectet ludos, conducit Ogulnia vestem, Conducit comites, sellam, cervical, amicas, Nutricem, et flavam, cui det mandata, puellam. Hæc tamen, argenti superest quodcunque paterni, Lævibus athletis, ac vasa novissima donat. Multis res angusta domi est: sed nulla pudorem Paupertatis habet; nec se metitur ad illum, Quem dedit hæc, posuitque modum. Tamen utile quid sit, Prospiciunt aliquando viri; frigusque, famemque,

345. I hear, &c.] q. d. I know what the friends of a man that had such a wife would have advised in old times, when they might, perhaps, have found somebody that they might have trusted; they would have said-"Lock her up-confine her-don't let her go "abroad-set somebody to watch- appoint a keeper to guard her." I answer, this might have succeeded then, but, in our more modern times, who will ensure the fidelity of the people that are to guard her? Now all are bad alike—therefore, whom shall we find to watch the keepers themselves?

347. Is sly, &c. And will watch her opportunity to tamper with the very people you set to watch her; she will bribe them over to her designs-these she will begin with first.

348. And now. Now-a-days all are corrupt alike, from the highest to the lowest of them.

349. Wears out the black flint, &c.] Who tramps the streets on

350. Who is carried, &c. In her chair on the shoulders of two Syrian slaves, the tallest and stoutest of which were always selected for this purpose. Cervix signifies the hinder part of the neck, and sometimes the shoulders. Ainsw. This is the most natural interpretation of the word in this place. See sat. i. 64; sat iii. 240, and note.

351. May see plays. May go to the public theatres.

--- Hires a garment. Something finer than she has of her own.

352. Attendants. Waiting-women to attend her.

- A chair. Sellam. This may mean a seat at the theatre. as well as a chair to be carried thither.

A pillow.] Or cushion to lean upon, like other fine ladies. --- Female friends.] Who may appear as her clients and dependents.

353. A nurse. The rich and noble had always, among their female servants, a woman whose business it was to look after their

I hear what ancient friends would formerly advise. 345 Put a lock-restrain her. But who will keep her very Keepers? your wife is sly, and begins from these.

And, now-a days, there is the same lust in the highest and in the lowest.

Nor is she better who wears out the black flint with her foot,

Than she who is carried on the shoulders of tall Syrians.

350

That she may see plays, Ogulnia hires a garment, She hires attendants, a chair, a pillow, female friends,

A nurse, and a yellow-haired girl to whom she may give her commands.

Yet she, whatever remains of her paternal money, And her last plate, gives to smooth wrestlers.

355

Many are in narrow circumstances: but none has the shame

Of poverty, nor measures herself at that measure

Which this has given, and laid down. Yet what may be useful Sometimes men foresee; and cold and hunger, at length children. Ogulnia, to exhibit this piece of expense, had such a one in her suite when she went into public, and was foolish enough to hire some woman for the purpose.

353. A yellow-haired girl.] Shining yellow hair was reckoned a great beauty, insomuch that flava puella is equal to pulchra puella .-

So Hor. lib. ii. ode iv. 1.14.

Phyllidis flavæ decorent parentes.

And again, lib. iii. ode ix. l. 19.

Si flava excutitur Chloë.

____ To whom she may give her commands. As to her confidante, imparting some message, perhaps, to her gallant.

355. Gives to smooth wrestlers.] The end of all is, that, after her vanity and folly are gratified, by an expensive appearance which she can't afford, she spends the very last shilling to gratify her passion for young and handsome wrestlers. By the epithet laves, smooth—we may understand that the wrestlers, in order to engage the affections of the women by their appearance, plucked off the hairs of their beards to make their faces smooth, and to give them an appearance of youth. It was the fashion for the ladies to be very fond of performers on the stage, such as actors, wrestlers, &c. See the story of Hippia, in this satire, l. 82-113.

356. None has the shame, &c. No woman dreads the disgrace of reducing herself to poverty by her extravagance, or is possessed of that modest frugality which should attend narrow circumstances.

357. Measures herself, &c, Metaph. from ascertaining the quantity of things by measure.

358. Which this has given, &c.] However poor a woman may be, yet she never thinks of proportioning her expenses to her circumstances, by measuring what she can spend by what she has.

| Formica tandem quidam expavêre magistra. | 360 |
|--|-----|
| Prodiga non sentit pereuntem formina censum: | |
| At velut exhaustâ redivivus pullulet arcâ | |
| Nummus, et e pleno semper tollatur acervo, | |
| Non unquam reputat, quanti sibi gaudia constent. | |
| Sunt quas eunuchi imbelles, ac mollia semper | 365 |
| Oscula delectent, et desperatio barbæ, | |
| Et quod abortivo non est opus. Illa voluptas | |
| Summa tamen, quod jam calidà matura juventà | ` |
| Inguina traduntur medicis, jam pectine nigro. | |
| Ergo expectatos, ac jussos crescere primum | 370 |
| Testiculos, postquam coperunt esse bilibres, | |
| Tonsoris damno tantum rapit Heliodorus. | |
| Conspicuus longe, cunctisque notabilis intrat | |
| Balnea, nec dubie custodem vitis et horti | |
| Provocat, a dominâ factus, spado: dormiat ille | 375 |
| Cum dominà: sed tu jam durum, Posthume, jamque | ? |
| Tondendum eunucho Bromium committere noli. | |
| Si gaudet cantu, nullius fibula durat | |
| Vocem vendentis Prætoribus. Organa semper | |
| In manibus: densi radiant testudine tota | 380 |
| Sardonyches: crispo numerantur pectine chordæ, | |
| Quo tener Hedymeles operam dedit: hunc tenet, hoc se | |

360. Taught it by the ant.] Which is said to provide, and to lay up in summer, against the hunger and cold of the winter. See Hor. sat, i. lib. i. l. 33—8.

365. There are some.] The poet, here, is inveighing against the abominable lewdness of the women, in their love for eunuchs—but, for decency's sake, let us not enter into the paragraph above translated, any farther than the translation, or rather paraphrase, in which it is left, must necessarily lead us.

375. Keeper of the vines and gardens. i. e. Priapus.

378. No public performer, &c.] Literally—the button of none selling his voice to the prætors. The prætors gave entertainments to the people at their own expense, and, among others, concerts of music; the vocal parts of which were performed by youths, who hired themselves out on these occasions, and who, to preserve their voices, had clasps or rings put through the prepuce, in order to prevent their intercourse with women, which was reckoned injurious to their voice—these rings were called fibulæ—but the musical ladies were so fond of these people, that they made them sing so much as to hurt their voices, insomuch that they received no benefit from the use of the fibulæ.

We read supr. 1. 73. of some lewd women who loosed this button, or ring, from the singers, for another purpose, for which they were at great expense. See 1. 73, and note.

379. The musical instruments, &c.] Organum—seems a general,

375

Some have fear'd, being taught it by the ant.

A prodigal woman does not perceive a perishing income:
But, as if money reviving would increase in the exhausted chest,
And would always be taken from a full heap,
She never considers how much her pleasures cost her.

There are some weak eunuchs, and their soft kisses
Will always delight, and the despair of a beard,
Also that there is no need of an abortive. But that Pleasure is the chief, that adults, now in warm youth,
Are deliver'd to the surgeons, now bearing signs of puberty.

Heliodorus, the surgeon, performs the operation When all is full grown, all but the beard,

Which is the barber's loss only.

Afar off conspicuous, and observable by all, he enters
The baths, nor does this ennuch, made so by his mistross,
Doubtfully vie with the keeper of the vines and gardens:
Let him sleep with his mistress: but do you, Posthumus,

Take care how you put your boy Bromius in his power.

If she delights in singing: no public performer

Can keep himself safe. The musical instruments are always

In her hands: thick, on the whole lute, sparkle

Sardonyxes: the chords are run over in order with the trembling quill,

With which the tender Hedymeles perform'd: this she keeps, name for musical instruments.—q. d. If she be a performer herself, she observes no moderation; she does nothing else but play from morning till night.

381. The sardonyxes.] The sardonyx is a precious stone, partly the colour of a man's nail, and partly of a cornelian-colour. By this passage it seems that these ladies were so extravagant, as to ornament their musical instruments with costly stones and jewels. Ovid describes Apollo's lyre as adorned with gens and ivory. Met. lib. ii. I. 167.

The trembling quill.] They struck the strings sometimes with the fingers, sometimes with a piece of ivory made in form of a quill, which was called pecten. So Virg. Æn. vi. l. 646, 7.

Obloquitur numeris septem discrimina vocum, Jamque eadem digitis, jam pectine pulsat eburno.

Crispus here may, like crispans, signify quivering, trembling, from its effect upon the strings, to-which it gives, and from them, in a measure, receives, a vibratory motion.

382. Hedymeles.] Some famous harper, who was called so from Gr. 2005, sweet, and 41205, a song. The pecten, or quill, that he made use of, was very highly valued, no doubt, by these fantastical women.

--- Perform'd.] Operam dedit-made use of in playing.

Solatur, gratoque indulget basia plectro. Quædam de numero Lamiarum, ac nominis alti, Cum farre et vino Janum, Vestamque rogabat, 385 An Capitolinam deberet Pollio quercum Sperare, et fidibus promittere. Quid faceret plus Ægrotante viro? medicis quid tristibus erga Filiolum? stetit ante aram, nec turpe putavit Pro citharà velare caput ; dictataque verba 390 Portulit, (ut mos est,) et apertâ palluit agnâ. Die mihi nunc, quæso, die, antiquissime Divûm. Respondes his, Jane pater? magna otia cœli: Non est, (ut video,) non est, quid agatur apud vos. Hæc de comædis te consulit : illa tragædum 395 Commendare volet; varicosus fiet haruspex. Sed cantet potius, quam totam pervolet urbem Audax, et cœtus possit quam ferre virorum; Cumque paludatis ducibus, præsente marito, Ipsa loqui rectà facie, strictisque mamillis. 400

383. The grateful quill.] Grato here signifies acceptable—agreeable.—See sat. iii. l. 4.—Plectro, plectrum, as well as pecten, signifies the quill, or other thing with which the strings were stricken, (from Gr. πλησσω, to strike.) The poet is setting forth the folly and absurdity of these musical ladies, who preserved as sacred relics, and consoled themselves in the possession of, and even bestowed kisses on, any instruments that had belonged to some admired and favourite performer.

384. Of the number.] i. e. Of the Lamian name or family.

—Of the Lamia.] A noble family whose origin was from Lamus, the king and founder of the city of Formiæ, in Campania.

385. With meal and wine. The usual offering.

_____Janus and Vesta.] The most ancient and first deities of the Romans.

386. Pollio. Some favourite and eminent musician.

— The Capitolinian oak.] Domitian instituted sports in honour of Jupiter Capitolinus, which were celebrated every fifth year; he that came off conqueror was rewarded with an oaken crown.

387. Promise it to his instrument.] i. e. That he should so perform, as to excel all his competitors.

—— Instrument.] Fidibus—Fides signifies any stringed instrument—hence our word fiddle.

388. The physicians being sad.] Shaking their heads, and giving over their patient.

389. Her son.] Filiolum—her little only son. 390. To veil her head.] As suppliants did.

- For a harp.] i. c. An harper. Metonym.

— Words dictated.] Some form of prayer prescribed for such occasions.

391. When the lamb was opened. She trembled and grew pale

With this she solaces herself, and indulges kisses to the grateful quill,

A certain lady, of the number of the Lamiæ, and of high name,

With meal and wine ask'd Janus and Vesta, 385

Whether Pollio ought for the Capitolinian oak

To hope, and promise it to his instrument. What could she do more If her husband were sick? what, the physicians being sad, towards

Her little son? she stood before the altar, nor thought it shameful To veil her head for a harp: and she uttered words dictated, 390 (As the custom is,) and grew pale when the lamb was opened.

"Tell me now, I pray, tell me, O thou most ancient of gods,

"Father Janus, do you answer these? the leisure of heaven is great;

" There is not, (as I see,) there is not any thing that is done among

" you.

"This (lady) consults you about comedians: another would re"commend 395

" A tragedian: the soothsayer will have swelled legs."

But rather let her sing, than audacious she should fly over the whole Town, and than she should endure assemblies of men;

And with captains in military attire, in the presence of her husband, Converse, with an unembarrassed countenance, and with bare breasts.

400

with anxiety for the event; for, from the appearance and state of the bowels of the sacrifices, the soothsayers foretold future things.

392. Most ancient of gods.] See note above, 1. 385.
393. Do you answer these.] Such requests of such votaries.

— The leisure of heaven is great, &c.] The gods must surely have very little to do if they can attend to such prayers, and to such subjects as fiddlers and actors. Juvenal here, as in other passages, ridicules the Roman mythology.

396. The soothsayer.] Who is forced to stand so often, and for so long together, while they are offering their prayers.

— Will have swelled legs.] With standing at the altar. Varicosus signifies having large veins from the swelling of the dropsy—or from standing long—the blood settling a good deal in the lower parts, and swelling the veins of the legs.

397. Audacious. In an impudent, bold manner, like a prostitute.
398. Assemblies of men. Suffer herself to be in their company, and join in free conversation with them.

399. In military attire.] Paludatis—having on the paludamentum, which was a general's white or purple robe, in which he marched out of Rome on an expedition—officers in their regimentals—red coats, as we should say.

400. An unembarrassed countenance.] Recta facie—with her face straight and upright, not turned aside, or held down, at any thing she saw or heard.

Hæc eadem novit, quid toto fiat in orbe: Quid Seres, quid Thraces agant: secreta novercæ, Et pueri: quis amet: quis decipiatur edulter. Dicet, quis viduam prægnantem fecerit, et quo Mense; quibus verbis concumbat quæque, modis quot. 405 Instantem regi Armenio, Parthoque Cometem Prima videt: famam, rumoresque illa recentes Excipit ad portas; quosdam facit: isse Niphatem In populos, magnoque illic cuncta arva teneri Diluvio: nutare urbes, subsidere terras, 410 Quocunque in trivio, cuicunque est obvia, narrat. Nec tamen id vitium magis intolerabile, quam quod Vicinos humiles rapere, et concidere loris Exorata solet: nam si latratibus alti Rumpuntur somni; fustes huc ocyus, inquit, 415 Afferte, atque illis dominum jubet ante feriri, Deinde canem: gravis occursu, teterrima vultu, Balnea nocte subit: conchas, et castra moveri Nocte jubet; magno gaudet sudare tumultu:

401. Bare breasts.] Strictis—literally, drawn out—metaph. from a sword drawn for an attack.

—— Knows what may be doing, &c.] The poet now inveighs against the sex as gossips and tale-bearers, equally dispersing about public news and private scandal.

402. The Seres. The Seres were a people of Scythia, who, by the help of water, got a sort of down from the leaves of trees, and therewith made a kind of silk.

Cum lassata gravi ceciderunt brachia massa,

—— Thracians.] Were a people of the most eastern part of Europe—these were enemies to the Romans, but at length subdued by them.

--- The secrets of a step-mother, &c.] Some scandalous story of an intrigue between a step-mother and her son-in law.

403. Who may love, &c. i. e. Be in love.—This, and the two following lines, describe the nature of female tittle-tattle, and scandal, very humourously.

406. Comet threatening, &c.] Instantem—standing over, as it were, and threatening, as the vulgar notion was, destruction to the Armenians and Parthians, who were enemies to the Romans.

407. She first sees. The poet here ridicules her pretensions to wisdom and foresight.

--- Report. Famam-rumour-common talk-scandal.

408. At the doors.] Where she stands listening to have it all at first hand.

—— She makes.] Invents out of her own head. —— The Niphates.] A river of Armenia.

408-9. Had gone over the people, &c.] Drowned the inhabitants, and overflowed the country.

This same knows what may be doing all the world over:

What the Seres and Thracians may be doing: the secrets of a stepmother

And her boy: who may love: what adulterer may be deceived:

She will tell who made a widow pregnant, and in what Month: with what language every woman intrigues, and in how many ways.

The comet threatening the Armenian and Parthian kings

She first sees: report, and recent rumours,

She catches up at the doors; some she makes: that the Niphates had gone

Over the people, and that there all the fields were occupied

By a great deluge: that cities totter, and lands sink,

She tells in every public street, to whomsoever she meets.

Nor yet is that fault more intolerable, than that
To seize, and slash with whips her humble neighbours,
Entreated she is wont: for if by barkings her sound Sleep is broken; "Clubs," says she, "hither quickly
"Bring"—and with them commands the master first to be beaten,
Then the dog. Terrible to be met, and most trightful in countenance,

She goes by night to the baths: her conchs and baggage she commands

To be moved by night: she rejoices to sweat with great tumult; When her arms have fallen, tired with the heavy mass, 420

410. Cities totter-lands sink.] By earthquakes.

411. Public street.] Trivium-signifies a place where three ways meet-a place of common resort.

412. Nor yet is that fault, &c.] The poet here shews the pride, impatience, and cruelty of these fine ladies, who, because they happen to be disturbed by the barking of a dog, send out their servants with whips and clubs, ordering them to beat their poor neighbours most barbarously, though they entreat forgiveness, and then fall on the dog.

417. Terrible to be met, &c.] Bearing the signs of anger and cruelty in her countenance and aspect.

418. By night.] At a late and unseasonable hour. See note on sat. i. 49; and on sat. xi. 204. Pers. sat. iii. 4.

- Her conchs. Conchas may signify boxes, or shells, for ointments, which were used at the baths. See before, l. 303.

— Baggage.] Things of various sorts which were used at the baths, which the poet humourously calls castra, from their variety and number—like camp equipage. Metaph.

419. To be moved.] To be carried after her. The word moveri is metaphorical; and alludes to the castra.

420. When her tired arms, &c.] They that sweated before they bathed, swung two leaden masses, or balls, to promote perspiration.

vol. I. K

Callidus et cristæ digitos impressit aliptes,
Ac summum dominæ femur exclamare coëgit,
(Convivæ miseri interea somnoque fameque Urgentur,) tandem illa venit rubicundula, totum
Enophorum sitiens, plenå quod tenditur urnå
Admotum pedibus, de quo sextarius alter
Ducitur ante cibum, rabidam facturus orexim,
Dum redit, et loto terram ferit intestino.
Marmoribus rivi properant, aut lata Falernum
Pelvis olet: nam sic tanquam alta in dolia longus
Deciderit serpens, bibit, et vomit. Ergo miratus Nauseat, atque oculis bilem substringit opertis.

Illa tamen gravior, quæ cum discumbere cæpit, Laudat Virgilium, perituræ ignoscit Elisæ; Committit vates, et comparat; inde Maronem, Atque alia parte in trutina suspendit Homerum. Cedunt grammatici, vincuntur rhetores, omnis Turba tacet: nec causidicus, nec præco loquatur, Altera nec mulier: verborum tanta cadit vis;

421. The anointer.] Aliptes—so called from αλωφω, to anoint. This was some person who attended to anoint the bathers.

423. Her miserable guests, &c.] The people who were invited to supper at her house were half starved with hunger, and tired almost to death with expecting her return from the bath, where she staid as if nobody was waiting for her.

424. Samewhat ruddy.] Flushed in the face with her exercise at the bath, or, perhaps, from a consciousness of what had happened between her and the aliptes.

425. A whole flagon, &c.] Œnophorum—from onos, wine, and Oseon, to bear or carry. This seems to have been a name for any vessel in which they brought wine, and was probably of a large size.

426. Another sextary.] i. e. A second—implying that she had drunk off one before. 'Flue sextarius held about a pint and an half. Ainsw.

ATIMSW.

427. To provoke an eager appetite.] Orexim—from ogizis, an eager desire, quod ab. ogsyours, appeto to desire earnestly.

It was usual for the Roman epicures to drink a sort of thin and sharp Falernan wine, (sat xiii. l. 216.) to make them vomit, before meals, that the stomach, being cleared and empty, might be more sensibly affected with hunger, and thus the party enabled to cat the more. See sat. iv. 67. This wine was called tropes, from recard, versio.

Bibit ergo tropen, ut vomat. MART. lib. xii. ep. 83.

428. Till it returns.] Is brought up again.

With her washed inside.] The washing of her stomach.

429. Rivers, &c.] The wine brought up from her stomach gushes on the marble pavement like a river—or she vomits into a bason, which smells of the wine vomited up from her stomach.

And the sly anointer has played her an unlucky trick, By taking undue liberties with her person, (Her miserable guests in the mean time are urged with sleep and hunger,) At last she comes somewhat ruddy, thirsting after A whole flagon, "which, in a full pitcher, is presented, 4.25 Placed at her feet; of which another sextary Is drunk up before meat, to provoke an eager appetite, Till it returns, and strikes the ground with her washed inside. Rivers hasten on the pavement, or of Falernan the wide Bason smells: for thus, as if into a deep cask a long 430 Serpent had fallen, she drinks and vomits. Therefore her husband

Turns sick, and restrains his choler with his eyes covered. Yet she is more irksome, who, when she begins to sit at table, Praises Virgil, and forgives Elisa about to die: She matches the poets, and compares them; then Virgil, 435 And, on the other part, Homer, she suspends in a scale. The grammarians yield, the rhetoricians are overcome. All the crowd is silent; neither lawyer, nor crier, can speak, Nor any other woman: there falls so great a force of words:

430-1. As if a long serpent, &c.] PLINY, lib. x. c. 72. testifies that serpents are very greedy of wine. His words are-Serpen-/ tes, cum occasio est, vinum præcipue appetunt, cum alioque exiguo indigeant potu. But this one should suppose a mere notion, a sort of vulgar error, which, probably, Juvenal means to laugh at.

432. Restrains his choler.] The husband, finding himself grow sick at the sight, hides his eyes, that he may not any longer behold what he finds likely to raise his choler, and resentment, which he dares not vent .- Or perhaps-by bilem substringet, we may understand that he keeps himself from vomiting up the bile from his stomach, by no longer beholding his wife in so filthy a situation, and therefore puts his hands before his eyes to cover them.

433. Yet she is more irksome.] The poet now inveighs against such of the sex as were pretenders to learning and criticism, and who affected wisdom and eloquence.

434. Forgives Elisa, &c.] Finds excuses, and endeavours to justify queen Dido, &c. (called also Elisa, Æn. iv. l. 335.) when she was going to destroy herself for love.

435. Matches. See sat. i. 163, note.

436. She suspends Homer, &c.] Runs a parallel between Homer and Virgil, and weighs in her opinion, as in a balance, their several merits.

439. So great a force of words, &c.] The poet humourously represents orators and grammarians as quite outdone by this learned lady; and that her vociferation is such, that neither a common crier, nor a bawling lawyer, nor the company (turba) that surrounds her, can have an opportunity to put in a syllable-such a torrent of words comes from her, that it bears down all before it.

Tot pariter pelves, tot tintinnabula dicas

Pulsari. Jam nemo tubas, nemo æra fatiget,

Una laboranti poterit succurrere Lunæ.

Imponit finem sapiens et rebus honestis.

Nam quæ docta nimis cupit et facunda videri,

Crure tenus medio tunicas succingere debet,

Cædere Sylvano porcum, quadrante lavari.

Non habeat matrona, tibi quæ juncta recumbit,
Dicendi genus, aut curtum sermone rotato
Torqueat enthymema, nec historias sciat omnes:
Sed quædam ex libris, et non intelligat. Qdi
Hanc ego, qua repetit, volvitque Palæmonis artem,
Servatâ semper lege et ratione loquendi,
Ignotosque mihi tenet antiquaria versus,
Nec curanda viris Opicæ castigat amicæ
Verba. Solæcismum liceat fecisse marito.

455

450

441. Weary trumpets, &c. When the moon was eclipsed, the Romans superstitiously thought that she was under some charms or incantations, against which nothing could prevail but the sound of brass, from trumpets, basons, kettles, &c.

443. Imposes the end, &c.] Draws the line, as it were, nicely distinguishing, after the manner of the philosophers, on the subject of ethics, defining the honestum, the utile, the pulchrum, and where each begins and ends.

445. To bind her coats up, &c.] A lady who affects so much learning, should, doubtless, imitate the philosophers, as well in dress as in discourse, that she may completely resemble them.—The Peripatetic philosophers were a coat which came no lower than the mid-leg.

446. An hog of Sylvanus.] As the philosophers sought groves and retired places, in order to have more leisure for study and contemplation, they sacrificed an hog to Sylvanus, the god of the woods.

Women were not to be present at the solemnity. The poet humourously tells these philosophical ladies, that they ought undoubtedly to have the privilege of sacrificing, as they ranked with philosophers.

To wash for a furthing.] The usual small fee which the poor philosophers paid for bathing.

447. Let not the matron. The poet now satirizes another sort of learned ladies, who affect to be skilled in logic and grammar, insomuch that they are for ever fluding fault with every little irregularity of speech in others.

448. A method of haranguing.] Genus dicendi-a particular kind of argumentation-i. e. the art of logic.

—— Twist, &c.] Wind her argument into the small compass of an enthymeme.—Rotato—i. c. artfully turned.

449. The short enthymeme.] A short kind of syllogism, consist-

You would say, that so many basons, so many bells were struck Together. Now let nobody weary trumpets, or brass kettles,
She alone could succour the labouring moon.
She, a wise woman, imposes the end to things honest.
Now she who desires to seem too learned and eloquent,
Ought to bind her coats up to the middle of her leg,
And slay an hog for Sylvanus, and wash for a farthing.
Let not the matron, that joined to you lies by you, have
A method of haranguing, nor let her twist, with turned discourse,
The short enthymeme, nor let her know all histories:

The short enthymeme, nor let her know all histories:
But some things from books, and not understand them. I hate 450
Her who repeats, and turns over, the art of Palæmon,
The law and manner of speaking being always preserved,
And, an autiquarian, holds forth to me unknown verses,
And corrects the words of her clownish friend

Not to be noticed by men. Let it be allowable for her husband to have made a solecism.

455

ing only of two propositions, a third being retained in the mind—

449. Know all histories.] Aim or pretend to be a perfect historian. 450. Some things from books.] q. d. I allow her to have some taste for books, and to know a little about them.

Not understand them.] i. e. Enter too deeply into them.-

She should not understand too much.

451. The art of Palamon.] He was a conceited grammarian, who said that learning would live and die with him.

452. The law and manner of speaking, &c.] The poet means to say, that he hates a woman who is always conning and turning over her grammar-rules, like a pedant, and placing her words exactly in mood and tense.

453. An antiquarian, &c. One who is studious of obsolete words and phrases, and so quoting old-fashioned verses, that nobody knows any thing of.

454. Her clownish friend.] Opicus—signifies rude, barbarous, clownish—it is derived from the most ancient people of Italy, who were called Opici, from ops, the earth, from which they were said to spring. See sat. iii. 1. 207.

This learned lady is supposed to be so precise, as to chastise her neighbours, if they did not converse in the most elegant modern manner, and to find fault with any words which looked like barba-risms, such as men would not observe.

455. To have made a solecism.] So called from the people of Solos or Sola, a city of Cilicia, who were famous for incongruity of speech against grammar.

Let her not quarrel with her husband for speaking a little false Latin,

Nil non permittit mulier sibi; turpe putat nil, Cum virides gemmas collo circumdedit, et cum Auribus extensis magnos commisit elenchos. Intolerabilius nihil est quam fœmina dives. Interea fœda aspectu, ridendaque multo Pane tumet facies, aut pinguia Poppæana Spirat, et hinc miseri viscantur labra mariti: Ad mæchum veniet lota cute : quando videri Vult formosa domi? mœchis foliata parantur; His emitur, quicquid graciles huc mittitis Indi. 465 Tandem aperit vultum, et tectoria prima reponit : Incipit agnosci, atque illo lacte fovetur, Propter quod secum comites educit asellas, Exul Hyperboreum si dimittatur ad axem. Sed quæ mutatis inducitur, atque fovetur Tot medicaminibus, coctæque siliginis offas Accipit, et madidæ; facies dicetur, an ulcus? Est operæ pretium penitus cognoscere toto

The Soli were a people of Attica, who, being transplanted to Cilicia, lost the purity of their ancient tongue, and became ridiculous to the Athenians for their improprieties therein. Chambers.

457. Placed green gems.] Put on an emerald necklace.

458. Committed, &c.] Has put ear-rings, made of large oblong pearls, in her ears, which are stretched and extended downwards with the weight of them. See AINSW. Elenchus, No. 2.

459. Nothing is more intolerable, &c. The poet is here satirizing the pride, in dress, and behaviour, of wives who have brought their husbands large fortunes; which by the laws of Rome, they having a power of devising away by will to whom they pleased, made them insufferably insolent. See 1. 139, 40.

461. Swells with much paste.] Appears beyond its natural bigness, by a quantity of paste stuck upon it, by way of preserving or improving her complexion. See sat. ii. l. 107.

— Fat Poppæan.] Poppæa, the wife of Nero, invented a sort of pomatum to preserve her beauty, which invention bore her name.

462. Are glued together.] On kissing her—owing to the viscous quality of the pomatum with which she had daubed her face.

463. To an adulterer, &c.] She will wash her face when she is to meet her gallant.

464. Handsome at home.] When will she take half these pains to appear handsome in the eyes of her husband?

—— Perfumes.] Foliatum was a precious ointment made of spikenard. Comp. Mark xiv. 3. John xii. 3. Called in Gr. vaegov; nardus, Lat. The using of this ointment was very expensive.

465. The slender Indians. Thin and lean, from the continual waste of their bodies by the heat of the climate. From India were

There is nothing a woman does not allow herself in; she thinks nothing base,

When she has placed green gems round her neck, and when

She has committed large pearls to her extended ears:

Nothing is more intolerable than a rich woman.

Mean while, filthy to behold, and to be laugh'd at, her face

Swells with much paste, or breathes fat Poppæan,

And hence the lips of her miserable husband are glued together.

To an adulterer she will come with a wash'd skin: when is she

Willing to seem handsome at home? perfumes are prepared for her Gallants: for these is bought whatever the slender Indians send hither.

465

At length she opens her countenance, and lays by her first coverings:

She begins to be known, and is cherish'd with that milk,

On account of which she leads forth with her she-asses her attendants, If an exile she be sent to the Hyperborean axis.

But that which is cover'd over, and cherish'd with so many changed 470 Medicaments, and receives cakes of baked and wet flour,

Shall it be called a face, or an ulcer?

It is worth while, to know exactly, for a whole imported various sweet essences and perfumes, as well as the nard, which the ladies made use of. See Esther ii. 12.

466. She opens her countenance, &c.] Takes off the paste, (see l. 461, note,) and washes off the other materials, only smoothing her skin with asses' milk.

— Her first coverings.] The plaster or paste. 467. She begins to be known.] To look like herself.

— With that milk, &c.] The poet alludes here to Poppæa, the wife of Nero, above mentioned, (1.461.) who, when she was banished from Rome, had fifty she-asses along with her, for their milk to wash in, and to mix up her paste with.

469. Hyp rborean axis.] The northern pole, (from υπες supra, and βοριας, the north) because from thence the north wind was supposed to come.

470-1. Changed medicaments.] Such a variety of cosmetics, or medicines for the complexion, which are for ever changing with the fashions or humours of the ladies.

471. Baked and wet flour.] Siliginis.—Siligo signifies a kind of grain, the flour of which is whiter than that of wheat; this they made a kind of poultice or paste of, by wetting it with asses' milk, and then applying it like a moist cake to the face. Offa denotes a pudding, or such like, or paste made with pulse. Also a cake, or any like composition.

472. A face, or an ulcer.] Because the look of it, when these cakes or poultices are upon it, is so like that of a sore, which is treated with poultices of bread and milk, in order to assuage and cleanse it, that it may as well be taken for the one as the other.

Quid faciant, agitentque die. Si nocte maritus Aversus jacuit, periit libraria, ponunt Cosmetæ tunicas, tarde venisse Liburnus Dicitur, et pœnas alieni pendere somni Cogitur : hic fraugit ferulas, rubet ille flagello. Hic scutica: sunt quæ tortoribus annua præstant. Verberat, atque obiter faciem linit ; audit amicas. 480 Aut latum pictæ vestis considerat aurum : Et cædens longi relegit transacta diurni. Et cædit donec lassis cædentibus, " Exi," (Intonet horrendum,) "jam cognitione peractâ." Præfectura domûs Siculâ non mitjor aulâ: 485 Nam si constituit, solitoque decentius optat Ornari; et propérat, jamque expectatur in hortis, Aut apud Isiacæ potius sacraria lenæ;

475. Turned away.] Turns his back towards her, and goes to sleep. See below, l. 477.

The housekeeper.] Libraria—a weigher of wool or flax, (from libra, a balance,) a sort of housekeeper, whose office it was to weigh out and deliver the tasks of wool to the other servants for spinning.

___ Is undone.] Ruined turned out of doors after being cruelly lashed.

—— The tire-women.] Cosmetæ, from Gr. 200 μαω, to adorn, were persons who helped to dress their mistresses, and who had the care of their ornaments, clothes, &c.—something like our valets de chambre, or lady's women.

476. Strip.] Ponunt tunicas—put down their clothes from their backs to be flogged.

— The Liburnan, &c.] One of her slaves, who carried her litter. These chairmen, as we should call them, were usually from Liburnia, and were remarkably tall and stout. See sat. iii. 1. 240.— The lady, in her rage, doesn't spare her own chairmen—these she taxes with coming after their time, and punishes.

477. For another's sleep.] Because her husband turned his back to her, and fell asleep. See above, l. 475.

478. Ferules. Rods, sticks, or ferules made of a flat piece of wood, wherewith children and slaves were corrected. One poor fellow has one of these broken over his shoulders.

Reddens with the whip.] Is whipped till his back is bloody. 479: The thong.] Scutica—a terrible instrument of punishment, made of leathern thongs, though not (according to Hor. Sat. lib. i. sat. iii. 119.) so severe as the flagellum. Horace also mentions the ferula (1. 120.) as the mildest of the three.

--- Tormentors.] Hire people by the year, who, like executioners, put in execution the cruel orders of their employers.

480. He beats, &c.] One of these tormentors, hired for this pur-

Day, what they do, and how they employ themselves. If at night The husband hath lain turned away, the housekeeper is undone, the tire-women 475

Strip, the Liburnan is said to have come late,

And to be punish'd for another's sleep

Is compell'd: one breaks ferules, another reddens with the whip, Another with the thong: there are some who pay tormentors by the year.

He beats, and she, by the bye, daubs her face; listens to her friends,

480

Or contemplates the broad gold of an embroider'd garment:

And as he beats, she reads over the transactions of a long journal:

And still he beats, till the beaters being tir'd-" Go,"

(She horridly thunders out,) " now the examination is finished."—The government of the house is not milder than a Sicilian court: 485 For if she has made an assignation, and wishes more becomingly than usual

To be dressed, and is in a hurry, and now waited for in the gardens, Or rather at the temple of the bawd Isis, pose, lashes the poor slaves, while madam is employed in her usual course of adorning her person, or conversing with company, or looking at some fine clothes.

482. And as he beats, &c.] The fellow still lays on, while she, very unconcernedly, looks over the family accounts.

483. He beats, &c. Still the beating goes forward, till the beaters are quite tired.

"Go," &c.] Then she turns the poor sufferers ont of doors, in the most haughty manner.—"Be gone, now," says she, "the examination is over—all accounts are now settled between us."—Cognitio signifies the examination of things, in order to a discovery, as accounts, and the like.

Cognitio also signifies trial, or hearing of a cause.—If we are to understand the word in this sense, then she may be supposed to say, in a taunting manner—"Be gone—you have had your trial—the " cause is over."

485. Than a Sicilian court. Where the most cruel tyrants presided; such as Phalaris, Dionysius, &c. See Hor. lib. i. epist. ii. 1. 58, 9.

486. An assignation.] Constituit—has appointed—i. e. to meet a gallant. See sat. iii. 12, and note.

487. In the gardens] Of Lucullus—a famous place for pleasant walks, and where assignations were made.

488. At the temple. Sacraria—places where things sacred to the goddess were kept, which had been transferred from Ægypt to Rome.

—— The bawd Isis.] Or the Isiacan bawd—for her temple was the scene of all manner of lewdness, and attended constantly by pimps, bawds, and the like. See sat. ix. l. 22

Componit crinem laceratis ipsa capillis Nuda humeros Psecas infelix, nudisque mamillia. 490 'Altior hic quare cincinnus? taurea punit Continuo flexi crimen, facinusque capilli. Quid Psecas admisit? quænam est hic culpa puellæ, Si tibi displicuit nasus tuus? Altera lævum Extendit, pectitque comas, et volvit in orbem. 495 Est in consilio matrona, admotaque lanis. Emerità quæ cessat acu: sententia prima Hujus erit; post hanc ætate, atque arte minores Censebunt: tanquam famæ discrimen agatur Aut animæ: tanti est quærendi cura decoris. 500 Tot premit ordinibus, tot adhuc compagibus altum Ædificat caput, Andromachen a fronte videbis; Post minor est: aliam credas. Cedo, si breve parvi

489. Unhappy Psecas. J. Juvenal gives to the waiting-maid the name of one of chaste Diana's nymphs, who attended on the person of the goddess, and assisted at her toilet in the grotto of the vale Gargaphic. Ovid. Met. lib. iii. l. 155—172. This is very humourous, if we consider the character of the lady spoken of, who is attended at her toilet by her filles de chambre, who have each, like Diana's nymphs, a several office in adorning her person, while all these pains, to make herself look more handsome than usual, were because she was going to meet a gallant. The sad condition of poor Psecas bespeaks the violence which she suffered, from her cruel mistress, on every the least offence. However, this circumstance of her torn and dishevelled locks seems a farther humourous parody of the account which Ovid gives of one of Diana's nymphs, who dressed the goddess's hair:

----Doctior illis

Ismenis Crocale, sparsos per colla capillos Colligit in nodum, quamvis erat ipsa solutis.

Ov. ubi supr. l. 168-70.

491. "Why is this curl higher?"] i. e. Than it ought to be-says the lady, peevishly, to poor Psecas.

The bull's hide.] Taurea—a leather whip made of a bull's hide, with the strokes of which, on her bare shoulders, (Comp. l. 490.) poor Psecas must atone for her mistake about the height of the curl.

492. The crime, &c.] The poet humourously satirizes the monstrous absurdity of punishing servants severely for such trifles as setting a curl either too high or too low, as if it were a serious crime—a foul deed (facinus) worthy stripes.

494. If your nose, &c.] If you happen to have a deformity in your features—for instance, a long and ugly nose—is the poor girl, who waits on you, to blame for this? are you to vent your displeature upon her?

495. The left side.] Another maid-servant dresses a different side

Unhappy Psecas arranges her hair, herself with torn locks,

Naked to the shoulders, and with naked breasts .-

490

" Why is this curl higher?"-The bull's hide immediately punishes The crime and fault of a curled lock.

. What has Psecas committed? what is here the fault of the girl, If your nose has displeased you? Another extends

The left side, and combs the locks, and rolls them into a circle. 495

A matron is in council, and who, put to the wool,

Ceases from the discharged crisping-pin: her opinion

Shall be first: after her, those who are inferior in age and art Shall judge: as if the hazard of her reputation, or of her life,

Were in question; of so great importance is the concern of getting

She presses with so many rows, and still builds with so many join-

Her high head, that you will see Andromache in front: Behind she is less: you'd believe her another. Excuse her if of the lady's head, combs out the locks, and turns them into rings. Extendit expresses the action of drawing or stretching out the hair with one hand, while the other passes the comb along it.

496. A matron, &c.] She then calls a council upon the subject of her dress-first, an old woman, who has been set to the wool, (i. e. to spin,) being too old for her former occupation of handling dexterously the crisping-pin, and of dressing her mistress's hair-she, as the most experienced, is to give her opinion first—then the younger maids, according to their age and experience. Emerita here is metaphorical; it is the term used for soldiers who are discharged from the service-such were called milites emeriti.

500. Of so great importance, &c.] One would think that her reputation, or even her life itself, was at stake, so anxious is she of appearing beautiful.

501. She presses, &c.] She crowds such a quantity of rows and stories of curls upon her towering head.

502. Andromache.] Wife of Hector, who is described by Ovid as very large and tall.

Omnibus Andromache visa est spatiosior æquo, Unus, qui modicam diceret, Hector erat. De Art. ii.

503. Another. There is so much difference in the appearance of her stature, when viewed in front, and when viewed behind, that you would not imagine her to be the same woman-you would take her for another.

- Excuse her. Cedo-da-veniam understood-q. d. To be sure one should in some measure excuse her, if she happen to be a little woman, short-waisted, and, when she has not high shoes on, seeming, in point of stature, shorter than a pigmy, insomuch that she is forced to spring up on tip-toe for a kiss-I say, if such be the case,

Virgine Pygmæâ, nullis adjuta cothurnis,

Et levis erectâ consurgit ad oscula plantâ?

Nulla viri cura interea, nec mentio fiet

Dannorum: vivit tanquam vicina mariti:

Hoc solo propior, quod amicos conjugis odit,

Et servos. Gravis est rationibus. Ecce furentis

Bellonæ, matrisque Deûm chorus intrat, et ingens
Semivir, obscæno facies reverenda minori,

Mollia qui ruptâ secuit genitalia testâ:

Jampridem cui rauca cohors, cui tympana cedunt

Plebeia, et Phrygia vestitur bucca tiara: Grande sonat, metuique jubet Septembris, et austri Adventum, nisi se centum lustraverit ovis,

Sortita est lateris spatium, breviorque videtur

Et xerampelinas veteres donaverit ipsi;

one ought to excuse her dressing her head so high, in order to make the most of her person.—Thus he ridicules little women who meant to disguise their stature, either by wearing high heeled shoes, or by curling their hair, and setting it up as high as they could.

Cothurnus signifies a sort of buskin, worn by actors in tragedies, with a high heel to it, that they might seem the taller.

505. Pygmean.] See sat xiii. l. 168, and note.

507—8. No mention—of damages.] Never takes any notice of the expenses she is putting her husband to, and the damage she is doing to his affairs by her extravagance, and to his comfort and reputation, by her conduct.

508. As the neighbour, Sc.] Is upon no other footing with her husband, than if he were an ordinary acquaintance.

509. In this only nearer, &c.] The only difference she makes between her husband and an ordinary neighbour, is, that she hates his friends, detests his servants, and ruins his fortune. Gravis rationibus may mean—grievous in her expenses.

510. Behold.] The poet now ridicules the superstition of women, and the knavery of their priests; and introduces a procession of the priests of Bellona, and of Cybele.

511. Bellona.] The sister of Mars—she had a temple at Rome. Her priests were called Bellonarii; they cut their arms and legs with swords, and ran about as if they were mad, for which reason, perhaps, the people thought them inspired. Thus the priests of Baal, I Kings xviii. 28.

The mother of the gods. Cybelc, whose priests were the Corybantes: they also danced about the streets with drums, tabours, and the like, in a wild and frantic manner.

A chorus enters.] A pack of these priests make their appearance, led on by their chief.

512. Half-man.] Semiver—an ennuch; the priests of Cybele were such, and were therefore called semiviri.

She be allotted a short space of small waist, and seem shorter Than a Pygmean virgin, help'd by no high-soled shoes,

505

And arises to kisses light with an erect foot.

In the mean while no concern for her husband, no mention made Of damages: she lives as the neighbour of her husband: In this only nearer, that she hates the friends of her husband, And his servants; she is grievous to his affairs.

---- Behold of mad

510

Bellona, and of the mother of the gods, a chorus enters, and a great Half-man, a reverend face with little manhood,

Who has cut his tender genitals with a broken shell:

To whom, now long, an hoarse troop—to whom the plebeian tabours Yield, and his cheek is clothed with a Phrygian turbant: 515 Loudly he sounds forth—and commands the coming of September, and of the South-wind, to be dreaded, unless she purify herself with an hundred

And give to him old murrey-colour'd garments:

513. A broken shell.] Which he made use of by way of a knife. 514. An hoarse troop.] An assembly of attending priests, who had bawled themselves hoarse with the noises they made.

The plebeian tabours. The tabours, or drums, which were beat by the inferior plebeian priests—here, by metonymy, the priests who played on them: all these bowed to him, and submitted to his authority.

515. With a Phrygian turbant.] Which covered the head and tied under the chin; part of the high priest's dress, and called Phrygian, because first brought from Phrygia, one of the countries in which Cybele was first worshipped.

.516. Loudly he sounds forth.] Grande sonat, may not only mean that he bawled with a loud voice, (Comp. l. 484. intonet horrendum,) but it may also be meant to express the self-importance of his manner, being about to utter a sort of prophetic warning, in fanatical and hombast verses.

The coming of September, &c.] At which time of year the blasts of the south wind were supposed to generate fevers, and other Cangerous diseases. Comp. sat. iv. l. 59.

517. She purify herself, &c.] Eggs were used in expiations, lustrations, &c. and particularly in the sacred rites of Isis. They were given to the high priest, who, it may be supposed, took care to bestow them chiefly upon himself, while he pretended to offer them to the goddess.

518. Old murrey-colour'd garments.] Xerampelinus-a-um, adj. (Gr. ξηραμάπελινος, from ξηρος, dry, and αμπελος, a vine,) somewhat ruddy, like vine leaves in autumn. These garments were worn by the priests of Cybele and Isis, and were presented to them by superstitious and foolish women, out of devotion, being made to believe that all their sins were transferred from the votary to the vestments, and thus taken away, so as to secure the party from the punishment of them for a whole year together; insomuch that they should avoid impending dangers and judgments during that time.—By veteres we may understand that this custom was very ancient.—Some read vestes.

Ut quicquid subiti et magni discriminis instat, In tunicas eat, et totum semel expiet annum. 520 Hybernum fractâ glacie descendet in amnem, Ter matutino Tiberi mergetur, et ipsis Vorticibus timidum caput abluet: inde Superbi Totum regis agrum, nuda ac tremebunda cruentis Erepet genibus. Si candida jusserit I ö, 525 Ibit ad Ægypti finem, calidaque petitas A Meroë portabit aquas, ut spargat in æde Isidis, antiquo quæ proxima surgit ovili. Credit enim ipsius dominæ se voce moneri. En animam et mentem, cum qua Dî nocte loquantur! 530 Ergo hic præcipuum, summumque meretur honorem, Qui grege linigero circumdatus, et grege calvo Plangentis populi, currit derisor Anubis. Ille petit veniam, quoties non abstinet uxor Concubitu, sacris observandisque diebus; 535

521. She will descend, &c.] At the bidding of the priest, these women will even plunge into the river Tiber in the very depth of winter, when the ice must be broken for them.

522. The early Tiber.] i. e. The Tiber early in a cold morning. They thought that the water of the Tiber could wash away their sins.

523. Whirlpools.] Her superstition subdued all her fears, so that she would venture into the most dangerous parts of the river at the bidding of the priest. See Persius, sat. ii. 1. 15, 16.

524. Field of the proud king.] i. e. The Campus Martius, which once belonged to Tarquin the Proud: when he was driven out, it was given to the people, and consecrated to Mars.

525. She will crawl over, &c.] If the priest impose this penance on her, persuading her it is the command of the goddess Io, (the same as Isis,) she will go naked on her bare knees all over the Campus

Martius, till the blood comes, and trembling with cold. -

— White Io.] Io was the daughter of the river Inachus, and changed by Jupiter into a white cow; she afterwards recovered her shape, married Osiris, and became the goddess of Ægypt, under the name of Isis. She had priests, and a temple at Rome, where she was worshipped after the Ægyptian manner. See 1. 488.

526. The end, &c.] The utmost borders.

527. From warm Merce.] The Nile flows round many large islands, the largest of which was called Merce, and has, here, the epithet warm, from its being nearest the torrid zone.

- Sprinkle them, &c.] By way of lustrations.

528. Next to the old sheepfold.] The temple of Isis stood near

That whatever of sudden and great danger impends, May go into the clothes, and may expiate the whole year at once. 520 She will descend (the ice being broken) into the wintry river, Three times be dipp'd in the early Tiber, and in the very Whirlpools wash her fearful head: then, the whole Field of the proud king, naked and trembling, with bloody Knees she will crawl over .- If the white Io should command, She will go to the end of Ægypt, and will bring waters fetch'd From warm Meroe, that she may sprinkle them in the temple Of Isis, which rises next to the old sheepfold.

For she thinks herself admonish'd by the voice of the mistress herself. Lo! the soul and mind, with which the gods can speak by night! 530

Therefore he gains the chief and highest honour,

Who (surrounded with a linen-bearing flock, and a bald tribe

Of lamenting people) runs the derider of Anubis.

He seeks pardon, as often as the wife does not abstain

From her husband, on sacred and observable days, that part of the Campus Martius, where the Tarquins, in their days, had numbers of sheep, and which, from thence, was called the sheep-

535

529. Of the mistress herself.] i. e. Of the goddess herself. Such a power had these priests over the minds of these weak women, that they could make them believe and do what they pleased.

530. Lo! the soul, &c.] This apostrophe of the poet carries a strong ironical reflection on these cunning and imposing priests. As if he had said-" Behold what these fellows are! with whom the " gods are supposed to have nightly intercourse!" Lactantius says -Anima, qua vivimus; mens, qua cogitamus.

531. Therefore, &c.] Because these deluded women are persuaded that this priest has a real intercourse with heaven, and that all he enjoins them comes from thence, therefore, &c.

532. A linen-bearing flock. A company of inferior priests, having on linen vestments.

- A bald tribe, &c. They shaved their heads, and went howling up and down the streets, in imitation of the Ægyptians, who did the same at certain periods in search of Osiris.

533. Runs.] Up and down in a frantic manner.

- The derider of Anubis.] At these fooleries the high priest carried an image of Anubis, the son of Osiris, whom they worshipped under the form of a dog, the priest all the while laughing (in his sleeve, as we say) at such a deity, and jeering at the folly of the people, who could join in such a senseless business.

The worship of Isis, Osiris, and Anubis, came from Ægypt:

534. He seeks pardon, &c.] Here the poet represents the priest as imploring pardon for a wife who had used the marriage-bed on some forbidden days. By which he still is lashing the priests for their imposition, and the people for their credulity.

' Magnaque debetur violato pœna cadurco: Et movisse caput visa est argentea serpens. Illius lachrymæ, meditataque murmura præstant, Ut veniam culpæ non abnuat, ansere magno Scilicet, et tenui popano corruptus Osiris. 540 Cum dedit ille locum; cophino, fœnoque relicto, Arcanam Judæa tremens mendicat in aurem, Interpres legum Solymarum, et magna sacerdos Arboris, ac summi fida internuncia cœli: Implet et illa manum, sed parcius: ære minuto, 545 Qualiacunque voles Judzi somnia vendunt. Spondet amatorem tenerum, vel divitis orbi Testamentum ingens, calidæ pulmone columbæ Tractato, Armenius, vel Commagenus aruspex : Pectora pullorum rimatur, et exta catelli, 550

536. For a violated coverlet.] i. e. For the bed which was supposed to be defiled.

537. The silver serpent, &c.] In the temple of Isis and Osiris there was an image with three heads, the middlemost like a lion, the right side like a dog, the left a wolf; about all which a silver serpent, i. e. made of silver, seemed to wrap itself, bringing its head under the right hand of the god. The nodding of the serpent (which by some spring or other device it was probably made to do) denoted that the priest had his request granted.

538. His tears, &c. prevail.] This kindness of the god, and compliance with the request made him, were wholly ascribed to the prevalence of the priest's tears and prayers.

539—40. By a great goose, &c. corrupted.] The priest took good care of himself all this while, by receiving from the hands of the devotee a good fat goose and a cake, by virtue of which he pretended that Osiris was brought over to compliance; but these, no doubt, the priest applied to his own use. Popanum signifies a broad, round, thin cake, which they offered in old times to the gods.

541. When he has given place.] When this knavish priest is done with.—The poet, still deriding the superstition of the women, now introduces a Jewish woman as a fortuneteller.

— Her basket and hay.] This Jewess is supposed to come out of the wood, near the gate of Capena, into the city, to tell fortunes, therefore won't appear as a common Jew beggar—and she whispers secretly in the lady's ear, not choosing to be overheard and detected, the emperor having banished the Jews from Rome. See sat. iii. 1. 14, note.

542. Trembling. For fear of a refusal, or perhaps shivering with cold, or trembling with old age, or for fear of being overheard and charged with contempt of the gods of Rome, or of the emperor's order.

"Regs, &c.] Asks something to tell the lady's fortune, whispering into her ear with a low voice.

And a great punishment is due for a violated coverlet:
And the silver serpent seems to have moved its head.

His tears and meditated murmurs prevail,

That Osiris will not refuse pardon, by a great goose,

That is to say, and a thin cake, corrupted.

540

When he has given place, her basket and hay being left,

A trembling Jewess begs into the secret ear,

Interpretess of the laws of Solyma, high priestess Of a tree, and a faithful messenger of high heaven.

And she fills her hand, but very sparingly: for a small piece of money, 545

The Jews sell whatever dreams you may choose,

But an Armenian or Commagenian soothsayer promises

A tender love, or a large will of a childless rich man,

Having handled the lungs of a warm dove:

He searches the breasts of chickens, and the bowels of a whelp, 550

543. Laws of Solyma.] The Jewish law. The Latins called Jerusalem, Solymæ-arum, its name having been Solyma at first.

543—4. High priestess of a tree.] This is spoken in contempt of the Jews, who lived in woods, forests, &c. and, therefore, the poet probably hints, in a ludicrous manner, at the priestesses of the temple in the wood of Dodona, who pretended to ask and receive answers from oak-trees.

544. A messenger. Internuntius is properly a messenger between parties-a go-between.

545. She fills her hand, &c.] The lady to whom she applies presents her with a small piece of money—she need not give much.—See the next note.

546. Whatever dreams you may choose.] They pretended to dreams, in which they received intelligence concerning people's fortunes—these they sold to the credulous at a very cheap rate, always accommodating their pretended dreams to the fancy or wishes of the parties. See Ezek. xiii. 17—23.

547. An Armenian.] Having exposed the superstition of the women, with respect to the Jewish fortunetellers, he now attacks them on the score of consulting soothsayers, who travelled about to impose on the credulous.

Armenia and Syria (of which Commagena is a part) were famous for these,

548. A large will, &c.] Tells the lady who consults him, that she will be successful in love, or that some old rich fellow, who dies without heirs, will leave her a large legacy.

549—50. Lungs of a warm dove—breasts of chickens—bowels of a whelf—] The aruspices, or soothsayers, always pretended to know future events from the inspection of the insides of animals, which they handled and examined for the purpose.

Interdum et pueri : faciet quod deferat ipse. Chaldæis sed major erit fiducia: quicquid Dixerit astrologus, credent a fonte relatum Hammonis; quoniam Delphis oracula cessant, Et genus humanum damnat caligo futuri. 555 Præcipuus tamen est horum, qui sepius exul, Cujus amicitià, conducendâque tabellà Magnus civis obit, et formidatus Othoni. Inde fides arti, sonuit si dextera ferro Læyaque, si longo castrorum in carcere mansit. 560 Nemo mathematicus genium indemnatus habebit; Sed qui pene perit : cui vix in Cyclada mitti Contigit, et parvâ tandem carnisse Seripho. Consulit ictericæ lento de funere matris, Ante tamen de te, Tanaquil tua; quando sororem 565 Efferat, et patruos : an sit victurus adulter

551. Sometimes of a child.] Which one of these fellows would not scruple to murder on the occasion.

— He will do what, &c.] He will commit a fact, which, if any body else did, he would be the first to inform against him, if he could get any thing by it.

Deferre, is to accuse or inform against—hence the delatores, informers, mentioned so often by our poet as an infamous set of people.

See sat. i. 33. iii. 1161 iv. 48. et al.

552. Chaldeans, &c.] The Chaldeans, living about Babylon, were looked upon as great masters in the knowledge of the stars, or, what has been usually called judicial astrology. Some of these, like other itinerant impostors, travelled about, and came to Rome, where they gained great credit with silly women, such as the poet has been describing, as open to every imposture of every kind.

554. Of Hammon.] From the oracle of Jupiter Hammon, of which there were several in Lybia, and were in very high repute.

--- Because the Delphic oracles cease. It is said, that the oracle of Apollo, at Delphos, ceased at the birth of Christ.

555. A darkness, &c.] Men were now condemned, or consigned over, to utter ignorance of things to come, since the ceasing of the Delphic oracle, and this gave so much reputation to the oracle of Jupiter Hammon.

556. Been oftenest, &c.] The more wicked the astrologer, the greater credit he gained with these women.

557. Hired tablet.] These astrologers used to write down on parchment, or in tablets, the answers which they pretended to come from the stars; in order to obtain a sight of which, people used to give them money .- Conducenda-lit. to be hired.

558. A great citizen died, &c.] By the astrologer, mentioned in these lines, is meant Seleucus, a famous astrologer, who had been several times banished from Rome, and by whose instigation and prediction, Otho (with whom he was intimate) failing to be adopted by Galba, caused Galba to be murdered.

And sometimes of a child: he will do what he himself would betray.

But her confidence in Chaldeans will be greater: whatever

An astrologer shall say, they think brought from the fount

Of Hammon; because the Delphic oracles cease,

And a darkness of futurity condemns the human race. 555

Yet the most eminent of these, is he who has been oftenest an exile, By whose friendship, and by whose hired tablet,

A great citizen died, and one fear'd by Otho:

Thence confidence [is given] to his art, if with iron his right hand has clatter'd,

And his left: if he has remained in the long confinement of camps. 560

No astrologer uncondemn'd will have a genius;

But he who has almost perished: to whom to be sent to the Cyclades It has scarcely happened, and at length to have been freed from little Scriphus.

Your Tanaquil consults him about the lingering death of her jaundic'd Mother; but, before this, concerning you: when her sister she may 565

Bury, and her uncles; whether the adulterer will live

559. With iron, &c.] If he has been manacled with fetters on both hands—i.e. hand-cuffed. Sonuit—alludes to the clinking of the fetters.

560. Long confinement, &c.] These predicters, who foretold things in time of war, were carried as prisoners with the army, and confined in the camp, in expectation of the event; in which condition they had a soldier to guard them, and, for more safety, were tied together with a chain of some length (which, by the way, may be intimated by the longo carcere) for conveniency, the one end whereof was fastened to the soldier's left arm, the other to the prisoner's right.—Carcer signifies any place of confinement.

561. Uncondemned, &c.] In short, no astrologer is supposed to have a true genius for his art, who has not been within an ace of hanging.

563. Scarcely happened, &c.] With the greatest difficulty obtained the favour of banishment to the Cyclades, which were islands in the Archipelago: they were accounted fifty-three in all: to some of these criminals were banished.

564. Your Tanaquil.] i. c. Your wife, whom he calls so after the name of the wife of Tarquinius Priscus, a woman skilled in divination, who foretold her husband should be king.

of his time, who not only consulted astrologers about the death of their husbands, but of their parents and nearest relations.

566. Whether the adulterer, &c.] Her paramour, whose life she not only prefers to that of her husband and relations, but even to her own, as if no greater blessing could be vouchsafed her, than that he should outlive her.

Post ipsam: quid enim majus dare numina possunt? Hæc tamen ignorat, quid sidus triste minetur Saturni: quo læța Venus se proferat astro; Qui mensis danno, quæ dentur tempora lucro. 570 Illius occursus etiam vitare memento, In cujus manibus, ceu pinguia succina, tritas Cernis ephemeridas: quæ nullum consulit, et jam Consulitur; quæ castra viro patriamque petente, Non ibit pariter, numeris revocata Thrasylli. 575 Ad primum lapidem vectari cum placet, hora Sumitur ex libro; si prurit frictus ocelli Angulus, inspectà genesi collyria poscit. Ægra licet jaceat, capiendo nulla videtur Aptior hora cibo, nisi quam dederit Petosiris. 580 Si mediocris erit, spatium lustrabit utrumque Metarum, et sortes ducet; frontemque manumque Præbebit vati crebrum poppysma roganti.

568. She is ignorant of, &c.] She is so earnest about the fate of others, that she is content to be ignorant about her own.

569. Saturn.] Was reckoned an unlucky planet; and if he arose when a person was born, was supposed to portend misfortunes.—Persius calls Saturn—gravem. Hor. impium.

--- Propitious Venus. Reckoned fortunate if she arose in conjunction with certain others.

570. What month, &c.] The Romans were very superstitious about lucky and unlucky times.

571. Remember also, &c.] The poet continues his raillery on the superstition of women; and now comes to those who calculate their fortunes out of books, which they carry about with them, and consult on all occasions.

572—3. Like fat amber—worn diaries.] Ephemeridas—signifies, in this place, a sort of almanacks, in which were noted down the daily rising and setting of the several constellations; by the consulting of which, these women pretended to know their own fortunes, and to tell those of other people.—The poet represents these as thumbed very often over, so as to be spoiled, and to bear the colour and appearance of amber that had been chafed by rubbing.

574. The camp, and his country, &c.] Whether being at home he is going to the war, or being in the camp wants to return home, she refuses to go with him, if her favourite astrologer says the contrary.

575. The numbers of Thrasyllus.] Numeros may here either mean numbers, or figures, in which some mystery was set down or delivered—or some mystical verses, which it was very usual for that sort of people to make use of. Thrasyllus was a Platonist, a great mathematician, once in high favour with Tiberius; afterwards, by his command, thrown into the sea at Rhodes,

576. To the first stone.] i. e. The first mile-stone from Rome;

After her: for what greater thing can the gods bestow ?-These things, however, she is ignorant of-what the baleful star Of Saturn may threaten, with what star propitious Venus may shew herself.

What month for loss, what times are given for gain. 570 Remember also to avoid the meeting of her In whose hands, like fat amber, you see worn

Diaries: who consults no one, and now is

Consulted: who, her husband going to the camp, and his country, Will not go with him, called back by the numbers of Thrasyllus. 575 When she pleases to be carried to the first stone, the hour Is taken from her book: if the rubb'd angle of her eye Itches, she asks for eye-salve, her nativity being inspected: Tho' she lie sick, no hour seems more apt

For taking food, than that which Petosiris has allotted. 580 If she be in a middle station, she will survey each space Of the goals, and will draw lots: and her forehead and hand She will shew to a prophet, who asks a frequent stroking.

for there were mile-stones on the roads, as now on ours. -q. d. She can't stir a single mile without consulting her book.

577. Of her eye, &c.] The poet puts these ridiculous instances, to shew, in the strongest light, the absurdity of these people, who would not do the most errant trifles without consulting the ephemeris, to find what star presided at their nativity, that from thence they might gather a good or ill omen.

580. Petosiris. A famous Ægyptian astrologer, from whose writings and calculations a great part of her ephemeris, probably, was

581. She will survey, &c.] The woman in mean circumstances runs to the circus, and looks from one end to the other, till she can find some of those itinerant astrologers, who made that place their haunt.

582. Draw lots. For her fortune. This was one instance of their superstition.

--- Her forehead and hand. That by the lines in these she might have her fortune told.

583. To a prophet.] A fortuneteller.

- A frequent stroking.] viz. Her hand. Poppysma signifies, here, a stroking with the hand, which the fortuneteller made use of, drawing his hand over the lines of her forehead and hand, as taking great pains to inform himself aright. Or perhaps we may understand that he did it wantonly. Poppysma signifies, also, a popping or smacking with the lips, and at the same time feeling, and handling, or patting the neck of an horse, to make him gentle: this word may therefore be used here metaphorically, to express the manner in which these chiromants felt and handled the hands of the women who consulted them, perhaps smacking them with their lips.

Divitibus responsa dabit Phryx augur, et Indus
Conductus dabit, astrorum mundique peritus;
Atque aliquis senior, qui publica fulgura condit.
Plebeium in Circo positum est, et in aggere fatum:
Quæ nullis longum ostendit cervicibus aurum,
Consulit ante Phalas, Delphinorumque columnas,
An saga vendenti nubat, caupone relicto.

Hæ tamen et partûs subeunt discrimen, et omnes
Nutricis tolerant, fortunâ urgente, labores:
Sed jacet aurato vix ulla puerpera lecto:

Nutricis tolerant, fortuna urgente, labores:
Sed jacet aurato vix ulla puerpera lecto;
Tantum artes hujus, tantum medicamina possunt,
Quæ steriles facit, atque homines in ventre necandos
Conducit. Gaude, infelix, atque ipse bibendum
Porrige quicquid erit: nam si distendere vellet,
Et vexare uterum pueris salientibus, esses

584. A Phrygian.] Tully, de Divinat. lib. i. says, that these people, and the Cilicians and Arabs, were very assiduous in taking omens from the flight of birds.

585. Indian, &c.] The Brachmans were Indian philosophers, who remain to this day. They hold, with Pythagoras, the transmigration of the soul. These the richer sort applied to, as skilled in the science of the stars, and of the motions of the celestial globe, from whence they drew their auguries.

536. Some elder.] Some priest, whom the Latins called senior, and the Greeks presbyter—both which signify the same thing.

— Who hides the public lightning.] If a place were struck by lightning, it was expiated by a priest. They gathered what was scorched by lightning, and praying with a low voice, hid or buried it in the earth.

These lightnings were reckoned either public or private, as where the mischief happened either to public buildings, or to private houses, and the like.

Private lightnings were supposed to forebode things to come for ten years only; public lightnings, for thirty years.

587. Placed in the Circus.] The common sort apply to the quacks and cheats who ply in the Circus.

—— In the mount.] What was called Tarquin's mount, which he cast up on the eastern side of Rome, as a defence to the city—this was also the resort of these fraudulent people, who took but small fees for their services.

588. Shews no long gold, &c.] The poet, at 1. 581, speaks of women in middling circumstances, who go to the Circus in order to find an itinerant fortuneteller, whom they may consult at a small price. See the note. Then he mentions the rich, who could afford to pay well, and therefore employed a more expensive sort.

Here he mentions the lower order of women, which, in contradistinction to the former, he describes as wearing no gold as ornaments about their necks. Hence I think nullis cervicibus aurum the right To the rich a Phrygian augur will give answers, and an hired Indian, skilled in the stars and sphere, will give them;

And some elder who hides the public lightning.

The plebeian fate is placed in the Circus, and in the mount;

She who shews no long gold on her neck,

Consults before the Phalæ and the pillars of the dolphins,

Whether she shall marry the blanket-seller, the victualler being left.

Yet these undergo the peril of child-birth, and bear all The fatigues of a nurse, their fortune urging them:
But hardly any lying-in woman lies in a gilded bed;
So much do the arts, so much the medicines of such a one prevail,
Who causes barrenness, and conduces to kill men in the 595
Womb. Rejoice, thou wretch, and do thou thyself reach forth
To be drunk whatever it may be: for if she is willing to distend,
And disturb her womb with leaping children, you may be, reading—i. e. nullum aurum cervicibus—Hypallage. See sat. ii. l. 90, and note.

Reading nudis cervicibus, &c. as if the vulgar, or common sort, wore necklaces of gold about their necks, seems a contradiction.

589. Pillars of the dolphins. In the Circus were lofty pillars, on which were placed the statues of dolphins, erected for ornament. Others understand this of the temple of Cn. Domitius, in the Flaminian Circus, on which were the figures of Nereids riding upon dolphins. The Phalæ were wooden towers.

These places are also mentioned here as the resort of gypsies, common fortunetellers, and such sort of folks, who were consulted by the vulgar.

590. Whether, &c.] She is supposed to determine, by the answers from these wretches, which of her sweethearts she shall take, and which leave.

591. These undergo, &c.] The poet now lashes the vice of procuring abortion, so frequent among the ladies of Rome, and introduces it with saying, that, indeed, the poorer sort not only bring children, but nurse them too; but then this is owing to their low circumstances, which will not afford them the means of abortion, or of putting out their children to nurse.

593. Hardly any lying-in avoman, Sc.] i. e. You'll scarce hear of a lying-in woman among the ladies of quality, such is the power of art, such the force of medicines, prepared by those who make it their business to cause barrenness and abortion!

596. Rejoice, thou wretch.] He calls the husband infelix, an unhappy wretch, i. e. in having such a wife as is capable of having children by others; but yet he bids him rejoice in administering medicines to make her miscarry, for that, if she went her full time, she would produce a spurious child.

Æthiopis fortasse pater; mox decolor hæres Impleret tabulas, nunquam tibi mane videndus.

600

Transco suppositos, et gaudia, votaque sæpe Ad spurcos decepta lacus, atque inde petitos Pontifices, Salios, Scaurorum nomina falso Corpore laturos. Stat fortuna improba noctu, Arridens nudis infantibus: hos fovet omnes, Involvitque sinu; domibus tunc porrigit altis, Secretumque sibi mimum parat: hos amat, his se Ingerit, atque suos ridens producit alumnos.

605

Hic magicos affert cantus, hic Thessala vendit Philtra, quibus valeant mentem vexare mariti, Et solvà pulsare nates. Quod desipis, inde est; Inde animi caligo, et magna oblivio rerum, Quas modo gessisti. Tamen hoc tolerabile, si non

610

Et furere incipias, ut avunculus ille Neronis,

599. Father of a blackmoor.] Forced to be reputed the father of a child, begotten on your wife by some black slave.

600. Fill your will, &c.] A discoloured child, the real offspring of a Moor, will be your heir, and as such inherit your estate after your death (tabulas here means the pages of the last will and testament). See sat. i. I. 63 and 68.

Never, &c.] To meet him in a morning would be construed into an ill omen. The Romans thought it ominous to see a black-moor in a morning, if he was the first man they met.

601. The joys and vows, &c.] Here he inveighs against the women who deceive their husbands by introducing supposititious children for their own.

602. At the dirty lakes.] Some usual place where children were exposed.

The poor husband looks on them as his joy, and as the fruit of his vows and wishes, which are thus deceived by bastards, who are exposed at some place in Rome, (famous probably for such things,) and taken from thence to the houses of the great, who bring them up, thinking them their own, till at length they pass for the offspring of noble families, and fill the chief offices in the city.

- Salian priests.] These were priests of Mars, and so made from among the nobility.

603. The names of the Scauri, &c.] Being supposed to be nobly born, they falsely bear the names of the nobility who bring them up as their own.

604. Waggish Fortune.] Fortune may here properly be styled waggish, as diverting herself with these frauds.

605. Smiling on the naked infants, &c.] Exposed as they were by night, she stands their friend, and, delighting to carry on the deceit, makes them, as it were, her favourites—makes their concerns her own, and laughs in secret at the farce they are to exhibit, when conveyed to the lofty palaces of the great, and educated there,

Perhaps, the father of a blackmoor: soon a discolour'd heir
May fill your will, never to be seen by you in a morning.

600

I pass by supposititious children, and the joys, and vows, often Deceived at the dirty lakes, and the Salian priests fetch'd
From thence, who are to bear the names of the Scauri
In a false body. Waggish Fortune stands by night
Smiling on the naked infants: all these she cherishes,

605

And wraps in her bosom, then conveys them to high houses, And prepares a secret farce for herself: these she loves,

With these she charges herself, and, laughing, produces her own foster-children.

One brings magical incantations, another sells Thessalian

Philtres, by which they can vex the mind of the husband,

And clap his posteriors with a slipper: that you are foolish, is from thence;

Thence darkness of mind, and great forgetfulness of things, Which you did but just now. Yet this is tolerable, if you don't Begin to rave too, as that uncle of Nero, till she produces them into the highest honours of the city. This reminds one of Hor. lib. iii. ode xxix. l. 49-52

Fortuna, sævo læta negotio, Ludum insolentem ludere pertinax— &c.

608. She charges herself.] His se ingerit—i. e. she charges herself with the care of them. So the French say—s'ingérer dans des affaires des autres.

Her own foster-children.] Alumnus signifies a nurse-child, or foster-child, and may be well applied to these children, nursed, as it were, in the bosom and lap of Fortune, who has not only preserved them from perishing, but has contrived to make them pass for the children of nobles, and to be educated accordingly.

609. One brings, &c.] Now the poet inveighs against love-potions, and magical arts, which were used by the women towards their husbands.
609—10. Thessalian philtres.] Philtra denotes love-potions, or 609—10. Thessalian philtres.] Philtra denotes love-potions, or medicines causing love. For these Thessaly was famous, and the Roman women either procured, or learnt them from thence. See 1. 132, and note the first.

610. Vex the mind, &c.] So deprive him of his reason and understanding as to use him as they please, even in the most disgraceful manner.

611. From thence.] i. e. From these philtres.

613. This is tolerable. That you suffer in your understanding and recollection is tolerable, in comparison of what is much more fatal, that is to say, being driven into raving madness.

614. Uncle of Nero, &c.] Casar Caligula, whom Casonia, his wife, drenched with a love-potion made of the hippomanes, (a little skin, or bit of flesh, taken from the forchead of a colt newly foaled,)

VOL. I. N

620

Cui totam tremuli frontem Cæsonia pulli Infudit. Quæ non faciet, quod Principis uxor? Ardebant cuncta, et fractâ compage ruebant, Non aliter quam si fecisset Juno maritum Insanum. Minus ergo nocens erit Agrippinæ Boletus: siquidem unius præcordia pressit Ille senis, tremulumque caput descendere jussit In cœlum, et longâ manantia labra salivâ. Hæc poscit ferrum, atque ignes, hæc potio torquet, Hæc lacerat mistos equitum cum sanguine patres. Tanti partus equæ, tanti una venefica constat.

Oderunt natos de pellice: nemo repugnat, Nemo vetat: jamjam privignum occidere fas est. Vos ego, pupilli, moneo, quibus amplior est res, Custodite animas, et nulli credite mensæ: Livida materno fervent adipata veneno.

630.

625

which drove him into such madness, that he would often shew her naked to his friends. This potion of Cæsonia's was infinitely worse than Agrippina's mushroom, for that only destroyed a drivelling old emperor: but Caligula, after his draught, became a merciless, cruel, and bloody tyrant, and committed infinite slaughter without distinction.

615. A trembling colt.] Tremuli-trembling with cold on being dropped from the dam.

616. What woman will not do, &c.] i. e. Other women, stirred up by the example of so great a personage, will not be afraid to do the same.

617. All things were burning.] Alluding to the devastations of Caligula's mad cruelty, which raged and destroyed like fire.

— Fell to pieces, &c.] A metaphor taken from an house falling down by the beams giving way—so every bond of civil and human society was destroyed by the tyrant, and seemed to threaten universal ruin.

618. If Juno, Sc.] The sovereign of Rome, being thus driven into madness by his wife, was as destructive to Rome, as if Juno had made Jupiter mad enough to have done it himself. Perhaps the poet alludes to the outrageous fondness of Jupiter for Juno, effected by the cestus, or girdle of Venus.

619. The mushroom of Agrippina. The wife of the emperor Claudius, whom, that she might make her son Nero emperor, she poisoned with mushrooms, by contriving a subtle poison to be put among them. See sat. v. l. 147, 8, and note.

620. One old man. The emperor Claudius, who was poisoned in the sixty-fourth year of his age, very much debilitated and infirm, from his excesses and debaucheries.

621—2. To descend into heaven.] Claudius had been canonized by Nero after his death, and ranked among the gods. The poet here humourously describes him as going downwards to heaven, i. e.

From whom Casonia infused the whole forehead of a trembling colt.

615

What woman will not do what the wife of a prince did?

All things were burning, and fell to pieces, the bond

Being broken, not otherwise than if Juno had made her husband

Mad. Less hurtful therefore was the mushroom of Agrippina:

For that oppressed the bowels of one old man, 620

And commanded his trembling head to descend into Heaven, and his lips flowing with long slaver.

This potion calls for the sword, and fire, this torments,

This tears to pieces senators, mixed with the blood of knights.

Of so great consequence is the offspring of a mare: of so much importance is one witch.

They hate the offspring of the husband's mistress: nobody opposes, Nobody forbids it: now-a-days it is right to kill a son-in-law.

Ye, O orphans, who have a large estate, I admonish;

Take care of your lives, and trust no table;

The livid fat meats are warm with maternal poison.

630

267

to the heaven prepared for such a monster of folly and cowardice, which could be no other than the infernal regions. See Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. xiv. p. 370, note o.

623. This potion, &c.] For the explanation of this, and the following line, see before, note on l. 614.

624. Senators, mixed, &c.] Mixes senators and knights in one undistinguished carnage.

625. The offspring of a mare.] The colt from which the hippomanes was taken. See note on l. 614, and l. 132, note.

One witch.] i. e One such woman as Cæsonia.
626. Offspring of the husband's mistress.] The husband's children by some woman he keeps. Pellex properly denotes the concubine of a married man.

627. Now-a-days, &c.] Nobody blames a wife for not liking the husband's bastards; but things are now come to such a pass, that it is looked upon as no sort of crime to dispatch a husband's children by a former wife, that their own children, by those husbands, may inherit their estates. Comp. l. 132, 3.

628. Te, O orphans. Ye that have lost your fathers.—The poet here inveighs against those unnatural mothers, who would poison their own children, that they might marry some gallant, and their children by him inherit what they had. Pupillus denotes a fatherless manchild, within age, and under ward.

629. Take care of your lives.] Lest you be killed by poison.

- Trust no table.] Be cautious what you eat.

630. The livid fat meats, &c.] The dainties which are set before you to invite your appetite, are, if you examine them, black and blue with the venom of some poison, and this prepared by your own mother.

Mordeat ante aliquis, quicquid porrexerit illa Quæ peperit: timidus prægustet pocula pappas.

Fingimus hæc, altum Satira sumente cothurnum, Scilicet, et finem egressi legemque priorum, Grande Sophocleo carmen bacchamur hiatu, 635 Montibus ignotum Rutulis, cœloque Latino. Nos utinam vani! sed clamat Pontia, Feci. Confiteor, puerisque meis aconita paravi, Quæ deprênsa patent; facinus tamen ipsa peregi. Tune duos una, sævissima vipera, cæna? 640 Tune duos? septem, si septem forte fuissent. Credamus tragicis, quicquid de Colchide sævâ Dicitur, et Progne. Nil contra conor : et illæ Grandia monstra suis audebant temporibus; sed Non propter nummos. Minor admiratio summis 645 Debetur monstris, quoties facit ira nocentem Hunc sexum; et rabie jecur incendente feruntur Præcipites: ut saxa jugis abrupta, quibus mons

631. Let some one bite before you, &c.] Have a taster for your meat before you eat it yourself, if it be any thing which your mother has prepared for you.

632. The timid tutor. Pappas was a servant that brought up and attended children, and, as such, very likely to be in the mother's confidence; if so, he might well fear and tremble if set to be the children's taster.

633—5. Surely we feign these things, &c.] q. d. What I have been saying must appear so monstrous, as to be regarded by some as a fiction; and, instead of keeping within the bounds and laws of satire, I have taken flights into the fabulous rant of tragedy, like Sophocles, and other fabulous writers of the drama. Hiatus, lit. a gaping—an opening the mouth wide. Hence bawling. Metaph. like actors of high-flown tragedy.

636. Unknown to the Rutulian mountains, &c.] Such as no Roman satirist ever before attempted. The Rutuli were an ancient people of Italy—Latium also a country of Italy. Or perhaps the poet's allusion is to the subjects on which he writes; which, for their enormity and horrid wickedness, were unknown to former ages.

637. Pontia.] The poet, to clear himself from suspicion of fiction, introduces the story of Pontia, the daughter of Tit. Pontius, who had done what is here mentioned of her. Holyday, in his illustrations, mentions an old inscription upon a stone, to the following purpose; viz. "Here I Pontia, the daughter of Titus Pontius, am laid, "who, out of wretched covetousness, having poisoned my two sons, "made away with myself."

639. "Which discovered," &c.] q. d. The fact being discovered needs no question—but yet I avow it.

Let some one bite before you whatever she who bore you Shall offer you, let the timid tutor taste first the cups.

Surely we feign these things, satire assuming the lofty buskin;
Having exceeded the bound and law of all that went before,
We rant forth lofty verse in Sophoclean strains,
Unknown to the Rutulian mountains, and to the Latin climate.
I would we were false! but Pontia cries out—"I have done it!

" I confess I have prepared poisons for my boys ;-

"Which discover'd are evident: but the deed I myself perpetrated"--

"Didst thou, O most savage viper, destroy two at one meal? 640 Didst thou two?"—" Yes, seven, if haply seven there had been."

Let us believe whatever is said in tragedies of cruel

Colchis and Progne. I endeavour nothing against it: and those women Dared in their day (to commit) great enormities, but Not for the sake of money. But little wonder is due

To the greatest enormities, as often as anger makes this sex

Mischievous, and, rage inflaming the liver, they are Carried headlong: as stones broken off from hills, from which the

642. Let us believe, &c.] q. d. After such a fact as this we may believe any thing.

643. Colchis. Medea, the daughter of Æta, king of Colchis, who fled away with Jason, and, being pursued by her father, cut her brother Absyrtes in pieces, and scattered the limbs in her father's way, to retard his pursuit.

— Progue.] Daughter of Pandion king of Athens, and wife to Tereus king of Thrace, who having ravished her sister Philomela, she, in revenge, killed her son Itys, and served him up to her husband to eat.

- I endeavour nothing against it] If you say you believe these things, I shall offer nothing to the contrary.

645. Little wonder is due, &c.] To be sure those women did monstrous things, but then not for the sake of money, which is the case with our women; this still is almost incredible:—as for what the sex will do through anger, or revenge, or malice, there is nothing that they are incapable of, when thoroughly provoked. See l. 134, note.

648. As stones, &c.] Women as naturally precipitate into mischief and cruelty, when in a passion, as stones fall down from the top of an eminence, when that which supports them is removed from under them.

The poet supposes large stones, or rocks, on the summit of a high cliff on the top of a mountain, and, by an earthquake, the mountain sinking, and the cliff receding from under the bases of the rocks: of course these must not only fall, but threaten ruin wherever they Subtrahitur, clivoque latus pendente recedit.

Illam ego non tulerim, quæ computat, et scelus ingens
Sana facit. Spectant subcuntem fata máriti
Alcestim; et, similis si permutatio detur,
Morte viri cuperent animam servare catellæ.
Occurrent multæ tibi Belides, atque Eriphylæ:
Mane Clytemnestram nullus non vicus habebit.
Hoc tantum refert, quod Tyndaris illa bipennem
Insulsam et fatuam, dextrâ lævâque tenebat:

Insulsam et fatuam, dextra lævaque teneba At nunc res agitur tenui pulmone rubetæ; Sed tamen et ferro, si prægustarit Atrides Pontica ter victi cautus medicamina regis.

660

alight. This simile is very apt and beautiful to illustrate his description of women, who, when provoked, so that all reserve is taken away, their mischief will fall headlong, (like the rock from the top of the cliff,) and destroy those on whom it alights.

651. While in her sound mind. In cold blood, as we say.

— Alceste, &c.] The wife of Admetus, king of Thessaly, who being sick, sent to the oracle, and was answered that he must needs die, unless one of his friends would die for him: they all refused, and then she voluntarily submitted to die for him.

The ladies of Rome saw a tragedy on this subject frequently represented at the theatres; but, so far from imitating Alceste, they would sacrifice their husbands to save the life of a favourite puppy-dog.

654. Belides.] Alluding to the fifty daughters of Danaus, the son of Belus, who all, except one, slew their husbands on the wedding-night. See Hor. lib. iii. ode xi. l. 25-40.

— Eriphyla.] i. e. Women like Eriphyla, the wife of Amphiarus, who for a bracelet of gold discovered her husband, when he hid himself to avoid going to the siege of Troy, where he was sure he should die.

655. Clytemnestra.] The daughter of Tyndarus, and wife of Agamemnon, who living in adultery with Ægysthus, during her husband's absence at the siege of Troy, conspired with the adulterer to murder him at his return, and would have slain her son Orestes also; but Electra, his sister, privately conveyed him to king Strophius. After he was come to age, returning to Argos, he slew both his mother and her gallant.

656. What Tyndaris.] i. e. That daughter of Tyndarus—Clytemnestra. Juvenal, by the manner of expression—illa Tyndaris—means to insinuate, that this name belonged to others beside her—viz.

to many of the Roman ladies of his time.

Is withdrawn, and the side recedes from the hanging cliff.

I could not bear her, who deliberates, and commits a great crime 650

While in her sound mind. They behold Alceste undergoing the

Of her husband, and, if a like exchange were allowed,

They would desire to preserve the life of a lap-dog by the death of an husband.

Many Belides will meet you, and Eriphylæ:

No street but will have every morning a Clytemnestra.

655

This is the only difference, that that Tyndaris held a stupid

And foolish axe, with her right hand and her left:

But now the thing is done with the small lungs of a toad;

But yet with a sword too, if cautious Atrides has beforehand tasted The Pontic medicines of the thrice-conquer'd king.

556—7. Held a stupid and foolish axe, &c.] The only difference between her and the modern murderers of their husbands, is, that Clytemnestra, without any subtle contrivance, but only with a foolish, bungling axe, killed her husband. Comp. Hor. lib. i. sat. i. 99, 100. Whereas the Roman ladies, with great art and subtlety, destroy theirs, by insinuating into their food some latent poison, curiously extracted from some venomous animal. See sat. i. 70.

659. With a sword too, &c.] Not but they will go to work as Clytemnestra did, rather than fail, if the wary husband, suspecting mischief, has prepared and taken an antidote to counteract the poison, so that it has no effect upon him.

Atrides.] Agamemnon, the son of Atreus.—Juvenal uses this name, as descriptive of the situation of the husband, whom the modern Clytemnestra is determined to murder, for the sake of a gallant. Thus he carries on the severe, but humourous parallel between the ancient and modern scenes of female treachery, lust, and cruelty.

660. The Pontic medicines, &c.] Mithridates, king of Pontus, invented a medicine, which, after him, was called Mithridate—here the Pontic medicine, an antidote against poison.

Thrice conquer'd king] He was conquered by Sylla, then by Lucullus, and then by Pompey. After which, it is said, he would have poisoned himself, but he was so fortified by an antidote which he had invented, and had often taken, that no poison would operate upon him.

END OF THE SIXTH SATIRE.

SATIRA VII.

ARGUMENT.

This Satire is addressed to Telesinus, a poet. Juvenal laments the neglect of encouraging learning. That Casar only is the patron of the fine arts. As for the rest of the great and noble Romans, they gave no heed to the protection of poets, historians, lawyers, rheto-

ET spes, et ratio studiorum in Cæsare tantum:
Solus enim tristes hâc tempestate camænas
Respexit; cum jam celebres, notique poëtæ
Balneolum Gabiis, Romæ conducere furnos
Tentarent: nec fædum alii, nec turpe putarent
Præcones fieri; cum desertis Aganippes
Vallibus, esuriens migraret in atria Clio.
Nam si Pierià quadrans tibi nullus in umbrà
Ostendatur, ames nomen, victumque Machæræ;
Et vendas potius, commissa quod auctio vendit

10

5

Line 1. The hope and reason, &c.] i. e. The single expectation of learned men, that they shall have a reward for their labours, and the only reason, therefore, for their employing themselves in liberal studies, are reposed in Casar only.—Domitian seems to be meant; for though he was a monster of wickedness, yet Quintilian, Martial, and other learned men, tasted of his bounty. Quintilian says of him—
"Quo nec prasentius aliquid, nec studiis magis propitium numen et est." See l. 20, 1.

2. The mournful Muses.] Who may be supposed to lament the sad condition of their deserted and distressed votaries-

4. Bath at Gabii, &c.] To get a livelihood by. Gabii was a little city near Rome. Balneolum—a small bagnio.

Ovens.] Public bakehouses, where people paid so much for baking their bread.

6. Criers.] Præcones—whose office at Rome was to proclaim public meetings, public sales, and the like—a very mean employment; but the poor starving poets disregarded this circumstance—"any thing rather than starve"—and indeed, however meanly this occupation might be looked upon, it was very profitable. See sat. iii. 1. 157, note.

- Aganifipe.] A spring in the solitary part of Boeotia, consecrated to the nine Muses.

Hungry Clio.] One of the nine Muses—the patroness of heroic SATIRE VII.

ARGUMENT.

ricians, grammarians, &c. These last were not only ill paid, but even forced to go to law, for the poor pittance which they had earned, by the fatigue and labour of teaching school.

BOTH the hope, and reason of studies, is in Cæsar only:
For he only, at this time, hath regarded the mournful Muses,
When now our famous and noted poets would try
To hire a small bath at Gabii, or ovens at Rome:
Nor would others think it mean, nor base,
To become criers; when, the vallies of Aganippe
Being deserted, hungry Clio would migrate to court-yards.
For if not a farthing is shewn to you in the Pierian shade,
You may love the name, and livelihood of Machæra;
And rather sell what the intrusted auction sells poetry: here, by meton. put for the starving poet, who is forced, by his poverty, to leave the regions of poetry, and would fain beg at great men's doors. Atrium signifies the court, or court-yard, before great men's houses, where these poor poets are supposed to stand, like other beggars, to ask alms.

8. In the Pierian shade.] See sat. iv. 1. 35, note.—q. d. If by passing your time, as it were, in the abodes of the Muses, no reward or recompense is likely to be obtained for all your poetical labours. Some read area—but Pieria umbra seems best to carry on the humour of the metonymy in this and the preceding line.

9. Love the name, &c.] Machæra seems to denote the name of some famous crier of the time, whose business it was to notify sales by auction, and, at the time of sale, to set a price on the goods, on which the bidders were to increase—hence such a sale was called auctio. See Ainsw. Præco, No. 1.

q. d. If you find yourself pennyless, and so likely to continue by the exercise of poetry, then, instead of thinking it below you to be called a crier, you may cordially embrace it, and be glad to get a livelihood by auctions, as Machæra does.

10. Intrusted.] So Holyday.—Commissus signifies any thing committed to one's charge, or in trust. Comp. sat. ix. 1. 93—96.

Goods committed to sale by public auction, are intrusted to the auctioneer in a twofold respect—first, that he sell them at the hest

VOL. I. Q O

Stantibus, œnophorum, tripodes, armaria, cistas,
Alcithoen Paccî, Thebas et Terea Fausti.
Hoc satius, quam si dicas sub judice, Vidi,
Quod non vidisti: faciant equites Asiani.
Quanquam et Cappadoces faciant, equitesque Bithyni,
Altera quos nudo traducit Gallia talo.
Nemo tamen studiis indignum ferre laborem
Cogetur posthac, nectit quicunque canoris
Eloquium vocale modis, laurumque momordit.
Hoc agite, ô Juvenes: circumspicit, et stimulat vos,
Materiamque sibi ducis indulgentia quærit.
Si qua aliunde putas rerum expectanda tuarum Præsidia, atque ideo croceæ membrana tabellæ price; and, secondly, that he faithfully account with the owner for the produce of the sales.

Commissa may also allude to the commission, or licence, of the magistrate, by which public sales in the forum were appointed.

Some understand commissa auctio in a metaphorical sense—alluding to the contention among the bidders, who, like gladiators matched in fight—commissi, (see sat. i. 163, note,) oppose and engage against each other in their several biddings.

11. To the standers by. 7 i. e. The people who attend the auction as buyers.

12. The Alcithoe—the Thebes, &c.] Some editions read Alcyonem Bacchi, &c. These were tragedies written by wretched poets, which Juvenal supposes to be sold, with other lumber, at an auction.

13. Than if you said, &c.] This, mean as it may appear, is still getting your bread honestly, and far better than hiring yourself out as a false witness, and forswearing yourself for a bribe, in open court.

14. The Asiatic knights.] This satirizes those of the Roman nobility, who had favoured some of their Asiatic slaves so much, as to ehrich them sufficiently to be admitted into the equestrian order.—These people were, notwithstanding, false, and not to be trusted.

Minoris Asix populis nullam fidem esse adhibendam C1c. pro Flacco.

15. The Cappadocians. Their country bordered on Armenia.—They were like the Cretans, (Tit. i. 12.) lyars and dishonest to a proverb; yet many of these found means to make their fortunes at Rome.

The knights of Bithynia.] Bithynia was another eastern province, a country of Asia Minor, from whence many such people, as are above described, came, and were in high favour, and shared in titles and honours.

16. The other Gaul, &c.] Gallo-Græcia, or Galatia, another country of Asia Minor: from hence came slaves, who, like others, were exposed to sale with naked feet. Or it may rather signify, that these wretches (however afterwards highly honoured) were so poor, when they first came to Rome, that they had not so much as a shoe to their feet.

To the standers by, a pot, tripods, book-cases, chests,
The Alcithoe of Paccius, the Thebes and Tereus of Faustus.
This is better than if you said before a judge, "I have seen,"
What you have not seen: tho' the Asiatic knights
And the Cappadocians may do this, and the knights of Bithynia, Whom the other Gaul brings over barefoot.
But nobody to undergo a toil unworthy his studies
Hereafter shall be compelled, whoe'r he be that joins, to tuneful
Measures, melodious eloquence, and hath bitten the laurel.
Mind this, young men, the indulgence of the emperor
Has its eye upon, and encourages you, and seeks matter for itself.
If you think protectors of your affairs are to be expected
From elsewhere, and therefore the parchiment of your saffron-colour'd tablet

The poet means, that getting honest bread, in however mean a way, was to be preferred to obtaining the greatest affluence, as these fellows did, by knavery.

16. Brings over.] Traducit signifies to bring, or convey, from one place to another. It is used to denote transplanting trees, or other plants, in gardens, &c. and is a very significant word here, to denote the transplanting, as it were, of these vile people from the east to Rome.

18. That joins, &c.] The perfection of heroic poetry, which seems here intended, is the uniting grand and lofty expression, eloquium vocale, with tuneful measures-modis canoris.

Vocalis signifies something loud—making a noise—therefore, when applied to poetry, lofty—high-sounding.—q. d. No writer, hereafter, who excels in uniting loftiness of style with harmony of verse, shall be driven, through want, into employments which are below the dignity of his pursuits as a poet. Comp. 1. 3-6.

19. Bitten the laurel. Laurum momordit.—It was a notion that, when young poets were initiated into the service of the Muses, it was a great help to their genius to chew a piece of laurel, in honour of Apollo. Some think that the expression is figurative, and means those who have tasted of glory and honour by their compositions; but the first sense seems to agree best with what follows.

20. Mind this. Hoc agite-lit. do this-i. e. diligently apply yourselves to poetry.

— Of the emperor.] Ducis is here applied to the emperor, as the great patron and chief over the liberal arts.

21. Seeks matter for itself.] Carefully endeavours to find out its own gratification by rewarding merit.

23. Therefore the parchment, &c.] They wrote on parchment, which sometimes was dyed of a satiron-colour; sometimes it was white, and wrapped up in coloured parchment. The tabellæ were the books themselves—i. e. the pages on which their manuscripts were written.

If, says the poet, you take the pains to write volumes full, in

| Impletur; lignorum aliquid posce ocyus, et quæ | |
|---|----|
| Componis, dona Veneris, Telesine, marito: | 25 |
| Aut claude, et positos tinea pertunde libellos. | |
| Frange miser calamos, vigilataque prælia dele, | |
| Qui facis in parvâ sublimia carmina cellâ, | |
| Ut dignus venias hederis, et imagine macrâ | |
| Spes nulla ulterior: didicit jam dives avarus | 30 |
| Tantum admirari, tantum laudare disertos, | ~ |
| Ut pueri Junonis avem. Sed defluit ætas, | |
| Et pelagi patiens, et cassidis, atque ligonis. | |
| Tædia tunc subeunt animos, tunc seque suamque | |
| Terpsichoren odit facunda et nuda senectus. | 35 |
| Accipe nunc artes, ne quid tibi conferat iste, | : |
| Quem colis: Musarum et Apollinis æde relictâ, | |
| Ipse facit versus, atque uni cedit Homero, | |
| Propter mille annos. At si dulcedine famæ | |
| Succensus recites, Maculonus commodat ædes; | 40 |
| | |

hopes of finding any other than Cæsar to reward you, you had better prevent your disappointment, by burning them as fast as you can.—Lignorum aliquid posce ocyus—lose no time in procuring wood for the purpose.

25. Telesinus. The poet to whom this Satire is addressed.

The husband of Venus. Vulcan, the fabled god of fire—here put for the fire itself. He was the husband of Venus.

q. d. Put all your writings into the fire,

26. Or shut up, and bore, &c.] Lay by your books, and let the moths eat them.

27. Your watched battles.] Your writings upon battles, the descriptions of which have cost you many a watchful, sleepless night.

23. A small cell. A wretched garret, as we say.

29. Worthy of ivy, &c.] That, after all the pains you have taken, you may have an image, i. e. a representation of your lean and starved person, with a little paltry ivy put round the head of it, in the temple of Apollo.

30. There is no farther hope. You can expect nothing better-nothing beyond this.

32. As boys the bird of Juno.] As children admire, and are delighted with the beauty of a peacock, (see Ainsw. tit. Argus,) which is of no service to the bird; so the patrons, which you think of getting, however rich and able to afford it they may be, will yet give you nothing but compliments on your performances:—these will do you no more service, than the children's admiration does the peacock.

32—33. Your age passes away.] You little think that, while you are employing yourself to no purpose, as to your present subsistence, or provision for the future, by spending your time in writing verses, your life is gliding away, and old age is stealing upon you—your youth, which is able to endure the toils and dangers of the sea, the fatigues of wars, or the labours of husbandry, is decaying.

Is filled, get some wood quickly, and what You compose, Telesinus, give to the husband of Venus: 25 Or shut up, and bore thro' with the moth your books laid by. Wretch, break your pens, and blot out your watched battles, Who makest sublime verses in a small cell, That you may become worthy of ivy, and a lean image. There is no farther hope: a rich miser hath now learnt, 30 As much to admire, as much to praise witty men, As boys the bird of Juno. But your age, patient of the sea, And of the helmet, and of the spade, passes away. Then weariness comes upon the spirits; then, eloquent And naked old age hates both itself and its Terpsichore. 35 Hear now his arts, lest he whom you court should give you Any thing: both the temple of the Muses, and of Apollo, being forsaken.

Himself makes verses, and yields to Homer alone,

Because a thousand years [before him.] But if, with the desire of Inflamed, you repeat your verses, Maculonus lends a house; 40

34. Then.] When you grow old.

- Weariness, &c.] You'll be too feeble, in body and mind, to endure any labour, and become irksome even to yourself.

35. Hates both itself and its Terpsichore. Your old age, however learned, clothed in rags, will curse itself, and the Muse that has been your undoing Terpsichore was one of the nine Muses, who presided over dancing and music: she is fabled to have invented the harp—here, by meton. lyric poetry may be understood.

36. His arts, &c.] The artifices which your supposed patron will use, to have a fair excuse for doing nothing for you.

37. The temple, &c.] There was a temple of the Muses at Rome which was built by Martius Philippus, where poets used to recite their works. Augustus built a library, and a temple to Apollo, on Mount Palatine, where the poets used also to recite their verses, and where they were deposited. See Pers. prol. 1. 7. and Hor. lib. i. epist. iii. 1. 17.

Among the tricks made use of by these rich patrons, to avoid giving any thing to their poor clients, the poets, they affected to make verses so well themselves, as not to stand in need of the poetry of others; therefore they deserted the public recitals, and left the poor retainers on Apollo and the Muses to shift as they could.

38. Tields to Homer alone.] In his own conceit; and this only upon account of Homer's antiquity, not as thinking himself Homer's inferior in any other respect.

39. If with the desire of fame, &c.] If you don't want to get money by your verses, and only wish to repeat them for the sake of applause.

40. Maculonus, &c.] Some rich man will lend you his house.

Ac longe ferrata domus servire jubetur, In quá sollicitas imitatur janua portas. Scit dare libertos extrema in parte sedentes Ordinis, et magnas comitum disponere voces. Nemo dabit regum, quanti subsellia constent, 45 Et quæ conducto pendent anabathra tigillo, Ouæque reportandis posita est orchestra cathedris. Nos tamen hoc agimus, tenuique in pulvere sulcos Ducimus, et littus sterili versamus aratro. Nam si discedas, laqueo tenet ambitiosi 50 Consuetudo mali: tenet insanabile multos Scribendi cacoëthes, et ægro in corde senescit Sed vatem egregium, cui non sit publica vena, Qui nihil expositum soleat deducere, nec qui Communi feriat carmen triviale monetà; 55 Hunc, qualem nequeo monstrare, et sentio tantum,

41. Strongly barr'd.] Longe—lit. exceedingly—very much—y. d. If you are thought to want money of him for your verses, the doors of his house will be barred against you, and resemble the gates of a city when besieged, and under the fear and anxiety which the besiegers occasion; but if you profess only to write for fame, he will open his house to you, it will be at your service, that you may recite your verses within it, and will procure you hearers, of his own freedmen and dependents, whom he will order to applaud you.

43. He knows how to place, &c.] Dare—lit. to give.—q. d. He knows how to dispose his freedmen on the farthest seats behind the rest of the audience, that they may begin a clap, which will be followed by those who are seated more forward. Ordo is a rank or row of anything, so of benches or seats.

44. And to dispose, &c.] How to dispose his clients and followers, so as best to raise a roar of applause—euge!—bene!—bravo! as we say, among your hearers. All this he will do, for it costs him nothing.

46. The stairs, &c.] These were for the poet to ascend by into his rostrum, and were fastend to a little beam, or piece of wood, which was hired for the purpose.

47. The orchestra, &c.] The orchestra at the Greek theatres was the part where the chorus danced—the stage. Among the Romans it was the space between the stage and the common seats, where the senators and nobles sat to see plays acted. The poor poet is here supposed to make up such a place as this for the reception of the better sort, should any attend his recitals; but this was made up of hired chairs, by way of seats, but which were to be returned as soon as the business was over.

48. Yet we still go on.] Hoc agimus—lit. we do this—we still pursue our poetical studies.—Hoc agere is a phrase signifying to

And the house strongly barr'd is commanded to serve you, In which the door imitates anxious gates.

He knows how to place his freedmen, sitting in the extreme part Of the rows, and to dispose the loud voices of his attendants.

None of these great men will give as much as the benches may cost, 45 And the stairs which hang from the hired beam,

And the orchestra, which is set with chairs, which are to be carried

Yet we still go on, and draw furrows in the light

Dust, and turn up the shore with a barren plough.

For if you would leave off, custom of ambitious evil

Holds you in a snare: many an incurable ill habit of writing

Possesses, and grows inveterate in the distemper'd heart.

But the excellent poet, who has no common vein,

Who is wont to produce nothing trifling, nor who

Composes trivial verse in a common style,

Him (such a one I can't shew, and only conceive) mind, attend to, what we are about. See TER. And act. I. sc. ii.

1. 12. So before, 1. 20.—hoc agite, O Juvenes.

48. Draw furrows, &c.] We take much pains to no purpose, like people who should plough in the dust, or on the sea shore.

Comp. sat. i. 157, note.

50. Would leave off. Discedas-if you would depart from the occupation of making verses.

Custom of ambitious evil.] Evil ambition, which it is so customary for poets to be led away with

51. An incurable ill habit.] Cacoethes (from Gr. xaxos, bad, and n905, a custom or habit) an evil habit.—Many are got into such an itch of scribbling, that they cannot leave it off.—Cacoethes also signifies a boil, an ulcer, and the like.

52. Grows inveterate, &c.] It grows old with the man, and roots itself, as it were, by time, in his very frame.

53. No common vein.] Such talents as are not found among the generality.

54. Nothing trifling.] - Expositum-common, trifling, obvious-nothing in a common way.

55. Trivial verse, &c.] Trivialis comes from trivium, a place where three ways meet, a place of common resort: therefore I conceive the meaning of this line to be, that such a poet as Juvenal is describing writes nothing low or vulgar; such verses as are usually sought after, and purchased by the common people in the street. The word feriat is here metaphorical. Ferio literally signifies to strike, or hit; thus to coin or stamp money—hence to compose or make (hit off, as we say) verses: which, if done by a good poet, may be said to be of no common stamp. Moneta is the stamp, or impression, on money—hence, by metaph. a style in writing.

Anxietate carens animus facit, omnis acerbi Impatiens, cupidus sylvarum, aptusque bibendis Fontibus Aonidum: neque enim cantare sub antro Pierio, thyrsumve potest contingere sana 60 Paupertas, atque æris inops, quo nocte dicque Corpus eget. Satur est', cum dicit Horatius, Euhoe! Quis locus ingenio: nisi cum se carmine solo Vexant, et dominis Cirrhæ, Nisæque feruntur Pectora nostra, duas non admittentia curas? 65 Magnæ mentis opus, nec de lodice parandâ Attonitæ, currus et equos, faciesque Deorum Aspicere, et qualis Rutulum confundit Erinnys. Nam si Virgilio puer, et tolerabile desit Hospitium, caderent omnes a crinibus hydri: 70 Surda nihil gemeret grave buccina. Poscimus ut sit Non minor antiquo Rubrenus Lappa cothurno,

57. A mind, &c.] i. e. Such a poet is formed by a mind that is void of care and anxiety.

58. Impatient.] That hates all trouble, can't bear vexation.

___ Desirous of woods.] Of sylvan retirement.

59. Fountains of the Muses.] Called Aonides, from their supposed habitation in Aonia, which was the hilly part of Bootia, and where there were many springs and fountains sacred to the Muses. Of these fountains good poets were, in a figurative sense, said to drink, and by this to be assisted in their compositions.

59-60. In the Pierian cave, &c.] Pieria was a district of Macedon, where was a cave, or den, sacred to the Muses.

60. Thyrsus.] A spear wrapt about with ivy, which they carried about in their hands at the wild feasts of Bacchus, in imitation of Bacchus, who bore a thyrsus in his hand. The meaning of this passage is, that, for a poet to write well, he should be easy in his situation, and in his circumstances: for those who are harassed with poverty and want cannot write well, either in the more sober style of poetry, or in the more enthusiastic and flightly strains of composition. By sana paupertas, the poet would insinuate, that no poor poet, that had his senses, would ever attempt it.

62. Horace is satisfied, &c.] It might be objected, that Horace was poor when he wrote, therefore Juvenal's rule won't hold, that a poor poet can't well write. To this Juvenal would answer, "True, "Horace was poor, considered as to himself; but then remember what a patron he had in Mecænas, and how he was enabled by him to avoid the cares of poverty. When he wrote his fine Ode to Bacchus, and uttered his sprightly—Evæ or Euhoe—he, doubteless, was well sated with good cheer." See lib ii. ode xix. l. 5—8.

64. The lords of Cirrha and Nisa.] Apollo and Bacchus, the tutelar gods of poets. Cirrha was a town of Phocis, near Delphos, where Apollo had an oracle.

A mind free from anxiety makes; of every thing displeasing Impatient, desirous of woods, and disposed for drinking the Fountains of the Muses: for neither to sing in the Pierian cave, or to handle the thyrsus, is poverty, 60 Sober, and void of money, (which night and day the body wants,) Able. Horace is satisfied, when he says-Euhoe! What place is there for genius, unless when with verse alone Our minds trouble themselves, and by the lords of Cirrha and Nisa Are carried on, not admitting two cares at once? 65 It is the work of a great mind, not of one that is amazed about Getting a blanket, to behold chariots, and horses, and the faces Of the gods, and what an Erinnys confounded the Rutulian: For if a boy, and a tolerable lodging had been wanting to Virgil, All the snakes would have fallen from her hairs: The silent trumpet have groan'd nothing disastrous. Do we require That Rubrenus Lappa should not be less than the ancient buskin, Nisa, a den in Arabia, where Bacchus was educated by the nymphs, when sent thither by Mercury. From hence Bacchus was called Dionysius—ex Διος, and Nisa; Gr. Διονυσιος. 65. Carried on.] i. e. Inspired, and assisted.

66. Not of one, &c.] q. d. It is the work of a great and power. ful mind, above want, not of one that is distracted about getting a blanket for his bed, to fix the eye of the imagination, so as to conceive and describe horses and chariots, and godlike appearances, in such a manner as to do justice to these subline subjects of heroic verse. - See VIRG. Æn. xii. l. 326, 7.

68. And what an Erinnys.] How Alecto looked when she astonished the Rutulian king Turnus-when she filled him with terror, by throwing her torch at him. Æn. vii. 1. 456, 7. Erinnys is a name common to the three furies of hell, of which Alecto was one.

70. All the snakes would have fallen, Sc.] q. d. Had Virgil been poor, and without his pleasures and conveniences, he never would have been able to describe, in the manner he has done, the snaky tresses of Alecto. See Æn. vii. l. 450. All this had been lost to us.

71. The silent trumpet. Surdus not only means to express one who does not hear, but that also which gives no sound. See sat. xiii. 1. 194.

Juvenal alludes to Æn. vii. l. 519, 20, 1.

72. Rubrenus Lappa, &c.] An ingenious, but poor and miserable tragic poet, who lived in Juvenal's time.

. ___ Less than the ancient buskin.] Not inferior to the old writers of tragedy. Cothurno, per metonym. put here for the tragic poets, as it often is for tragedy.

VOL. I.

75

80

85

Cujus et alveolos et lænam pignerat Atreus?

Non habet infelix Numitor, quod mittat amico;
Quintillæ quod donct, habet : nec defuit illi,
Unde emeret multâ pascendum carne leonem
Jam domitum. Constat leviori bellua sumptu
Nimirum, et capiunt plus intestina poëtæ.
Contentus famâ jaceat Lucanus in hortis
Marmoreis : at Serrano, tenuique Saleio
Gloria quantalibet, quid erit, si gloria tantum est?
Curritur ad vocem jucundam, et earmen amicæ
Thebaïdos, lætam fecit cum Statius urbem,
Promisitque diem : tantâ dulcedine captos
Afficit ille animos, tautâque libidine vulgi
Auditur : sed cum fregit subsellia versu,
Esurit, intactam Paridi nisi vendat Agaven.

73. Atreus had laid in pawn.] It has been observed by Ainsworth, against Stephanus and other lexicographers, that pignero does not mean to take, or receive, a thing in pawn, but to send it into pawn. In this view we may understand Atreus to be the name of some tragedy, on the subject of Atreus, king of Mycenæ, which met with such bad success as to oblige poor Rubrenus to pawn his clothes and furniture. Stephanus and others understand pignerat in the sense of taking to pawn, and suppose Atreus to be the name of the pawnbroker, to whom Rubrenus had pawned his goods.

The first sense seems to have the best authority; but with whichever we may agree, the thought amounts to the same thing in substance—viz. Can it be expected that this poor poet should equal the fire and energy of the old tragic writers, while his clothes and furniture were pawned, in order to supply him with present necessaries to keep him from starving?—A man in such distress, whatever his genius might be, could not exert it.

74. Numitor.] The name Numitor may stand, here, for any rich man, who would let a poet starve for want of that money which he lays out upon his mistress, or in buying some useless curiosity, such as a tame lion. Infelix is here ironical.

78. Doubtless, &c.] Ironically said .- No doubt it would cost more to maintain a poet than a lion.

79. Lucan, &c.] A learned and rich poet of Corduba in Spain, who, coming to Rome, was made a knight. He wrote, but lived not to finish, the civil wars between Cæsar and Pompey, in an heroic poem, called Pharsalia. He was put to death by Nero. See more, Ainsw. Lucanus.

- May lie in gardens, &c.] Repose himself in ease and luxury, fame being sufficient for one who wants nothing else. Marmoreis—adorned with fine buildings of marble.

80. Serranus, and to thin Saleius, &c.] These were two poor poets in Juvenal's time. Of the latter Tacitus says—" Who takes Whose platters, and cloke, Atreus had laid in pawn? Unhappy Numitor has not what he can send to a friend; He has what he can give to Quintilla: nor was there wanting to him 75 Wherewithal he might buy a lion, to be fed with much flesh, Already tamed. The beast stands him in less expense, Doubtless, and the intestines of a poet hold more. Lucan, content with fame, may lie in gardens adorn'd with Marble: but to Serranus, and to thin Saleius, 80 What will ever so much fame be, if it be only fame? They run to the pleasing voice, and poem of the favourite Thebais, when Statius has made the city glad, And has promised a day: with so great sweetness does he affect The captivated minds, and is heard with so much eager desire Of the vulgar: but when he has broken the benches with his verse, He hungers, unless he should sell his untouched Agave to Paris.

" any notice of, or even attends or speaks to, our excellent poet "Saleius?"

These men may get fame by the excellence of their compositions; but what signifies that, if they get nothing else? fame won't feed them.

Perhaps the poet calls Saleius tenuis—thin, from his meagre appearance.

82. They run.] Curritur, here used impersonally, like concurritur.

Hor. sat. i. l. 7.

The pleasing voice.] i. e. Of Statius, when he reads over his Thebais in public.

84. Promised a day.] i. e. Appointed a day for a public recital of his poem on the Theban war.

86. Broken the benches, &c. 1 By the numbers of his hearers, who flocked to attend him when he recited his Thebais. Notwithstanding this he must starve, for any thing the nobles will do for him.

87. His untouched Agave.] His new play called Agave, which has never been heard, or performed. This play was formed upon the story of Agave, the daughter of Cadmus, who was married to Echion king of Thebes, by whom she had Penthæus, whom she, and the rest of the Menades, in their mad revels, tore limb from limb, because he would drink no wine, and for this was supposed to slight the feasts of Bacchus. Ainsw.—See Hor. Sat. lib. ii. sat. iii. 1. 303; and Ovid, Met. iii. 725—8.

- Paris.] A stage-player, in high favour with Domitian; insomuch that Domitian fell in love with him, and repudiated his wife

Domitia for his sake.

What Juvenal says here, and in the three following lines, in a seeming complimentary way, was no more than a sneer upon Paris the player, and, through him, upon the emperor, who so understood

Ille et militiæ multis largitur honorem;
Semestri vatum digitos circumligat auro.
Quod non dant proceres, dabit histrio. Tu Camerinos
Et Bareas, tu nobilium magna atria curas?
Præfectos Pelopea facit, Philomela tribunos.
Haud tamen invideas vati, quem pulpita pascunt.
Quis tibi Mecænas? quis nunc erit aut Proculeius,
Aut Fabius? quis Cotta iterum? quis Lentulus alter?
Tunc par ingenio pretium: tunc utile multis
Pallere, et vinum toto nescire Decembri.
Vester porro labor fœcundior, historiarum

it, and turned our author's jest into his punishment, for in his old age, he sent him into Ægypt, by way of an honorary service, with a military command. This shews that this Satire was written in the time of Domitian, and he is meant by Cæsare, l. 1.

However, it is very evident, that Juvenal meant to rebuke the nobles for their parsimony towards men of genius, by shewing how generous Paris was to them, insomuch that they ought to be ashamed to be outdone by a stage-player.

89. Semestrian gold.] Semestris not only means a space of six months, (sex mensium), but the half or middle of a month. The moon is called semestris, when she is arrived at the middle of her month, and is quite round in form.

The aurum semestre, here, means gold in a round form, i.e. a ring; such as was worn by knights, to which dignity some poets had been raised, through the interest of this stage-player with the emperor. But qu.—If there be not here an allusion to the winter and summer rings? See sat. i. l. 28.

91. Camerini and Barea, &c.] Some rich nobles, whose levees the poor poets might attend in vain.

92. Pelopea makes prefects.] The tragedy of Pelopea, the daughter of Thyestes, who was lain with by her own father, and produced Ægysthus, who killed Agamemnon and Atreus.

Philomela tribunes.] The tragedy of Philomela, the daughter of Pandion king of Athens, ravished by Tereus, who had married her sister Progne. See more, Ainsw. tit. Philomela.

The poet seems here to insinuate, that the performance of Paris, in these tragedies, so charmed the emperor, and gave the actor such an ascendancy over him, as to enable Paris to have the great offices of state at his disposal, so that they were conferred on whomsoever he pleased.

93. Envy not, &c.] q. d. Though, in some instances, great things have been done for some individuals, through the influence and interest of Paris, yet, in general, those who have nothing else to depend on but writing for the stage, are left to starve, and therefore are hardly (hand) to be envied. Pulpita—see sat. iii. 1. 174, note.

94. Mecanas.] Who is the rich man that is such a patron to you, as Mecanas was to Horace? who not only enriched him, but made

95

He also bestows military honour on many;

He binds round the fingers of poets with Semestrian gold.

What nobles do not give, an actor will. Dost thou trouble thine 90

Head about the Camerini and Bareæ, and the great courts of nobles? Pelopea makes prefects, Philomela tribunes.

Yet envy not the poet whom the stage maintains.

Who is your Mecænas? who now will be either a Proculeius, Or a Fabius? who a second Cotta? who another Lentulus?

Then reward was equal to genius: then 'twas useful to many To be pale, and to know nothing of wine for a whole December.

Moreover your labour, ye writers of histories, is more him his friend and companion, and introduced him to the favour of the emperor Augustus.

94. Proculcius.] A Roman knight, intimate with Augustus. He was so liberal to his two brothers, Scipio and Murena, that he shared his whole patrimony with them, when they had been ruined by the civil wars. See Hor. lib. ii. ode ii. 1. 5, 6.

95. Fabius.] The Fabius is, perhaps, here meant, to whom Ovid wrote four epistles in his banishment, as to a noble and generous patron of men of genius. Or it may relate to Fabius Maximus, who sold his estate, in order to redeem some Romans who had been taken captives by Hannibal.

- Cotta.] A great friend to Ovid, who wrote to him three times from Pontus, as to a constant patron. Ovid says to him:

Cumque labent alii, jactataque vela relinquant, Tu laceræ remanes anchora sola rati: Grata tua est igitur pietas. Ignoscimus illis, Qui, cum fortuna, terga dedêre fugæ.

Lentulus.] A man of great liberality, to whom Cic. epist. vii. lib. i. ad famil. thus writes: Magna est hominum opinio de te, magna commendatio liberalitatis.

96. Reward was equal, &c.] When there were such men as these to encourage genius, and to be the patrons of learning, then reward was equal to merit.

97. To be pale.] With constant study and application, which were then sure to be profitable. Comp. Hor. epist. iii. l. 10. Pers. sat. i. 124.

To know nothing of wine, &c.] The feast of the Saturnalia was observed in the month of December, with great festivity and jollity, with plenty of wine and good cheer: all this it was worth a poet's while to give up entirely for his study: and rather than not finish what he was about, not taste so much as a single drop of wine during the whole festival, knowing that he was certain to be well paid for his pains.

98. Your labour, &c.] He now speaks of the writers of history, whose labour and fatigue are beyond those of other writers, and yet they are equally neglected.

| Scriptores: petit hic plus temporis, atque olei plus: | |
|---|-----|
| Namque oblita modi millesima pagina surgit | 100 |
| Omnibus, et crescit multa damnosa papyro. | 1 - |
| Sic ingens rerum numerus jubet, atque operum lex. | 1 |
| Quæ tamen inde seges? terræ quis fructus apertæ? | |
| Quis dabit historico, quantum daret acta legenti? | • |
| Sed genus ignavum, quod lecto gaudet et umbra. | 105 |
| Dic igitur, quid causidicis civilia præstent | |
| Officia, et magno comites in fasce libelli? | |
| Ipsi magna sonant : sed tunc cum creditor audit | |
| Præcipue, vel si tetigit latus acrior illo, | 1, |
| Qui venit ad dubium grandi cum codice nomen: | 110 |
| Tunc immensa cavi spirant mendacia folles, | |
| Conspuiturque sinus. Verum deprendere messem | |
| | |

98-9. Is more abundant, &c.] The subject-matter more various and extensive.

99. More oil.] Alluding to the lamps which they used to write by, in which they consumed a great quantity of oil. See sat. i.

1. 51, note.

100. Forgetful of measure.] The subjects are so various, and the incidents crowd in so fast upon the historian, that he passes all bounds, without attending to the size of his work—it rises to a thousand pages before you are aware.

101. Ruinous with much paper.] So much paper is used, as to ruin the poor historian with the expense of it.

102. The great number of things.] i. e. Which are treated.

The law of such works. The rules of history, which oblige the historian to be particular in his relation of facts, and, of course, diffuse.

103. What harvest, &c.] What profit do ye reap?

-The far-extended ground.] The wide and boundless field of history. Comp. VIRG. Geor. iii. 194, 5; and Geor. ii. 280.

Some think that this expression of terræ apertæ, taken in connexion with the seges, is, as that is, metaphorical, and alludes to the labour of the husbandman, in opening the ground by tillage, in order to prepare it for the seed. So the historian ploughs, and digs, and labours, as it were, in the field of history, in hopes of reaping profit thereby.

104. A collector of the registers.] The acta were journals, registers, acts of the senate, or the like records. The clerk, who wrote or collected them, was called actuarius. He was a sort of historian in his way.

105. They are an idle race, &c.] But perhaps it may be said, that, though they write much, yet that they write at their ease; that they, as well as the poets, are a lazy set of fellows, who write lol-

100

110

Abundant: this demands more time, and more oil;

For the thousandth page, forgetful of measure, arises

To ye all, and increases ruinous with much paper:

Thus the great number of things ordains, and the law of (such) works.

What harvest is from thence? what fruit of the far extended ground?

Who will give an historian as much as he would give to a collector of the registers?

But they are an idle race, which rejoices in a couch or a shade. 105 Tell me then, what civil offices afford to the lawyers.

And the libels their attendants in a great bundle?

They make a great noise, but especially then, when the creditor

Hears, or if one, more keen than he, has touched his side,

Who comes with a great book to a doubtful debt:

Then his hollow bellows breathe out prodigious lies,

And his bosom is spit upon. But if you would discover the ling upon their couches, or repose themselves in shady places. Hence Hor. lib. i. ode xxxii. l. 1.

Poseimus. Si quid vacui sub umbra Lusimus tecum.

And again:

Somno gaudentis et umbra.

Epist. ii. lib. ii. l. 78.

106. Civil offices, &c.] What they get by their pleading for their clients in civil actions.

107. The libels, &c.] Their bundles of briefs which they carry with them into court.

108. A great noise.] Bawls aloud—magna, adverbially, for magnopere. Græcism. See sat. vi. 516. Grande sonat.

108-9. Especially-when the creditor hears.] Creditor signifies one that lends, or trusts, a creditor.

The lawyer here spoken of must be supposed to be of council with the plaintiff, or creditor, who makes, a demand of money lent to another. If the lawyer observes him to be within hearing, he exerts himself the more.

109. One more keen.] If another, of a more eager disposition, and more earnest about the event of his cause, who sues for a book-debt of a doubtful nature, and brings his account books to prove it, thinks that the lawyer does not exert himself sufficiently in his cause, and intimates this to the pleader, by a jog on the side with his elbow—then, &c. See Ainsw. Codex, No. 2; and Nomen, No. 5.

111. His hollow bellows.] i. e. His lungs.

Breathe out prodigious lies.] In order to deceive the court, and to make the best of a bad cause.

112. Is spit upon.] Is slavered all over with his foaming at the

— If you would discover, &c.] Were it possible to compute the gains of lawyers, you might put all they get in one scale, and in

Si libet; hinc centum patrimonia causidicorum,
Parte aliâ solum russati pone Lacertæ.

Consedêre duces: surgis tu pallidus Ajax,
Dicturus dubiâ pro libertate, Bubulco
Judice. Rumpe miser tensum jecur, ut tibi lasso Figantur virides, scalarum gloria, palmæ.
Quod vocis pretium? siccus petasunculus, et vas
Pelamidum, aut veteres, Afriorum epimenia, bulbi;
Aut vinum Tiberi devectum: quinque lagenæ,
Si quater egisti. Si contigit aureus unus,
Inde cadunt partes, ex fædere pragmaticorum.

the other those of Domitian's coachman, and there would be no comparison, the latter would so far exceed.

As some understand by the russati Lacertæ, a charioteer belonging to Domitian, who was clad in a red livery, and was a great favourite of that emperor; so others understand some soldier to be meant, who, as the custom then was, wore a red or russet apparel: in this view the meaning is, that the profits of one hundred lawyers, by pleading, don't amount in value to the plunder gotten by one soldier. So Mr. C. DRYDEN:

Ask what he gains by all this lying prate. A captain's plunder trebles his estate.

So Joh. Britannicus—Russati Lacertæ.] Lacerta, nomen militis, fictum a poeta: nam milites Romani usi sunt in prælio vestibus rus-satis, &c.

115. The chiefs, &c.] Consedere duces.—The beginning of Ovid's account of the dispute, between Ulysses and Ajax, for the armour of Achilles. Ovid, Met. lib. xiii. 1. Here humourously introduced to describe the sitting of the judges on the bench in a court of justice.

Thou risest a pale Ajax.] Alluding to Ovid, lib. xiii. 1. 2.

Surgit ad hos clypei dominus septemplicis Ajaxby way of ridicule on the eager and agitated lawyer, who is supposed to arise with as much fury and zeal in his client's cause, as Ajax did to assert his pretensions to the armour in dispute.

116. Doubtful freedom.] The question in the cause is supposed to be, whether such or such a one is entitled to the freedom of the city;

there were many causes on this subject.

116—17. Bubulcus being judge.] This may mean C. Attilius Bubulcus, who was consul. Or, by Bubulcus, the poet may mean some stupid, ignorant fellow, who was fitter to be an herdsman, than to fill a seat of justice. And thus the poet might satirize the advancement of persons to judicial offices, who were totally unqualified and unfit for them.

117. Break your stretched liver.] Which, with the other contents in the region of the diaphragm, must be distended by the violent exertions of the speaker: or it may mean the liver distended by Profit, put the patrimony of an hundred lawyers on one side, And on the other that of the red-clad Lacerta only.

The chiefs are set down together, thou risest a pale Ajax, 115

In order to plead about doubtful freedom, Bubulcus

Being judge: break, wretch, your stretched liver, that to you fatigued,

Green palms may be fixed up, the glory of your stairs.

What is the reward of your voice? a dry bit of salt bacon, and a vessel Of sprats, or old bulbous roots which come monthly from Africa, 120

Or wine brought down the Tiber: five flagons,

If you have pleaded four times-If one piece of gold befals, From thence shares fall, according to the agreement of pragmatics.

anger. So Horace on another occasion fervens difficili bile tumet jecur. Hor. ode xiii. lib. i. l. 4.

118. Green palms, &c.] It was the custom of the client, if he succeeded in his cause, to fix such a garland at the lawyer's door.

- The glory of your stairs.] By which the poor lawyer ascended to his miserable habitation.

120. Of your voice.] Of all your bawling—What do you get by all the noise which you have been making?

- Of sprats. Pelamidum. It is not very certain what these fish were; but some small and cheap fish seem to be here meant. Ainsworth says they were called pelamides, à Gr. andos, lutum-clay or mud. Most likely they were chiefly found in mud, like our grigs in the Thames, and were, like them, of little worth.

--- Old bulbous roots, &c.] Perhaps onions are here meant, which might be among the small presents sent monthly from Africa to Rome. See Ainsw. Epimenia. PLIN xix. 5. calls a kind of onion, epimenidium, from Gr. exigenvidion. Ainsw. Epimenidium.—Those sent to the lawyer were veteres-old and stale.

121. Wine brought down the Tiber.] Coming down the stream from Vejento, or some other place where bad wine grew.

— Five flagons.] Lagena was a sort of bottle in which wine was kept. The five lagenæ cannot be supposed to make up any great quantity. Five bottles of bad wine, for pleading four causes, was poor pay.

122. A piece of gold, &c.] If it should so happen, that you should get a piece of gold for a fee .- The Roman aureus was in value about 11. 4s. 3d. according to Pliny, lib. xxxiii. c. 3. See post, 1. 243.

123. Thence shares, fall, &c. This poor pittance must be divided into shares, and fall equally to the lot of others besides yourself.

- According to the agreement, &c.] Ainsworth says, that the pragmatici were prompters, who sat behind the lawyers while they were pleading, and instructed them, telling them what the law, and the meaning of the law, was. For this, it may be supposed, that the pragmatici agreed with the lawyers, whom they thus served, to share in the fees. We use the word pragmatical, to denote busily meddling and intruding into others' concerns-hence foolishly talk-

| Æmilio dabitur, quantum petet, et melius nos |
|---|
| Egimus: hujus enim stat currus aheneus, alti |
| Quadrijuges in vestibulis, atque ipse feroci |
| Bellatore sedens curvatum hastile minatur |
| Eminus, et statuâ meditatur prælia luscâ. |
| Sic Pedo conturbat, Matho deficit: exitus hic est |
| Tongilli, magno cum rhinocerote lavari |
| Qui solet, et vexat lutulentâ balnea turbâ |
| Perque forum juvenes longo premit assere Medos, |
| Empturus pueros, argentum, myrrhina, villas: |
| Spondet enim Tyrio stlataria purpura filo. |
| Et tamen hoc ipsis est utile: purpura vendit |
| Causidicum, vendunt amethystina: convenit illis |
| , |

ative, impertinent, saucy. Phillips .- Gr. πραγματικός -- solers in negotiis agendis.

124. To Æmilius will be given, &c.] We may suppose that this Æmilius was a rich lawyer, who, though of inferior abilities to many poor pleaders, yet got a vast deal of money by the noble and splendid appearance which he made.

124-5. We have pleaded better. Though there be some among us who are abler lawyers.

125. A brazen chariot, &c.] He had a large brazen statue, a fine bronze, as we should call it, of a chariot, drawn by four horses, placed in his vestibule, or entrance to his house, which made a magnificent appearance. Quadrijugis signifies four horses harnessed together, and drawing in a chariot.

126-7. Himself-sitting, &c.] There was also an equestrian statue of Æmilius himself, mounted on a war-horse, in the very action of bending back his arm, as if ready to throw a javelin.

128. A blinking statue.] The statue represents Æmilius as meditating some great stroke against an enemy, and having one eye shut, in order to take aim with the other. Or perhaps Æmilius had but one eye, which the statue represented. All these things, which can add no real worth or ability to the owner of them, yet strike the vulgar with high veneration for Æmilius, and engage them to employ him in preference to others, insomuch that he may have what fees he pleases. Sec 1. 124.

129. Thus Pedo breaks. Conturbat-ruins himself-by wanting to appear rich, in order to draw clients.

Matho fails.] Becomes bankrupt, as it were, by the expense he puts himself to on the same account.

130. Of Tongillus. This was some other lawyer, who ruined himself by wanting to seem rich and considerable.

-- With large rhinoceros. The richer sort used to go to the baths, with their oil in a vessel made of the horn of a rhinoceros, which was very expensive. Tongillus did this in order to be thought rich. So ivory is called elephant. Geor. iii. 26. Meton.

131. With a dirty crowd. Who followed him through the dirty

To Æmilius will be given as much as he will ask; and we have Pleaded better: for a brazen chariot stands, and four stately 125 Horses in his vestibules, and himself on a fierce War-horse sitting, brandishes a bent spear Aloft, and meditates battles with a blinking statue. Thus Pedo breaks-Matho fails: this is the end Of Tongillus, who to bathe with large rhinoceros 130 Is wont, and vexes the baths with a dirty crowd; And thro' the forum presses the young Medes with a long pole, Going to buy boys, silver, vessels of myrrh, and villas; For his foreign purple with Tyrian thread promises for him. And yet this is useful to them: purple sells 135 The lawyer, violet-colour'd robes sell him: it suits them streets, as his attendants, and therefore were themselves muddy and dirty, and, of course, very offensive to the gentry who resorted to the public baths.

132. Presses the young Medes, &c.] He rides through the forum in a litter, set upon poles which rested on the shoulders of the bearers.

— Toung Medes.] The Romans were furnished with slaves from Media and Persia, who were very tall and robust—these were chiefly employed in carrying the lecticæ, or litters, in which the richer people were carried through the streets of Rome.

133. Going to buy, &c.] Appearing thus, as some great man who was going to lay out money in various articles of luxury. Pueros, here, means young slaves.

134. His foreign purple, &c.] His dress was also very expensive, and was such as the nobles wore.

--- Promises for him.] i. e. Gains him credit. Spondeo properly signifies to undertake, to be surety for another, and it is here used in a metaphorical sense; as if the expensive dress of Tongillus was a surety for him as being rich, because by this he appeared to be so.

--- Foreign purple. Stlatarius (from stlata, a ship or boat) signifies outlandish, foreign, as imported by sea from a foreign country.

Tyrian thread.] The thread, of which the garment of Tongillus was made, was dyed in the liquor of the murex, a shell-fish, of which came the finest purple dye, and the best of which were found near Tyre; therefore we often read of the Tyrian purple. See Æn. iv. 262. Hor. epod. xii. 1. 21.

135. This is useful, &c.] All this parade of appearance is a mean of recommending the lawyers to observation, and sometimes to employment, therefore may be said to have its use where it succeeds.

135—6. Purple sells the lawyer.] His fine appearance is often the cause of his getting employment, in which, for the price of his fee, he may be said to sell himself to his client.

136, Violet-coloured robes.] Amethystina. The amethyst is 2

Et strepitu, et facie majoris vivere censûs.
Sed finem impensæ non servat prodiga Roma.
Ut redeant veteres, Ciceroni nemo ducentos
Nunc dederit nummos, nisi fulserit annulus ingens.
Respicit hoc primum qui litigat, an tibi servi
Octo, decem comites, an post te sella, togati
Ante pedes. Ideo conductà Paulus agebat
Sardonyche, atque ideo pluris, quam Cossus agebat, Quam Basilus. Rara in tenui facundia panno.
14.
Quando licet flentem Basilo producere matrem?
Quis bene dicentem Basilum ferat? accipiat te Gallia, vel potius nutricula causidicorum Africa, si placuit mercedem imponere linguæ.

precious stone of a violet-colour. This colour also the gentry among the Romans were fond of wearing; and this, therefore, also recommended the lawyers to observation, and sometimes to employment.

137. With the bustle, &c.] They find it suitable to their views of recommending themselves, to live above their fortunes, and, of course, to be surrounded with numbers of attendants, &c.—and, from this, and the appearance of their dress, to seem richer than they were: this, as the next line imports, because nobody was looked upon that was not supposed able to afford to be extravagant; such was the monstrous prodigality of the times, that the expenses of people were boundless.

139. Nobody would give Cicero, &c.] Such is the importance of fashionable and expensive appearance, that even Tully himself, (if he could return from the dead,) though the greatest orator that Rome ever saw, as well as the ablest advocate, nobody would give him a fee, though ever so small, unless he appeared with a ring of great value glittering upon his finger—ducentos nummos.—The nummus argenti was a sesterce, the fourth part of a denarius, but seven farthings of our money.

141. He that litigates, &c.] He that wants to employ counsel, instead of first inquiring into the abilities of the man whom he employs, first asks how many servants he keeps, and in what style he lives.

141—2. Eight servants.] i. e. Slaves to carry your litter.—The litters were more or less respectable, as to their appearance, from the number of bearers which carried them—some had six. See sat. i. 1. 64, and note. These were called hexaphori, from Gr. iz, six—and $\phi_{\infty}\ell_{\infty}$, to bear.

Laxior hexaphoris tua sit lectica licebit.

MART. lib. ii. ep. 81.

Quum tibi non essent sex millia, Cæciliane. Ingenti late vectus es hexaphoro.

MART. lib. iv. ep. 50.

Tranquillus writes, that Caligula was carried in a litter borne by

To live with the bustle and appearance of a greater income.
But prodigal Rome observes no bounds to expense.
Tho' the ancients should return, nobody would give Cicero
Now-a-days two hundred sesterces, unless a great ring shone.
He that litigates regards this first, whether you have eight Servants, ten attendants, whether a chair is after you, Gownsmen before your steps. Therefore Paulus pleaded with an hired Sardonyx, and therefore pleaded at a higher fee than Cossus or than Basilus. Eloquence is rare in a mean clothing.
When can Basilus produce a weeping mother?
Who will bear Basilus (tho') speaking well? let Gallia
Receive you, or rather, that nurse of lawyers, Africa, if it has pleased you to set a reward upon your tongue.

eight—octophoro. This piece of state might afterwards be affected by those who wished to make a great and splendid appearance.

142. Ten attendants.] Comites—attendants upon him. It was the custom, says Grangius, not only for princes, but for others, who were carried in litters, to have a number of people attending them, who were called comites.

Whether a chair, &c.] Whether, though you may walk on foot, you have a litter carried after you, that you may get into it when you please.

Gownsmen, &c.] Poor clients, called togati, from the gowns which they wore. See sat. i. l. 3, and note: and sat. iii. l. 127, note. Numbers of these were seen walking before the great, on whom they were dependent.

—— Therefore Paulus, &c.] Some poor lawyer, who, though he could not afford to buy a ring set with a sardonyx, yet hired one to make his appearance with at the bar; and by this mean got greater fees than those who appeared without some such ornament.

145. Cossus or Basilus. Two poor, but, probably, learned law-

- Eloquence is rare, &c.] Nobody will give a man credit for being eloquent, if he appears in rags, at least very rarely.

146. When can Basilus produce, &c.] When will Basilus, or any man with a mean appearance, be employed in a cause of great consequence, as Cicero for Fonteius, where a mother was produced in court, weeping, and supplicating for the life of her son.

147. Who will bear Basilus, &c] i.e. Let a lawyer be ever so able, or speak ever so well, nobody will pay him the least attention, if his appearance be poor and shabby.

—— Let Gallia, &c.] France and Africa were remarkable, at that time, for encouraging eloquence, and had great lawyers, who got large fees. See Mr. C. Dryden's note.

Comp. sat. xv. l. 111. Ainsw. explains nutricula-a breeder, a bringer-up.

149. If it has pleased you, &c.] i. e. If you make a point of getting money by your eloquence at the bar.

Declamare doces? ô ferrea pectora Vectî!

Cum perimit sævos classis numerosa tyrannos:

Nam quæcunque sedens modo legerat, hæc eadem stans

Proferet, atque eadem cantabit versibus îsdem.

Occîdit miseros crambe repetita magistros.

Quis color, et quod sit causæ genus, atque ubi summa

Quæstio, quæ veniant diversâ parte sagittæ,

Scire volunt omnes, mercedem solvere nemo.

Mercedem appellas? quid enim scio? culpa docentis

Scilicet arguitur, quod lævâ in parte mamillæ

150. Do you teach, &c.] Having shewn how badly the lawyers were off, in this dearth of encouragement given to liberal sciences, and of rewarding real merit and abilities, he now proceeds to shew, that the teachers of rhetoric, who opened schools for the laborious employment of instructing youth in the knowledge and art of declamation, were, if possible, still worse off.

— O the iron heart, &c.] q. d. O the patience of Vectius? One would think that his mind was insensible of fatigue, quite steeled, as it were, against the assaults of impatience or weariness. See sat. i. l. 31.

--- Vectius.] The name of some teacher of rhetoric, or perhaps put here for any person of that profession.

151. When a numerous class, &c.] Classis here signifies a number of boys in the same form, or class, every one of which was to repeat over a long declamation to the master, on some particular subject which was given out to them as a thesis.

—— Destroyed cruel tyrants.] Alluding to the subject of the declamation, as—" Whether tyrants should not be destroyed by their "subjects?"—The declaimers are supposed to hold the affirmative.

Comp. sat. i. 15-17, and note on l. 15.

Some refer this to Dionysius, the tyrant of Sicily, who, after he was deposed, went to Corinth and set up a school, where Juvenal humourously supposes him to be killed by the fatigue of his employment; but the first sense, which is given above, seems to be the most natural.

152. For whatever, sitting, &c.] It is probable, that the rhetoricians first taught their scholars the manner of pronunciation and utterance, which they might do, when their scholars read over their declamations sitting; but when they instructed them in gesture and action, then they were made to stand up, still repeating the same things over and over again, and the master exerting himself, to shew them the best method of speaking and action.

153. Rehearse over, &c.] Canto—lit. signifies to sing or chant. Perhaps the ancients, in their declamation, used a kind of singing, or chanting, to mark the cadences of their periods. Canto also signifies to repeat the same thing over and over again, in the same letters and syllables—nothing more than this seems to be meant here. Versus, as well as a verse, signifies a line, even in prose. Ainsw. Versus, No. 5.

Do you teach to declaim? O the iron heart of Yectius!

When a numerous class hath destroy'd cruel tyrants:

For whatever, sitting it has just read, these same things standing,

It will utter, and rehearse the same, over and over, in the same verses.

The cabbage repeated kills the miserable masters.

What the colour, and what the kind of cause, and where 155
The chief question, what arrows may come from the contrary party,

All would know, nobody pay the reward.

Do you call for your reward ?—what, forsooth, do I know? The fault of the teacher

You may be sure is blamed, because in the left part of the breast

154. The cabbage, &c.] Crambe—a kind of colewort, or cabbage. The poet means (in allusion to the Greek saying— $\Delta_{15} \approx eque 20$, 9avates) that the hearing the same things for ever (like cabbage warmed up, and served at table many times to the same persons) must be nauseous and surfeiting, enough to tire and wear the masters to death.

Others read Cambre, a town near mount Gaurus, in Campania, where a battle had been fought between the Campanians and the people of Cumæ. This had been made the subject of a declamation, which the scholars repeated so often in the schools, for their exercises, as to tire their masters almost to death.

155. What the colour.] That which the ancients called the colour, was that part of the declamation which was introduced by way of cause, or reason, for the thing supposed to be done, and by way of plea or excuse for the action. As Orestes, when he confessed killing his mother, "I did it," says he, "because she killed my father."

- What the kind of cause.] Deliberative, demonstrative, or judicial-or whether defensible or not.

156. The chief question.] That on which the whole cause must turn.

What arrows, & c.] What arguments may come from the other side. Metaph. from shooting arrows at a mark.

157. All would know, &c.] Every body is willing enough to be taught these things, but very few choose to pay the master for his pains in teaching them.

158. Do you call for your reward?] i. e. What do you mean by asking for payment? (says the scholar.)—What do I know more than before? This is supposed to be the language of the scholar, when the master demands payment for his trouble. The dull and inapprehensive scholar, who gets no benefit from the pains of the master, lays his ignorance upon the master, and not upon his own inattention or stupidity; and therefore is supposed to blame the master, and to think that he deserves nothing for all the pains he has taken.

159. In the left part of the breast, &c.] The heart is supposed to Nil salit Arcadico juveni, cujus mihi sextâ

Quâque die miserum dirus caput Hannibal implet.

Quicquid id est, de quo deliberat; an petat urbem

A Cannis; an post nimbos et fulmina cautus

Circumagat madidas a tempestate cohortes,

Quantum vis stipulare, et protinus accipe quod do,

Ut toties illum pater audiat. Ast alii sex

Et plures uno conclamant ore sophistæ

Et veras agitant lites, raptore relicto:

Fusa venena silent, malus ingratusque maritus,

Et quæ jam veteres sanant mortaria cæcos.

170

Ergo sibi dabit ipse rudem, si nostra movebunt

Consilia, et vitæ diversum iter ingredietur, be in the left part of the breast, and to be the seat of understanding and wisdom; in both which the youth, here spoken of, seems to be as deficient, as if his heart were almost without motion, without that lively palpitation which is found in others. Lit. nothing leaps to the Arcadian youth in the left part of the breast.

160. Arcadian youth.] Arcadia was famous for its breed of asses, to which, by the appellation Arcadico, this young man is compared, whose dulness had prevented his profiting under the pains which his master took with him. See Pers. sat. iii. l. 9.

— Whose dire Hannibal, &c.] No theme was more common, in the Roman schools, than the adventures of Hannibal. Every week, says the master, does the story of Hannibal torment my poor head upon a declaiming day.

162. Go to the city.] March directly to Rome, after the battle of Cannæ.

164. Wheel about his troops wet, &c.] Hannibal, when within about three miles from Rome, was assaulted by a dreadful tempest. Maherbal, his general of horse, persuaded him to go on, and promised him that he should, that night, sup in the capitol: but Hannibal deliberated, whether he should not lead his troops back into Apulia, as they were so assaulted and dismayed by the violence of the tempest.

These circumstances are supposed to be the constant subjects of declamations in the schools.

165. Bargain for, &c.] Ask what you please, I will give it you, if you can get this stupid boy's father to hear him as often as I do: then I think he would be persuaded of his son's dulness, and think also that I deserve to be handsomely paid for what I have gone through in hearing him. See AINEW. Stipulor.

166—7. Six other sophists, &c.] Sophistæ meant at first learned men (from Gr. σοφος, wise); afterwards it meant pretenders to learning, prating cavillers. It also signifies orators: in this last sense it seems used here, where the poet means to say, that many of these teachers of rhetoric had left the schools, where fictitious matters were only declaimed upon, for the bar, where real causes were agitated.

170

The Arcadian youth has nothing that leaps, whose dire Hannibal, 160

Every sixth day, fills my miserable head:

Whatever it be concerning which he deliberates, whether he should go to the city

From Cannæ, or after showers and thunder cautious, He should wheel about his troops wet with the tempest.

Bargain for as much as you please, and immediately take what I give,

That his father should hear him as often. But six other

Sophists, and more, cry together with one mouth,

And agitate real causes, the ravisher being left:

The mixed poisons are silent, the bad and ungrateful husband,

And what medicines now heal old blind men.

Therefore he will discharge himself, if my counsels will Move; and he will enter upon a different walk in life,

167. Cry together with one mouth.] i.e. All agree with one consent to take this step—viz. to have done with teaching school, and to go to the bar.

168. The ravisher being left.] i. e. Leaving the fictitious subjects of declamation, such as some supposed ravisher, or perhaps the rape of Helen, Proserpine, &c.

169. The mixed poisons are silent.] Nothing more is said about the poisons of Medea. Fusa-poured and mixed together.

" ____ Ungrateful husband. Jason, who having married Medea, left her, and married another.

170. What medicines now heal, &c.] Mortaria—mortars. Per met. medicines brayed in a mortar.—What medicines recovered old Æson to his youth, and sight again. Ov. Met. lib. vii. l. 287—93.

Grangius thinks that this alludes to a story of a son, who made up some medicines to cure his father's eyes, and who was accused by his mother-in-law of having mixed-up poison, which the father believing, disinherited him. So Farnaby.

171. Therefore.] Ergo.—q. d. As the profession of teaching school is so miserable, and without profit, I would therefore advise those, who have left the shadowy declaration of the school for the real contention of the bar, to follow a new course of life, and never think of returning to teaching rhetoric again, lest they should have nothing left to buy bread with—this seems to be the sense of the passage.

Discharge himself.] Sibi dabit ipse rudem-literally, he will give himself the wand.

The rudis was a rod, or wand, given to sword-players, in token of a discharge, or release, from that exercise. Hence the phrase—dare rudem, to give a discharge—to dismiss.

See Hor. ep. i. 1. 2. donatum jam rude-dismissed. Francis. Juv.

sat. vi. l. 113, and note.

He will discharge himself from keeping school.

VOL. I.

185

Ad pugnam qui rhetorica descendit ab umbra,
Summula ne pereat, qua vilis tessera venit
Frumenti: quippe hæc merces lautissima. Tenta 175
Chrysogonus quanti doceat, vel Pollio quanti
Lautorum pueros, artem scindens Theodori.
Balnea sexcentis, et pluris porticus, in qua
Gestetur dominus quoties pluit: anne serenum
Exspectet, spargatve luto jumenta recenti? 180
Hic potius: namque hic mundæ nitet ungula mulæ.

Parte aliâ longis Numidarum fulta columnis Surgat, et algentem rapiat cœnatio solem. Quanticunque domus, veniet qui fercula docte Componit, veniet qui pulmentaria condit. Hos inter sumptus sestertia Quintiliano, Ut multum, duo sufficient; res nulla minoris Constabit patri, quam filius. Unde igitur tot Quintilianus habet saltus? exempla novorum

173. The rhetorical shadow, &c.] From the poor empty declamations in the schools, which at best are but a shadow of reality, and are but shadows in point of profit.

are but shadows in point of profit.

—— Real engagement.] To engage in pleading causes at the bar, which have reality for their subject, and which, he hopes, will produce real profit. Descendit ad pugnam-a military phrase.

174—5. A vile wheat-ticket.] In any dole made by the emperor, or by one of the city-magistrates, for distributing corn, the poor citizens had each a tally, or ticket, given them, which they first shewed, and then received their proportion, according to the money they brought to buy wheat from the public magazines, at a lower than the market price. This tally, or ticket, was called tessera, it being four-square: it was made of a piece of wood, or of lead—hence Juvenal calls it vilis.

175. A most splendid reward.] Though they should get only a wheat-ticket for a fee, yet this is noble, in comparison of what they get by teaching rhetoric.

176. Chrysogonus—Pollio.] Rhetoric-masters, who read to their pupils the works of Theodorus Gadareus, an excellent orator, born at Gadara, a city of Syria, not far from Ascalon.

177. The quality.] The nobility, the rich fathers of the poor rhetorician's pupils.

Dividing.] Scindens-dividing, taking to pieces, and thus opening and explaining the several parts.

Baths are at six hundred sestertia.] Which they built for themselves, and maintained at a great expense. See sat. i. l. 106, note.

— A portico at more.] They were still more expensive in their porticos, or covered ways, where they used to ride in rainy or dirty weather.

179. Can he wait, &c.] Should these great people be forced to

Who has descended from the rhetorical shadow to real engagement, Lest the small sum should perish, from which cometh a vile Wheat-ticket: for this is a most splendid reward. Try 175

For how much Chrysogonus teaches, or Pollio the children

Of the quality, dividing the art of Theodorus.

Baths are at six hundred sestertia, and a portico at more, in which The lord is carried when it rains: can he wait for Fair weather, or dash his cattle with fresh mud?

180

Here rather, for here the hoof of the clean mule shines.

In another part, propp'd with tall Numidian pillars, A supper-room arises, and will snatch the cool sun.

Whatever the house cost, one will come who composes skilfully

Dishes of meat, and one who seasons soups.

185

Amidst these expenses, two sestertiums, as a great deal, Will suffice for Quintilian. No thing will cost a father

Less than a son. Whence, therefore, hath Quintilian so many forests?—The examples of new fates stay at home till fine weather came, or else go out and splash themselves, and their fine horses, with dirt?

181. Here rather, &c.] To be sure he will use the portico, where not only he, but his very mules, are protected from having their feet soiled.

182. Tall Numidian pillars.] The room raised high on pillars of marble from Numidia, which was very elegant and expensive.

183. A supper-room.] A dining-room we should call it: but conatio, among the Romans, signified a room to sup in, for their entertainments were always at supper.

—— Snatch the cool sun. The windows so contrived as to catch the sun in winter-time. The Romans were very curious in their contrivances of this sort. They had rooms toward the north-east, to avoid the summer sun; and toward the south-west, to receive the sun in winter.

184. Whatever the house cost.] They little regarded the expense they were at in building.

——One will come, &c.] They'll be sure to have their tables sumptuously furnished by cooks, confectioners, &c. Pulmentaria seems used, here, for victuals in general. Ainsw.

186. Amidst these expenses, Sc.] Which they squander away in buildings, eating, and drinking, they think two poor sestertiums (about 151.) enough to pay Quintilian (the great rhetorician) for teaching their children.

187—8. Will cost a father less, &c.] They laid out their money with cheerfulness on their gluttony, &c. but grudged ever so little expense for the education of their children: therefore nothing costs them so little.

188-9. Hath Quintilian, Ge.] If these things be so, how comes | Fatorum transi: felix et pulcher et acer, | 190 |

|--|-------|
| Felix et sapiens et nobilis et generosus, | ~. |
| Appositam nigræ lunam subtexit alutæ: | |
| Felix, orator quoque maximus, et jaculator, | un Co |
| Et si perfrixit, cantat bene. Distat enim, quæ. | |
| Sidera te excipiant, modo primos incipientem | . 195 |
| Edere vagitus, et adhuc a matre rubentem. | |
| Si Fortuna volet, sies de rhetore consul: | |
| Si volet hæc eadem, fies de consule rhetor. | |
| Ventidius quid enim? quid Tullius? anne aliud quam | |
| Sidus, et occulti miranda potentia fati? | 200 |
| Servis regna dabunt, captivis fata triumphos. | |
| Felix ille tamen, corvo quoque rarior albo. | |
| Penituit multos vanæ sterilisque cathedræ, | |
| Sicut Thrasymachi probat exitus, atque Secundi | |
| Carrinatis; et hunc inopem vidistis, Athenæ, | 205 |
| Nil præter gelidas ausæ conferre cicutas. | |
| Di majorum umbris tenuem, et sine pondere terram, | |

Quintilian to have so large an estate, and to be the owner of such a tract of country?

189. Examples of new fates, &c.] There is nothing to be said of men, whose fortunes are so new and singular as this: they must not be mentioned as examples for others. As if he had said—Who but Quintilian ever grew rich by the cultivation of the liberal arts? It is quite a novelty. The Romans called an unusual good fortune—nova fata.

190. The fortunate is handsome, &c.] In these lines the poet is saying, that "luck is all;"—let a man be but fortunate, and he will be reckoued every thing else.

- Witty.] Acer-sharp, as we say-acer ingenio.

192. The moon, &c.] The hundred patricians, first established by Romulus, were distinguished by the numeral letter C fixed on their shoes, which, from its resemblance to an half moon, was called luna. This was continued down to later times, as a mark of distinction among the patricians: they were a sort of buskin made of black leather. How lib. i. sat. vi. l. 27. By this line the poet means to say, that the fortunate may become senators and nobles. Aluta—lit. tanned leather: by meton any thing made thereof—hence a leather shoe, or buskin.

193. A dart-thrower.] This is the literal sense of jaculator: but we must here suppose it to mean, one skilful in throwing out, or darting, arguments-i. e. a great disputant-l. 156.

194. There is a difference, &c.] The Romans were very superstitious, and thought that the fortune of their future life mainly depended on the stars, or constellations, which presided over their natal hour. See sat. ix. l. 32—4, et al.

196. Red from your mother.] i. e. Just born. Before the blood contracted from the birth is washed away.

Pass over: the fortunate is handsome, and witty, 190 The fortunate is wise, and noble, and generous, And subjoins the moon set upon his black shoe. The fortunate is also a great orator, a dart-thrower, And, if he be hoarse, sings well: for there is a difference what Stars receive you, when you first begin 195 To send forth crying, and are yet red from your mother. If Fortune please, you will from a rhetorician become a consul: If this same please, you will from a consul become a rhetorician. For what was Ventidius? what Tullius? was it other than A star, and the wonderful power of hidden fate? 200 The fates will give kingdoms to slaves, triumphs to captives. Yet that fortunate person is also more rare than a white crow. Many have repented the vain and barren chair, As the exit of Thrasymachus proves, and of Secundus Carrinas, and him whom poor you saw, O Athens, 205

Grant, ye gods, to the shades of our ancestors thin earth, and without weight,

198. This same.] Fortune.

199. Ventidius.] Bassus, son of a bondwoman at Ascalon. He was first a carman, then a muleteer; afterwards, in one year, he was created prætor and consul.

- Tullius.] The sixth king of Rome, born of a captive.

199-200. Other than a star.] i. e. To what did these men owe their greatness, but to the stars which presided at the birth, and to the mysterious power of destiny?

202. More rare, &c.] However, that same fortunate and happy man is rare to be met with. Comp. sat. vi. 164.

Daring to bestow nothing but cold hemlock.

203. Many have repented, &c.] Of the barren and beggarly employment of teaching rhetoric—which they did, sitting in a chair, desk, or pulpit.

204. Thrasymachus.] Who hanged himself. He was a rhetorician of Athens, born at Carthage.

204-5. Secundus Carrinas] He came from Athens to Rome, and, declaiming against tyrants, was banished by Caligula.

205. Him whom poor you saw, &c.] Socrates, whom you saw, ungrateful Athenians! almost starving, and paid him nothing for his lectures, but the barbarous reward of cold hemlock, with which he was poisoned by the sentence of his judges. Hemlock has such a refrigerating quality over the blood and juices, as to cause them to stagnate, and thus occasion death; it is therefore reckoned among the cold poisons. The word ausæ, here, is very significant, to intimate the daring insolence and cruelty of the Athenians, who, to their own eternal infamy, could reward such a man in such a manner.

207. Grant, &c.] This sentence is elliptical, and must be supplied with some verb to precede umbris, as give, grant, or the like.

- Thin earth, &c.] It was usual with the Romans to express

Spirantesque crocos, et in urnâ perpetuum ver,
Qui præceptorem sancti voluere parentis
Esse loco. Metuens virgæ jam grandis Achilles
Cantabat patriis in montibus: et cui non tunc
Eliceret risum citharœdi cauda magistri?
Sed Ruffum, atque alios cædit sua quæque juventus:
Ruffum, qui toties Ciceronem Allobroga dixit.
Quis gremio Enceladi, doctique Palæmonis affert
Quantum grammaticus meruit labor? et tamen ex hoc,
Quodcunque est, (minus est autem, quam rhetorisæra,) Discipuli custos præmordet Acænitus ipse,
Et qui dispensat, frangit sibi. Cede, Palæmon,
Et patere inde aliquid decrescere, non aliter, quam
Institor hybernæ tegetis, niveique cadurci:

their good wishes for the dead, in the manner here mentioned, that the earth might lie light upon them. So MARTIAL:

Sit tibi terra levis, mollique tegaris arena.

208. Breathing crocuses.] Breathing forth sweets.—Crocus, lit. saffron; also the yellow chives in the midst of flowers. What we call a crocus blows early in the spring.

—— Perpetual spring, &c.] May flowers be perpetually growing and blooming, as in the spring of the year. They were fond of depositing the urns of their deceased friends among banks of flowers.

209. Who would have a preceptor, &c.] Who venerated their masters and teachers as if they were their parents; and esteemed them, as standing in the place of parents.

210. Achilles, &c.] The famous son of Thetis, when almost a man, was in great awe of his tutor Chiron the Centaur.

211. Sang.] Practised lessons in vocal and instrumental music under his tutor.

In his paternal mountains.] The mountains of Thessaly, from whence came Peleus the father of Achilles.

212. Would not the tail, &c.] The upper part of Chiron was like a man, the lower like an horse. His figure must be ridiculous enough, with a man's head and with an horse's tail, and would have been laughed at by most people; but Achilles had too much reverence for his master, to make a joke of his figure, as more modern scholars would have done.

-- Harper his master.] Chiron is said to have taught music, as well as medicine and astronomy.

213. But Ruffus, &c.] Now, so far from the masters receiving veneration from their scholars, it is a common practice for the scholar to beat the master, as had been the case of Ruffus and others. So PLAUTUS, Bacch. iii. 3. 37. Puer septuennis pædagogo tabula dirumpit caput.

214. Ruffus, &c.] This Ruffus charged Cicero with writing barbarous Latin, like an Allobrogian, or Savoyard. Even this great grammarian could not obtain respect from his scholars.

And breathing crocuses, and perpetual spring upon their urn,
Who would have a preceptor to be in the place of a sacred Parent. Achilles, now grown up, fearing the rod, Sang in his paternal mountains; and from whom then
Would not the tail of the harper his master have drawn forth laughter?
But Ruffus, and others, each of their own young men strike,
Ruffus, who so often called Cicero an Allobrogian.
Who brings to the lap of Enceladus, or of the learned Palamon,
As much as grammatical labour has deserved? and yet from this,
Whatever it be, (but it is less than the money of the rhetorician,) Accenitus himself, the keeper of the scholar, snips,
And he who manages, breaks off some for himself. Yield, Palamon,
And suffer something to decrease from thence, not otherwise than 220
A dealer in winter-rug, and white blanket.

215. Who brings, &c.] Who pays Enceladus a reward equal to his labours? He was a famous grammarian. Gremio here denotes a loose cavity, or hollow, formed by the doubling of the robe or garment.—q. d. A lap, into which things were put. Gr. κολπος.—Comp. Luke vi. 38.

The learned Palamon.] Rhemnius Palamon, a very learned and distinguished grammarian, but who was so conceited, as to say, that learning would live and die with him. See Suet. de Gramm.

23. See sat. vi. l. 451.

217. Whatever it be, &c.] After all, small as the pay of a grammarian may be, (which at the most is even smaller than that of a rhetorician,) there are sad defalcations from it.

218. Acanitus—the keeper, &c.] This Acanitus is a feigned name for some pedagogue, (Gr. 7215, a boy, and 272, to lead,) who was a sort of servant, that followed his young master, took care of his behaviour, and particularly attended him to his exercise, and to school.

He is properly called, here, discipuli custos.—He insisted on having part of the poor grammarian's pay, as a perquisite. The word præmordet is here peculiarly happy, and intimates that the pedagogue, who, perhaps, carried the pay, took a part of it before he delivered it to the master: like a person who is to give a piece of bread to another, and bites a piece off first for himself.

219. He who manages, &c.] Qui dispensat, i. e. dispensator, the steward, or housekeeper; either that belonging to the grammarian, into whose hands the money is paid, retains some part of it for his wages, or the steward of the gentleman who pays it, retains a part of it by way of poundage, or perquisite, to himself. Frangit.—metaph. from breaking something that was entire.

--- Yield Palamon, &c.] Submit to these abatements, and be glad to have something, though less than your due, as it fares with tradesmen who are willing to abate something in their price, rather than not sell their goods. See Ainsw. Institor.

Dummodo non pereat, mediæ quod noctis ab hora Sedisti, quâ nemo faber, quâ nemo sederet, Qui docet obliquo lanam deducere ferro: Dummodo non pereat totidem olfecisse lucernas, 225 Quot stabant pueri, cum totus decolor esset Flaccus, et hæreret nigro fuligo Maroni. Rara tamen merces, quæ cognitione Tributi Non egeat. Sed vos sævas imponite leges. Ut præceptori verborum regula constet, 230 Ut legat historias, auctores noverit omnes, Tanquam ungues digitosque suos: ut forte rogatus Dum petit aut thermas, aut Phœbi balnea, dicat Nutricem Anchisæ, nomen, patriamque novercæ Archemori: dicat quot Acestes vixerit annos, 235 Quot Siculus Phrygibus vini donaverit urnas. Exigite, ut mores teneros ceu pollice ducat, Ut si quis cerà vultum facit: exigite, ut sit

222. Let it not be lost, &c.] Only take care to have something for your trouble; let not all your pains, which you have taken, be thrown away, in rising at midnight to teach your boys—a fatigue that no common mechanic would undergo.

224. To draw out wool, &c.] To comb wool, which they did, as we find by this passage, with a card having crooked teeth made of iron-like those now in use.

225. To have smelt, &c.] Let it not be for nothing that you have been half poisoned with the stink of as many lamps as you have boys standing round you to say their lessons before it is light, and therefore are each of them with a lamp in his hand to read by.

226-7. Horace all discolour'd.] With the oil of the lamps, which the boys, through carelessness, let drop on their books.

227. Black Virgil.] Made black with the smoke of the lamps, which the boys held close to their books, when they were reading and construing their lessons.

228. Tet pay is rare, which, &c.] Though little is left of the pay to the grammarian, after all the deductions above mentioned, yet it is very rare that they get any thing at all, unless they go to law for it. The tribune here means the judge who tried civil causes.

229. But impose ye, &c.] Though the poor grammarian labours under all these difficulties, be sure, you that send your sons to them, to impose all the task upon them that ye can: make no abatement in his qualifications: expect that he knows every rule of grammar.

231. Read histories, &c.] That he should be a good historian: that he should know all authors at his fingers' ends—ad unguem—as the saying is.

233. The hot baths.] There were thermæ, hot baths, in Rome, as well as cold baths, balnea: to the former they went to sweat, in the other they washed. Now this poor grammarian was expected

Only let it not be lost, that from the midnight hour
You have sat, in which no smith, in which nobody would sit,
Who teaches to draw out wool with the crooked iron:
Only let it not be lost to have smelt as many lamps
As boys were standing, when all discolour'd was Horace, and soot stuck to black Virgil.
Yet pay is rare which may not want the cognizance
Of the Tribune.—But impose ye cruel laws,
That the rule of words should be clear to the preceptor:

230
That he should read histories, should know all authors
As well as his own nails and fingers; that by chance, being ask'd While he is going to the hot baths, or the baths of Phœbus, he should tell

The nurse of Auchises, the name and country of the step-mother
Of Archemorus: should tell how many years Acestes lived: 235
How many urns of wine the Sicilian presented to the Phrygians.
Require, that he should form the tender manners as with his thumb,
As if one makes a face with wax: require, that he should be to be ready to answer any questions which were asked him, by people whom he met with, when he went either to the one or the other.

233. Phabus.] The name of some bath-keeper.

234. The nurse of Anchises.] The poet here, perhaps, means to ridicule the absurd curiosity of Tiberius, who used to be often teasing the grammarians with silly and unedifying questions; as, Who was Hecuba's mother? What was the name of Achilles when dressed in woman's clothes? What the Sirens sung?—and the like. See Suet. in Tiberio, cap. lxx.

Such foolish questions might be asked the grammarian, when he met with people at the baths; and he was bound to answer them, under peril of being accounted an ignoramus.

Caieta, the nurse of Æneas, is mentioned, Æn. vii. 1, 2; but there is no mention of the nurse of Anchises: perhaps Juvenal means to ridicule the ignorance of the querist, as mistaking Anchises for Æneas.

234—5. Of the step-mother of Archemorus.] For Anchemolus, (see Æn. x. l. 389.) who seems here meant; but perhaps the querist may be supposed to call it Archemorus.

235. Acestes.] Æn. i. 199; and Æn. v. 73.

236. The Sicilian.] Meaning Acestes, who was king of Sicily, of his giving wine to the Trojans. See Æn. i. 199, 200.

237. Require.] Exigite, exact—that, beside his teaching your children, (and, in order to that, he be perfectly learned,) he also should watch over their morals, and form them with as much nicety, care and exactness, as if he were moulding a face in wax with his fingers. Ducat—metaph. taken from statuaries. Comp. Virg. Æn. vi. 1. 848.

VOL. 1.

Et pater ipsius cœtûs, ne turpia ludant, Ne faciant vicibus. Non est leve tot puerorum Observare manus, oculosque in fine trementes. Hæc, inquit, cures; sed cum se verterit annus, Accipe, victori populus quod postulat, aurum.

240

239. A father of his flock.] Require also, that he should be as anxious, and as careful of his scholars, as if he were their father.

— Lest they should play, &c.] Lest they should fall into lewd and bad practices among themselves. This is the substance of this, and the two following lines, which had better, as some other passages in Juvenal, be paraphrased than translated.

242. When the year, &c.] When the year comes round—at the end of the year.

243. Accept a piece of gold.] Aurum.—The Roman aureus (according to Ainsw. Val. and Proportion of Roman coins) was about 11. 9d. of our money:—but, whatever the precise value of the aurum mentioned here might be, the poet evidently means to say that the grammarian does not get more for a whole year's labour in teaching, and watching over a boy's morals, than a victorious fencer, or sword-player, gets by a single battle won upon the stage—viz. about 41. (or rather about 51. of our money, which Marshal, after Vet. Schol. says, was the stated sum, and which was not to be exceeded.

Even a father of his flock, lest they should play base tricks,
And corrupt each other: it is no light matter to watch
The conduct of so many boys, and their wanton looks.
These things, says he, take care of—but when the year turns itself,
Accept a piece of gold, which the people require for a conqueror.

243. Which the people require.] When a fencer, or gladiator, came off victorious, the Roman people required the quinque aurei to be given to him by the prætor, tribune, or other person, who gave and presided at the show. This passage is, by some, referred to Mart. lib. x. epigr. 74. where he mentions one Scorpus, a famous charioteer, who, by being victor in a chariot-race, carried off, in one hour's time, fifteen sacks full of gold. But this does not seem to agree with what Juvenal says of the gains of the poor grammarian, which the poet evidently supposes to be no more than the perquisite of a common gladiator that had come off conqueror: even this was five times as much as a lawyer got by a cause. Comp. l. 122.

Thus Juvenal concludes this Satire, having fully accomplished his purpose; which was to shew, by many instances, the shameful neglect of learning and science, as well as of the professors of them, which then prevailed among the nobility of Rome.

END OF THE SEVENTH SATIRE.

SATIRA VIII.

ARGUMENT.

In this Satire the Poet proves, that true nobility does not consist in statues and fieldigrees, but in honourable and good actions. And, in opposition to persons nobly born, who are a disgrace to their family, he

STEMMATA quid faciunt? quid prodest, Pontice, longo Sanguine censeri, pictosque ostendere vultus Majorum, et stantes in curribus Æmilianos, Et Curios jam dimidios, humeroque minorem Corvinum, et Galbam auriculus nasoque carentem? Quis fructus generis tabulâ jactare capaci Corvinum, et post hunc multâ deducere virgâ Fumosos equitum cum Dictatore Magistros, Si coram Lepidis male vivitur? effigies quo Tot bellatorum, si luditur alea pernox Line 1. What do pedigrees ?] i. e. Of what use or service are they, merely considered in themselves?

10

Ante Numantinos? si dormire incipis ortu

—— Ponticus.] There was a famous heroic poet of this name, much acquainted with Propertius and Ovid: but the person here mentioned, to whom this Satire is addressed, was probably some man of quality, highly elevated by family pride, but whose manners disgraced his birth.

2. By a long descent. Longo sanguine—a descent through a long train of ancestors of noble blood.

Painted countenances, &c.] It was customary among the Romans to have their houses furnished with family-pictures, images, &c. and it was no small part of the pride of the nobility.

3-4-5. The Emilii—Curii—Corvinus.] Were noble Romans, the founders of illustrious families, and an honour to their country.

3. Standing in chariots.] Triumphal cars, as expressed in the triumphal statues.

4. Now half.] i. e. Half demolished by length of time.

4.—5. Less by a shoulder Corvinus.] His statue thus mutilated by time and accident.

5. Galba.] The statue of Sergius Galba, a man of consular dignity, and who founded an illustrious family, was also defaced and mutilated by time.

SATIRE VIII.

ARGUMENT.

displays the worth of many who were meanly born, as Cicero, Marius, Serv. Tullius, and the Decii.

WHAT do pedigrees? what avails it, Ponticus, to be valued By a long descent, and to shew the painted countenances Of ancestors, and Æmilii standing in chariots, And Curii now half, and less by a shoulder Corvinus, and Galba wanting ears and nose? 5 What fruit to boast of Corvinus in the capacious table Of kindred, and after him to deduce, by many a branch, Smoky masters of the knights, with a Dictator, If before the Lepidi you live ill? whither (tend) the effigies Of so many warriors, if the nightly die be played with 10 Before the Numantii? if you begin to sleep at the rising of

6. What fruit.] i. e. Of what real, solid use, can it be?

The capacious table.] viz. A large genealogical table.
7. By many a branch.] The genealogical tables were described in the form of trees: the first founder of the family was the root his immediate descendants the stem—and all the collaterals from them were the branches. So among us.

8. Smoky masters of the knights. I Images of those who had been magistri equitum, masters or chiefs of the order of knights, now tarnished, and grown black, by the smoke of the city.

--- With a dictator. An image of some of the family who had filled that office. He was chief magistrate among the Romans, vested with absolute power, and from whom lay no appeal. Twenty-four axes were carried before him. He'was never chosen but in some great danger or trouble of the state; and commonly at the end of six months was to resign his office.

9. If before the Lepidi, &c.] i. e. If before the images of those great men you exhibit scenes of vileness and infamy?

10. The nightly die, &c.] Pernox signifies that which lasts through the night. - What avails it, that your room is furnished with busts, pictures, &c. of your noble ancestors, if, in that very room, before their faces, as it were, you are gambling and playing all night at dice?

11. If you begin to sleep, &c.] If you, after a night's debauch, Luciferi, quo signa Duces et castra movebant? Cur Allobrogicis, et magnâ gaudeat arâ, Natus in Herculeo Fabius lare, si cupidus, si Vanus, et Euganea quantumvis mollior agna? 15 Si tenerum attritus Catinensi pumice lumbum Squallentes traducit avos: emptorque veneni Frangendâ miseram funestat imagine gentem? Tota licet veteres exornent undique ceræ Atria, NOBILITAS SOLA EST ATQUE UNICA VIRTUS. Paulus, vel Cossus, vel Drusus moribus esto: Hos ante effigies majorum pone tuorum: Præcedant ipsas illi, te consule, virgas. Prima mihi debes animi bona. Sanctus haberi. Justitiæque tenax factis dictisque mereris? Agnosco procerem: salve, Getulice, seu tu are going to bed at day-break, the very time when those great generals were setting forth on their march to attack an enemy.

13. Fabius, &c.] Why should Fabius, the son of Qu. Fab. Maximus, who overcame the Allobroges, boast in his father's achievements, and in the origin of his family's descent from Hercules, the care of whose altar was hereditary in that family. If he be covetous and vain, and unworthy of the honour which he claims?

15. Softer than an Éuganean lamb.] The sheep bred upon the Euganean downs had the finest and softest fleeces in all Italy. To have a very soft and delicate skin was a mark of great effeminacy; but more especially if, as the following line supposes, it was made so by art.

16. Catinensian jumice.] The best pumice-stones were gathered in Sicily, at the foot of Mount Ætua; with these the effeminate Italians used to smooth their skins. Catina (now Catania) was a city near Mount Ætna, almost ruined by an earthquake, 1693. Here were the finest pumice-stones.

17. He shames, &c.] He dishonours the old and venerable pictures, or images, of his rough and hardy ancestors, now dirty with the rust of time, and thus disgraces the memory of those great men. Traduco signifies to expose to public shame. Answ. No. 5.

18. An image to be broken.] If he should cast a sadness over the whole family, as it were, by having his own image placed among those of his ancestors, when he does such things as to deserve to have his image broken—If any one, who had an image of himself, was convicted of a grievous crime, his image was to be broken to pieces, and his name erased from the calendar, either by the sentence of the judge, or by the fury of the people. Comp. sat. x. l. 58. Such must, most likely, be the case of a man who dealt in poisons to destroy people.

19. Old waven figures.] Images and likenesses of ancestors, made in wax, and set up as ornaments and memorials of the great persons from which they were taken.

20

Lucifer, at which those generals were moving their standards and camps?

Why should Fabius, born in a Herculean family, rejoice In the Allobroges, and the great altar, if covetous, if Vain, and never so much softer than an Euganean lamb? 15 If, having rubb'd his tender loins with a Catinensian pumice, He shames his dirty ancestors - and, a buyer of poison, He saddens the miserable family with an image to be broken? Tho' the old waxen figures should adorn the courts on all sides,

VIRTUE IS THE ONLY AND SINGLE NOBILITY.

Be thou in morals Paulus, or Cossus, or Drusus:

Put these before the effiges of your ancestors:

Let them, you being consul, precede the fasces themselves. You owe me first the virtues of the mind-do you deserve

To be accounted honest, and tenacious of justice, in word and 25 deed?

I acknowledge the nobleman :- Hail, Getulian !- or thou,

20. Virtue, &c.] All the ensigns of grandcur and nobility are nothing without this it is this alone which stamps a real greatness upon all who possess it.

21. Paulus.] Æmilius, who conqured Perses king of Macedonia, and led him and his children in triumph :- he was a man of great frugality and modesty.

___ Cossus.] He conquered the Getulians, under Agustus Casar

-hence was called Getulicus. See l. 26.

___ Drusus.] There were three of this name, all of which deserved well of the republic.

22. Put these before, &c.] Prefer the examples of those good men before the statues of your family.

23. Let them, &c.] If ever you should be consul, esteem them before the fasces, and all the ensigns of your high office.

24. You owe me, &c.] The ornaments-bona, the good qualities -of the mind, are what I first insist upon; these I expect to find in you, before I allow you to be indeed noble.

25. Honest.] Sanctus is an extensive word, and here may include piety to the gods, as well as justice, honesty, and truth towards men.

See sat. iii. 137.

26. I acknowledge, &c.] I then acknowledge you as a man of quality.

- Hail, Getulian! I salute you as if you were Cossus, the conqueror of Getulia-hence called Getulicus, 1. 21, note.

- Or thou, &c.] Silanus was a noble Roman, who conquered Magon the Carthaginian general, took Hannon, another commander, prisoner, and did other great services to his country.

q. d. If, besides your personal private virtues, (l. 24, 5.) you shew yourself a rare and choice citizen, eminently serviceable and useful to your country, like Silanus of old, from whatever blood you may derive your pedigree, however mean it may be, yet your Silanus, quocunque alio de sanguine rarus Civis, et egregius patriæ contingis ovanti.

Exclamare libet, populus quod clamat Osiri
Invento: quis enim generosum dixerit hunc, qui Indignus genere, et præclaro nomine tantum
Insignis? nanum cujusdam Atlanta vocamus:

Æthiopem cygnum: parvam extortamque puellam,
Europen: canibus pigris, scabieque vetustâ

Lævibus, et siccæ lambentibus ora lucernæ.

Nomen erit pardus, tigris, leo; si quid adhuc est
Quod fremat in terris violentius. Ergo cavebis, Et metues, ne tu sic Creticus, aut Camerinus.

His ego quem monui? tecum est mihi sermo, Rubelli
Plaute: tumes alto Drusorum sanguine, tanquam

Plaute: tumes alto Drusorum sanguine, tanquam
Feceris ipse aliquid, propter quod nobilis esses;
Ut te conciperet, quæ sanguine fulget Iüli,
Non quæ ventoso conducta sub aggere texit.
Vos humiles, inquis, vulgi pars ultima nostri, country will rejoice that such a man has fallen to its lot—and exclaim, as the Ægyptians did, when they found Osiris.

29. Osiris, &c.] The chief deity of Ægypt, which the Ægyptians worshipped under the form of a bull, or ox. This said bull was supposed to be inhabited by Osiris: but they used, once in a few years, to put this bull to death, and then go, with their priests, howling, and making lamentations, in search of another Osiris, or Apis, with the same exact marks as the former had; which, when they had found, they shouted for joy, and with loud acclamations, called out—'Eugnzauer! Eugnzauer! we have found him! we have found him!

31. An illustrious name.] Or title, derived from some great and illustrious ancestor.

32. The dwarf of some one. The people of quality used to keep dwarfs for their amusement.

— Atlas.] A high hill in Mauritania, so high that the poets make a person of it, and feign that he was the brother of Prometheus, and turned into this mountain by Perseus, at the sight of the gorgon's head. From its height it was fabled to support the celestial globe. See Virg. Æn. iv. l. 481, 2.

33. An Æthiopian-a swan.] i. e. Black white.

34. Europa. The beautiful daughter of Agenor, king of the Phœnicians, whom Jupiter in the form of a bull carried into Crete. From her the quarter of the globe, called Europe, is said to take its name. See Hor. lib. iii. ode xxvii. l. 75, 6.

—— Slow dogs.] Slow hounds that are unfit for the chase. 35. Smooth.] Having all their hair eaten off by the mange.

— Licking the mouths, &c.] So hungry and starved as to lick the stinking oil off the edges of lamps. Giving the titles of nobility, and calling those noble who are, by their evil manners, and bad

Silanus, from whatever other blood, a rare, and Choice citizen, thou befallest thy triumphing country.

We may exclaim, what the people call out to Osiris
When found.—But who would call him noble, who is Unworthy his race, and for an illustrious name only Remarkable? We call the dwarf of some one—Atlas:
An Æthiopian—a swan: a little and deformed wench—
Europa: to slow dogs, and with an old mange
Smooth, and licking the mouths of a dry lamp,
The name of lion, leopard, tiger shall belong: and if there be yet
Any thing on earth that rages more violently. Therefore beware,

And dread, lest thou shouldst thus be Creticus, or Camerinus.

Whom have I admonished by these things? with thee is my discourse.

40

Rubellius Plautus: you swell with the high blood of the Drusi, as if You yourself had done something, from which you should be noble; That she should have conceived you, who shines with the blood of Iülus.

Not she who, being hired, has woven under the windy mount. "Ye are low," say you, "the last part of our common people; actions, a disgrace to their families, is calling a dwarf—a giant;—a blackmoor—a fine white swan;—a crooked deformed wench—Europa:—we may as well call a pack of mangy, worthless hounds—tigers, leopards, and lions; or by the name of nobler beasts, if nobler can be found.

37. Beware, &c.] Cavebis—metues—lit. you will be cautious, and will fear, lest the world flatter you with the mock titles of Creticus and Camerinus in the same way. See sat. ii. l. 67.

Publ. Sulpitius Camerinus was an illustrious and virtuous Roman, who was sent by the senate, with Posthumius and Manlius, to Athens, to copy the laws of Solon, as well as those of other cities.

39. By these things.] By what I have been saying.

40. Rubellius Plantus.] Some read Plancus, others Blandus; but Plantus seems to be right. Rubellius Blandus was his father, who married Julia the daughter of Drusus, son of Livia, wife of Augustus.

- Of the Drusi.] You are very proud of your descent on your mother's side. Compare the preceding note.

41. Done something, &c.] As if you yourself had done something to make you illustrious, and deserving the honour of a mother of the Julian line.

43. Not she, &c.] Instead of being the son of some poor creature who knitted stockings for her bread under the town-wall. The agger, here mentioned, is the mount raised by Tarquin, for the defence of the city, a place much resorted to by low people. See sat. vi. 587 It was much exposed to the weather.

Some read sub aere, i. e. sub dio—in the open air.

44. The last part, & e. The very dregs of our plebeians.

VOL. I. T

45

50

55

Quorum nemo queat patriam monstrare parentis:
Ast ego Cecropides. Vivas, et originis hujus
Gaudia longa feras: tamen imâ ex plebe Quiritem
Facundum invenies: solet hic desendere causas
Nobilis indocti: veniet de plebe togatâ,
Qui juris modos, et legum ænigmata, solvat.
Hic petit Euphraten juvenis, domitique Batavi
Custodes aquilas, armis industrius: at tu
Nil nisi Cecropides, truncoque simillimus Hermæ:
Nullo quippe alio vincis discrimine, quam quod
Illi marmoreum caput est, tua vivit imago.
Dic mihi, Teucrorum proles, animalia muta
Quis generosa putet, nisi fortia? nempe volucrem

45. Of whom none, &c.] Of such obscure parentage, as to be unable to trace out the birth place of your parents.

46. I am a Gecropian.] Descended from Cecrops, the first king of Athens.

This is an insolent speech, which some proud noble is supposed to make, in scorn and derision of those whom he thought his inferiors.

- May you live, &c.] Sir, I wish you much joy of your noble descent. Ironically spoken .- Viva! as the Italians say.

47. Yet from the lowest, &c.] Much as you despise them, there have been men of the highest talents and abilities from among them—some who have defended the causes of ignorant nobles, when they themselves could not have defended them.

49. The gowned people.] i. e. The common people, called togati, from the gowns which they wore. See sat. i. l. 3, and note.

50. Who can untie, &c.] Some great and eminent lawyer, able to solve all the difficulties, and unfold all the perplexities of jurisprudence.

51. Seeks the Euphrates, &c.] Another goes into the East, and distinguishes himself as a soldier.

Conquer'd Batavus.] The Batavi, or Hollanders, conquered

by Domitian when a youth.

52. The guardian eagles.] The eagles mean the Roman troops, which had the figures of eagles on their standards, and were set to keep the newly conquered Batavi from revolting.

Another of the common people distinguishes himself as a useful person to his country, by joining the troops that were sent on this occasion

53. But a Cecropian. As for you, when you have called your-self a Cecropian, you have no more to say—and this most properly belongs to you, from your resemblance to one of the Hermæ at Athens, that is made of marble; so, in point of insensibility, are you:—that has neither hands nor feet; no more have you, in point of usefulness, to your country, yourself, or to any body else.

" Of whom none can shew the country of his parent:

"But I am a Cecropian."—May you live—and long enjoy the happiness

Of this origin: yet, from the lowest of the people, an eloquent Roman You will find: this is used to defend the causes of an

Unlearned nobleman: there will come from the gowned people

Another, who can untie the knots of right, and the riddles of the laws.

50

This youth seeks the Euphrates, and of conquer'd Batavus
The guardian eagles, industrious in arms; but thou Art nothing but a Cecropian, and most like to a mutilated Herma;

For you excel from no other difference, than that He has a marble head, your image lives.

He has a marble head, your image lives.

Tell me, thou offspring of the Trojans, who thinks dumb animals

Noble, unless strong? for thus a swift

None, unless strong: 161 thus a swite

53. A mutilated Herma.] Herma-æ—signifies a statue of Hermes, or Mercury.—Mercury was called Hermes, from Gr. ερμηνευω, to interpret; because he was the supposed inventor of speech, by which men interpret their thoughts to each other. See Hor. lib. i. ode x. l. 1—3.

It was a piece of religion at Athens, to have a figure of Mercury fixed up against their houses, of a cubic form, without hands or feet; this was called Herma. The poet, therefore, humorously compares this Rubellius Plautus, who boasted of his descent from Cecrops, and therefore called himself a Cecropian, to the useless figures of Mercury, which were set up at Athens, or, perhaps, to the posts on which they stood. In this sense he might call himself Cecropian.

54. You excel.] You have no preference before him in point of utility to your country, or in any thing else, than that you are a living statue, and he a dead one.

56. Thou offspring of the Trojans.] Meaning Rub. Plautus, who though he boasted himself of being descended from Cecrops the first king of Athens, and who is supposed to have lived before Deucalion's flood, yet likewise might boast, that he was also descended from ancestors, who derived their blood, in latter times, from the Trojans who first settled in Italy.

Some think that we may read this, ye Trojans—meaning the chief people of Rome in general, who prided themselves on their descent from the Trojans, and to whom he may be supposed to address himself. Comp. sat. i. 100, where he calls them Trojugenas. But see

1. 71, post.

57. Strong.] Fortia -- vigorous, courageous, fit for the purposes for which they are wanted.

Sic laudamus equum, facilis cui plurima palma Fervet, et exultat rauco victoria circo. Nobilis hic, quocunque venit de gramine, cujus 60 Clara fuga ante alios, et primus in æquore pulvis. Sed venale pecus Corythæ, posteritas et Hirpini, si rara jugo victoria sedit. Nil ibi majorum respectus, gratia nulla Umbrarum: dominos pretiis mutare jubentur 65 Exiguis, tritoque trahunt epirhedia collo Segnipedes, dignique molam versare Nepotis. Ergo ut miremur te, non tua, primum aliquid da, Ouod possim titulis incidere præter honores, Quos illis damus, et dedimus, quibus omnia debes. 70 Hæc satis ad juvenem, quem nobis fama superbum Tradit, et inflatum, plenumque Nerone propinquo. Rarus enim ferme sensus communis in illà Fortuna. Sed te censeri laude tuorum, Pontice, noluerim, sic ut nihil ipse futuræ 75

Laudis agas: MISERUM EST ALIENÆ INCUMBERE FAMÆ, Ne collapsa ruant subductis tecta columnis. Stratus humi palmes viduas desiderat ulmos.

58. Many a kind hand, &c.] They used to clap their hands, in token of applause, at the public shows and sports.

59. The hoarse circus.] i. e. The people in the circus, hoarse with their applauding acclamations.

60. From whatever pasture.] Lit. grass—q. d. wherever bred.
61. Whose dust is first, &c.] Who keeps before the others, so that the first dust must be raised by him.

62. The Cattle of Corytha.] The breed, or stock, of a famous mare, so called, are sold.

63. Hirpinus.] A famous horse, so called from the place where he was bred, being a hill in the country of the Sabines.

— If rare victory, &c.] If they seldom win in the chariot race.

65. Of shades.] No regard to the ghosts of their departed ancestors.

To change their masters, &c.] Their present master disposes of them very cheaply to others.

66. With a worn neck.] They are put into teams, and the hair is all worn off their necks, which are galled with the harness with which they are fastened to the carriage. See Epirhedium. Ainsw.

67. Of Nepos. The name of some miller, who ground corn in horse-mills.

68. Admire you, not yours, &c.] That we may admire you personally for your own sake, and not merely for your family, or fortune, or title.

- Shew something, &c.] Give us some proof, by some noble

Horse we praise, for whom many a kind hand Glows, and victory exults in the hoarse circus. He is noble from whatever pasture he comes, whose flight Is famous before the others, and whose dust is first on the plain. But the cattle of Corytha are set to sale, and the posterity of Hirpinus, if rare victory sits on their yoke. There is no respect of ancestors, no favour Of shades; they are commanded to change their masters 65 For small prices, and draw waggons with a worn neck, Slow of foot, and worthy to turn the mill of Nepos. Therefore that we may admire you, not yours, first shew something, Which I may inscribe among your titles besides your honours, Which we give, and have given, to them to whom you owe all. These things are enough to the youth, whom fame delivers to us Proud, and puffed up, and full of his kinsman Nero. For common sense is, for the most part, rare in that Condition. But to have thee esteemed from the praise of your ancestors Ponticus, I should be unwilling, so as that yourself should do Nothing of future praise: 'TIS MISERABLE TO REST ON ANOTHER'S

Lest the house fallen, by the pillars being taken away, should tumble into ruins.

The vine strow'd on the ground wants the widow'd elms.

and worthy actions, of true nobility, which, besides your high titles, may be recorded with honour to yourself.

70. Which we give, &c.] i. e To your ancestors, to whom, as things are at present, you stand solely indebted for every mark of respect that is bestowed upon you.

71. To the youth, &c.] q. d. So much for Rubellius Plautus, a youth (as fame represents him, &c.)

72. His kinsman, Nero.] His relationship to Nero. Comp. note

73. Rare, &c.] Very seldom found in such a situation of life.

75. Ponticus, &c.] See l. 1. of this Sat. and note.

The poet tells the person to whom he addresses this Satire, that he should be sorry to have him esteemed merely on account of his ancestors.

76. Nothing of future praise.] That he should do nothing himself, in order to raise his own character, in times to come.

77. Lest the house fallen, &c.] Metaph. i. e. lest, like a building which tumbles into ruins, when the pillars which support it are removed, so you, if you have no other support to your character, than what your ancestors have done, if this be once put out of the question, should fall into contempt.

78. The vine, &c.] If you owe the support of your fame entirely to that of others, let that be removed, and you will be like a vine which wants the support of an elm to keep it from crawling along the ground.

Esto bonus miles, tutor bonus, arbiter idem Integer: ambiguæ si quando citabere testis 80 Incertæque rei, Phalaris licet imperet ut sis Falsus, et admoto dictet perjuria tauro, SUMMUM CREDE NEFAS ANIMAM PRÆFERRE PUDORI. Et propter vitam vivendi perdere causas. Dignus morte perit, cœnet licet ostrea centum 85 Gaurana, et Cosmi toto mergatur aheno. Expectata diu tandem provincia cum te Rectorum accipiet, pone iræ fræna, modumque Pone et avaritiæ: miserere inopum sociorum. Ossa vides regum vacuis exhausta medullis. 90 Respice, quid moneant leges, quid curia mandet; Præmia quanta bonos maneant; quam fulmine justo

They used to fasten up their vines, by tying them to the trunks of elm-trees .- See sat. vi. 149. VIRG. Geor. i. l. 2.

If by any accident the vines broke from the trees, and lay upon the ground, they called the trees viduas ulmos, alluding to their having lost the embraces of the vine, as a widow those of her husband when he dies.

79. A good soldier. Serve your country in the army.

- A faithful tutor. Quasi tuitor—a trusty guardian to some minor, having the charge of his person and affairs, till he comes of age to manage for himself.

79-80. An uncorrupted umpire. When called upon to decide a cause by your arbitration, distinguish yourself by the utmost impartiality.

80. A witness, &c. If called upon as a witness in some dark and difficult matter, let your testimony be true, fair, and unbiassed.

81. Phalaris, &c.] One of the most cruel of all the Sicilian tyrants; he had a brazen bull, in which he inclosed people, and burnt them to death.

Though this tyrant were to bring his bull, and threaten to put you to death, by burning you alive, if you would not speak falsely, yet let not even this make you deviate from the truth.

83. The highest impiety, &c.] Esteem it a crime of the deepest dye, to value your life, so as to preserve it in a dishonourable way, at the expense of your reputation and honour. Pudor-fame, reputation. AINSW.

84. To lose, &c. 7 i. e. The only causes which make life valuable, the purposes for which it was ordained, and for which it should be desirable, honour, truth, and surviving fame.

85. He perishes, &c.] Such a wretch, who would prefer his safety to his innocence, deserves to perish utterly, and, when he dies, to have his memory perish with him, however sumptuously he may have lived.

86. Gaurane oysters.] Lucrine oysters, taken about the port at Baix, near the mountain Gaurus, in Campania.

Be you a good soldier, a faithful tutor, an uncorrupted Umpire also: if you are summoned as a witness in a doubtful
And uncertain thing, tho' Phalaris shou'd command that you Shou'd be false, and should dictate perjuries with the bull brought to you,

Believe it the highest implety to prefer life to reputa-

And, for the sake of life, to lose the causes of living.

He perishes worthy of death, tho' he should sup on an hundred

Gaurane oysters, and should be immersed in the whole caldron of Cosmus.

When at length the province, long expected, shall receive you Governor, put checks to anger, and measure also Put to covetousness: pity the poor associates.
You see the bones of kings exhausted, with empty marrow.

Regard what the laws may admonish, what the state command;
How great rewards may await the good; with how just a stroke

86. Immersed, &c.] The Romans gave particular names to particular perfumed ointments; sometimes they named them after the country from whence they came, sometimes (as probably here) after the name of the confectioner, or perfumer, who prepared them. They had an unguentum Cosmianum, so called from one Cosmus, who, by boiling various aromatics together, produced his famous ointment. The poet here means, that, if the person spoken of were not to anoint himself, as others, but could afford to purchase, and dip himself in a whole kettle full at once of this rare perfume, yet his name would deservedly rot with his carcase. It is not living sumptuously, but living well, that gives reputation after death.

87. The province, &c.] He now advises Ponticus as to his behaviour towards the people he is to govern, when in possession of the government of one of the conquered provinces, which he had long expected.

88. Put checks, &c.] Fræna—literally, bridles.—q. d. Bridle your anger, keep your passion within proper bounds.

89. Put to covetousness.] Restrain your avarice, set bounds to your desires.

The poor associates.] The poor people who have been reduced by conquest, and now become the allies of the Romans.

90. The bones of kings, &c.] i. e. You see some of the kings which we conquered, unmercifully squeezed, and the very marrow, as it were, sucked out of their bones. Ossa vacuis medullis—i. e. ossa vacua a medullis. Hypallage.

91. The state. Curia literally signifies a court, more especially where the senate or council assembled: here (by metonym.) it may stand for the senate itself—Curia pro senatu—Campus pro comitiis—Toga pro pace, &c. appellatur: Cic. de Orat. iii. 42. It was usual for the senate to give a charge to new governors, on their departure to the provinces over which they were appointed.

92. How just a stroke. How justly they were punished by Et Capito et Tutor ruerint, damnante senatu, Piratæ Cilicum: sed quid damnatio confert, Cum Pansa eripiat quicquid tibi Natta reliquit? 95 Præconem, Chærippe, tuis circumspice pannis, Jamque tace; furor est post omnia perdere naulum. Non idem gemitus olim, nec vulnus erat par Damnorum, sociis florentibus, et modo victis. Plena domus tunc omnis, et ingens stabat acervus 100 Nummorum, Spartana chlamys, conchylia Coa, Et cum Parrhasii tabulis, signisque Myronis, Phidiacum vivebat ebur, nec non Polycleti Multus ubique labor: raræ sine Mentore mensæ. Inde Dolabella est, atque hinc Antonius, inde 105 Sacrilegus Verres. Referebant navibus altis a decree of the senate, which fell on them like a thunder-bolt.

94. Robbers of the Cilicians.] Cossutianus Capito, and Julius Tutor, had been successively præfects, or governors, of Cilicia, and both recalled and condemned by the senate for peculation and extortion.

95. Pansa can seize, Sc.] Where is the use of making examples of wicked governors, when, if you punish one, his successor will still seize on all he left behind him, and thus complete the ruin which he began.

96. Charippus.] He introduces Charippus, a subject of this plundered province, whom he advises to make a sale of his clothes, and the rest of his poor rags, which he had left, before the successor comes with a fresh appetite, and devours all, supposing that if he turned what he had into money, it might be better concealed. See sat. vii. 6, note.

97. Be silent.] Say nothing of the money, for fear the new governor should seize it.

— Your freight.] Naulum signifies the freight, or fare, paid for a passage over the sea in a ship. The poet seems here to mean, that it would be no better than madness, to let the governor know of the money which the goods sold for; for, by these means, even this would be seized, and the poor sufferer not have enough left to pay his passage to Rome, in order to lodge his complaint before the senate against the oppressor.

98-9. The around of losses, &c.] The hurt or damage received by the rapine of governors, with respect to the property of individuals.

99. Associates.] Sociis.—The conquered provinces were allied with the Romans, and called socii.

100. Every house was full.] i. e. Of valuable things, as well as of large sums of money, which the conquerors left untouched.

101. A Spartan cloak. A garment richly dyed with the purple

Both Capito and Tutor fell, the senate condemning,

The robbers of the Cilicians: but what does condemnation avail,

When Pansa can seize whatever Natta left you?

Look about for a crier, Chærippus, for your rags,

And now be silent: it is madness, after all, to lose your freight.

There were not the same complaints formerly, nor was the wound of Losses equal, when our associates flourished, and were just conquer'd, Then every house was full, and there was standing a great heap 100

Of money, a Spartan cloak, purples of Cos,

And with pictures of Parrhasius, statues of Myron, The ivory of Phidias was living, also every where

Much of the labour of Polycletus: few tables without Mentor.

Thence is Dolabella, and thence Antony, thence 105

The sacrilegious Verres: they brought in lofty ships of the murex taken on the shore of Laconia, a country of Peloponnesus, the chief city of which was Sparta.

101. Purples of Cos. Cos, or Coos, was an island in the Ægean sea, near which the fish, from whence the purple dye was taken, was also found. Sat. iii. l. 81, note.

102. Parrhasius.] A famous painter of Greece, who contended with Zeuxis, and gained the prize. See Hor. ode viii. lib. iv. 1. 6.

- Myron.] An excellent statuary, whose works were in high esteem, especially his brazen cow, which exercised the pens both of the Greek and Roman poets. Ut similis veræ vacca Myronis opus. Ov. è Pont. iv. 1. 34.

103. Phidias.] A famous painter and statuary: he is here said to have wrought so curiously in ivory, that his figures seemed to be alive. See also AINSW. Phidias.

104. Polycletus.] A Sicyonian, a famous statuary and sculptor. There were many of his works among this collection.

- Mentor.] A noble artist in chasing and embossing plate. We are to understand here, that there were few tables, i. e. entertainments, where, in the courses and services of the table, there were not some cups, dishes, plates, &c. of Mentor's workmanship.

All these fine ornaments were permitted to remain in the houses of the owners by their first conquerors; but the avarice and rapine of the governors who succeeded stripped them of all.

105. Thence. These things left by the conquerors proved a source of rapine and plunder to the prefects who succeeded.

Dolabella: A proconsul of Asia, accused by Scaurus, and condemned, for plundering the province over which he presided.

--- Antony.] C. Antonius, a proconsul of Achaia, likewise condemned for plundering the province.

106. Sacrilegious Verres.] The plunderer of Sicily, who spared not even sacred things. The province prosecuted him, and, Tully undertaking the cause, he was condemned and banished. Vid. Cic. in Verrem.

Occulta spolia, et plures de pace triumphos. Nunc sociis juga pauca boum, et grex parvus equarum; Et pater armenti capto eripietur agello: Ipsi deinde Lares, si quod spectabile signum, 110 Si quis in ædicula Deus unicus: hæc etenim sunt Pro summis; nam sunt hæc maxima. Despicias tu Forsitan imbelles Rhodios, unctamque Corinthum: Despicias merito: quid resinata juventus, Cruraque totius facient tibi lævia gentis? Horrida vitanda est Hispania, Gallicus axis, Illyricumque latus. Parce et messoribus illis, Qui saturant urbem, circo, scenæque vacantem: Quanta autem inde feres tam diræ præmia culpæ, Cum tenues nuper Marius discinxerit Afros? 120

107- Hidden spoils. Which they kept, as much as they could, from public view; not daring to expose them, as was usual by fair conquerors in their triumphs.

- More triumphs, &c. Than others did from war .- q. d. They got a greater booty, by stripping the poor associates, now at peace, and in amity with Rome, than the conquerors of them did, when they subdued them by open war..

109. The father of the herd, &c.] Mr. Stepney, in his poetical translation of this passage, has well expressed the sense of it; viz.

> - our confederates, now, Have nothing left but oxen for the plough, Or some few mares reserv'd alone for breed; Yet, lest this provident design succeed, They drive the father of the herd away, Making both stallion and his pasture prey.

110. The very household gods, &c.] These plunderers of the provinces are so merciless and rapacious, that they refrain not even from the lares, or little images, of those tutelar deities which were placed in people's houses; and, particularly, if any of these struck their fancy, as a handsome, well-wrought image - spectabile signum. Nay, though there were but one single image, they would take even that. See Lar. AINSW.

112. For chiefs.] Pro summis, i. e. viris.—q. d. These sacrilegious depredations are for Roman chiefs to commit, because they are the most enormous (maxima, the greatest) crimes of all-(scelera understood)—such as no others would be guilty of.

Other senses are given to this passage; but the above seems best to agree with the poet's satire on the Roman chiefs, who plundered the conquered provinces after their alliance with Rome.

113. The weak Rhodians. A people infected with sloth and effeminacy. See sat. vi. 295.

- Anointed Corinth.] So called from its luxury and use of perfumed ointments-a sure sign of great effeminacy.

You may safely, and indeed with good reason, despise such peo-

Hidden spoils, and more triumphs from peace.

Now the associates have a few yokes of oxen, and a small herd of mares, And the father of the herd will be taken away from the captured field. Then the very household gods, if any remarkable image,

If any one single god be in the small shrine. But these (crimes) are For chiefs, for these are greatest.—You may despise,

Perhaps, the weak Rhodians, and anointed Corinth:

You may deservedly despise them: what can an effeminated youth,

And the smooth legs of a whole nation do to you?

Rough Spain is to be avoided, the Gallic axis,

And the coast of Illyria: spare also those reapers Who supply the city, intent upon the circus, and the theatre.

But how great rewards of so dire a crime will you bring from thence, Since Marius has lately stripp'd the slender Africans?

ple as these; for you have nothing to fear, either from their resistance, or from their revenge.

114. An effeminated youth.] A race of youth, or young men, wholly sunk into effeminacy. Resinata juventus—literally, the youth (of Corinth) who are resined—i. e. bedaubed all over with perfumes and essences of aromatic resins or gums. See Ainsw. Resinatus.

115. Smooth legs, &c.] It was customary for the delicate young men to remove, as much as possible, the hair which grew on their limbs, and indeed from every part of the body, to make them lovely in the eyes of their beastly paramours. The poet here means, that an oppressive governor could have nothing to fear from such people as these, who could not have spirit, or courage enough, to attempt any resistance.

116. Rough Spain.] Then a hardy and brave people, who would not tamely submit to injuries done them by the Roman prefects.

- Gallie axis. The Gauls fought from chariots.

117. The coast of Illyria.] Latus—lit. the side.—The Illyrians inhabited the right side of the Adriatic gulph, including Dalmatia and Sclavonia; a hardy race of people. Their country was over against Italy.

- Those reapers, &c.] Meaning the people of Africa, who supplied Rome with corn.

118. The city.] Rome.

Intent, &c.] Vacantem—empty of all other employment, and minding nothing else but the public diversions of the circus, and of the theatres.

119. How great rewards, &c.] But suppose you oppress the poor Africans, what can you get by it?

120. Marius.] Priscus, who being proconsul of Africa, pillaged the people of the province, for which he was condemned and banished. See sat. i. l. 49.

--- Stripp'd.] Discinxerit—lit. ungirded—a metaphorical expression, alluding to the act of those who take away the garments

Curandum imprimis, ne magna injuria fiat
Fortibus et miseris, tollas licet omne quod usquam est
Auri atque argenti; scutum gladiumque relinques,
Et jacula, et galeam: spoliatis arma supersunt.
Quod modo proposui, non est sententia; verum
Credite me vobis folium recitare Sibyllæ.
Si tibi sancta cohors comitum; si nemo tribunal
Vendit acersecomes: si nullum in conjuge crimen;
Nec per conventus, et cuncta per oppida curvis
Unguibus ire parat nummos raptura Celæno;

Unguibus ire parat nummos raptura Celæno; Tunc licet a Pico numeres genus; altaque si te Nomina delectent, omnem Titanida pugnam Inter majores, ipsumque Promethea ponas: De quocunque voles proavum tibi sumito libro. Quod si præcipitem rapit ambitus atque libido, Si frangis virgas sociorum in sanguine, si te Delectant hebetes lasso lictore secures; of others, and who begin by loosening the girdle by which they are fastened.

135

122. The brave and miserable, &c.] Beware of provoking such by any unwarrantable oppression; they will certainly find some way to revenge themselves. Though you pillage them of all their money and goods, yet remember they have arms left, with which they can revenge their wrong.

___ Entirely.] Omne quod usquam—lit. every thing which (is) any where.

126. Leaf of a Sibyl.] The Sibyls were supposed to be inspired with knowledge of future events, which came to pass as they foretold.

See sat. iii. l. 3, and note.

Don't think, says Juvenal, that I am here giving you a mere random opinion of my own—No; what I say is as true as an oracle, as fixed as fate itself, and will certainly come to pass; therefore regard it accordingly.

127. A virtuous set, &c.] Cohors here signifies cohors practoria—those that accompanied the magistrate who went into a province. See Ainsw. Cohors, No. 5.—q. d. If the persons of your retinue, who attend you as your officers and ministers within your province, are virtuous and good.

If no favourite, &c.] Acersecomes was an epithet of Apollo, (Gr. ακεσεκομις, intonsus,) and was transferred to the smooth-faced boys, which great men kept for their unnatural purposes.

These favourites had great interest and influence with their masters, and people used to give them bribes to obtain their interference with the prefect when he sat in judgment, so as to incline him to favour their friends in his decisions.

128. No crime be in your wife.] It was too frequent for the governors of the provinces to be influenced by their wives in their determination of causes.

mination of causes.

First care is to be-taken, lest great injury be done

To the brave and miserable; tho' you may take away entirely every thing

Of gold and silver, you will leave the shield and sword, And darts, and helmet:—arms remain to the plunder'd. What I now have proposed is not a mere opinion, but

125

Believe me to recite to you a leaf of a Sibyl.

If you have a virtuous set of attendants; if no favourite
Sells your seat of judgment; if no crime be in your wife;
Nor thro' the districts, and thro' the towns, with crooked
Talons, does she, a Celæno, contrive to go to seize money;
130
Then, you may reckon your lineage from Picus, and, if high names
Delight you, you may place the whole Titanian battle,
And Prometheus himself, among your ancestors:
Take to yourself a great grandfather from whatever book you please.

But if ambition, and lust, hurry you headlong,

135

If you break rods in the blood of the allies, if thee

Blunt axes delight, the lictor being tired,

129. Districts.] See Ainsw. Conventus, No. 3. It being put here with oppida seems to mean those districts into which the provinces were divided, like our counties, wherein the people were summoned by the magistrate to meet for the dispatch of judicial business. In each of these the prefect held a court, something like our judges on the circuits, to try criminal and civil causes. So likewise in the cities, which were districts of themselves, like some of ours. This custom is very ancient—see I Sam. vii. 16. On these occasions the prefect's, or judge's wife, might attend, with no small advantage to herself, if she were inclined to extort money from the suitors, to influence her husband in their favour.

129-30. Crooked talons, &c.] Like an harpy, seizing on all she could get. Of Celæno, and the other harpies, read Æn. iii. 1.

211-18, 245, 365, 703.

131. Picus.] The first king of the Aborigines, an ancient people of Italy, who incorporated themselves with the Romans. He was said to be the son of Saturn.

132. Titanian battle. All the Titans, who were set in battle-array against Jupiter, these were sons of Saturn also.

133. Prometheus himself. The son of Iapetus, one of the Titans, and Clymene, whom the poets feigned to have been the first former of men out of clay, and then to have animated them by fire stolen from heaven. See sat. iv. 133.

134. Whatever book, &c.] i. e. From whatever history of great and famous men you please. -q. d. You are welcome to this if you are yourself a worthy man and a good magistrate.

136. Break rods, &c.] If you break the rods, which you prepare for the allies over which you preside, on their bloody backs—i. e. if you cruelly torment them with scourges.

137. The listor, &c.] If you delight in putting the poor people

Incipit ipsorum contra te stare parentum Nobilitas, claramque facem præferre pudendis. OMNE ANIMI VITIUM TANTO CONSPECTIUS IN SE 140 CRIMEN HABET, QUANTO MAJOR, QUI PECCAT, HABETUR. Quo mihi te solitum falsas signare tabellas In templis, quæ fecit avus; statuamque parentis Ante triumphalem? quo, si nocturnus adulter Tempora Santonico velas adoperta cucullo? .145 Præter majorum cineres, atque ossa volucri Carpento rapitur pinguis Damasippus: et ipse, Ipse rotam stringit multo sufflamine Consul: Nocte quidem; sed luna videt, sed sidera testes Intendunt oculos. Finitum tempus honoris 150 to death, till the very axes are blunted by frequent use, and the executioner himself be tired out with the number of executions.

138. The nobility, &c.] So far, from the nobility of your family's reflecting any honour upon you, it rises, and stands in judgment, as. it were, against you, and condemns you for your degeneracy.

139. A clear torch, &c.] Makes your foul deeds the more conspicuous, and exposes your shame in a clearer light,

Cum fuerit, clara Damasippus luce flagellum Sumet, et occursum nusquam trepidabit amici

140. Every vice.] Such as cruelty, avarice, and the like. Pravi-tates animi, vitia recte dicuntur. Cic.

More conspicuous, &c.] So far from deriving any sanction from high and noble birth, the vices of the great are the more blameable, and more evidently inexcusable in proportion to the greatness of their quality—their crimes are the more notorious, their examples the more malignant.

142. Wherefore, &c.] Jactas is here understood-Quo mihi jactas te solitum, &c .- q. d. " It is of very little consequence, that you, " who are in the habit of forging wills, should be boasting to me "your nobility—to what end, intent, or purpose, can you do it?"

Quo, here, has the sense of quorsum.

143. In the temples.] It was usual to sign, as a witness to a will, in the temples of the gods, to put men in mind that they were obliged by religion to be true and faithful. See sat. i. l. 67, 8.

Your grandfather built.] Fecit—lit. made. The piety of your ancestors reflects no honour upon you.

144. The triumphal statue, &c.] Which being set up in the temple, is, as it were, a witness of your villainy.

—— A nightly adulterer.] Taking advantage of the night to conceal your deeds of darkness. See Job. xxiv. 15—17.

145. Your temples.] Your head and face, of which the temples are a part. Synec.

- A Santonic hood. The Santones were a people of Acquitain, a part of France, from whom the Romans derived the use of hoods, or cowls, which covered the head and face. Comp. sat. vi. 1. 328, 9. The nobility of your ancestors themselves begins to stand Against you, and to carry a clear torch before your shameful deeds.

EVERY VICE OF THE MIND HAS BY SO MUCH MORE CONSPICUOUS

140

BLAME, BY HOW MUCH HE THAT OFFENDS IS ACCOUNTED GREATER.
Wherefore to me boast yourself accustomed to sign false wills
In the temples, which your grandfather built, and before
The triumphal statue of your father? what, if a nightly adulterer,
You veil your cover'd temples with a Santonic hood?

145

By the ashes of his ancestors, and their bones, in a swift Chariot, fat Damasippus is whirl'd along, and he,
Himself, the consul, binds the wheel with many a drag.
By night indeed, but the moon sees, but the conscious stars
Fix their eyes upon him: when the time of honour is finished, Damasippus, in the clear light, the whip will Take, and no where tremble at the meeting of a friend

146. By the ashes, &c.] The poet here inveighs against the low and depraved taste of the noblemen in Rome, whose passion it was to become charioteers. The name Damasippus (from Gr. δαμαω, to tame, and iππος, an horse) signifies an horse-tamer, and is applicable, not merely to any single person, but to all of the same taste. Damasippus, says he, drives furiously by the ashes and bones of his great progenitors; so totally uninfluenced by their examples of true greatness, as to sink into the mean character of a coachman, or charioteer. The emperor Nero affected this, and was followed in it by many, by way of paying court to him; and indeed the poet here must be understood to glance at this.

148. Binds the wheel, &c.] The sufflamen was what they put on the wheel of a carriage to stop or stay it, that it should not go too fast down hill, or run back when going up hill. The person who attended to put this on was some slave; but Damasippus, though consul, submits to this office himself.—Multo sufflamine implies his often doing this.

149. By night, &c.] This indeed he does in the night, when he thinks nobody sees him; but the moon and stars are witnesses of the fact, which is so degrading to a man in his situation, and which would not happen had he a due regard to his own dignity. Testis signifies, lit. a witness. Hence, met that is privy to a thing—conscious.—Sat. iii. 49; and sat. xiii. 75.

150. The time of honour is finished.] When he goes out of office at the end of the year.

151. In the clear light, &c.] In open daylight he'll appear as a charioteer.

Jam senis, at virgâ prior innuet, atque maniplos Solvet, et infundet jumentis hordea lassis. Interea dum lanatas, torvumque juvencum 155 More Numæ cædit Jovis ante altaria, jurat Hipponam, et facies olida ad præsepia pictas. Sed cum pervigiles placet instaurare popinas, Obvius assiduo Syrophænix udus amomo Currit, Idumææ Syrophænix incola portæ; Hospitis affectu Dominum, Regemque salutat; Et cum venali Cyane, succincta lagenâ. Defensor culpæ dicet mihi: fecimus et nos Hæc juvenes. Estó; desîsti nempe, nec ultra Fovisti errorem. Breve sit, quod turpiter audes. 165 Ouædam cum primâ resecentur crimina barbâ. Indulge veniam pueris: Damasippus ad illos Thermarum calices, inscriptaque lintea vadit, 153. Now old.] And therefore grave and sedate; yet Damasippus will feel no shame at meeting him.

- Make a sign, &c.] Salute him with a dexterous crack of his whip. See sat. iii. 317, 18.

- 154: Loosen the trusses, &c.] Will feed his horses hmself, coachman like. Manipulum is an handful, armful, or bundle; here we may suppose it to mean a truss of hay.

155. Kills sheep; &c.] When he goes to offer sacrifices, according to the rites established by Numa, the successor of Romulus, at the altar of Jupiter.

156—7. Swears by Hippona, &c.] Hippona (from $i\pi\pi\sigma_0$ an horse) is the goddess he swears by, and in whose name he makes his vows. She was the goddess of horses and stables: her image was placed in the middle of the stalls, and curiously bedecked with chaplets of fresh roses.—By et facies pictas, we may suppose that there were other deities, of a like kind, painted on the walls of the stables.

158. To renew the watchful taverns.]. To renew his visits, and repair to the taverns, where people sat up all night.

159. A Syrophanician, &c.] A name of Syria and Phoenicia, from whence the finest perfumed ointments came, as did also those who prepared them best.

Wet; &c.] Greasy by continually busying himself in his trade.

160. Inhabitant of the Idumæan gate.] The Idumæan gate at Rome was so called from Vespasian's and Titus's entry through it, when they triumphed over the Jews—Idumæa is a part of Syria, bordering on Judæa. This part of Rome, which was called the Idumæan gate, was probably much inhabited by these Syrian perfumers.

161. With the affectation, &c. The innkeepers at Rome were Now old, but will first make a sign, with his whip; and trusses

Of hay will loosen, and pour in barley to his tired beasts.

Mean time while he kills sheep, and the fierce bullock, 155

After the manner of Numa, before the altars of Jove, he swears by Hippona, and faces painted at the stinking mangers:

But when he pleases to renew the watchful taverns,

A Syrophœnician, wet with a constant perfume, runs to Meet him, a Syrophonician inhabitant of the Idumoan gate; 160 With the affectation of an host, he salutes him lord and king;

And nimble Cyane with a venal flagon.

A defender of his fault will say to me, " We also have done these " things

"When young men." "Be it so-but you left off, nor farther

" Cherish'd your error.-Let that be short which you shamefully " adventure." 165

Some crimes should be cut off with the first beard. Indulge favour to boys. Damasippus goes to those Cups of the hot baths, and to the inscribed linen, very lavish of their flatteries and civil speeches to people who came to their houses, in order to engage their custom. This perfumer affects the same, in order to bespeak the custom of Damasipous, and flatters him with the highest titles that he can think of.

162. Nimble Cyane, &c.] The woman of the house loses no time in setting a bottle of liquor before him. Succinctus cursitat hospes. Hor. lib. ii. sat. vi. 1. 107.—Succinctus—lit. girt, trussed, tucked up, for the greater expedition.

- A venal flagon.] Of wine, which was sold at the tavern. 163. A defender, &c. Some person may perhaps say, by way of excuse.

165. Let that be short, &c. 7 i. e. Stop short, and never persist.

166. Should be cut off, &c.] Left off when we come to manhood. 167. Indulge favour, &c.] Make all proper allowance for the errors of youth.

- Damasippus, &c. True, one would make every allowance for the follies of young men; but Damasippus is of an age to know, and to do, better. See I. 169-71.

168. Cups of the hot baths.] The Thermæ, or hot baths at Rome, were places, where some, after bathing, drank very hard. Hence Epigrammatogr. lib. xii. epigr. 71. cited by Grangius, in his note on this passage.

Frangendos calices, effundendumque Falernum, Clamabat, biberet, qui modo lotus eques. A sene sed postquain nummi venêre trecenti, Sobrius a Thermis nescit abire domum.

They also drank hot wine, while bathing, to make them sweat.

VOL. I.

Maturus bello Armeniæ, Syriæque tuendis Amnibus, et Rheno, atque Istro. Præstare Neronem 170 Securum valet hæc ætas. Mitte Ostia, Cæsar, Mitte; sed in magnà legatum quære popinà. Invenies aliquo cum percussore jacentem, Permistum nautis, aut furibus, aut fugitivis, Inter carnifices, et fabros sandapilarum, Et resupinati cessantia tympana Galli. Æqua ibi libertas, communia pocula, lectus Non alius cuiquam, nec mensa remotior ulli. Quid facias, talem sortitus, Pontice, servum? Nempe in Lucanos, aut Thusca ergastula mittas. 180 At vos, Trojugenæ, vobis ignoscitis, et quæ Turpia cerdoni, Volesos Brutosque decebunt.

168. The inscribed linen.] Alluding to the brothels, over the doors of which the entertainment which the guests might expect was set forth on painted linen. See sat. vi. 1. 123, and note.

169. Mature for the war, &c] Damasippus is now grown up to manhood, and ripe for entering upon the service of his country.

- Armenia.] In the reign of Nero, Armenia excited new and dangerous tumults.

169-70. Rivers of Syria, &c.] As the Euphrates, Tigris, and Orontes, which were to be well defended, to prevent the incursions of enemies into Syria.

170. The Rhine and Ister. The former anciently divided Germany and France: the latter means the Danube, the largest river in Europe; as it passeth by Illyricum, it is called the Ister. On the banks of both these rivers the Romans had many conquered nations to keep in subjection, and many others to fear.

171. This age is able.] Persons, at the time of life to which Damasippus is arrived, are capable of entering into the armies, which are to protect both the emperor and the empire. By Neronem any emperor may be meant-perhaps Domitian. Sat. iv. 38.

— Send Casar, &c.] q. d. Have you occasion, O Casar, for an ambassador to dispatch on business of state to Ostia, or to the coasts of the Roman provinces? Ostia was a city built by Ancus Martius, at the mouth of the river Tiber. Ostia-a, sing. or Ostiaorum, plur.

172. Seek your legate, &c.] If you should choose to employ Damasippus, you must look for him in some tavern, and among the lowest and most profligate company.

175. Makers of coffins.] Sandapila was a bier, or cossin, for the poorer sort, especially for those who were executed.

176. The ceasing drums, &c.] The priests of Cybele, in their frantic processions, used to beat drums. Here is an account of one asleep on his back, perhaps dead drunk, with his drums by him quite silent. They were called Galli, from Gallus, a river in

175

Mature for the war of Armenia, and for defending the rivers
Of Syria, and for the Rhine and Ister. To make Nero
Safe, this age is able. Send, Cæsar, send to Ostia,

But seek your legate in a great tavern.

You will find him lying by some cut-throat,

Mix'd with sailors, or thieves, or fugitives,

Among hangmen, and makers of coffins,

And the ceasing drums of a priest of Cybele lying on his back.

There is equal liberty, cups in common, not another couch

To any one, nor a table more remote to any.

What would you do, Ponticus, if you had such a slave?

You would surely send him among the Lucani, or the Tuscan work-houses.

But you, sons of Troy, forgive yourselves, and what things Are base to a cobbler, will become the Volesi or Bruti.

Phrygia, in which country Cybele was peculiarly worshipped. For a description of these, see sat. vi. l. 511—16.

177. There is equal liberty, &c.] All are here upon one footing-they drink out of the same cup.

—— Another couch, &c.] The Romans, at their entertainments, lay upon couches, or beds; and people of distinction had their couches ornamented, and some were raised higher than others—but here all were accommodated alike.

178. Table more remote, &c.] No table set in a more or less honourable place—no sort of distinction made, or respect shewn, to one more than another. They were all "Hail fellow! well met!" as we say.

179. Such a slave, &c.] If you had a slave that passed his time in such a manner, and in such rascally company—if such a one had fallen to many let, what would now do with him?

fallen to your lot, what would you do with him?

180. The Lucani. Lucania was a country of Italy, belonging to Naples, where the slaves were punished by being made to dig in fetters.

Tuscan workhouses.] Ærgastula—places of punishment for slaves, where they were made to work in chains. These were very frequent in Tuscany.

181. Sons of Troy.] A sneer on the low minded and profligate nobility, who were proud of deriving their families from the ancient Trojans, who first settled in Italy. See sat. i. 100.

Forgive yourselves. Easily find out excuses for what you do. 182. Will become the Volesi or Bruti By these he means the nobles of Rome, the most ancient families being derived from Valerius Volesus, who came and settled at Rome, with Tatius king of the Sabines, on the league of amity with Romulus.—Brutus also was a name highly reverenced, on account of the noble acts of some who had borne it.—Junius Brutus was the first consultater the expulsion of the kings; Domitius Jun. Brutus was one of the con-

Quid, si nunquam adeo fœdis, adeoque pudendis Utimur exemplis, ut non pejora supersint? Consumptis opibus vocem, Damasippe, locâsti 185 Sipario, clamosum ageres ut Phasma Catulli. Laureolum Velox etiam bene Lentulus egit, Judice me, dignus verâ cruce. Nec tamen ipsi Ignoscas populo: populi frons durior hujus, Qui sedet, et spectat triscurria patriciorum : 190 Planipedes audit Fabios, ridere potest qui Mamercorum alapas, Quanti sua funera vendant, Quid refert? vendunt nullo cogente Nerone, Nec dubitant celsi Prætoris vendere ludis. Finge tamen gladios inde, atque hinc pulpita pone: 195 Quid satius? mortem sic quisquam exhorruit, ut sit spirators against Jul. Cæsar; these were the chiefs of a noble family in Rome, who bore the name of Brutus.

The poet here observes, that the Roman nobility were got to such a state of shameless profligacy, that they gloried in actions and practices, which a low mechanic would have been ashamed of, and which would have disgraced even a cobbler.

183. If we never, &c.] q. d. What will you say, if after the examples which I have produced, so infamous and shameful, there should remain yet worse?

185. Damasippus.] See his character, l. 147—180. At last he is supposed to have ruined himself, and to go upon the stage.

186. The stage. Siparium, properly, is the curtain of a theatre:

here, by synec. it denotes the theatre itself.

Phasma.] Catullus wrote a play, intitled Phasma, or the Vision; so called from Gr. Pauropean appareo. Probably the work of some scribbler of that name, full of noise and rant.

187. Velox Lentulus.] Another of these profligate noblemen.

Laureolus. The name of a tragedy, in which the hero

Laureolus, for some horrid crime, is crucified.

188. Worthy, &c.] Richly deserving to be crucified in earnest, for condescending to so mean a thing as to turn actor upon a public stage.

— I being judge.] In my opinion—in my judgment.

189. The very people.] Even the commonalty who attend at these exhibitions.

—— The front of this people, &c.] The spectators are still, if possible, more inexcusable, who can impudently sit and divert themselves with such a prostitution of nobility.

190. Buffooneries.] Triscurria, from tris (Gr. τεις) three times, and scurra, a buffoon—the threefold buffooneries of persons acting so out of character.

--- Patricians. Noblemen of the highest rank.

191: Barefooted Fabii.] Planipes—an actor, or mimic, that acted without shoes, or on the plain ground.

What, if we never use so foul, and so shameful Examples, that worse cannot remain? Thy riches consumed, thy voice, Damasippus, thou hast hired to 185 The stage, that thou mightest act the noisy Phasma of Catullus. Velox Lentulus also acted well Laureolus, Worthy, I being judge, a real cross. Nor yet can you Excuse the very people; the front of this people is still harder, Who sits, and beholds the bustooneries of patricians: 190 Hears barefooted Fabii-who can laugh at the slaps Of the Mamerci. At what price they may sell their deaths What does it signify? they sell them, no Nero compelling, Nor doubt to sell them to the shows of the haughty pretor. But imagine the swords there, and put the stage here: 195 Which is best? has any one so feared death, that he shou'd be

A fine piece of diversion, for the spectators to behold a man, descended from one of the first families, acting so low a part!

192. Of the Mamerci.] A great family in Rome, descended from Mamercus Æmilius, who, when dictator, subdued the rebels at Fidenæ.

A curious entertainment, truly, to see a descendant of this family, suffering kicks, and slaps on the face, like a merry-andrew, on a public stage, for the diversion of the people!

— Sell their deaths, &c.] i. e. Expose their persons to be put to death.—q. d. No matter for what price these nobles run the hazard of their lives; they do it voluntarily, therefore nobody will pity them if they be killed.—He now proceeds to satirize the noble gladiators.

193. No Nero compelling, &c.] Alluding to the cruelty of Nero, who commanded four hundred senators, and six hundred knights, to fight in the amphitheatre: these were excusable, for they could not help it; but this was not the case with those the poet is here writing of, who, of their own accord, exposed their lives upon the stage for hire, like common gladiators; which we may understand by vendunt.

194. Nor doubt, &c.] They make no scruple to engage in the shows of gladiators given by the pretor, who sat on high, exalted in a car, to direct and superintend the whole. See sat. x. l. 36.—They hire themselves, as it were, for this purpose.

195. Imagine the swords, &c.] Suppose you were to choose, put the lists for sword-playing on one hand, the stage on the other, which should you think best-which would you choose?

196. Has any one, &c.] Has any one known the fear of death so much, as not to risque his life in a combat, rather than to play the fool as an actor.

We are to understand the poet here to say, that it is more shameful to act upon the stage, than to fight as a gladiator, though at the hazard of life; for who would not detest to play the part Zelotypus Thymeles; stupidi collega Corinthi?

Res haud mira tamen, citharœdo principe, mimus

Nobilis: hæc ultra, quid erit nisi ludus? et illic

Dedecus urbis habes: nec mirmillonis in armis,

Nec clypeo Gracchum pugnantem, aut falce supinâ,

(Damnat enim tales habitus, sed damnat et odit,)

Nec galeâ frontem abscondit: movet ecce tridentem,

Postquam libratâ pendentia retia dextrâ

Nequicquam effudit, nudum ad spectacula vultum

Erigit, et totâ fugit agnoscendus arenâ.

Credamus tunicæ, de faucibus aurea cum se of the cuckold Latinus, the jealous husband of Thymele, or be a fellow-actor with that stupid fellow Corinthus—a low mimic and buffoon.

197. Thymele.] See sat. i. l. 36, and note.

198. Prince a harper.] No wonder a nobleman, born under the reign of Nero, who turned actor and harper himself, should be influenced by, and follow the example of the emperor.

The poet is here shewing the mischief which accrues from the evil example of princes. So before, sat. vi. 616.

199. After these things, &c.] After this, what can you expect, but that it should become a general fashion, and that nothing should be found, in the polite world, but acting plays and prize-lighting. Ludus signifies both.

—— There.] i. e. In that manner of employment, so unworthy the nobility of Rome, you have Gracchus, &c.—Some read illud, agreeing with dedecus—q. d. You have Gracchus, that disgrace, &c.

200. The disgrace, &c.] A severe rebuke of Gracchus, a nobleman of one of the greatest families in Rome, who debased himself, to the scandal of even the city itself, in fighting upon the stage. Juvenal censures him for three enormities at once.

1st. For his baseness in such a condescension.

2ndly. For his impudence, in not choosing an habit which might have disguised him.

2rdly. For his cowardice in running away, and meanly shewing himself to the people to obtain their favour.

— Gracchus.] See sat. ii. 143, &c.
— Mirmillo.] There were two sorts of gladiators among the Romans, which had different names according to the arms and habit which they appeared in. One fought with a sword, or falchion, shaped like a scythe (falce) in his right hand, a target on his left arm, and an helmet on his head; he was called Mirmillo, (from μυρμος, an ant, which is covered with scales like armour. See Ainsw.) or Secutor: the other wore a short coat without sleeves, called tunica; a hat on his head; he carried in his right-hand a javelin, forked like a trident, called fuscina; on his left arm a net, in which he 205

Jealous of Thymele; the colleague of stupid Corinthus?
Yet it is not surprising, when the prince is a harper, that the noble
Is a mimic: after these things, what will there be but a play? and there

You have the disgrace of the city: Gracchus, neither in the arms of a Mirmillo, 200

Nor fighting with the shield, or held up scythe,

(For he condemns such habits, but he condemns and hates them,) Nor hides his forehead with an helmet; behold he moves a trident,

After the nets, hanging from his balanced right-hand,

He has cast in vain, his countenance naked to the scaffolds

He erects, and flies to be acknowledged over the whole arena. Let us trust to his tunic, since a golden wreath from his jaws endeavoured to catch his adversary, and from thence was called Retiarius. Sat. ii. l. 143, note.

Now Gracchus did not take the arms of the Mirmillo, which would have covered him from being so easily known, but took the habit of the Retiarius, and impudently exposed his person to the knowledge of the beholders.

203. A trident. The fuscina. See note on 1. 200.

204. After the nets, &c.] It was the play of the Retiarius to throw his net over the Mirmillo, and so, confining him, to have him in his power: to this end he took the best aim he could, balancing the net as exactly as possible, that it might cover his mark. But Gracchus missed it, and then fled to escape his antagonist.

205. The scaffolds.] Spectacula—the scaffolds on which the spectators sat to behold the shows. Spectaculum sometimes signifies a beholder. Ainsw. No. 4.

206. Acknowledgea, &c.] Be known by the spectators, that, seeing who he was, they might not make the signal for his being put to death, as a bad and cowardly gladiator. See sat. iii. l. 36, note 2.

—— Arena. Literally, signifies sand; but, by metonymy, the part of the ampitheatre where the gladiators fought, because strewed with sand, to keep them from slipping, and to drink up the blood. See sat. ii. l. 144.

207. Trust to his tunic. The Retiarius wore a sort of coat without sleeves, called tunica—hence Gracchus is called tunicatus. Sat. ii. 143.—his was so rich and magnificent, as plainly to shew what he was. Some, instead of credamus read cedamus, let us yield—i. c. to the evidence of his habit, to prove his rank.

- Since, &c.] Cum-here used as quandoquidem-forasmuch as-seeing that.

—— A golden wreath.] The spira was a band, or twisted lace, which was fastened to the hat, and tied under the chin, to keep it upon the head. This band, or lace, also, being of gold, plainly shewed that he was no common gladiator.

Porrigat, et longo jactetur spira galero. Ergo ignominiam graviorem pertulit omni Vulnere, cum Graccho jussus pugnare secu Vulnere, cum Graccho jussus pugnare secutor.

Libera si dentur populo suffragia, quis tam

Perditus, ut dubitet Senecam præferre Neroni?

Perditus, ut dubitet Senecam præferre Neroni?
Cujus supplicio non debuit una parari
Simia, nec serpens unus, nec culeus unus.
Par Agamemnonidæ crimen; sed causa facit rem

Dissimilem: quippe ille Deis auctoribus ultor Patris erat cæsi media inter pocula: sed nec

Electræ jugulo se polluit, aut Spartani Sanguine conjugii : nullis aconita propinquis Miscuit : in scena nunquam cantavit Orestes :

Troïca non scripsit. Quid enim Virginius armis

215

210

220

" His coat and hat-band shew his quality."

STEPNEY.

208. Stretches itself, &c.] Being untied, hangs down on each side of his face—porrigat de faucibus—loosely from the hat, or cap, which, having an high crown, appeared of a considerable length from the base to the top—longo galero.

-- Is tossed.] Blown to and fro by the air, in his running from the Mirmillo.

209. The Secutor.] Or follower.—The Mirmillo was so called from his following the Retiarius to kill him, after the latter had missed with his net, unless his life were begged.

An heavier ignominy, &c.] The gladiator who fought with so inexperienced and cowardly a fugitive, got more dishonour in fighting with him, though he overcame him, than if he had himself received a wound from a brave and experienced antagonist.

211. If free suffrages, &c.] If the people were allowed to give their votes freely. See sat. x. 77-81.

212. Seneca to Nero.] Lucius Seneca, uncle to Lucan the poet, and appointed tutor to Nero by Agrippina, who recalled him from banishment. He was an orator, poet, philosopher, and historian. He was put to death by Nero—q. d. Who is so lost to all sense of virtue—who so abandoned, as even to doubt whether he should prefer Seneca to Nero?

213. For whose punishment.] i. e. For Nero's.

213—14. Not one ape, &c. A parricide, by the Roman law, was sewn up in a sack, with a cock, a serpent, an ape, and a dog, and thrown into the sea.

The poet means, that Nero's many parricides deserved more than one death.

215. Of Orestes.] Agamemnonidæ, the son of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra.

— Crime equal.] He slew his mother, and therefore was a parricide as well as Nero, who slew his mother Agrippina, by whose means he got the empire.

Stretches itself, and is tossed from his long cap.

Therefore the Secutor bore an heavier ignominy than any Wound, being commanded to fight with Gracchus.

210

If free suffrages were allowed the people, who is so Lost, as that he should doubt to prefer Seneca to Nero? For whose punishment there ought not to be prepared One ape, nor one serpent, nor one sack.

One ape, nor one serpent, nor one sack.

The crime of Orestes was equal; but the cause makes the thing 215
Unlike, for he, the gods being commanders, was the avenger
Of a father slain in the midst of his cups: but he neither Polluted himself with the throat of Electra, nor with the blood
Of Spartan wedlock: poison for none of his relations
Did he mix. Orestes never sang upon the stage:
Never wrote Troics: for what ought Virginius with his arms

215. The cause makes, &c.] The occasion and the motive from which Orestes acted were very different from that of Nero, and therefore make a great difference as to the act itself.

216. Was the averger, &c.] Orestes killed his mother Clytemnestra, because she, with her paramour Ægysthus, had murdered his father Agamemnon; therefore Orestes might be looked upon as a minister of divine justice, to execute the vengeance of the gods, and to act, as it were, by their command.

217. In the midst of his cups.] Homer—Odyss. δ. and λ.—is of Juvenal's opinion, that Agamemnon was slain at a banquet, when he little expected such treatment.

Homer, as well as Juvenal, justifies this revenge, as being undertaken by the advice of the gods.

. 218. Throat of Electra.] Orestes did not kill his sister Electra, as Nero did his brother Britannicus. Hor. lib. ii. sat iii. I. 137—40.

219. Spartan wedlock.] He did not kill his wife Hermione, the daughter of Menelaus king of Sparta, as Nero murdered his wives Octavia, Antonia, and Poppæa.

- Poison for none, &c.] As Nero did for his brother Britannicus, and for his aunt Domitia.

220. Never sang, &c.] Orestes, (see sat. i. l. 5, note,] mad as he was, never sang upon the stage, as Nero did, who not only sang upon the theatre among the ordinary comedians, but took a journey to Greece, on purpose to try his skill among the most famous artists, from whom he bore away the garland, and returned to Rome in triumph, as if he had conquered a province.

thought a good poet, and made verses on the destruction of Troy, called Troica; and, it is reported, that he set Rome on fire, in order to realize the scene better. It is also said, that he placed himself, dressed in a theatrical habit, on an eminence in Rome, and sang a part of his Troica to his harp, during the conflagration.

--- What ought Virginius, &c.] Nero's monstrous frolicks and

VOL. I.

Debuit ulcisci magis, aut cum Vindice Galba? Quid Nero tam sævå, crudâque tyrannide feeit? Hæc opera, atque hæ sunt generosi principis artes, Gaudentis fædo peregrina ad pulpita cantu Prostitui, Graiæque apium meruisse coronæ. Majorum effigies habeant insignia vocis, Ante pedes Domitî longum tu pone Thyestæ Syrma, vel Antigones, seu personam Menalippes, Et de marmoreo citharam suspende colosso.

Quis, Catilina, tuis natalibus, atque Cethegi Inveniet quicquam sublimius? arma tamen vos Nocturna, et flammas domibus templisque parâstis, Ut Braccatorum pueri, Senonumque minores, cruelties could not but make the people weary of his government. Virginius Rufus, his lieutenant-general in Gaul, by the assistance of Junius Vindex, (a nobleman of that country,) soon persuaded the armies under his command to fall from their allegiance, and solicited Sergius Galba, lieutenant-general in Spain, to do the like, by offering him the empire in favour of mankind, which he at last-accepted, upon intimation that Nero had issued secret orders to dispatch him, and marched, with all the forces he could gather, towards Rome. Nero, not being in a condition to oppose such troops, fell into despair, and endeavoured to make his escape; he put himself in disguise, and crept, with four attendants only, to a poor cottage, where, perceiving he was pursued, as a sacrifice to public vengeance, and fearing to fall into the hands of the people, with much ado he resolved to stab himself.

223. What did Nero, &c.] What, among all his acts of cruelty and tyranny, has he ever done worthy a prince?—what has he achieved by them?—or, indeed, what beside these can be said of him.

224. These are the works, &c.] If you ask me, says an answerer, I will tell you all that can be said of him;—viz. That it was his delight to prostitute the dignity of a prince, to the meanness of a common fiddler, by exposing himself on the public stages of Greece—that, instead of glorying in real crowns of triumph, his ambition was to get a garland of parsley (the reward of the best fiddler) in the Nemæan games, from the Grecian music-masters.—These games were celebrated to the memory of Archemorus, the young son of Lycurgus.

227. "Let the statues," &c. As such were your exploits, O Nero, and you have no other trophies wherewith to ornament the statues of your ancestors, let the parsley-crown, which you won by singing, be placed before them. Insigne—plur. insignia—signifies all marks and tokens of honour, such as crowns, robes, &c.

228. "Of Domitius."] Thy grandfather and father, both of which were named Domitius. His father was Caius Domitius Ahenobarbus, consul, and afterwards governor of Transalpine Gaul; he was clain in the war with Pompey.

Rather avenge, or Galba with Vindex?

What did Nero in a tyranny so savage and bloody?

These are the works, and these the arts of a noble prince, Rejoicing, with shameless song, on foreign stages to be Prostituted, and to have deserved the parsley of a Grecian crown.

Let the statues of your ancestors have the tokens of your voice,

"Before the feet of Domitius do thou place the long garment

" Of Thyestes; or of Antigone: or the mask of Menalippe;

"And suspend an harp from a marble colossus." 250
Who, Catiline, will find out any thing more noble than your birth,

Or than that of Cethegus? but yet, nocturnal Arms, and flames, for the houses and temples ye prepared,

Arms, and flames, for the houses and temples ye prepared As sons of the Gauls, or the posterity of the Senones,

229. " Of Thyestes; or of Antigone."] i.e. The dress which you wore when you played in the tragedies so called. Syrma, a long garment which tragic players used.

"The mask of Menalippe." The mask which you wore when you acted the part of Menalippe, the sister of Antiope, queen of the Amazons, in the comedy of Euripides, written on her story. She was taken captive by Hercules, and given Theseus to wife.

230. "Suspend an harp," Go.] Nero, according to Pliny, erected a colossal statue of Augustus, one hundred and ten feet high, (according to Suctonius, one hundred and twenty). Suctonius, de Ner. ii. 10. says, that Nero honoured highly a harp that was given time by the judges, (in his contest with the Grecian musicians,) and commanded it to be carried to the statue of Augustus. This the poet alludes to in this place.

The apostrophe to Nero, in the above four lines, is conceived with much humour, and at the same time with due severity—these are greatly heightened by the ironical use of the word insignia, l. 227.

231. Catiline.] The conspirator, whose plots and contrivances were found out and defeated by Cicero. He was so debauched and profligate, that his name is frequently used to denote the vilest of men.—So Juvenal, sat. xiv. 41, 2.

Quocunque in populo videas, quocunque sub are.

Yet he was well born.

232. Cethegus.] Caius, one of the conspirators with Catiline, a man of senatorial dignity.

232—3. Nocturnal arms.] Meditated the destruction of the people of Rome by night, and armed yourselves accordingly, with torches, and other instruments of mischief.

234. Sons of the Gauls.] Braccatorum.—The Gauls were called Braccati, from the breeches, or trowsers, which the people of Narbonne and Provence used to wear. See sat. ii. 169, note.

| Ausi quod liceat tunica punire molesta: | 35 |
|---|----|
| Sed vigilat consul, vexillaque vestra coercet. | 0 |
| Hic novus Arpinas, ignobilis, et modo Romae | |
| Municipalis eques, galeatum ponit ubique | |
| Præsidium attonitis, et in omni gente laborat. | |
| Tantum igitur muros intra toga contulit illi | 10 |
| Nominis et tituli, quantum non Leucade, quantum | |
| Thessaliæ campis Octavius abstulit udo | |
| Cædibus assiduis gladio. Sed Roma parentem, | |
| Roma patrem patriæ Ciceronem libera dixit. | |
| | 15 |
| Poscere mercedes alieno lassus aratro; | |

234. Senones.] A people of the ancient race of the Celtæ, inhabiting the Lionnois in Gaul.

These people, under Brennus their general, sacked and burnt Rome, and besieged the capitol, but, by the conduct and valour of the dictator Camillus, were defeated.

235. A pitched coat. Tunica molesta. This was a coat, or garment, bedaubed and interwoven with pitch and other combustibles, and put on criminals, who were chained to a post, and thus burnt alive. See Ainsw. Molestus. This instrument of torture was expressed by the phrase—tunica molesta.

The emperor Nero, after charging the Christians with setting Rome on fire, publicly tortured and slew them on the stages in the day-time, and at night put tunicæ molestæ on their bodies, and lighted them up, by way of torches, in the night time. Comp. sat. i. i.

155, note 2.

236. The consul.] Cicero was then consul.

--- Restrains your banners.] Under which many wicked and desperate men had inlisted: but the fury of their arms was restrained by the vigilance of the consul, who watched all their motions.

237. New man.] The Romans gave this name to those who were the first dignified persons of their family, and who themselves were of obscure birth. Catiline, in derision, urged this name in contempt against Cicero.

- Arpinum.] An ancient town of the Volsci in Italy, famous for being the birth-place of Tully.

Arpinas signifies one of Arpinum.

—— Ignoble. Of mean extraction.

238. A municipal knight.] Municipalis signified one who belonged to a town free of the city of Rome; this was the case with Tully, who was born at Arpinum, and had been, soon after his coming to Rome, admitted into the equestrian order. Catiline called him therefore municipalis eques, in contempt.

-- Helmeted.] Armed.-Synec. like galeatus, sat. i. 169; and caligatus, sat. iii. 322.

245

Attempting what it would be right to punish with a pitched coat: 235 But the consul is vigilant, and restrains your banners.

This new man of Arpinum, ignoble, and lately at Rome

A municipal knight, puts every where an helmeted

Safeguard for the astonished people, and labours every where,

Therefore the gown conferr'd on him, within the walls, more fame 240

And honour, than Octavius brought away from Leucas, or from The fields of Thessaly, by his sword wet

With continual slaughters: but Rome, the parent,

Rome set free, called Cicero the father of his country.

Another Arpinian, in the mountain of the Volsci, used

To demand wages, tired with the plough of another man;

239. Astonished people. Who were dreadfully terrified by the designs and attempts of the conspirators.

Labours every where ? Bestirs himself in all quarters, for the security of the city.

I take-in omni gente-in this place, to mean something like ubique gentium, which signifies every where, in what part of the world soever.

And indeed Tully not only shewed his activity within the city, but he disposed guards and spies throughout all Italy, as well as among every tribe of the Roman people-finding out, by the Allobroges, and others, the designs of the traitors.

240. The gown.] His robe of office; but here, by metonym. his prudence and wise counsels. Toga here is opposed to gladio, 1. 243.

241. Octavius.] Cæsar, afterwards called Augustus.

Leucas.] A promontory of Epirus, called also Leucate, hear which Octavius Cæsar defeated Antony and Cleopatra, in a bloody naval battle.

242. Fields of Thessaly, &c.] Philippi, in Thessalia, where he defeated Brutus and Cassins.

244. Rome set free.] Delivered and set free from the dangers that threatened it, and restored to its laws and liberties, which for a while had been suspended by the public troubles.

-- Father of his country. This honourable title was given to Cicero, after the defeat of Catiline's conspiracy. He was the first who bore it. It was afterwards given to some of the emperors; but much more from flattery, than because they deserved it.

245. Another Arpinian.] C. Marius, who also came from Arpinum, was a poor ploughman there, who hired himself out to plough the 'ground of others.

- Of the Volsci. Arpinum was an ancient city in the country of the Volsci, now called Arpino, between Tuscany to the west, and Campania to the east.

Nodosam post hæc frangebat vertice vitem,
Si lentus pigrâ muniret castra dolabrâ.
Hic tamen et Cimbros, et summa pericula rerum
Excipit, et solus trepidantem protegit urbem.
Atque ideo postquam ad Cimbros, stragemque volabant,
Qui nunquam attigerent majora cadavera, corvi,
Nobilis ornatur lauro collega secundâ.
Plebeiæ Deciorum animæ, plebeia fuerunt
Nomina: pro totis legionibus hi tamen, et pro
Omuibus auxiliis, atque omni plebe Latinâ

Nomina: pro totis legionibus hi tamen, et pro Omuibus auxiliis, atque omni plebe Latinâ Sufficiunt Dîs infernis, Terræque parenti: Pluris enim Decii, quam qui servantur ab illis. Ancillâ natus trabeam et diadema Quirini, Et fasces meruit, regum ultimus ille bonorum. Prodita laxabant portarum claustra tyrannis

260

247. He broke a knotty vine, &c.] The Roman centurions used to carry a piece of tough vine-branch in their hands, with which they corrected the soldiers when they did amiss. Marius was once a private soldier, and had had the centurion's stick broke upon his head, for being lazy at his work, when set to chop with an axe the wood used in fortifying the camp against the enemy. See sat. v. 154, 5.

249. The Cimbri.] The Teutones and Cembri, neighbouring nations, joined their forces, and marched towards Rome, by which they struck a terror throughout Italy: but C. Marius, with Q. Catullus the proconsul, marched out against them, sustained their attack, and totally defeated them.

—— Dangers of affairs.] When the affairs of Italy, of Rome especially, seemed to be in the utmost danger from these powerful enemies.

250. And alone, &c.] Though Q. Catullus was with Marius in this victory, yet Marius was the commander in chief in the Cimbrian war, therefore the whole honour of the victory was ascribed to him.—Com. 1. 253.

251. After—the crows, &c.] And other birds of prey, which, after the battle, came to feed upon the slain. See Hom. Il. i. 5. ii. 393, et. al,—q. d. After the battle was ended. See sat. iv. l. 111.

252. Greater carcases.] The Cimbri were, in general, men of large stature.

253. His noble colleague.] Q. Catullus, who had been second in command, and was of noble birth.

___ Is adorned with the second laurel.] Received only the second honours of the day.

254. The Decii, &c] These, though originally of low extraction, yet gained immortal honours, by sacrificing their lives for their country—the father in the Latin war, the son in the Hetruscan, and the grandson in the war against Pyrrhus.

255. Whole legions, &c. | The Romans had a superstition, that if

343

260

After this he broke a knotty vine with his head, If, idle, he fortified the camp with a lazy axe. Yet he both the Cimbri, and the greatest dangers of affairs, Sustains, and alone protects the trembling city. 250 And so, after to the Cimbri, and to the slaughter, the crows Flew, who had never touched greater carcases, His noble colleague is adorned with the second laurel. The souls of the Decii were plebeian, their names Plebeian: yet these, for whole legions, and for all 255 Our auxiliaries, and for all the Latin common people, Suffice for the infernal Gods, and parent Earth: For the Decii were of more value than those who were saved by them. Born from a servant maid, the robe and diadem of Romulus,

And the fasces, that last of good kings deserved.

The youths of the consul himself were opening the fastenings their general would consent to be devoted to death, or sacrificed to Jupiter, Mars, the Earth, and the infernal Gods, all the misfortunes of his party would be transferred on their enemies. This opinion was confirmed by several successful instances, particularly two, in the persons of the Decii, father and son. The first being consul with Manlius in the wars against the Latins, and perceiving the left wing, which he commanded, give back, called out to Valerius the high priest to perform on him the ceremony of consecration, (Livy, lib. viii.) and immediately spurred his horse into the thickest of the enemies, where he was killed, and the Romans gained the battle. His son afterwards died in the same manner in the war against the Gauls, with the like success.

257. Suffice.] i. e. To appease, and render them propitious to the Roman arms.

258. More value, &c.] Such men as these are to be more highly prized than all the army and people for whom they thus nobly sacrificed their lives.

259. Born from a servant maid.] Servius Tullius, born of the captive Oriculana. But Livy supposes her to have been wife to a prince of Corniculum, (a town of the Sabines in Italy,) who was killed at the taking of the town, and his wife carried away captive by Tarquinius Priscus, and presented as a slave to his wife Tanaquil, in whose service she was delivered of this Tullius.

-- The robe, &c. The ensigns of royalty are here put for the kingdom, or royalty itself-so the fasces, for the highest offices in the state. See sat. iii. 128, note.

Romulus.] Called Quirinus. See sat. iii. 1. 67, note on " O Quirinus."

- 260. Last of good kings.] Livy says that, with him, justa ac legitima regna ceciderunt.

261. Touths of the consul, &c.] The two sons of L. Junius Brutus, Titus and Tiberius, who, after their father had driven Tarquin, and his whole race, out of Rome, and taken an oath of the

Exulibus juvenes ipsius consulis, et quos
Magnum aliquid dubià pro libertate deceret,
Quod miraretur cum Coclite Mutius, et qua
Imperii fines Tiberinum virgo natavit.
Occulta ad patres produxit crimina servus
Matronis lugendus: at illos verbera justis
Afficiunt pænis, et legum prima securis.
Malo pater tibi sit Thersites, dummodo tu sis
Æacidæ similis, Vulcaniaque arma capessas,
Quam te Thersitæ similem producat Achilles.
Et tamen, ut longe repetas, longeque revolvas
Nomen, ab infami gentem deducis asylo.
Majorum primus quisquis fuit ille tuorum,
Aut pastor fuit, aut illud, quod dicere nolo.

265

. . . .

275

Romans never more to suffer a king, entered into a conspiracy to restore the Tarquins; the sum of which was, that the gates of the city should be left open in the night-time for the Tarquins to enter; to this purpose they sent letters, under their own hands, with promises to this effect.

261. The fastenings, &c.] The bars of the city gates, which were to be betrayed to the Tarquins.

262. Exiled tyrants.] The Tarquins.

263. Some great thing, &c.] It would have been becoming these sons of the patriot Brutus to have stricken some great stroke, that might have tended to secure the public liberty; which, under the new government, after the expulsion of the kings, must have been in a doubtful and uncertain state—not as yet established.

264. Mutius.] Scævola, who, when Porsenna, king of Tuscany, had entered into an alliance with the Tarquins, to restore them by force, went into the enemy's camp with a resolution to kill their king Porsenna, but, instead of him, killed one of his guards; and, being brought before the king, and finding his error, burnt off his right hand, as a penalty for his mistake.

—— Cocles.] Horatius, being to guard a bridge, which he perceived the enemy would soon be master of, he stood and resolutely opposed part of their army, while his own party repassed the bridge, and broke it down after them. He then threw himself, armed as he was, into the Tiber, and escaped to the city.

265. Who swam, &c.] Clelia, a Roman virgin, who was given to king Porsenna as an hostage, made her escape from the guards, and swam over the Tiber. King Porsenna was so stricken with these three instances of Roman bravery, that he withdrew his army, and courted their friendship.

266. A slave. Windicius, a slave who waited at table, overhearing part of the discourse among the conspirators, went strait to the consuls, and informed them of what he had heard. The ambassadors from the Tarquins were apprehended and searched; the letters above mentioned were found upon them, and the criminals seized.

Of the gates, betrayed to the exiled tyrants, and whom Some great thing for doubtful liberty might have become, Which Mutius, with Cocles, might admire, and the virgin Who swam the Tiber, the bounds of our empire. A slave, to be bewailed by matrons, produced their hidden crimes To the fathers: but stripes affected them with just Punishment, and the first axe of the laws. I had rather thy father were Thersites, so thou art Like Achilles, and take in hand the Vulcanian arms, 270 Than that Achilles should produce thee like Thersites. And yet, however far you may fetch, and far revolve

Your name, you deduce your race from an infamous asylum.

Whoever he, the first of your ancestors, was,

Either be was a shepherd, or that which I am unwilling to say. 275

266. Bewailed by matrons, &c.] By the mothers of such of the conspirators as were put to death, as the sad cause of their destruction, by accusing them to the senate.

--- Produced. Produxit-brought out-discovered.

267. But stripes, &c.] The proof being evident against them, they suffered the punishment (which was newly introduced) of being tied naked to a stake, where they were first whipped by the lictors, then beheaded: and Brutus, by virtue of his office, was unhappily obliged to see this rigorous sentence executed on his own children. See Æn. vi. 817-23.

268. First axe of the laws.] i. e. The first time this sentence had been executed since the making of the law.

269. Thersites.] An ugly buffoon in the Grecian army before Troy. See Hom. Il. 6. 1 216-22.

270. Achilles.] Æacides-æ, or -is, so called from his grandfather

Æacus, who was the father of Peleus, the father of Achilles.

--- The Vulcanian arms.] Or armour, that was made by Vulcan, at the request of Thetis, the mother of Achilles, which could be pierced by no human force.

271. Than that Achilles, &c.] The poet here still maintains his argument, viz. that a virtuous person, of low and mean birth, may be great and respectable: whereas a vicious and profligate person, though of the noblest extraction, is detestable and contemptible.

272. However far, &c.] Juvenal here strikes at the root of all family pride among the Romans, by carrying them up to their original .- Revolve, roll or trace back, for however many generations.

273. An infamous asylum.] Romulus, in order to promote the peopling of the city, in its first infancy, established an asylum, or sanctuary, where all outlaws, vagabonds, and criminals of all kinds, who could make their escape thither, were sure to be safe.

275. Either he was a shepherd.] As were Romulus and Remus, and, their bringer up, Faustulus.

- Unwilling to say.] As the poet does not speak his own YOL. I.

meaning, it may not be very easy to determine it: but it is likely that he would insinuate, that none of the Romans had much to brag of in point of family grandeur, and that none of them could tell but that they might have come from some robber; or cut-throat, among the first fugitives to Rome, or even from something worse than that, if worse could be: and indeed Romulus himself, their founder, was a parricide, for he is said to have killed his brother Remus.

. zýbr

The state of the s

The control of the co

7 41

Thus Juvenal concludes this fine Satire on family-pride, which he takes every occasion to mortify, by shewing, that what a man is in himself, not what his ancestors were, is the great matter to be considered.

"Worth makes the man, the want of it the fellow; "The rest is all but leather or prunello."

POPE.

END OF THE EIGHTH SATIRE.

SATIRA IX.

ARGUMENT.

Juvenal, in this Satire, exposes and censures the detestable vice then practised at Rome. Some have thought that this is done too openly. So Farnaby—Obscenam cinedorum et pathicorum turpitudinem acriter, at nimis aperte insectatur. Marshall says, that on account of certain expressions in this Satire, Jul. C. Scaliger advised every man of probity to abstain from the whole work of Juvenal. But, surely, this is greatly mistaking the matter, and not adverting duly to the difference between such writers as exert their genius in the cause of vice, and so write upon it, as if they wished to recommend it to the imagination, and thus to the practice of mankind, (as Horace among the Romans, and Lord Rochester among us,) and such a writer as Occurras fronte obductâ, ceu Marsya victus.

Quid tibi cum vultu, qualem deprensus habebat
Ravola, dum Rhodopes uda terit inguina barba?

Nos colaphum incutimus lambenti crustula servo.

Non erat hâc facie miserabilior Crepereius

Pollio, qui triplicem usuram præstare paratus

Circuit, et fatuos non invenit. Unde repente

5

Line 1. Navolus.] The poet, as an introduction to this Satire, in which he exposes and condemns the monstrous impurities then reigning in Rome, brings to view, as an example of their evil consequences, one Navolus, a monster of vice, who appears in a most shabby and forlorn condition, more like an outcast than a member of civil society; ruined by those very vices by which he had thought to have enriched himself. Juvenal is supposed to have met him often, lately, in a state of the utmost dejection and misery, and now he asks him the reason of it.

2. Marsyas.] A Phrygian musician, who challenged Apollo, but was overcome by him, and flayed alive.

4. Ravola.] Some impure wretch, who, being detected with his mistress, in the situation here described, was confounded with shame at the discovery.

5. Biscuits. Crustula—wafers, or such-like things; or little sweet cakes, which used to be given to children. So Hon. sat. i. 1. 25, 6.

SATIRE IX.

ARGUMENT.

Juvenal, who exerted a fine genius, and an able pen, against vice, and in particular, against that which is the chief object of this Satire; in which he sets it forth in such terms as to create a disgust and abhorrence, not only of those monsters of lewdness who practised it, but also of the vice itself; so that both might be avoided by the indignant reader, and be held in the highest detestation and horror. Such were our Poet's views in what he wrote, and therefore the plainness of his expressions he, doubtless, thought much more conducive to this desired end, as tending to render the subject the more shocking, than if he had contented himself with only touching it with the gentler hand of periphrasis, or circumlocution.

WOULD know, why so often, Nævolus, you meet me, Sad, with a clouded brow, like the conquered Marsyas. What have you to do with a countenance, such as Ravola had Discovered in his lewd commerce with Rhodope? We give a box on the ear to a servant who licks biscuits. Not more miserable than this face was Crepereius Pollio, who ready to pay triple interest, Went about, and found not fools.—Whence on a sudden Ut pueris olim dant crustula blandi Doctores, elementa velint ut discere prima. As masters fondly sooth their boys to read With cakes and sweetmeats.

FRANCIS.

5.

Crustula may here be understood of sweetmeats in general.

The thought seems to be—If a slave be beaten because he so far indulges his liquorish appetite, as to lick the cakes, or sweetmeats, as he brings them to table, how much more worthy of punishment are such wretches as Ravola, who indulge, without restraint, in the most shameful impurities?

6-7. Crepereius Pollio.] A noted spendthrift, who could not borrow any more money, though he offered triple interest for it. 8. Went about.] Hunting after money-lenders.

Found not fools.]—Could not meet with any who would be fools enough to trust him with their money.

Tot rugæ? certe modico contentus agebas Vernam equitem, conviva joco mordente facetus, 10 Et salibus vehemens intra pomœria natis. Omnia nunc contra: vultus gravis, horrida siccæ Sylva comæ; nullus tota nitor in cute, qualem Præstabat calidi circumlita fascia visci ; Sed fruticante pilo neglecta et squallida erura. 15 Quid macies ægri veteris, quem tempore longo Torret quarta dies, olimque domestica febris? Deprêndas animi tormenta latentis in ægro Corpore, deprêndas et gaudia : sumit utrumque Inde habitum facies : igitur flexisse videris Propositum, et vitæ contrarius ire priori. Nuper enim (ut repeto) fanum Isidis, et Ganymedem Pacis, et advectæ secreta palatia matris, Et Cererem (nam quo non prostat fœmina templo?)

10. The knight-like slave.] i. e. Though an home-born slave, yet thou didst live as jolly and happy as if thou hadst been a knight.

Verna eques was a jocose phrase among the Romans, to denote slaves who appeared in a style and manner above their condition; these they ludicrously called vernæ equites, gentlemen slaves, as we should say.—The phrase seems to be something like the French bourgeois gentilhomme—the cit-gentleman.

In Falstaff's humourous account of Justice Shallow and his servants, he says, "they, by observing him, do bear themselves like foolish justices; he, by conversing with them, is turned into a " justice-like serving man."

11. Witticisms, &c.] Pomerium (quasi post murum) was a space about the walls of a city, or town, as well within as without, where it was not lawful to plough or build, for fear of hindering the defence of the city-hence, meton. a limit, or bound.

By witticisms born, or brought forth, within the pomæria, or limits of the city, Juvenal means those of a polite kind, in contradistinction to the provincial, coarse, low-born jests of the common slaves. Hence urbanitas, from urbs, a city, means courtesy, civility, good manners, or what we call politeness.

13. Of dry hair. I Instead of your hair being dressed, and moist-ened with perfumed ointments, it now stands up, without form or order, like trees in a wood.

14. Warm glue.] This viscus was a composition of pitch, wax, resin, and the like adhesive ingredients, which, being melted together and spread on a cloth, were applied warm to those parts of the body where the hair grew. After remaining some time, the cloth, which had been rolled round the part in form of a bandage, was taken off, bringing away the hair with it, and leaving the skin smooth. This practice was common among the wretches whom the poet is here satirizing.

So many wrinkles? certainly, content with little, you acted The knight-like slave, a facetious guest with biting jest, 10 And quick with witticisms born within the limits of the city. All is now contrary: a heavy countenance, a rough wood Of dry hair: no neatness in all your skin, such as A bandage of warm glue daubed about you procured; But your legs are neglected, and filthy with hair growing. What means the leanness of an old sick man, whom for a long time A fourth day parches, and a fever, long since familiar? You may discover the torments of a mind lurking in a sick Body, and you may discover joys: each habit the face Assumes from thence. Therefore you seem to have turned 20 Your purpose, and to go contrary to your former life. For lately (as I recollect) the temple of Isis, and the Ganymede Of (the temple of) Peace, and the secret courts of Cybele, And Ceres, (for in what temple does not a woman stand for hire?)

16. The leanness, &c.] What is the meaning of that lean and sick appearance which thou dost exhibit? like that of an old invalid, who has long been afflicted, and consuming with a quartan ague and fever; so long, that it may be looked upon as domesticated, and as become a part of the family.

18. You may discover, &c.] The body is an index to the mind—a sickly, pale, languid countenance, bespeaks vexation and unhappiness within.

A cheerful, gay, and healthy look, bespeaks joy and peace.

Sorrow nor joy can be disguis'd by art; Our foreheads blab the secrets of our heart.

HARVET

20. From thence.] From the mind.—q. d. The countenance assumes the appearance of sorrow or joy, from the state of the mind.—Turned, &c.] By thy sad and miserable appearance, I do

Turned, &c.] By thy sad and miserable appearance, I do suppose that some turn or change has happened, and that your former way of life is quite altered.

22. The temple of Isis.] See sat. vi. l. 488, and note.

The Ganymede, &c.] The statue of Ganymede, in the temple of Peace, was also a place of rendezvous for all manner of lewd and debauched persons.

23. Cybele.] Is described in the text by the phrase advectæ matris, because the image of this mother of the gods, as she was called, was brought to Rome from Phrygia. See sat. iii. l. 138. and note.

24. Ceres.] In former times the temple of Ceres was not to be approached but by chaste and modest women; but as vice and lewdness increased, all reverence for sacred places decreased, and now even the temple of Ceres (see sat. vi. L 50, and note) was the resort of the impure of all denominations.

Notior Aufidio mœchus celebrare solebas. 25 (Quod taceo) atque ipsos etiam inclinare maritos. Næv. Utile et hoc multis vitæ genus : at mili nullum Inde operæ pretium: pingues aliquando lacernas, Munimenta togæ, duri crassique coloris, Et male percussas textoris pectine Galli, 30 Accipimus. Tenue argentum, venæque secundæ. Fata regunt homines. Fatum est in partibus illis Quas sinus abscondit : nam si tibi sidera cessant, Nil faciet longi mensura incognita nervi : Quamvis te nudum spumanti Virro labello 35 Viderit, et blandæ, assiduæ, densæque tabellæ Sollicitent: Αὐτὸς γὰς ἐΦέλκεται ἀνδοα κιναιδος. Quod tamen ulterius monstrum, quam mollis avarus? Hæc tribui, deinde illa dedi, mox plura tulisti. Computat, et cevet. Ponatur calculus, adsint 40 Cum tabula pueri: numera sestertia quinque

25. Aufidius.] Some most notorious debauchee.

It is but lately, says Juvenal, that you used to haunt all these famous abodes of lewdness and prostitution, and so to play your part, as to render yourself more noted than any body else—how comes it, Nævolus, that I perceive such a wonderful change in your looks and behaviour?

27. This kind of life, &e.] Here Navolus begins his answer to Juvenal's inquiries, and accounts for the shabby and miserable appearance which he made, by shewing what poor wages such wretches worked for, unless highly favoured by their stars.

28. Coarse, &c.] Pingues here means coarse, made of the wool as it came off the sheep's back, full of grease and filth; not washed and combed, like that of which the finer cloths were made. .

—— Garments.] Lacernas here signifies cloaks to keep off the rain and wind in bad weather; they were (like our great coats) put over the other garments, to keep them dry; hence he calls them, in the next line, munimenta toge-defences of the gown, or upper garment.

30. The slay, &c.] A weaver's slay is that part of the loom which is drawn with force against the threads of the woof, to drive them close together, and to consolidate them with the warp. The cloth here described had had very little pains taken in the making of it, and therefore was very coarse and bad. This sort of cloths was made in Gaul, and from thence carried to Rome, probably for the cheap and ordinary wear of the common people.

31. Thin money.] Light, not of due weight.

— The second vein. In mines there are finer and coarser veins of silver; the former, less mixed with other bodies: the latter, more: hence this is called silver—venæ secundæ, or of the second vein, being less pure, and, of course, less valuable than the other: of this the smaller and less valuable coins were made.

35

An adulterer; more known than Aufidius, you used to frequent, 25 And (which not to mention) to intrigue even with the very husbands.

Næv. And this kind of life is useful to many, but I have no Reward of my pains from thence. Sometimes coarse garments, Defences of the gown, of an harsh and homely colour, And badly stricken with the stay of a Gallic weaver, We receive. Thin money, and of the second vein. The fates govern men. Fate attends even our Bodily accomplishments, for, if your stars fail you,

The greatness of these is of no service:

Tho Virro himself should view you with the utmost Desire, and kind, assiduous, and numerous letters should Solicit :- for such a man entices others.

But what monster can be beyond an effeminate miser?

"These things I bestowed, then those I gave, soon you received "more."

He computes, and sins on—" Let a reckoning be made, let the "slaves 40

" Come with the ledger :- number five sestertiums

32. The fates, &c.] By putting this dogma of the Stoics into the mouth of Navolus, the poet artfully insinuates, that many professors of stoicism, with all its austerities, practised the vice which, in this Satire, is so stigmatized. See sat. ii. 1. 8—15, and notes; also sat. ii. 1. 65, and note.

35. Virro.] We often meet with this name in sat. v. and if the same person be here meant, he was not only a very rich man, but a sensualist of the basest and most unnatural sort. I should think it most probable, that here, as in many other places, Juvenal, though he makes use of a particular name, yet means to express the whole tribe of delinquents in the same way.

The poet proceeds in his ridicule of the Stoicidæ, (as he calls them, sat. ii. l. 65.) supposing them, to make their doctrine of fatalism subservient even to their enormous vices.

36. Numerous letters.] Densæ tabellæ.—See sat. i. 120, note on densissima; and sat. ii. 50, note on tabulas.

39. "These things, &c.] Here Nævolus represents Virro as upbraiding him for demanding a recompence, and computing what Nævolus had received of him from time to time.

40. "Let a reckoning," &c.] "Let an account be stated between us, says Virro—let one of the slaves come with my account-book, tabula—i. e. accepti et expensi, my ledger-book, or journal, where my daily accounts are kept, and you'll find that you have had of me, reckoning every thing, (omnibus in rebus, comp. l. 39,) five sestertia (about 40l. 7s. 1d.) surely I owe you nothing!" See Ainsw. Tabula, No. 5.

VOL. I.

Omnibus in rebus; numerentur deinde labores. An facile et pronum est agere intra viscera penem Legitimum, atque illic hesternæ occurrere cænæ? Servus erit minus ille miser, qui foderit agrum, 45 Quam dominum. Sed tu sane tener, et puerum te, Et pulchrum, et dignum cyatho cœloque putabas. Vos humili asseciæ, vos indulgebitis unquam Cultori, jam nec morbo donare parati? En cui tu viridem umbellam, cui succina mittas 50 Grandia, natalis quoties redit, aut madidum ver Incipit; et stratâ positus longâque cathedrâ Munera fœmineis tractat secreta calendis. Dic, passer, cui tot montes, tot prædia servas Appula, tot milvos intra tua pascua lassos? 55 Te Trifolinus ager fœcundis vitibus implet, Suspectumque jugum Cumis, et Gaurus inanis.

42. "My labours."] Labores—pains, drudgery—"now, reckon these," says Nævolus, "on the other side of the account."

43. " Is it an easy," &c.] Here the poet, in language too gross for literal translation, but well suited to his purpose, exposes the unnatural and horrid filthiness of that detestable vice, which it is the business of this Satire to lash, and to condemn, in the severest and most indignant terms.

46. " Delicate," &c.] q. d. Perhaps you will represent yourself as so engaging, that I ought not to have expected any thing for ministring to your pleasures.

47. " Heaven and the cup.] Alluding to the story of Ganymede, the fabled minion of Jupiter, snatched up by Jupiter from mount Ida, and carried to heaven, where he was made cup-bearer to the gods instead of Hebe. See sat. xiii. 43, 4. All this is ironical, and contains a most bitter sarcasm on Virro, now old and infirm, and almost worn out in vice.

48. " An attendant."] A follower, an hanger-on, as the poor clients were, to rich men. - A like character is to be understood of the other word, cultori, which signifies a worshipper, one that makes court to, or waits upon another; such as cultivate, by attention and assiduity, the favour of great men. The Italians, at this day, use the phrase padron colendissimo-colendissimo padrone.

If you are so sparing of your liberality towards those who minister to your pleasures, you (vos, i. e. such as you) will hardly be generous to those who want your charity.

49. "On your disease." Morbus, in a mental sense, denotes any odd humour, unreasonable passion, or vice, which may well be styled a disease of the mind. See sat. ii. l. 17. and l. 50.

50. Behold him, &c.] The sarcasm on Virro still continues. See this beautiful Ganymede, to whom you are expected to make presents on his birth-day, such as a green umbrella to keep off the sun from spoiling his complexion, and amber toys and gewgaws, which

- "In every thing"-" then let my labours be reckon'd-
- " Is it an easy and ready matter to engage in so much filth,
- " And to rake into the recesses of the most horrid abomination ?-
- "The slave that digs the field will be less miserable.— 45
- " But truly you are delicate, and thought yourself young,
- " And beautiful, and worthy heaven and the cup.
- "Will ye ever be kind to an humble attendant, to one who makes
- "His court, who are now not ready to bestow on your disease?"

 Behold him to whom you must send a green umbrella, to whom great

Pieces of amber, as often as his birth-day returns, or the moist spring Begins: placed on a chair, both strowed and long,

He handles secret gifts in the feminine calends.

Say, sparrow, for whom so many mountains, so many Appulian Farms you keep, so many kites tired within your pastures? 55

A Trifoline field fills you with fruitful vines,

And the hill seen aloft at Cumæ, and empty Gaurus.

women are so fond of.—It was usual, among the Romans, to make presents on birth-days.

51. Moist spring.] The birth of Venus was celebrated on the calends of March, (our March 1.) They then celebrated the Matronalia, when the Roman ladies, dressed up, sat in chairs, or reclined on couches, and received presents from their admirers. This was imitated by the effeminate Virro.

52. Placed.] Seated, or reclined, like the women.

—— Strowed and long.] Longa cathedra, from its form, seems to denote a couch, on which a person can recline at length—these, among the fine ladies, were usually strowed, or spread, with carpets and other ornaments, such as fine-wrought and easy pillows, &c.

53. Handles.] Fingers them, as we say.—I read tractat—not tractas—which last seems not to answer he cui, l. 50, or, indeed, to make sense. See BRITAN, in loc.

54. Sparrow.] It is said that sparrows are the most salacious of all birda—hence he gives this name to Virro.—A bitter sarcasm.

54-5. Appulian farms.] Appulia was reckoned the most fertile part of Italy; though mountainous and barren near the sea coast. See sat. iv. 26, 7.

55. So many kites, Sc. He represents Virro's estate to be so large as to tire the kites in flying over it. See Persius, sat. iv. l. 26.

56. Trifoline field.] A part of Campania, famous for producing vast quantities of grass called trefoil, and some of the finest vincs.

Fills you.] Implet.—This well expresses the vast supply of

57. Seen aloft, &c.] Mount Misenus, so called from Misenus, the companion and trumpeter of Æneas—(see Æn. vi. 234—6.)—

Nam quis plura linit victuro dolia musto? Quantum erat exhausti lumbos donare clientis Jugeribus paucis? meliusne hic rusticus infans 60 Cum matre, et casulis, et cum lusore catello, Cymbala pulsantis legatum fiet amici? Improbus es, cum poscis, ait; sed pensio clamat. Posce: sed appellat puer unicus, ut Polyphemi Lata acies, per quam solers evasit Ulysses: 65 Alter emendus erit; namque hic non sufficit; ambo Pascendi. Quid agam brumâ spirante ? quid, oro, Quid dicam scapulis puerorum mense Decembri, Et pedibus ? durate, atque expectate cicadas ? Verum ut dissimules, ut mittas cætera, quanto 70 now Capo Miseno; it hangs, as it were, over the city of Cuma, as if it threatened to fall upon it. It was famous for good vines.

57. Empty Gaurus.] A mountain of Campania, near Puteoli.—
Some think that the poet gives it the epithet manis—void or empty—on account of the void parts of it, which were occasioned by numerous caverns or hollows.—Hence Holyday rendered manis Gaurus—hollow Gaurus. This also was famous for its wine.

58. Stops up, &c.] Lino signifies, literally, to besmear, or daub, and is applied to the manner of stopping up the bungs or mouths of their wine vessels with pitch or plaister, in order to keep the air from the liquor. See Hor. od. xx. lib. i. l. 1—3.

Likely to live.] i. e. To be very sparingly bestowed, and so to endure to a great age. Mustum signifies new wine, as it comes from the press to the cask.

59. How much, &c.] After mentioning the large estate of Virro, Navolus represents it as no great matter for him to bestow a few acres on an old slave, worn out in his service.

The loins.] This insinuates the horrid services which Nevo-lus had performed.

60. Is it better, &c.] The little sketch of rustic simplicity, in these two lines, is very pretty.

62. A friend beating the cymbals.] By this periphrasis is meant one of the Galli, or priests of Cybele. See sat. vi. l. 510—15. sat. viii. l. 176. and Persius, sat. v. l. 186. They were enunchs, and most impure in their practices. Nævolus uses the word amici here, in order to denote the infamous and intimate connexion which Virro had with one of these. Would it be better, says he, to leave a small farm, and its little appurtenances, to one of those lewd priests, that are living in sloth and plenty, than to me, your poor drudge, who have been worn out in your service?

63. "You are impudent," &c.] In vain does Nævolus plead his services, in vain does he argue the case, that he may get some reward for them.—Instead of this, Virro abuses him, and calls him an impudent follows for solving any thing more than he has already had dent fellow, for asking any thing more than he has already had.

For who stops up more casks with wine likely to live?
How much had it been to present the loins of an exhausted client
With a few acres? Is it better that this rustic infant, 60
With its mother and their cottage, and with the cur their playfellow, Should become the legacy of a friend beating the cymbals?

"You are impudent when you ask," says he. "But rent calls out,

"Ask: -but my only slave calls, as Polypheme's

Broad eye, by which crafty Ulysses escaped:

65

"Another will be to be bought, for this does not suffice-both

"Are to be fed. What shall I do when winter blows? what I pray, What shall I say to the shoulders of my slaves in the month of "December,

"And to their feet ?-Stay, and expect the grasshoppers!"

But however you may dissemble, however omit the rest, at how great a

63. "But rent," Sc.] q. d. You may call me what you please for asking, but my necessities force me to be thus importunate.—
I have rent to pay—a slave to maintain—and soon must have another—these things bid me beg on.

64-5. "Polypheme's eye."] A giant of Sicily, and one of the Cyclops, who had but one eye, and that in his forehead, which Ulysses, by craft, put out, and escaped from him. See Æn. iii.

1. 635-7.

q. d. As the anguish of Polypheme's wounded eye, made him roar out for revenge against Ulysses, so the wants of my poor servant make him call out upon me for a supply. Appello sometimes signifies to call upon for a thing—to dun. Ainsw.

" Harvey has rendered this passage:

My single boy (like Polyphemus's eye) Mourns his harsh fate, and weeps for a supply.

66. "Another," &c.] I must purchase another slave, then I shall have two to keep; and when the cold winter pinches them, what shall I say to their naked shoulders, or to their shoeless feet, if I get nothing for myself? Shall I hid them wait the return of spring? Expectate cicadas. Meton.—Grasshoppers here stand for the time of year when they chirp, i. e. spring.

70. Dissemble, &c.] q. d. Dissemble as you please your sense of my deserts for what's past; nay, though you say nothing of the rest of my good services, what, if I had not been entirely devoted to you and your interest, would have become of your marriage? You know full well, that if I had not supplied your place, your wife, finding you impotent and debilitated, would have destroyed the marriage-writings—tabulas (see sat x. l. 336, and note): nay, she was actually upon the brink of signing fresh articles with another (signabat)—but I prevented it, by my assiduous services on your behalf.

Metiris pretio, quod, ni tibi deditus essem, Devotusque cliens, uxor tua virgo maneret? Scis certe quibus ista modis, quam sæpe rogâris, Et quæ pollicitus: fugientem sæpe puellam Amplexu rapui; tabulas quoque ruperat, et jam 75 Signabat : totâ vix hoc ego nocte redemi, Te plorante foris. Testis mihi lectulus, et tu. Ad quem pervenit lecti sonus, et dominæ vox. Instabile, ac dirimi cœptum, et jam pene solutum Conjugium in multis domibus servavit adulter. 80 Quo te circumagas? quæ prima, aut ultima ponas? Nullum ergo meritum est, ingrate ac perfide, nullum, Quo tibi filiolus, vel filia nascitur ex me ? Tollis enim, et libris actorum spargere gaudes Argumenta viri. Foribus suspende coronas ; 85 Jam pater es: dedimus quod famæ opponere possis. Jura parentis habes; propter me scriberis hæres: Legatum omne capis, nec non et dulce caducum. Commoda præterea junguntur multa caducis,

The whole of this passage is to set forth the dreadful debauchery and profligacy of the times, when men, of Virro's character, could marry young women, liberorum procreandorum gratia, as it was expressed in the marriage-writings, and then, to save their state of debility from being known, to prevail on their wives to throw themselves into the arms of adulterers, that they might be gotten with child, and thus prevent also the dissolution of the marriage-contract for the husband's impotency, by which they would have lost the wife's fortune, which, after the divorce, she might give to another. The 79th and 80th lines speak the frequency of such horrid deeds. Barrenness and impotency were causes of divorce among the Romans.

74. The flying girl.] Virro's young wife, who often attempted to elope, and was as often stopped by the blandishments of Nævolus.

See sat. ii. 59, and note.

75. Broken the tables.] Cancelled the marriage-contract, written on thin tablets of wood, by breaking them. See sat. ii. 58, note 2.

81. Whither, &c.] Circumago is to turn round, or about, and here intimates the situation of a person surrounded with difficulties, as Virro is supposed to be by Nævolus, so as not to be able to answer his arguments, or, as we say in English, not to know which way to turn himself, or where to begin his defence.

84. You bring them up.] See Ainsw. Tollo, No. 4.

— Books of the acts.] The public registers, in which, by an ordinance of Servius Tullius, all children were to be set down, together with their names and time of their birth.

85. Arguments of a man.] Though the child be mine, yet, being born of your wife, it is registered as yours, and thus becomes an aragument of your manhood.

Price do you reckon it, that, unless I had been to you a resigned,
And a devoted client, your wife would remain a virgin?
You certainly know by what methods—how often you asked those things,

And what you promised: how often the flying girl

I caught in my embrace; she had broken the tables, and now

Was signing. I hardly redeemed this in a whole night,

You weeping without-doors: the bed is my witness, and thou,

Who wast thyself ear-witness of every circumstance.

Unstable wedlock, and begun to be broken off, and almost dissolved,

An adulterer, in many houses, has preserved.

80

Whither can you turn?—what can you place first or last?

Is it therefore no merit, ungrateful and perfidious, none,

That a little son or a daughter is born to you by me?

For you bring them up, and in the books of the acts you delight to publish

Arguments of a man. Suspend garlands at your doors— 85
You are now a father: I have given what you may oppose to report.
You have the rights of a parent: by my means you are written heir,
You receive all the legacy: not to say some sweet windfall.

Moreover many conveniences are joined to windfalls,

85. Suspend garlands, &c.] This was usual on all festal occasions, and particularly on the birth of children.

86. I have given, &c.] As I have occasioned your being reputed a father, I have conferred that upon you which will stop the mouth of all scandalous reports concerning your impotency. Dedimus (synec.) for dedi; or dedimus may be meant to apply to the wife as well as Nævolus, who together had brought all this to pass.

87. Written heir, &c.] If a legacy were left to a single man, it was void by the Papian law; and if to a married man having no children, he could take but a part of it, the rest fell to the public treasury; but if the legatee had children, he took the whole.

88. Windfall.] Caducum was a legacy left upon condition, as of a man's having children, or the like: on failure of which it fell to some person whom the testator had substituted heir—i. e. the person appointed heir, in case of the failure of the condition, in the room of the first legatee.—This was something like what we call a windfall.—Metaph. from fruit blown off a tree by the wind—figuratively, a lucky chance, some estate, or profit unexpectedly come to one. Phillips.

89. Many conveniences, &c.] Added to this, you will be entitled to many convenient privileges if I should have three children by your wife, for they will all pass for yours.—The justrium liberorum exempted a man from being a guardian, a situation of much trouble, (see Kennett, Antiq. Rom. book III. c. 133.) a priority in offices, and a treble proportion of corn (see ib. c. 30.) on its monthly distribution. These, and other conveniences, are joined—junguntur—i.e. are to be reckoned, as annexed to the contingencies which accrue to the man who has three children.

90

105

Si numerum, si tres implevero .-

- P. Justa doloris.

Nævole, causa tui : contra tamen ille quid affert ?

N. Negligit, atque alium bipedem sibi quærit asellum. Hæc soli commissa tibi celare memento, Et tacitus nostra intra te fige querelas; Nam res mortifera est inimicus pumice lævis. 95 Qui modo secretum commiserat, ardet, et odit : Tanquam prodiderim quicquid scio: sumere ferrum, Fuste aperire caput, candelam apponere valvis Non dubitat. Nec contemnas, aut despicias, quod His opibus nunquam cara est annona veneni. 100 Ergo occulta teges, ut curia Martis Athenis.

P. O Corydon, Corydon, secretum divitis ullum Esse putas? servi ut taceant, jumenta loquentur, Et canis, et postes, et marmora: claude fenestras. Vela tegant rimas, junge ostia, tollito lumen

E medio, taceant omnes, prope nemo recumbat:

This was where the parents lived in Rome: if they lived elsewhere in Italy, they were to have five children-if in any of the Roman provinces, seven; otherwise they could not claim the advantages of the jus trium liberorum.

In all this seemingly serious remonstrance of Nævolus with Virro, the old and impotent debauchee, Juvenal most seriously lashes all such characters as are here described, with which it is plain that Rome at that time abounded.

90. The cause, &c.] The poet here interrupts Nævolus, by observing that, to be sure, his complaints were just; and then, by means of Nævolus, to carry on his satire against such characters as Virro's, he demands what answer Virro could make to all this.

92. He neglects, &c.] The poet here shews the true spirit and temper of these wretches towards the drudges of their infamous pursuits and pleasures. When they begin to be importunate for money, and upbraid them with their services, they cast them off, and, on the least surmise of their revealing what has passed, will not scruple to assassinate them.

Another two-legged ass.] i. e. Another poor drudge, who, like me, will be fool enough to be in the situation in which I have been.

95. Smooth with pumice, &c.] These effeminate wretches, in order to make their skins smooth, rubbed themselves with a pumicestone, to take off the hair .- By this periphrasis Nævolus describes such as Virro, whose means, as well as inclination, to revenge, would make them dangerous enemies, if provoked.

96. He who lately, &c.] Virro, who made me privy to his secret practices, is full of fear lest I should discover them, and thereforeburns with anger and hatred against me, almost as much as if I had betrayed him-therefore take care that you don't reveal what I have

If I should fill up the number, the number three .-

Juv. The cause of your grief, Nævolus,

90

Is just. But what does he bring against it?-

NEV. He neglects me, and seeks another two legged ass for himself. Remember to conceal these things committed to you alone,

And silent fix within thee my complaints;

For an enemy, smooth with pumice-stone, is a deadly thing. 95 He who lately committed the secret, burns, and hates,

As if I had betray'd whatever I know: to take the sword, To open my head with a club, to put a candle to my doors,

He doubts not. Neither contemn nor despise, that, To these riches, the provision of poison is never dear,

100

Therefore you conceal secrets, as the court of Mars at Athens.

Juv. O Corydon, Corydon, think you there is any secret Of a rich man? if the servants should be silent, the cattle will speak, And the dog, and the posts, and the marbles: shut the windows, Let curtains cover the chinks, close the doors, take the light Out of the way, let all be silent, let nobody lie near; said, for he will stick at nothing to be revenged. See sat. iii. 1. 49-52, and 113.

99. Neither contemn, &c.] Don't make light of what I am going to say; but such rich men as Virro, if offended, never think they buy poison too dear to gratify their revenge.

101. Conceal secrets, &c.] q.d. Therefore one is forced to be as secret as the Areopagus. The judges of this court gave their suffrages by night, and in silence, by characters and alphabetical letters; and it was a capital crime to divulge the votes by which their sentence was past. See Areopagus. Ainsw.
102. O Corydon, &c.] Juvenal humorously styles Nævolus, this paramour of old Virro, Corydon, in allusion to Virg. Ecl. ii. 1, 2.

- Think you, &c.] Do you think that any thing which a man does, who is rich enough to have a number of servants, can be kept secret? If it can't be proved that the servants have been blabbing, yet every thing will be known by some means or other, however unlikely, or remote from our apprehension.

103. The cattle, &c.] By this and the following hyperbolical expressions, is held forth the nature of guilt, which, however secretly incurred, will yet, some how or other, especially in persons of high stations, come to be known. So the prophet Habakkuk, speaking of those who build fine houses for themselves by rapine and destruction, says, "The stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out "of the timber shall answer it." Ch. ii. 9-11.

A like sentiment occurs, Eccl. x. 20.

105. Take the light, &c.] That nobody may see what is doing.

106. Let all be silent.] Every thing hushed into midnight silence. Some read clament here, but surely taceant best agrees with the rest of the passage.

VOL. I.

Quod tamen ad cantum galli facit ille secundi, Proximus ante diem caupo sciet, audiet et quæ Finxerunt pariter librarius, archimagiri, Carptores: quod enim dubitant componere crimen In dominos? quoties rumoribus ulciscuntur Baltea? nec deerit, qui te per compita quærat Nolentem, et miseram vinosus inebriet aurem. Illos ergo roges, quicquid paulo ante petebas A nobis. Taceant illi, sed prodere malunt Arcanum, quam subrepti potare Falerni, Pro populo facieus quantum Laufella bibebat.

110

115

107. What he does, &c.] What the rich man does in secret, under the darkness and covert of the night, will yet be known before it is quite day. Holyday has a long note on the crowing of the cock, to which I refer the reader.—Juvenal seems to be the best commentator on this cantum galli secundi, and directs us to understand it of the season just before the day breaks—ante diem, l. 108; intimating the small space of time between the act and the knowledge of it. We often meet with mention of the different times of cock-crowing, to mark different periods between midnight and daybreak. Comp. Mark xiv. 30, 72, with Mark xv. 1.

Shakespeare marks an early season, after midnight, by "the first "cock." I Hen. IV. act ii. scene i. It is certain, however, that cocks crow, earlier or later, at different times of the year.—See

Hor. lib. i. sat. i. l. 10.

108. The next vintuer.] The taverns at Rome were not only places of public resort, but, like our coffee-houses, the marts for news of all kinds. These were opened very early, and probably were the resort of servants in great families, before their lords were stirring.

109. The steward. Librarius signifies a book-writer, a transcriber—also a keeper of books of accounts.—As this is the occupation of the steward in a great family, I have yet therefore so rendered it.

- Master-cooks.] Or head-cooks, from Gr. aggos, the principal or chief, and waysiges, a cook.

--- Carvers.] Captores—these were also servants in great families, whose occupation it was to help to set the dishes on the table, and then to carve for the company. See sat. v. 120—4.

We are to suppose these head servants of a rich family getting together at the tavern to take a morning whet, and there inventing lies against their master.

111. Straps. Baltea—belts, or straps made of leather, with which the masters corrected their slaves—in revenge for which, there was nothing which the slaves would not invent against their masters.

112. The streets.] Compitum denotes a cross-way, or street where several ways meet; here the country people met together to

Yet what he does at the crowing of the second cock, The next vintner will know before day, and will hear what The steward, the master-cooks, and carvers have together Invented: for what crime do they hesitate to frame against 110 -Their masters? how often are straps revenged By rumours? Nor will there fail one who will seek thee thro' the streets Unwilling, and, smelling of wine, will inebriate your wretched ear. Therefore you should ask them, what a little before you sought From me : let them be silent : but they had rather betray 115 A secret, than drink of stolen Falernan, keep their wakes after they had finished their husbandry. See sat. xv. l. 42, and note. The greatest concourse of people being in such places, the fellow, here mentioned, was most likely to find somebody to tell his tale to.

As much as Laufella, sacrificing for the people, drank.

113. Unwilling.] i. e. However unwilling you may be to listen to

- Smelling of wine.] Vinosus.-Some drunken fellow will think it a good frolick to find you out, and attack you in the street. Comp. sat. iii. 278.

--- Will inebriate, &c.] The ear is metaphorically said to drink the sounds which are poured into it. PROPERT. eleg. vi. lib. iii.

- Suspensis auribus ista bibam.

And Hor. ode xiii. lib. ii.

Densum humeris bibit aure vulgus.

When the ear is filled and overcharged with impertinent discourse, it is said to be inebriated. The French say of a talkative person, il m'enyvre de son caquet.

114. Ask them, &c.] My being silent will do you little service, unless you could silence these slanderers .- Enjoin these to silence, as just now you did me.

116. Stolen Falernan.] Filched from their masters, and therefore the more delicious. See Prov. ix. 17.

117. Laufella.] A priestess of Vesta, who in celebrating the rites of the Bona Dea, together with the women worshippers, drank herself into drunken fury. See sat. vi. 1. 313-20. Some read Saufeia.

- Sacrificing. The verb facio, to do, standing singly, in this connexion, has always this sense. VIRG. Ecl. iii. 77.

Cum faciam vitula pro frugibus, ipse venito.

The word sacra is understood.

So operari, Virg. Geor. i. 339.—Lætis operatus in herbisr—i.

sacris operatus. See sat. xii. 1. 92.
So the Greek פּגלש, and the Heb. אשים—which, in their primary sense, signify to make or do, are also used for sacrificing.

| Vivendum recte, cum propter plurima, tum his | |
|---|------|
| Præcipue causis, ut linguas mancipiorum | |
| Contemnas: nam lingua mali pars pessima servi. | 120 |
| Deterior tamen hic, qui liber non erit, illis | |
| Quorum animas et farre suo custodit, et ære- | |
| N. Idcirco, ut possim linguam contemuere servi, | |
| Utile consilium modo, sed commune, dedisti: | |
| Nunc mihi quid suades post damnum temporis, et spes | 125 |
| Deceptas? FESTINAT ENIM DECURRERE VELOX. | |
| FLOSCULUS ANGUSTÆ, MISERÆQUE BREVISSIMA VITÆ | |
| Portio: dum bibimus, dum serta, unguenta, puellas | |
| Poscimus, obrepit non intellecta senectus. | |
| P. Ne trepida: nunquam pathicus tibi deerit amicus, | -130 |
| Stantibus et salvis his collibus: undique ad illos | , |
| Conveniunt, et carpentis et navibus, omnes | |
| Qui digito scalpunt uno caput: altera major | |
| Spes superest, tu tantum erucis imprime dentem. | |
| N. Hæc exempla para felicibus: at mea Clotho | 135 |
| E Lachesis gaudent, si pascitur inguine venter. | |
| | |

118. Live rightly.] This is the best way to silence slander, or to despise its malice. See 1 Pet. ii. 12; and iii. 16.

119. Tongues of slaves. Comp. l. 109-11.

O parvi, nostrique Lares, quos thure minuto,

121. He is worse, &c.] The tattling of servants about the master's secrets is bad enough; but worse still is that master, who by delivering himself up to the practice of secret vices, puts himself into the power of his servants, and lives under a perpetual bondage, for fear they should discover what they know of him.

122. Whose lives, &c.] i. e. Whom he maintains and nourishes.

—— Corn.] Far—signifies all manner of corn, meal, or flour; and here may stand for the food in general which the slaves ate, and for which the master paid, as for their clothes and other necessaries.

123. Næv. Therefore, &c.] The poet represents Nævolus as confessing the goodness of his advice in general, but wants to know what is to be done in his particular case, who is growing old under loss of time and disappointment.

126. The hasty little flower, &c.] See Is. xl. 6, 7. James i. 10, 11, 1. Pet. i. 24.

128. Chaplets, ointments, &c.] In the midst of all our festal mirth.

See Hor. lib. ii. ode vii. l. 6--8. Wisd. ii. 1--9.

130. Fear not, &c.] The poet, in his answer to what Nævolus had said, aggravates, if possible, his satire on the lascivious Romans, by representing Rome as the common rendezvous of the lewd and effeminate from all parts; not only of Italy, but of regions beyond the seas: the former are represented as coming in vehicles by land; the latter, in ships by sea.

130

One should live rightly, as on many accounts, so especially For these causes, that the tongues of slaves you may Contemn: for the tongue is the worst part of a bad servant.

120
Yet he is worse, who shall not be free, than those Whose lives he preserves, both with his corn and money.

Næv. Therefore, that I may despise the tongue of a servant, You have just now given useful, but common counsel:

Now what do you persuade me to, after loss of time and hopes 125

Deceived? for THE HASTY LITTLE FLOWER, AND VERY SHORT

PORTION

OF A MISERABLE LIFE, HASTENS TO PASS AWAY: While we drink, and chaplets, ointments, girls, We call for, old age, unperceived creeps upon us.

Juv. Fear not: you will never want a pathic friend,
These hills standing and safe: from every where to them
There come together, in chariots and ships, all
Who scratch the head with one finger: another greater Hope remains, do thou only impress thy tooth on rockets.

Nav. Prepare these examples for the fortunate; but my Clotho 135 And Lachesis rejoice, if I barely live by my vices. O my little Lares! whom with small frankincense, 131. These hills.] Rome was built on seven hills, which here are put for Rome itself.

132. There come.] Conveniunt-come together, convene, meet.

133. Who scratch, &c.] By this periphrasis are described those unnatural wretches, who dressed their heads like women; and who, if they wanted to scratch them, gently introduced one finger only, for fear of discomposing their hair. This phrase was proverbial, to denote such characters.

133-4. Greater hope, &c.] Fear not, Nævolus, of meeting with a pathic friend, more generous than Virro, among these strangers—only qualify thyself for their pleasures by stimulating food.

Am. 799. calls them erucas salaces—by which we are to suppose it an herb which had a quality of invigorating and promoting the powers of lust.—"Only eat rockets," says Juvenal, "and fear not success:"—a most bitter sarcasm on the visitants of Rome above mentioned, l. 132, 3.

135. Prepare, &c.] i. e. Tell these things to happier men than I am—for my part, my destinies would have me contented with a very little, glad if I can pick up enough to keep me from starving.

135—6. Clotho—Lachesis.] These, with Atropos, are the names of the three fates, or destinies, which the poets feigned to preside over the lives and deaths of mankind.

137. Little Lares, &c.] The Lares, or household gods, were

Aut farre, et tenui soleo exornare corona, Quando ego figam aliquid, quo sit mihi tuta senectus A tegete et baculo ? viginti millia fœnus, 140 Pignoribus positis? argenti vascula puri, Sed quæ Fabricius censor notet; et duo fortes De grege Mœsorum, qui me cervice locatâ Securum jubeant clamoso insistere circo? Sit mihi præterea curvus cælator, et alter, 145 Qui multas facies pingat cito :- sufficient hæc. Quando ego pauper ero, votum miserabile, nec spes His saltem; nam cum pro me Fortuna rogatur, Affigit ceras illà de nave petitas, small images, placed on the hearth near the fire-side, and were supposed to be the protectors of the house and family; they were crowned with small chaplets, and cakes made of pounded frankincense, meal, and the like, were offered to them. See Hor. lib. iii. ode xxiii. ad fin. It was the custom to fix with wax their vows to the knees of these images, in order to have them granted. See sat. x. 55, and note. Therefore Nævolus is supposed to say-When shall I fix any thing-that is, present a petition, from a favourable answer to which I may be secured, in my old age, from rags, and begging with a crutch? Teges is literally a coarse rug-and baculum, a stick or walking staff.

140. Twenty thousand interest. When shall I be so rich as to receive annually twenty thousand sesterces, that is, twenty sestertiums (about 1561. 5s.) for interest on money lent? The numeral nouns viginti millia must be understood to apply to sestertii, here; for applying them to sestertia, would make a sum too enormous to agree with the rest of what Nævolus is wishing for.

141. Pledges set down.] i. e. With good and sufficient sureties, set or written down in the bond, to secure the principal.

142. Fabricius. It is said of C. Fabricius, that when he was censor, he accused Corn. Ruffinus of prodigality, and removed him from the senate, because he found, in his house, silver vessels of ten pounds weight, esteeming it as a notorious example of luxury. Nævolus is wishing for vascula, small vessels of pure silver, but not so small as to be below the notice of Fabricius.

143. Herd of the Masi. For Masia, see Ainsw. The Masians were remarkably robust, and therefore in great request at Rome, as chairmen or carriers of the sedans and litters in which the fine people rode along the streets. See sat. i. l. 64, and note.

Shoulders. Cervix-lit: means the hinder part of the neck -the neck-and sometimes, as we may suppose here, the shoulders. Ainsw. Nævolus, among other things, is wishing to afford two stout Mæsians, who, by putting their shoulders under him, might carry him through the crowd at the circus, to some safe and convenient situation, where he could enjoy the diversion, at his ease and quiet, amid all the tumult and uproar of the place.

Or with meal, and a slender chaplet, I use to adorn,
When shall I fix any thing, by which old age may be secure to me
From the rug and staff?—Twenty thousand interest

140
With pledges set down?—little vessels of pure silver,
But which the censor Fabricius would note—and two strong ones
From the herd of the Mæsi, who, with shoulders placed [under me]

May command me to stand secure in the noisy circus?—

Let me have besides a skilful engraver—and another

Who can quickly paint many faces:—these things will suffice.

Since I shall be poor, a wretched wish!—Nor is there hope

Only for these; for when Fortune is petitioned for me,

She affixes wax, fetched from that ship,

Where on their brawny shoulders mounted high, While the brave youth their various manhood try, I would the thrones of emperors defy.

HARVEY.

144. May command.] Jubeant—may command, or order—implying the superior strength and power of these fellows, who could so make their way, as to place their master wherever they chose.

145. Skilful engraver.] Curvus signifies crooked—that hath turnings and windings—and this latter, in a mental sense, denotes cunning, which we often find used for skilful, in our older English. See Exod. xxxviii. 23, and several other places of our translation of the Bible. Some are for understanding curvus, as descriptive of the bending or stooping attitude, in which the engraver works at his business.

146. Quickly paint, &c.] An artist, who can soon paint a number of portraits, which I may hang about my house, as pictures of some great men who were my ancestors. Comp. sat. viii. l. 2, and note.

— These things will suffice, &c.] All this would just serve to make me as rich and happy as I could wish. Here I think this part of the subject comes to a period. Nævolus then recollects himself—his evil destiny occurs to his mind, and he breaks out in an exclamation on the vanity and misery of his wishes, since poverty and want are the only lot which he can expect.—This seems to unite the four last lines, with the utmost consistency and propriety.

147. A wretched wish, &c.] Since (quando) I am doomed to poverty by my destinies, (comp. l. 135, and note,) my wretched wishes, and all my hopes, are vain, and I cannot expect even what I have now been wishing for, much less any thing farther.

149. She affixes wax, &c.] i. e. Fortune is deaf to all petitions on my behalf. This is expressed by an allusion to the story of Ulysses, who, when sailing by Sicily, and being forewarned of the danger of listening to the Sirens on the coast, stopped his mariners' ears with wax, and so sailed by them securely. He commanded that he himself should be tied to the main-mast. Homer, Odyss. xii.

Thus end the complaints of this miserable wretch! The poet has,

Quæ Siculos cantus effugit remige surdo.

150

under the character of Nævolus, strongly marked the odiousness of vice, and has set forth the bitter consequences which attend those who look for happiness and prosperity in the ways of wickedness, that they will fail in their expectations, and, at last, be consigned to the sad refuge of unavailing petitions for deliverance from that state

Which escaped the Sicilian songe, with a deaf rower.

150

of irremediable want and misery, into which they have plunged themselves, and which they find, too late, to be the sad, but just recompense of their obstinate perseverance in evil-doing.

We may see this alarming and awful subject adequately treated in the sublime words of heavenly wisdom, Prov. i. 24-31.

END OF THE NINTH SATIRE.

END OF THE FIRST VOLUME.

113

as a land the second of the second and the second of the s

with the introduction of the state of the st

Let us the second of the secon

THE PROPERTY OF A STATE OF A

CONTRACT CHILD DITT SUCCESSION.

NEW AND LITERAL

TRANSLATION

OF

JUVENAL & PERSIUS;

WITH

Copious Explanatory Notes,

BY-WHICH

THESE DIFFICULT SATIRISTS ARE RENDERED EASY
AND FAMILIAR TO THE READER.

IN TWO VOLUMES.

ΒY

THE REV. M. MADAN.

Ardet....Instat....Aperte jugulat.

SCAL. IN JUV.

VOL. II.

London:

Printed by J. F. Dove, St. John's Square,

BOR WILLIAM BAYNES, 54, PATERNOSTER ROW.

1814.

NET IND LITTEE IL

. STEEDWATT

., F

JUVENAL & PERSIUS;

1117

Copious Fried mineral Linker,

HOIHW .

THESE DISECTIONS OF THE SECTION OF TAKEN

TWO YOUNES

73

THE REV. WADAN.

delt in Land blank to

SCH. IN JUN

VOL. II.

: new Jun I

2 2 2 1 1 1 1 1 2 2 2 2 4 4 4 4 4 4 4

-LUR WIERIAM HALLO LAND TONE TONE TO

DECIMI

JUNII JUVENALIS

AQUINATIS

SATIRÆ.

THE

SATIRES

OF

JUVENAL,

JUNII JUVENALIS

AQUINATIS

SATIRÆ.

SATIRA X.

ARGUMENT.

The Poet's design in this Satire, which deservedly holds the first rank among all performances of the kind, is to represent the various wishes and desires of mankind, and to show the folly of them. He mentions riches, honours, eloquence, fame for martial achievements, long life, and beauty, and gives instances of

OMNIBUS in terris, quæ sunt a Gadibus usque Auroram et Gangem, pauci dignoscere possunt Vera bona, atque illis multum diversa, remotâ Erroris nebulâ: quid enim ratione timemus, Aut cupimus? quid tam dextro pede concipis, ut te Conatûs non pæniteat, votique peracti? Evertêre domos totas optantibus ipsis

* This Satire has been always admired; bishop Burnet goes so far, as to recommend it (together with Persius) to the serious perusal and practice of the divines in his diocese, as the best common places for their sermons, as the store houses and magazines of moral virtues, from whence they may draw out, as they have occasion, all manner of assistance for the accomplishment of a virtuous life. The tenth Satire (says Crusius in his Lives of the Roman Poets) is inimitable for the excellence of its morality, and sublime sentiments.

Line. 1. Gades.] An island without the Streights of Gibraltar in the south part of Spain, divided from the continent by a small creek.

Now called Cadiz, by corruption Cales.

2. The East.] Aurora, (quasi aurea hora, from the golden-coloured splendour of day-break,) metonym. the East.

-Ganges. The greatest river in the East, dividing India into two parts.

3-4. Cloud of error.] That veil of darkness and ignorance which is over the human mind, and hides from it, as it were, the faculty of perceiving our real and best interests, as distinguished from those which are deceitful and imaginary.

4. What, with reason, &c.] According to the rules of right and sober reason.

THE

SATIRES

01

JUVENAL.

SATIRE X*.

their having proved ruinous to the possessors of them. He concludes, therefore, that we should leave it to the gods to make a choice for us, they knowing what is most for our good. All that we can safely ask, is, health of body and mind: possessed of these, we have enough to make us happy, and therefore it is not much matter what we want besides.

In all lands, which are from Gades to
The East and the Ganges, few can distinguish True good things, and those greatly different from them, the cloud
Of error removed: for what, with reason do we fear,
Or desire? what do you contrive so prosperously, that you
May not repent of your endeavour, and of your accomplished wish?
The easy gods have overturned whole houses, themselves

5. So prosperously, &c.] Tam dextro pede—on so prosperous a footing—with ever such hope and prospect of success, that you may not repent your endeavour (conatus) and pains to accomplish it, and of your desires and wishes being fully completed and answered?—votique peracti.

The right and left were ominous—dexter-a-um, therefore, signifies lucky, favourable, fortunate, propitious—as lævus-a-um, unlucky, inconvenient, unseasonable.

Tam dextro pede is equivalent to tam fausto—secundo—prospero

I pede fausto—go on and prosper. Hor. lib. ii. epist. ii. l. 37.

So Virg. Æn. viii. l. 302.

Et nos et tua dexter adi pede sacra secundo.

" Approach us, and thy sacred rites, with thy favourable presence."-

Pes—lit. a foot, that member of the body on which we stand—sometimes means the foundation of any thing—a plot for building;—so, in a moral sense, those conceptions and contrivances of the mind, which are the foundations of human action, on which men build for profit or happiness:—this seems to be its meaning here.

7. The easy gods, &c.] The gods, by yielding to the prayers

Dî faciles. Nocitura togâ, nocitura petuntur Militià. Torrens dicendi copia multis, Et sua mortifera est facundia. Viribus ille 10 Confisus periit, admirandisque lacertis. Sed plures nimià congesta pecunia curà Strangulat, et cuncta exsuperans patrimonia census, Quanto delphinis balæna Britannica major. Temporibus diris igitur, jussuque Neronis, 15 Longinum, et magnos Sene cæprædivitis hortos Clausit, et egregias Lateranorum obsidet ædes Tota cohors: rarus venit in cœnacula miles. Pauca licet portes argenti vascula puri, Nocte iter ingressus, gladium contumque timebis, 20 Et motæ ad lunam trepidabis arundinis umbram. CANTABIT VACUUS CORAM LATRONE VIATOR.

and wishes of mankind, have often occasioned their ruin, by granting such things, as, in the end, proved hurtful. So that, in truth, men, by wishing for what appeared to them desirable, have, in effect, themselves wished their own destruction.

8. By the gown, &c.] Toga here being opposed to militia, may allude to the gown worn by the senators and magistrates of Rome; and so, by meton. signify their civil offices in the government of the state.—q. d. Many have wished for a share in the government and administration of civil affairs, others for high rank and posts of command in the army, each of which have been attended with damage to those who have eagerly sought after them.

9. A fluent copiousness, &c.] Many covet a great degree of eloquence; but how fatal has this proved to possessors of it! Witness Demosthenes and Cicero, who both came to violent deaths;—the former driven, by the malice of his enemies, to poison hinself; the latter slain by order of M. Antony. See Keysler's Travels,

vol. ii. p. 342, note.

10. To his strength, &c.] Alluding to Milo, the famous wrestler, born at Croton, in Italy, who presuming too much on his great strength, would try whether he could not rend asunder a tree which was cleft as it grew in the forest; it yielded at first to his violence, but it closed presently again, and, catching his hands, held him till the wolves devoured him.

12. Destroys.] Lit. strangles. Met. ruins, destroys.

The poet is here shewing, that of all things which prove ruinous to the possessors, money, and especially an overgrown fortune, is one of the most fatal—and yet, with what care is this heaped together!

13. Exceeding, &c.] i. e. Beyond the rate of a common fortune.

14. A British avhale.] A whale found in the British seas.

16. Longinus.] Cassius Longinus, put to death by Nero: his pretended crime was, that he had in his chamber, an image of Cassius, one of Julius Casar's murderers; but that which really made him a delinquent, was his great wealth, which the emperor seized.

Wishing it. Things hurtful by the gown, hurtful by warfare, Are asked: a fluent copiousness of speech to many And their own eloquence is deadly .- He, to his strength 10 Trusting, and to his wonderful arms, perished. But money, heap'd together with too much care, destroys More, and an income exceeding all patrimonies, As much as a British whale is greater than dolphins. Therefore in direful times, and by the command of Nero, A whole troop Longinus, and the large gardens of wealthy Seneca, Surrounded, and besieged the stately buildings of the Laterani-The soldier seldom comes into a garret. Tho' you should carry a few small vessels of pure silver, Going on a journey by night, you will fear the sword and the pole, And tremble at the shadow of a reed moved, by moon-light. AN EMPTY TRAVELLER WILL SING BEFORE A ROBBER.

16. Seneca, &c.] Tutor to Nero—supposed to be one in Piso's conspiracy, but put to death for his great riches. Sylvanus the tribune, by order of Nero, surrounded Seneca's magnificent villa, near Rome, with a troop of soldiers, and then sent in a centurion to acquaint him with the emperor's orders, that he should put himself to death. On the receipt of this, he opened the veins of his arms and legs, then was put into a hot bath, but this not finishing him, he drank poison.

17. Surrounded. Beset-encompassed.

— Laterani.] Plautius Lateranus had a sumptuous palace, in which he was beset by order of Nero, and killed so suddenly, by Thurius the tribune, that he had not a moment's time allowed him to take leave of his children and family. He had been designed consul-take leave of his children and family. He had been designed consul.

18. The soldier, &c.] Cænaculum signifies a place to sup in—an upper chamber—also a garret, a cockloft in the top of the house, commonly let to poor people, the inhabitants of which were too poor to run any risk of the emperor's sending soldiers, to murder them for what they have.

19. Tho' you should carry, &c.] Though not so rich as to become an object of the emperor's avarice and cruelty, yet you can't travel by night, with the paltry charge of a little silver plate, without fear of your life from robbers, who may either stab you with a sword, or knowledge with a bludgeer in order to rob your knock you down with a bludgeon, in order to rob you.

20. Pole.] Contus signifies a long pole of staff—also a weapon, wherewith they used to fight beasts upon the stage. It is probable that the robbers about Rome armed themselves with these, as ours, about London, arm themselves with large sticks or bludgeons.

21. Tremble, &c.] They are alarmed at the least appearance of any thing moving near them, even the trembling and nodding of a bulrush, when its shadow appears by moonlight.

22. Empty traveller, &c. Having nothing to lose, he has nothing to fear, and therefore has nothing to interrupt his jollity as he travels along, though in the presence of a robber.

Prima fere vota, et cunctis notissima templis, Divitiæ ut crescant, ut opes ; ut maxima toto Nostra sit arca foro: sed nulla aconita bibuntur 25 Fictilibus: tunc illa time, cum pocula sumes Gemmata, et lato Setinum ardebit in auro. Jamne igitur laudas, quod de sapientibus alter Ridebat, quoties a limine moverat unum Protuleratque pedem: flebat contrarius alter? 30 Sed facilis cuivis rigidi censura cachinni : Mirandum est, unde ille oculis suffecerit humor. Perpetuo risu pulmonem agitare solebat Democritus, quanquam non essent urbibus illis Prætexta, et trabeæ, fasces, lectica, tribunal. 35 Quid, si videsset Prætorem in curribus altis

23. Temples, &c.] Where people go to make prayers to the gods, and to implore the fulfilment of their desires and wishes.

25. The greatest, &c.] The forum, or market-place, at Rome, was the place where much money-business was transacted, and where money-lenders and borrowers met together; and he that was richest, and had most to lend, was sure to make the greatest sums by interest on his money, and perhaps was most respected. Hence the poet may be understood to mean, that it was the chief wish of most people to be richer than others.—Or, he may here allude to the chests of money belonging to the senators, and other rich men, which were laid up for safety in some of the buildings about the forum, as the temple of Castor, and others. Comp. sat. xiv. l. 258, 9.

- No poisons, &c.] The poorer sort of people might drink out of their coarse cups of earthen ware, without any fear of being poisoned for what they had.

26. Them.] Poisons.

27. Set with gems.] See sat. v. l. 37-45. This was a mark of great riches.

Setine wine.] So called from Setia, a city of Campania. It was a most delicious wine, preferred by Augustus, and the succeeding emperors, to all other. Glows with a fine red colour, and sparkles in the cup.

- Wide gold.] Large golden cups.

Those who were rich enough to afford these things, might indeed reasonably fear being poisoned by somebody, in order to get their estates.

28. Do you approve.] Laudas—praise or commend his conduct; for while these philosophers lived, many accounted them mad.

One of the wise men, &c.] Meaning Democritus of Abdera, who always laughed, because he believed our actions to be folly: whereas Herachtus of Ephesus, the other of the wise men here alluded to, always wept, because he thought them to be misery.

Commonly the first things prayed for, and most known at all temples, Are, that riches may increase, and wealth; that our chest may be The greatest in the whole forum: but no poisons are drunk 25 From earthen ware: then fear them, when you take cups Set with gems, and Setine wine shall sparkle in wide gold. Now therefore do you approve, that one of the wise men Laugh'd, as oft as from the threshold he had moved, and Brought forward one foot; the other contrary, wept? 30 But the censure of a severe laugh is easy to any one, The wonder is whence that moisture could suffice for his eyes. With perpetual laughter, Democritus used to agitate His lungs, tho' there were not, in those cities, Senatorial gowns, robes, rods, a litter, a tribunal. 35 What, if he had seen the pretor, in high chariots

29. As oft as, &c.] Whenever he went out of his house—as oft as he stepped over his threshold.

30. The other.] Heraclitus. See note on line 28.

31. The censure, &c.] It is easy enough to find matter for severe laughter. Rigidi here, as an epithet to laughter, seems to denote that sort of censorious sneer which condemns and censures, at the same time that it derides the follies of mankind.

32. The wonder is, &c.] How Heraclitus could find tears enough to express his grief at human wretchedness, guilt, and woe, the occasions of it are so frequent.

34. In those cities.] As there is at Rome.—The poet here satirizes the ridiculous appendages and ensigns of office, which were so coveted and esteemed by the Romans, as if they could convey happiness to the wearers.—He would also insinuate, that these things were made ridiculous by the conduct of the possessors of them.

35. Senatorial gozons.] Pratexta—so called because they were faced and bordered with purple—worn by the patricians and senators.

-- Robes.] Trabeæ-robes worn by kings, consuls, and au-gure.

Roman magistrates, with an axe bound up in the middle of them, so as to appear at the top. These were ensigns of their official power to punish crimes, either by scourging or death.

- Alitter.] Lectica. See sat. i. 32, note.

— Tribunal. A seat in the forum, built by Romulus, in the form of a half-moon, where the judges sat, who had jurisdiction over the highest offences: at the upper part was placed the sella curulis, in which the pretor sat.

36. The pretor, &c.] He describes and derides the figure which the pretor made, when presiding at the Circensian games.

___ In high chariots.] In a triumphal car, which was gilt, and Extantem, et medio sublimem in pulvere circi, In tunica Jovis, et pictæ Sarrana ferentem Ex humeris aulæa togæ, magnæque coronæ Tantum orbem, quanto cervix non sufficit ulla? Quippe tenet sudans hanc publicus, et sibi Consul Ne placeat, curru scrvus portatur eodem. Da nunc et volucrem, sceptro quæ surgit eburno, Illinc cornicines, hinc præcedentia longi Agminis officia, et niveos ad fræna Quirites, 45 Defossa in loculis quos sportula fecit amicos. Tunc quoque materiam risûs invenit ad omnes Occursus hominum; cujus prudentia monstrat, Summos posse viros, et magna exempla daturos, Vervecum in patrià, crassoque sub aëre nasci. 50 drawn by four white horses—perhaps, by the plur. curribus, we may understand that he had several for different occasions.

37. Dust of the circus.] He stood, by the height and sublimity of his situation, fully exposed to the dust, which the chariots and horses of the racers raised.

38. Goat of Jove.] In a triumphal habit; for those who triumphed wore a tunic, or garment, which, at other times, was kept in the temple of Jupiter.

38—9. The Tyrian tapestry, &c.] Sarra, (from Heb. 77,) a name of Tyre, where hangings and tapestry were made, as also where the fish was caught, from whence the purple was taken with which they were dyed. This must be a very heavy material for a gown, especially as it was also embroidered with divers colours; and such a garment must be very cumbersome to the wearer, as it hung from his shoulders.

40. So large an orb, &c.] Add to this, a great heavy crown, the circumference of which was so large and thick, that no neck could be strong enough to avoid bending under it.

41. A sweating officer.] Publicus signifies some official servant, in some public office about the prætor on these occasions, who sat by him in the chariot, in order to assist in bearing up the crown, the weight of which made him sweat with holding it up.

Lest the consul, &c.] The ancients had an institution, that a slave should ride in the same chariot when a consul triumphed, and should admonish him to know himself, lest he should be too vain.

This was done with regard to the pretor at the Circensian games, who, as we have seen above, appeared like a victorious consul, with the habit and equipage of triumph—Juvenal seems to use the word consul, here, on that account.

43. Add the bird, &c.] Among other ensigns of triumph, the prætor, on the above occasion, held an ivory rod, or sceptre, in his hand, with the figure of an eagle, with wings expanded, as if rising for flight, on the top of it.

Standing forth, and sublime in the midst of the dust of the circus, In the coat of Jove, and bearing from his shoulders the Tyrian Tapestry of an embroider'd gown, and of a great crown So large an orb, as no neck is sufficient for? 40 For a sweating officer holds this, and lest the consul should Please himself, a slave is carry'd in the same chariot. Now add the bird which rises on the ivory sceptre, There the trumpeters, here the preceding offices of a long Train, and the snowy citizens at his bridles, 45 Whom the sportula, buried in his coffers, has made his friends. Then also he found matter of laughter at all Meetings of men; whose prudence shews, That great men, and those about to give great examples, May be born in the country of blockheads, and under thick air.

44. The trumpeters. Or blowers of the horn, or cornet. These, with the tubicines, which latter seem included here under the general name of cornicines, always attended the camp, and, on the return of the conqueror, preceded the triumphal chariot, sounding their instruments.

— The preceding offices, &c.] Officium signifies, sometimes, a solemn attendance on some public occasion, as on marriages, funerals, triumphs, &c. (see sat. ii. l. 132.) Here it denotes, that the pretor was attended, on this occasion, by a long train of his friends and dependents, who came to grace the solemnity, by marching in procession before his chariot.

45. Snowy citizens, &c.] Many of the citizens, as was usual at triumphs, dressed in white robes, walking by the side of the horses, and holding the bridles.

46. The sportula.] The dole-basket. See sat. i. l. 95.

--- Buried in his coffers.] The meaning of this passage seems to be, that these citizens appeared, and gave their attendance, not from any real value for him, but for what they could get.

He is supposed to have great wealth hidden, or buried, in his coffers, which this piece of attention was calculated to fetch out, in charity to his poor fellow-citizens that attended him on this occasion.—

q. d. All this formed a scene which would have made Democritus skake his sides with laughing. Comp. 1. 3, 34.

47. Then also he.] Democritus in his time.

47—8. At all meetings of men. Every time he met people as he walked about—or, in every company he met with.

48. Whose prudence.] Wisdom, discernment of right and wrong.

50. Of blockheads.] Vervex—hiterally signifies a wether-sheep, but was proverbially used for a stupid person: as we use the word sheep-ish, and sheepishness, in something like the same sense, to denote an awkward, stupid shyness.

The poet therefore means, a country of stupid fellows. Plaut.

Pers. act II. has-Ain' yero vervecum caput?

Ridebat curas, necnon et gaudia vulgi, Interdum et lachrymas; cum fortunæ ipse minaci Mandaret laqueum, mediumque ostenderet unguem. Ergo supervacua hæc aut perniciosa petuntur, Propter quæ fas est genua incerare Deorum.

Quosdam præcipitat subjecta potentia magnæ Invidiæ; mergit longa atque insignis honorum Pagina; descendunt statuæ, restemque sequintur; Ipsas deinde rotas bigarum impacta securis Cædit, et immeritis franguntur crura caballis. Jam strident ignes, jam follibus atque caminis Ardet adoratum populo caput, et crepat ingens Sejanus: deinde ex facie toto orbe secundâ

60

55

50. Thick air.] Democritus was born at Abdera, a city of Thrace, where the air, which was foggy and thick, was supposed to make the inhabitants dull and stupid.

So Horace speaking of Alexander the Great, as a critic of little or no discernment in literature, says—Bocotum in crasso jurares aere natum. Epist. i. lib. ii. l. 244. By which, as by many other testimonies, we find that the inhabitants of Bocotia were stigmatized also in the same manner. Hence Bocoticum ingenium was a phrase for dulness and stupidity.

52: Present a halter, &c.] Mandare laqueum alicui, was a phrase made use of to signify the utmost contempt and indifference, like sending a halter to a person, as if to bid him hang himself. Democritus is here represented in this light, as continually laughing at the cares and joys of the general herd, and as himself treating with scorn the frowns of adverse fortune.

53. His middle nail.] i. e. His middle finger, and point at her in derision. To hold out the middle finger, the rest being contracted, and bent downwards, was an act of great contempt; like pointing at a person among us. This mark of contempt is very ancient. See

Is. lviii. 9.

54. Therefore, &c.] It follows, therefore, from the example of Democritus, who was happy without the things which people so anxiously seek after, and petition the gods for, that they are superfluous and unnecessary.—It likewise follows, that they are injurious, because they expose people to the fears and dangers of adverse fortune; whereas Democritus, who had them not, could set the frowns of fortune at defiance, possessing a mind which carried him above worldly cares or fears.

55. Lawful.] Fas signifies that which is permitted, therefore lawful to do.

To cover with was, &c.] It was the manner of the ancients, when they made their vows to the gods, to write them on paper, (or waxen tables,) seal them up, and, with wax, fasten them to the knees of the images of the gods, or to the thighs, that being supposed the seat of mercy. When their desires were

60

He derided the cares, and also the joys of the vulgar, And sometimes their tears: when himself could present a halter To threat'ning fortune, and shew his middle nail.

Therefore, these (are) unprofitable, or pernicious things, (which) are ask'd,

For which it is lawful to cover with wax the knees of the gods.

Power, subject to great envy, precipitates some,

A long and famous catalogue of honours overwhelms,

Statues descend and they follow the rope;

Then, the driven axe, the very wheels of two-horse cars

Demolishes, and the legs of the undeserving horses are broken.

Now the fires roar, now with bellows and stoves,

The head adored by the people burns, and the great Sejanus Cracks: then, from the second face in the whole world, granted, they took away the paper, tore it, and offered to the gods what they had promised. See sat. ix. l. 139. The gods permit us to ask, but the consequences of having our petitions answered are often fatal. Comp. l. 7, 8.

56. Precipitates some.] viz Into ruin and destruction.

57. Catalogue, &c.] Pagina, in its proper and literal sense, signifies a page of a book, but here alludes to a plate, or table of brass, fixed before the statues of eminent persons, and containing all the titles and honours of him whose statue it was.

Overwhelms.] With ruin, by exposing them to the envy and malice of those, in whose power and inclination it may be to disgrace and destroy them.

58 Statues descend.] Are pulled down.

— Follow the rope.] With which the populace (set on work by a notion of doing what would please the emperor, who had disgraced his prime-minister Sejanus) first pulled down all the statues of Sejanus, of which there were many set up in Rome, and then dragged them with ropes about the streets.

59. The driven axe.] Impacta—driven—forced against.—There were some statues of Sejanus, by which he was represented on horse-back; others in a triumphal car, drawn by two horses (comp. sat. viii. 1.3); all which were broken to pieces, the very chariots and horses demolished, and, if made of brass. carried to the fire and melted.

60. Undeserving horses, &c.] Their spite against Sejanus, who could alone deserve their indignation, carried them to such fury, as to demolish even the most innocent appendages to his state and dignity.

61. The fires roar, &c.] From the force of the bellows, in the forges prepared for melting the brass of the statues.

___ Stoves.] Or furnaces.

62. The head adored, &c.] Of Sejanus, once the darling of the people, who once worshipped him as a god.

63. Gracks.] By the violence of the flames.

—— Second face, &c.] Sejanus was so favoured by Tiberius, that he raised him to the highest dignity next to himself.

Fiunt urccoli, pelves, sartago, patellæ. Pone domi lauros, duc in Capitolia magnum 65 Cretatumque bovem : Sejanus ducitur unco Spectandus: gaudent omnes: qua labra? quis illi Vultus erat? nunquam (si quid mihi credis) amavi Hunc hominem: sed quo cecidit sub crimine? quisnam Delator? quibus indiciis? quo teste probavit? Nil horum: verbosa et grandis epistola venit A Capreis-bene habet; nil plus interrogo: sed quid Turba Remi? Sequitur fortunam, ut semper, et odit Damnatos. Idem populus, si Nurscia Thusco Favisset, si oppressa foret secura senectus

75

70

64. Water-pots, &c. The meanest household utensils are made from the brass, which once conferred the highest honour on Sejanus, when representing him in the form of statues.

65. Laurels, &c.] Here the poet shews the malicious triumph of envy. It was customary to adorn the doors of their houses with crowns, or garlands of laurel, on any public occasion of joy-such was the fall of poor Sejanus to his enemies.

66. A white bull. The beasts sacrificed to the celestial gods were white (cretatum, here, lit. chalked, whited); those to the infernal gods were black. This offering to Jupiter, in his temple on the capitol hill, must be supposed to have been by way of thanksgiving for the fall of Scianus. A lively mark of the hatred and prejudice which the people had conceived against him, on his disgrace—as it follows-

- Dragg'd by a hook, &c. To the Scalæ Gemoniæ, and then thrown into the Tiber.

67. To be look'd upon. As a spectacle of contempt to the whole eity.

--- All rejoice. At his disgrace and misery the people triumph. - "What lips," &c. The poet here supposes a language to be holden, which is very natural for a prejudiced, ignorant people to utter on such an occasion, as they saw him dragging along by the hands of the executioner, or perhaps as they viewed him lying dead on the bank of the Tiber, (comp. 1. 86.) before his body was thrown

What a blubber-lipp'd ill-looking fellow! say they.

69. What crime, &c. What was charged against him (says one) that he should be brought to this.

70. Informer. Delator—his accuser to the emperor.

--- What discoveries, &c.] Of the fact, and its circumstances? and on what evidence hath he (i. e. the informer) proved the crime alleged against him?

71. " Nothing of these." | Says the answerer-i. e. there was no regular form of conviction.

- A great epistle, &c. It, some how or other, came to the 65

Are made water-pots, basons, a frying-pan, platters. Place laurels at your house, lead to the capitol a large

To be look'd upon: all rejoice: "what lips? what a countenance

" He had? I never (if you at all believe me,) loved

White bull; Sejanus is dragged by a hook

"This man :- but under what crime did he fall? who was "The informer? from what discoveries? by what witness hath he prov'd it?"

" Nothing of these: a verbose and great epistle came from

- " Capreæ:"-" It is very well, I ask no more: but what did
- "The mob of Remus?"—" It follows fortune, as always, and hates
- The condemn'd-The same people, if Nurscia had favour'd

"The Tuscan-if the secure old age of the prince had been 75 ears of Tiberius, that his favourite Sejanus had a design upon the empire, on which he wrote a long pompous epistle to the senate, who had Sejanus seized, and sentenced him to be punished, as is mentioned above: viz. that he should be put to death, then have an hook fixed in him, be dragged through the streets of Rome to the Scalæ Gemoniæ, and thrown at last into the Tiber.

Tiberius was at that time at Capreæ, an island on the coast of Naples, about twenty-five miles south of that city, indulging in all manner of excess and debauchery.

The Scalæ Gemoniæ was a place, appointed either for torturing criminals, or for exposing their bodies after execution. Some derive the name Gemoniæ from one Gemonius, who was first executed there; others from gemere, to groan, because the place rang with the groans and complaints of those who were put to death. It was on the hill Aventinus, and there were several steps led up to it, whence the place was called Scalæ Gemoniæ. The dead bodies of those who died under the hands of the executioner were dragged thither by an iron hook, and after they had been some time exposed to public view, were thrown into the Tiber. See Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. xii. p. 214, note f.

73. Mob of Remus, &c.] i. e. The people in general; so called because descended from Romulus and Remus. How did they behave? says the querist.

— "It follows fortune," &c.] It is answered—The common people behaved as they always do, by changing with the fortune of the condemned, and treating them with the utmost spite.

74. Nurscia, &c.] Sejanus was a Tuscan, born at Volscinium, where the goddess Nurscia, the same as fortune, was worshipped.—

q. d. If fortune had favoured Sejanus.

75. Secure old age, &c.] If Tiberius had thought himself secure from any plot against him, and therefore had taken no measures to prevent the consequences of it.

Principis, hâc ipsâ Sejanum diceret horâ
Augustum. Jampridem, ex quo suffragia nulli
Vendimus, effudit curas—nam qui dabat olim
Imperium, fasces, legiones, omnia, nunc se
Continet, atque duas tantum res anxius optat,
Panem et Circeuses. Perituros audio multos:
Nil dubium: magna est fornacula: pallidulus mî
Brutidius meus ad Martis fuit obvius aram—
Quam timeo, victus ne pœnas exigat Ajax,
Ut male defensus! curramus præcipites, et,
Dum jacet in ripâ, calcemus Cæsaris hostem.

80

85

76. Oppress'd.] By death, from the hands of Sejanus.—q. d. If the plot of Sejanus had succeeded, and the emperor dethroned.

---- Would, Sc.] That very populace who now treat the poor fallen Sejanus so ill, would have made him emperor, and have changed his name to the imperial title of Augustus.

This very hour. I Instead of his being put to death, dragged by the hook, and insulted by the populace, they would, at that very hour, have been heaping the highest honours upon him. So precarious, fluctuating, and uncertain, is the favour of the multitude!

77. We sell, &c.] The poorer sort of plebeians used to sell their votes to the candidates for public offices, before Julius Cæsar took from them the right of electing their magistrates. Since that time

78. It.] The populace.

Done with cares.] Effudit, literally, has poured out, as a person empties a vessel by pouring out the liquor. The poet means, that since the right of electing their magistrates was taken from them, and they could no longer sell their votes, they had parted with all their cares about the state.

For it.] That same populace.

Which once gave, &c.] By their having the right of election, conferred public offices on whom they chose.

79. Authority.] Power, or government: this alludes to the great offices in the state, which were once elective by the people.

Fasces.] Consuls and pretors, who had the fasces carried before them.

Legions.] Military prefectures.

All things.] All elective offices.

79-80. Itself refrains.] From concerns of state.

80. Only wishes, &c.] Now they care for nothing else, at least with any anxiety, but for bread to be distributed to them as usual, by the command of the emperor, to satisfy their hunger; and the games in the circus to divert them: of these last the populace were very fond. See sat. xi. 53.

81. "I hear many," &c.] Here begins a fresh discourse on the occasion and circumstances of the time.

80

85

- " Oppressed, would, in this very hour, have called Sejanus,
- 46 Augustus. Long ago, ever since we sell our suffrages
- "To none, it has done with cares; for it, which once gave
- "Authority, fasces, legions, all things, now itself
- "Refrains, and anxious only wishes for two things,
- "Bread and the Cercenses."-" I hear many are about to perish"-
- " No doubt: the furnace is large: my friend Brutidius
- " Met me, a little pale, at the altar of Mars"-
- How I fear lest Ajax conquer'd should exact punishment,
- " As defended badly !-let us run headlong, and, while he
- " Lies on the bank, trample on the enemy of Cæsar.

I hear, says one of the standers by, that Sejanus is not the only one who is to suffer; a good many more will be cut off, as well as he, about this plot.—No doubt, says the other—

· 82. The furnace is large.] And made to hold more statues for melting than those of Sejanus. See l. 61.

82—3. Brutidius met me.] This was a rhetorician and famous historian, a great friend of Sejanus, and therefore was horridly frightened, lest it should be his turn next to be apprehended and put to death, as concerned in the conspiracy.

84. Lest Ajak conquer'd, &c.] Alluding to the story of Ajax, who, being overcome in his dispute with Ulysses about the armour of Achilles, (see Ovid, Met. lib. xiii.) went mad, fell upon man and beast, and afterwards destroyed himself.

These seem to be the words of Brutidius, expressing his fears of being suspected to have been concerned in the conspiracy with Sejanus; and, in order to wipe off all imputation of the kind, not only from himself, but from the person he is speaking to, he advises, that no time should be lost, but that they should hasten to the place where the corpse of Sejanus was exposed, and do some act which might be construed into an abhorrence of Sejanus, and consequently into a zeal for the honour and service of the emperor.

"How I fear," says Brutidius, looking aghast, "lest the emperor, thinking his cause not cordially espoused, and that he was badly defended, should wreak his vengeance on such as he suspects to have been too remiss, and, like the furious Ajax, when overcome —like another victus Ajax—destroy all that he takes to be his enemies, as Ajax destroyed the sheep and oxen, when he ran mad on his defeat, taking them for the Grecians on whom he vowed revenge." Other expositions are given to this place, but I think this suits best with 1. 82, 3.

85. Let us run, &c.] As precipitately, as fast as we can—let us lose no time to avoid the emperor's suspicion of our favouring Sejanus, and wreaking his vengeance upon us.

While he.] Sejanus—i. e. his corpse.

.

86. Lies on the bank.] i. e. Exposed on the bank, before it is thrown into the river Tiber.

Sed videant servi, ne quis neget, et pavidum in jus Cervice astrictà dominum trahat. Hi sermones Tunc de Sejano: secreta hæc murmura vulgi. Visne salutari sicut Sejanus? habere 90 Tantundem, atque illi summas donare curules? Illum exercitibus præponere? tutor haberi Principis Augustâ Caprearum in rupe sedentis Cum grege Chaldæo? vis certe pila, cohortes, Egregios equites, et castra domestica-quidni Hac cupias? et qui nolunt occidere quenquam, Posse volunt. Sed quæ præclara, et prospera tanti, Cum rebus lætis par sit mensura malorum? Hujus, qui trahitur, prætextam sumere mavis, An Fidenarum, Gabiorumque esse potestas,

100

SAT. X.

86. Trample, &c.] Set our feet upon his corpse, to shew our indignation against this supposed enemy of Tiberius.

87. Let the slaves see, &c. That they may be witnesses for their masters, in case these should be accused of not having done it, or of having shewn the least respect to Sejanus, and so be brought under the displeasure of the emperor, and hurried to judgment.

88. " Shackled neck."] Those who were dragged to punishment, had a chain or halter fastened about the neck: this was the condition of some when brought to trial; so, among us, felons, and others accused of capital offences, are usually brought to their trial with gyves or fetters upon their legs.

88-9. The discourses, &c. 7 Thus do the people talk about poor Sejanus, the remembrance of his greatness being all passed and gone, and his shameful sufferings looked upon with the most ignominious contempt.

90. Saluted, &c. You, who think happiness to consist in the favour of the prince, in great power, and high preferment, what think you?-do you now wish to occupy the place which Sejanus once held-to have as much respect paid you-to accumulate as many riches-to, have as many preferments and places of honour in your gift ?

91. Chief chairs, &c.] Summas curules.—The poet speaks in the plural number, as each of the great officers of Rome had a chair of state, made of ivory, carved, and placed in a chariot-curru-in which they were wont to be carried to the senate; so the pretor had his sella curulis, in which he was carried to the forum, and there sat in judgment. See before, l. 35, n. No. 4. When an ædile was a person of senatorial dignity, he was called curulis, from the curule chair in which he was carried.

Summas curules, here, is used in a metonymical sense, like curule ebur, Hor. lib. i. epist. vi. l. 53, 4. to denote the chief offices in the state, which had all been in the disposal of the once-prosperous Sejanus. See the last n. ad fin.

92. Guardian, &c.] Who, in the absence of Tiberius, at his pa-

But let the slaves see, lest any should deny it, and drag into "Law their fearful master with shackled neck:" these were the Discourses then about Sejanus; these the secret murmurs of the vulgar.

Will you be saluted as Sejanus? have 90

As much - and give to one chief chairs of state-

Set another at the head of armies? be accounted guardian

Of a prince, sitting in the august rock of Capreæ,

With a Chaldsan band? you certainly would have javelins, cohorts, Choice horsemen, domestic tents. "Why should you not " Desire these things?" Even those who would not kill any one

Would be able. But what renowned and prosperous things are of so much Value, since to prosperity there may be an equal measure of evils? Had you rather take the robe of this man, who is dragg'd Along, or be the power of Fidenz, or Gabii, 100 lace on the rock at Capreæ, (see note on l. 71, 2, ad fin.) amidst a band of astrologers from Chaldaa, (who amused the prince with their pretended knowledge of the stars, and their government of human affairs,) governed all his affairs of state, and managed them, as a tutor or guardian manages the affairs of a youth under age. Thus high was Sejanus in the opinion and confidence of Tiberius-but do you envy him?

94. Javelins. Pila were a kind of javelins with which the Roman foot were armed: therefore the poet is here to be understood as saying to the person with whom he is supposed to discourse-44 You certainly wish to be an officer, and to have soldiers under " your command."

Cohorts. A cohort was a tenth part of a legion.

95. Domestic tents, &c. The castra domestica were composed of horse, who were the body-guards of the prince or pretor-hence called also prætoriani. These seem to have been something like our life-guards.

- " Why should you not," &c.] What harm, say you, is there in such a desire?- " I don't desire this for the sake of hurring or kill-"ing any body."-" Aye, that may be-but still, to know that such a thing may be in your power, upon occasion, gives you no small idea of self-importance."

97. What renowned, &c.] But, to consider coolly of the matter, what is there so valuable in dignity and prosperity, since, amid the enjoyment of them, they are attended with an equal measure of uneasiness, and when a fatal reverse, even in the securest and happiest moments, may be impending? the evil, therefore, may be said, at least, to counterbalance the good.

99. Of this man, &c. Of Sejanus. Had you rather be invested with his dignity?

100. The pocuer.] The magistrate of some little town, like Fi-VOL. 11. _

Et de mensurâ jus dicere, vasa minora
Frangere pannosus vacuis Ædilis Ulubris?
Ergo quid optandum foret, ignorâsse fateris
Sejanum: nam qui nimios optabat honores,
Et nimias poscebat opes, numerosa parabat
Excelsæ turris tabulata, unde altior esset
Casus, et impulsæ præceps immane ruinæ.

105

Quid Crassos, quid Pompeios evertit, et illum, Ad sua qui domitos deduxit flagra Quirites? Summus nempe locus, nullà non arte petitus, Magnaque niminibus vota exaudita malignis. Ad generum Cereris sine cæde et vulnere pauci Descendant reges, et siccà morte tyranni.

110

Eloquium ac famam Demosthenis, aut Ciceronio Incipit optare, et totis Quinquatribus optat, Quisquis adhuc uno partam colit asse Minervam, denæ, or Gabii. See sat. vi. l. 56, 7. Called in Italy-Podestà. Something like what we should call-a country justice.

115

102. A regged Ædile. I Pannosus signifies patched or ragged. The Ædile, in the burghs of Italy, was an officer who had jurisdiction over weights and measures, and if these were bad, he had authority to break them. He was an officer of low rank, and though, like all magistrates, he wore a gown, yet this having been delivered down from his predecessors, was old and ragged, very unlike the finerobe of Sejanus, and other chief magistrates at Rome. See Pers. sat. i. l. 130, and note.

- Empty Ulubra.] A small town of Campania, in Italy, very thinly inhabited. Comp. sat. iii. 1. 2.

103. Therefore, &c. In this, and the four following lines, the poet very finely applies what he has said, on the subject of Sejanus, to the main argument of this Satire; viz. that mortals are too short-sighted to see, and too ignorant to know, what is best for them, and therefore those things which are most coveted, often prove the most destructive; and the higher we rise, in the gratification of our wishes, the higher may we be raising the precipice from which we may fall.

107. Enforced ruin. Impulse ruine—into which he was driven, as it were, by the envy and malice of those enemies, which his greatness, power, and prosperity had created. Impulse—metaplicalluding to the violence with which a person is thrown, or pushed, from an high precipice. Immane—dreadful—immense—huge—great.

108. The Crassi.] M. Crassus making war upon the Parthians for the sake of plunder, Surena, general of the enemy, slew him, and cut off his head and his hand, which he carried into Armenia to his master.

The Pompieys.] Pompey the Great, being routed at the battle of Pharsalia, fled into Ægypt, where he was perfidiously slain.

And judge about a measure, and lesser vessels

Break, a ragged Ædile at empty Ulubræ?—

Therefore, what was to be wish'd for, you will confess Sejanus

To have been ignorant: for he who desired too many honours,

And sought too much wealth, was preparing numerous

Stories of an high tower, from whence his fall might be Higher, and the precipice of his enforced ruin be dreadful.

What overthrew the Crassi, the Pompeys, and him who Brought down the subdued Romans to his scourges?

Why truly, the chief place, sought by every art,

And great vows listen'd to by malignant gods.

To the son-in-law of Ceres, without slaughter and wound, few

For the eloquence and fame of Demosthenes, or of Cicero, He begins to wish, and does wish during the whole Quinquatria, 115 Whoever reveres Minerva, hitherto gotten for three farthings,

He left two sons, Cneius and Sextus; the first was defeated in a land battle in Spain, the other in a sea-fight on the coast of Sicily, We are not only to understand here Crassus and Pompey, but, by Crassos et Pompeios, plur. all such great men who have fallen by ill-fated ambition.

109. Brought down, &c.] i. e. Julius Cæsar, who, after he had obtained the sovereignty, partly by arms and violence, partly by art and intrigue, was publicly assassinated in the senate house, as a tyrant and enemy to the liberty of his country. His scourges—i. e. made them slaves, as it were, and subject to his will, liable to be treated in the most humiliating manner.

110. Chief filace.] The ambition of reigning absolutely. The poet here shows the fatal source of misery to the aspiring and ambitious; namely, a restless desire after greatness, so as to leave no stone unturned to come at it-nulla non arte, &c.

Kings descend, and tyrants by a dry death.

111. Great vows.] i. e. Wishes and prayers for greatness, honours, riches, &c.

—— By malignant gods—] Who, provoked by the unreasonable and foolish wishes of mortals, punish them, with accepting their vows, and with granting their desires. Comp. l. 7, 8.

112. Son-in-law of Ceres.] Pluto, the fabled god, and king of

112. Son-in-law of Ceres.] Pluto, the fabled god, and king of the infernal regions: he stole Proserpina, the daughter of Jupiter and Ceres, and carried her to his subterranean dominions.

The poet means here to say, that few of the great and successful ambitious die, without some violence committed upon them.

113. A dry death.]. Without bloodshed.

115. The whole, &c.] Minerva was the goddess of learning and eloquence; her festival was celebrated for five days, hence called Quinquatria—during this the school-boys had holidays.

116. Whoever reveres, &c.] The poor school-boy, who has got Quem sequitur custos angustæ vernula capsæ:

Eloquio sed uterque perit orator: utrumque
Largus et exundans letho dedit ingenii fous:
Ingenio manus est et cervix cæsa; nec unquam
Sanguine causidici maduerunt rostra pusilli.——
O fortunatam natam, me consule, Romam!
Antonî gladios potuit contemnere, si sic
Omnia dixisset: ridenda poëmata malo,
Quam te conspicuæ, divina Philippica, famæ,
Volveris a primâ quæ proxima. Sævus et illum
Exitus eripuit, quem mirabantur Athenæ
Torrentem, et pleni moderantem fræna theatri.
Dis ille adversis genitus, fatoque sinistro,
Quem pater ardentis massæ fuligine lippus,
A carbone et forcipibus, gladiosque parante as much learning as has cost him about three farthings; i. e. the merest young beginner at the lower end of the school.

117. A little slave, &c.] This is a natural image of little master going to shool, with a servant-boy to carry his satchel of books after him, and heightens the ridiculous idea of his coveting the eloquence of the great orators.

118. Each orator, &c.] See note on l. 9.—i. e. Both Demosthenes and Cicero. Demosthenes, to avoid the cruelty of Antipater, poisoned himself.

120. Hand and neck, &c.] Of Cicero, which were cut off by the emissaries of Antony, when they attacked and murdered him in his litter on the road. They, i.e. Tully's head and hand, were afterwards fixed up at the rostra, from whence he had spoken his Philippics, by order of Antony.

- Cut off by genius.] i. e. His capacity and powers of eloquence, which he used against Antony, brought this upon him.

121. Rostra.] A place in the forum, where lawyers and orators harangued. See Answ. Rostra, No. 2.—No weak lawyer, or pleader, could ever make himself of consequence enough to be in danger of any design against his life, by what he was capable of saying in public.

122. O fortunatam, &c.] Mr. Dryden renders this line:

Fortune fore-tun'd the dying notes of Rome, Till I, thy consul sole, consol'd thy doom.

And observes, that, "the Latin of this couplet is a verse of Tully's, " (in which he sets out the happiness of his own consulship) famous " for the vanity and ill poetry of it."

It is bad enough; but Mr. Dryden has made it still worse, by adding more jingles to it —However, to attempt translating it is ridiculous, because it disappoints the purpose of the passage, which is to give a sample of Tully's bad poetry in his own words.

123. If thus, &c.] q. d. If Tully had never written or spoken

Whom a little slave follows, the keeper of his narrow satchel: But each orator perish'd by eloquence; each A large and overflowing fountain of genius consigned to death. The hand and neck was cut off by genius; nor ever 120 Where rostra wet with the blood of a weak lawver. O fortunatam natam, me consule, Romam! He might have contemn'd the swords of Antony, if thus He had said all things. I like better laughable poems, Than thee, divine Philippic of conspicuous fame, 125 Who art roll'd up next from the first. Him also a cruel Death snatched away, whom Athens admired, Rapid, and moderating the reins of the full theatre. He was begotten, the gods adverse, and fate unpropitious, Whom his father, blear-eyed with the reek of a burning mass, 130 From coal and pincers, and from the anvil preparing better than this, he needed not to have dreaded any mischief to himself; he might have defied the swords which Antony employed against him.

124. Laughable poems.] Ridenda—ridiculous—that are only fit to be laughed at.

125. Divine Philippic.] Meaning Cicero's second Philippic, which, of all the fourteen orations which he made against Antony, was the most cutting and severe, and this probably cost him his life.

He called these orations Philippics, as he tells Atticus, because in the freedom and manner of his speech he imitated the Philippics (Φιλιππίκοι λογοι,) of Demosthenes, whose orations against Philip were so called.

126 Roll'd up, &c.] Volveris.—The books of the ancients were rolled up in volumes of paper or parchment—this famous Philippic stood second in the volume. See sat. xiv. 1. 102.

127. Athens admired. Demosthenes. See note on 1. 9.

128. Rapid.] Torrentem-his eloquence rapid and flowing, like the torrent of a river.

— Moderating—]. Or governing the full assembly of his hearers as he pleased, as a horse is governed and managed by a rein; so Demosthenes regulated and governed the minds of his auditory.

129. Gods adverse, &c.] It was a current notion among the ancients, that where people were unfortunate in their lives, the gods were displeased at their birth, and always took a part against them.

130. His father.] Demosthenes is said to have been the son of a blacksmith at Athens.

Of a burning mass. Large masses of iron, when red-hot ont of the forge, are very hurtful to the eyes of the workmen, from their great heat.

131. Goal and pincers, &c.] His father at first thought of bringing up his son Demosthenes to his own trade; but he took him from this, and put him to a rhetorician to be taught eloquence.

Incude, et luteo Vulcano ad rhetora misit.

Bellorum exuviæ, truncis affixa trophæis

Lorica, et fracta de casside buccula pendens,

Et curtum temone jugum, victæque triermis

Aplustre, et summo tristis captivus in arcu,

Humanis majora bonis creduntur: ad hæc se

Romanus, Graiusque ac Barbarus induperator

Erexit: causas discriminis atque laboris

Inde habuit. Tanto major famæ sitis est, quam

Virtutis: quis enim virtutem amplectitur ipsam,

Præmia si tollas? patriam tamen obruit olim

Gloria paucorum, et laudis, titulique cupido

Hæsuri saxis cinerum custodibus; ad quæ

132. Dirty Vulcan.] Vulcan was the fabled god of smiths, whose trade is very filthy and dirty. Sat. xiii. 1. 44, 5.

Discutienda valent sterilis mala robora ficûs,

133. Maimed trophies.] The trophy was a monument erected in memory of victory. The custom came from the Greeks, who, when they had routed their enemies, erected a tree, with all the branches cut off, on which they suspended the spoils of armour which they had taken from them, as well as other ensigns of victory: several of which the poet here enumerates; but as nothing was entire, the poet calls them maimed trophies.

134. A Beaver.] Buceula, from bucca, the cheek, seems to have been that part of armour which was fastened to the helmet, and came down over the cheeks, and fastened under the chin.

135. Beam.] Temo was the beam of the wain, or the draught-tree, whereon the yoke hung: by this the chariot was supported and conducted, while drawn by the yoke.

136. A sad captive, &c.] On the top of the triumphal arch, which was built upon these occasions, they made some wretched captive place himself, and there sit bemoaning his wretched fate, while the conquerors were exulting in their victory. So DRYDEN:

On whose high convex sits a captive foe, And sighing casts a mournful look below.

137. To be greater, &c.] Such is the folly of mankind, that these wretched trifles are looked upon, not only as bearing the highest value, but as something more than human.

For these &c.] Commanders of all nations have exerted themselves, through every scene of danger and fatigue, in order to get at these ensigns of fame and victory. Erexit se—hath roused himself to mighty deeds.

138. The Roman.] By the Roman, perhaps, we may understand Julius Cæsar, M. Antony and others, who, while they were greedily following military glory, were preparing ruin for themselves, as well as many sad calamities to their country.

- Greek.] Here Miltiades and Themistocles, the two Athe-

Swords, and from dirty Vulcan, sent to a rhetorician.

The spoils of war, to maimed trophies a breast-plate
Fixed, and a beaver hanging from a broken helmet,
A yoke deprived of its beam, the flag of a conquer'd
Three-oar'd vessel, and a sad captive at the top of an arch,
Are believed to be greater than human goods: for these
The Roman, Greek, and Barbarian commander, hath Exerted himself: the causes of danger and labour hath had From thence. So much greater is the thirst of fame than
Of Virtue: for WHO EMBRACES EVEN VIRTUE ITSELF,

IF YOU TAKE AWAY ITS REWARDS ?---yet formerly the glory of a

Has ruined a country, and the lust of praise, and of

A title to be fixed to the stones, the keepers of their ashes; which, To throw down, the evil strength of a barren fig-tree is able, 145

nian generals, may be alluded to, who, while they were catching at military fame, perished miserably.

138. Barbarian. A name which the Greeks and Romans were fond of fixing on all but themselves.

Here may be meant Hannibal, the great Carthaginian general, who, while he vexed the Romans with continual wars, occasioned the overthrow of his country, and his own miserable death.

139. Causes of danger, &c.] These things have been the grand motives of their exertions, in the very face of difficulty, and even of death.

140. So much greater, &c.] i. e. All would be great; how few wish to be good!

142. If you take away, &c.] Who is so disinterestedly virtuous, as to love and embrace virtue, merely for the sake of being and doing good? indeed, who would be virtuous at all, unless the fame and reputation of being so, brought something with them to gratify the pride and vanity of the human heart? Virtue seldom walks forth, saith one, without vanity at her side.

The glory of a few. As Marius, Sylla, Pompey, Antony, &c.-q. d. Many instances have there been, where a few men, in search of fame, and of the gratification of their ambition, have been the destroyers of their country.

144. A title, &c.] An inscription to be put on their monuments, in which their remains were deposited—this has often proved a motive of ambition, and has urged men to the most dangerous, as well as mischievous exploits.

145. Evil strength, &c.] There was a sort of wild fig-tree, which grew about walls and other buildings, which, by spreading and running its roots under them, and shooting its branches into the joinings of them, in length of time weakened and destroyed them, as we often see done by ivy among us. See Pers. sat. i. l. 25. Evil here is to be understood in the sense of hurtful, mischievous.

A poor motive to fame, then, is a stone monument with a fine in-

Quandoquidem data sunt ipsis quoque fata sepulchris. Expende Hannibalem: quot libras in duce summo Invenies? hic cst, quem non capit Africa Mauro Perfusa oceano, Niloque admota tepenti. Rursus ad Æthiopum populos, aliosque elephantos Additur imperiis Hispania: Pyrenæum Transilit: opposuit natura Alpemque nivemque: Diduxit scopulos, et montem rupit aceto. Jam tenet Italiam, tamen ultra pergere tendit : Actum, inquit, nihil est, nisi Pœno milite portas 155 Frangimus, et mediâ vexillum pono Suburrâ. O qualis facies, et quali digna tabellà, scription, which, in length of time, it will be in the power of a wild fig-tree to demolish.

146. Fates are given, &c.] Even sepulchres themselves must yield to fate, and, consequently, the fame and glory, which they are meant to preserve; must perish with them-how vain then the pursuit, how vain the happiness, which has no other motive or foundation!

147. Weigh Hannibal. Place him in the scale of human greatness

-i. e. consider him well, as a great man.

Hannibal was a valiant and politic Carthaginian commander; he gave the Romans several signal overthrows, particularly at Cannæ, a village of Apulia, in the kingdom of Naples.

— How many pounds, &c.] Alas, how little is left of him! a few inconsiderable ashes! which may be contained within the compass of an urn, though, when living, Africa itself was too small for him! So DRYDEN:

> Great Hannibal within the balance lay, And tell how many pounds his ashes weigh, Whom Afric was not able to contain -

148. Wash'd, &c.] By the Moorish sea. The poet describes the situation of Africa, the third part of the globe then known. From Asia it is separated by the Nile; on the west it is washed by the Atlantic ocean, which beats upon the shores of Æthiopia and Libya, joining to which were the people of Mauritania, or Moors, conquered by Hannibal.

149. Warm Nile. 1 Made so by the great heat of the sun, it lying under the torrid zone.

150. Again.] Rursus—i. e. insuper, moreover—as sat. vi. 154.

Other elephants.] Other countries where elephants are bred; meaning, here, Libya and Mauritania, which were conquered by Hau-

151. Spain is added, &c.] To the empires he had conquered, he added Spain, yet was not content.

--- The Pyrenean.] The Pyrences, as they are now called-that immense range of high mountains which separate France from Spain. Since fates are given also to sepulchres themselves.

Weigh Hannibal—how many pounds will you find in that Great General? this is he, whom Africa wash'd by the Moorish Sea, and adjoining to the warm Nile, does not contain:
Again, to the people of Æthiopia, and to other elephants,
Spain is added to his empires: the Pyrenean
He passes: nature opposed both Alps and snow:
He severed rocks, and rent the mountain with vinegar.

He now possesses Italy, yet endeavours to go farther:
"Nothing is done, says he," "unless, with the Punic army, we break

"The gates, and I place a banner in the midst of Suburra."
O what a face! and worthy of what a picture!

152. Nature opposed, &c.] For nature, as Pliny says, raised up the high mountains of the Alps, as a wall, to defend Italy from the incursions of the Barbarians. These are constantly covered with

153. Severed rocks, &c.] By immense dint of labour and perseverance he cut a way in the rocks, sufficient for his men, horses, and elephants to pass.

With vinegar.] Livy says, that in order to open and enlarge the way above mentioned, large trees were felled, and piled round the rock, and set on fire; the wind blowing hard, a fierce flame soon broke out, so that the rock glowed like the coals with which it was heated. Then Hannibal caused a great quantity of vinegar to be poured upon the rock, which piercing into the veins of it, which were now cracked by the intense heat of the fire, calcined and softened it, so that he could the more easily cut the path through it.

Polybius says nothing of this vinegar, and therefore many reject this incident as fabulous.

Pliny mentions one extraordinary quality of vinegar, viz. its being able to break rocks and stones which have been heated by fire. But, admitting this, it seems difficult to conceive how Hannibal could procure a quantity of vinegar sufficient for such a purpose, in so mountainous and barren a country. See Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. xvii. p. 597, 8.

154. Possesses Italy, &c.] i. e. Arrives there—comes into Italy—which for sixteen years together he wasted and destroyed, beating the Roman troops wherever he met them; but he was not content with this, he determined to go further, and take Rome.

155. Nothing is done, &c.] This is the language of an ambitious mind, which esteemed all that had been done as nothing, unless Rome itself were conquered.

Punic army.] The Pœni (quasi Phœni a Phœnicibus unde orti) were a people of Africa, near Carthage; but being united to them, Pœni is used, per synec. for the Carthaginians in general.

156. Suburra.] One of the principal streets in Rome. See before, sat. iii. 5, note.

157. What a face!] What a figure was he all this while; how you. II.

Cum Gætula ducem portaret bellua luscum!

Exitus ergo quis est? 6 gloria! vincitur idem

Nempe, et in exilium præceps fugit, atque ibi magnus

Mirandusque cliens sedet ad prætoria regis,

Donec Bithyno libeat vigilare tyranno.

Finem animæ, quæ res humanas miscuit olim,

Non gladii, non saxa dabant, non tela, sed ille

Cannarum vindex, et tanti sanguinis ultor,

Annulus. I, demens, et sævas curre per Alpes, Ut pueris placeas, et declamatio fias.

Unus Pellæo juveni non sufficit orbis: Æstuat infelix angusto limite mundi, Ut Gyaræ clausus scopulis, parvâque Seripho.

170

curious a picture would he have made, mounted on his elephant, and exhibiting his one-eyed countenance above the rest?

When Hannibal came into Etruria (Tuscany) the river Arno was swelled to a great height, insomuch that it occasioned the loss of many of his men and beasts, particularly of the elephants, of which the only one remaining was that on which Hannibal was mounted. Here, by the damps and fatigue, he lost one of his eyes.

158. Getulian beast.] i. e. The elephant. The Getulians were a people of Libya, bordering on Mauritania, where many elephants were found.

159. His exit.] What was the end of all his exploits, as well as of himself?

- O glory!] Alas, what is it all!

160. Is subdued, &c.] He was at last routed by Scipio, and forced to fly for refuge to Prusias king of Bithynia.

161. Client.] Cliens signifies a retainer—a dependent—one who has put himself under the protection of a patron, to whom he pays all honour and observance.

This great and wonderful man was thus reduced, after all his glorious deeds.

- Sits, &c.] Like a poor and mean dependent.

162. Till it might please, &c.] The word tyrant is not always to be taken, as among us it usually is, in a bad sense. It was used in old time in a good sense for a king, or sovereign.

To awake.] When he came to prefer his petition for protection, he could gain no admission till the king's sleeping hours were over; Hannibal was now in too abject and mean a condition to demand an audience, or even to expect one, till the king was perfectly at leisure.

It is the custom of the eastern princes to sleep about the middle of the day (2 Sam. iv. 5.) when the heats are intense, and none dare disturb them. This was the occasion of the deaths of many in our time at Calcutta, where, when taken by the Subah Surajah Dowlah, a number of gentlemen were-put into a place called the Black-hole, where the air was so confined, that it suffocated the greatest part of

When the Getulian beast carried the one-eyed general!

Then what his exit? O glory! for this same man

Is subdued, and flies headlong into banishment, and there a great, 160

And much to be admired client, sits at the palace of the king,

Till it might please the Bithynian tyrant to awake.

The end of that life, which once disturbed human affairs,

Nor swords, nor stones, nor darts gave, but that Redresser of Cannæ, and avenger of so much blood,

A ring.—Go, madman, and run over the savage Alps,

That you may please boys, and become a declamation.

One world did not suffice the Pellæan youth; He chases unhappy in the narrow limit of the world, As one shut up in the rocks of Gyaras, or small Seriphus.

170

them: but they could not be released while their lives might have been saved; for, being put there by order of the Subah, who alone could order their release, the officers of that prince only answered their cries for deliverance, by saying, that the Subah was lain down to sleep, and nobody dared to wake him.

163. Disturbed human affairs.] Miscuit-disordered-put into confusion-a great part of the world, by his ambitious exploits and undertakings.

166. A ring, &c.] When he overthrew the Romans at Cannæ, he took above three bushels of gold rings from the dead bodies, which, says the poet, were fully revenged by his ring, which he always carried about him, and in which he concealed a dose of poison; so that when the Romans sent to Prusias to deliver him up, Hannibal, seeing there were no hopes of safety, took the poison and died. Thus fell that great man, who had so often escaped the swords, and the darts, and stones hurled by the enemy, as well as the dangers of the horrid rocks and precipices of the Alps! See sat. ii. 155, and note 2.

- Go madman.] For such wert thou, and such are all who build their greatness and happiness on military fame.

167. Please boys, &c.] The boys in the schools used to be exercised in making and speaking declamations, the subjects of which were usually taken from histories of famous men. A fine end, truly, of Hannibal's Alpine expedition, to become the subject of a school-boy's theme or declamation! well worthy so much labour, fatigue, and danger!

168. Pellean youth.] Alexander the Great, born at Pella, a city of Macedon, died of a fever, occasioned by drinking to excess at Babylon. He had lamented that, after having conquered almost all the East, all Greece, and, in short, the greatest part of the world, there were 'no more worlds for him to conquer. He died three hundred and twenty-three years before Christ, at. thirty-three.

170. Gyarai.] One of the Cyclades (islands in the Ægean sea) whereto criminals were banished: it was full of rocks. Sat. i. 73.

— Scriphus.] See sat. vi. 563, and note.

Cum tamen a figulis munitam intraverat urbem,
Sarcophago contentus erat. Mors sola fatetur
Quantula sint hominum corpuscula. Creditur olim
Velificatus Athos, et quicquid Gracia mendax
Andet in historia; constratum classibus isdem,
Suppositumque rotis solidum mare: credimus altos
Defecisse amnes, epotaque flumina Medo
Prandente, et madidis cantat quæ Sostratus alis.
Ille tamen qualis rediit Salamine relicta,
In Corum atque Eurum solitus sævire flagellis
Barbarus, Æolio nunquam hoc in carcere passos,
Ipsum compedibus qui viuxerat Ennosigæum?
Afitius id sane, quod non et stigmate dignum

171. The city.] Babylon.

Brickmakers. This city was surrounded by a wall of brick, of an immense height and thickness. Ov. Met. iv. l. 58.—Figulus signifies any worker in clay; so a maker of bricks.

172. Sarcophagus.] A grave, tomb, or sepulchre. A σαςξ, flesh, and φαγειν, to eat—because bodies there consume and waste away.

—— Death only, &c.] Death alone teaches us how vain and empty the pursuits of fame and earthly glory are; and that, however the ambitious may swell with pride, yet, in a little while, a small urn will contain the hero, who, when living, thought the world not sufficient to gratify his ambition.

174. Athos, &c.] A mountain in Macedon, running like a peninsula into the Ægean sea. Xerxes is said to have digged through a part of it to make a passage for his fleet.

175. Adventures in history.] i. c. Dares to record in history. The Grecian historians were very fond of the marvellous, and, of course, were apt to introduce great improbabilities and falsehoods in their narrations.

--- Strowed.] Covered, paved, as it were—for Xerxes is said to have had twelve thousand ships with him in his expedition, with which he formed the bridge after mentioned.

176. Those very ships.] Which had sailed through the passage at mount Athos.

—— Put under wheels.] He, in order to march his forces from Asia into Europe, made a bridge with his ships over the sea, which joined Abydus, a city of Asia, near the Hellespont, to Sestos, a city of the Thracian Chersonesus, which was opposite to Abydus, and separated by an arm of the sea: this part is now known by the name of the Dardanelles. The sea being thus made passable by the help of the bridge, the army, chariots, horses, &c. went over, as if the sea had been solid under them; therefore the poet says, sepositum rotis solidum mare, the firm sea. Hol.

--- We believe.] i. e. If we give credit to such historians.

177. Rivers failed, &c.] It is said that Xerxes's army was so numerous, as to drink up a river at once, whenever they made a meal. HERODOT. lib. ii.

Yet when he had enter'd the city fortified by brickmakers,
He was content with a Sarcophagus. Death only discovers How little the small bodies of Men are. It is believed, that, formerly,

Athos was sailed thro', and whatever lying Greece
Adventures in history; the solid sea strowed with Those very ships, and put under wheels: we believe deep Rivers to have failed, and their waters drunk up when the Mede Dined, and what things Sostratus sings with wet wings.
But what did that barbarian return, Salamis being left,
Who was wont to rage with whips, against the north-west and East wind, (which never suffered this in the Æolian prison,)
Who bound Ennosigæus himself with fetters?

177. The Mede.] The Medes and Persians composed the army of Xerxes.

That indeed was rather mild, that not worthy a mark also

178. Sostratus.] A Greek poet, who wrote the Persian expedition into Greece.

— Wet wings.] The fancy of a poet may be compared to wings, for it is by this he takes his flight into the regions of invention.— The fancy of Sostratus is here supposed to have been moistened with wine; in short, that no man who was not drunk, which is signified by madidus, could ever have committed such improbabilities to writing.

179. What, &c.] What manner of man-qualis-how wretched, how forlorn, how changed from what he was! Comp. l. 185.

— That barbarian.] Xerxes. See sat. vi. l. 157, note.
— Salamis being left.] When he left and fled from Salamis, an island and city in the Ægean sea, near which Themistocles, the Athenian general, overcame him in a sea-fight, and forced him to fly.

180. Rage with whips, &c.] When he found the sea raging, and, being raised by those winds, to have destroyed his bridge, he was mad enough to order the Hellespont to be scourged with three hundred lashes.—I don't read any where, but in this passage of Juvenal, of his whipping the winds.

181. Never suffered, &c.] The poet here alludes to Æn. i. l. 56 -- 67. where Æolus is represented as holding the winds in prison, and giving them liberty to come forth as he pleased.

182. Who bound Ennosigeus, &c.] Xerxes was mad enough also to cast iron fetters into the sea, as if to bind Neptune in chains; who was called Ennosigeus, the earth shaker, from the notion that he presided over the waters of the sea, which made their way into the earth, and caused earthquakes.—From Gr. 1710015, concussio, and yana, terra. See Gellius. See the Orphic hymn, quoted in Parkh. Heb. Lex. under 771, No. 1.

183. Rather mild, &c.] The poet ironically says, "that, to be sure, all this was very gentle in Xerxes, and that he did not carry the matter farther, must be considered as very gracious in a man

Credidit: huic quisquam vellet servire deorum. Sed qualis rediit? nempe unâ nave cruentis Fluctibus, ac tardâ per deusa cadavera prorâ. Has toties optata exegit gloria pænas.

185

Da spatium vitæ, multos da, Jupiter, annos:
Hoc recto vultu, solum hoc et pallidus optas.
Sed quam continuis et quantis longa senectus
Plena malis! deformem, et tetrum ante omnia vultum,
Dissimilemque sui, deformem pro cute pellem,
Pendentesque genas, et tales aspice rugas,
Quales, umbriferos ubi pandit Tabraca saltus,
In vetula scalpit jam mater simia bucca.
Plurima sunt juvenum discrimina, pulchrior ille
Hoc, atque ille alio: multum hic robustior illo:
Una senum facies, cum voce trementia memblis
Et jam læve caput, madidique infantia nasi.

190

195

"who might have thought proper to have marked him as his slave." Stigma signifies a brand or mark set on the forehead of fugitive slaves, to which, no doubt, this passage alludes.

184. Any of the gods.] As well as Neptune, would, doubtless, without murmuring, have served so mild and gracious a prince!—Still speaking ironically, in derision of the pride and folly of Xerxes.

185. What manner, &c.] After all this extravagance of pride.

See note on 1. 179.

—— One vessel.] Navis signifies any vessel of the sea or river. The vessel in which Xerxes made his escape, after his defeat near Salamis, was a poor fishing-boat.

186. Bloody waves. Made so by the slaughter of such numbers of the Persian army.

- Slow prow, &c.] The sea was so crowded with the floating carcases of the slain, that the boat could hardly make its way.

187. Glory, &c.] This haughty prince, who had collected so vast a force together, in order to carry on the war with the Athenians, begun by his father Darius, and invading Greece with seven hundred thousand men of his own kingdoms, three hundred thousand avxiliaries, and with twelve thousand ships, after beating Leonidas and taking Sparta, is defeated by Themistocles, his army cut to pieces, his fleet destroyed, and himself forced to escape in a wretched fishing-boat. All this might well be called the just demand of vengeance against his pride, and mad thirst after glory.

188. Give, &c.] The poet now satirizes the folly of wishing for long life: he supposes one praying for it.

189. Upright countenance, &c.] i. e. Looking up to heaven—pale, with fear of death, or lest the petition should be refused.

But, perhaps, recto vultu may here be a phrase to express one in youth and health; and the following pallidus may denote a state of old age and sickness—comp. 1. 191.

195

He thought him.—Any of the gods would be willing to serve him.

But what manner of man returned he? Truly with one vessel in the Bloody waves, and, with slow prow, thro' thick carcases.

Glory so often wished for exacted this punishment.

Give length of life, give, O Jupiter, many years!

This with upright countenance, and this, pale, alone you wish.—

But with what continual, and with how great evils is old age

Full! See the countenance deform'd, and hideous beyond every thing,

And unlike itself, an unsightly hide instead of a skin:

And pendent cheeks, and such wrinkles,

As, where Tabraca extends its shady forests,

A mother ape scratches in her old cheek.

The differences of youths are very many, one is handsomer than This, and he than ancher: this far more robust than that: The face of old men is one, the limbs trembling with the voice, And now a smooth head, and the infancy of a wet nose.

"Both sick and healthful, old and young, conspire

"In this one silly, mischievous desire." DRYDEN.

192. Itself.] Its former self.

--- Unsightly hide.] Here is a distinction between cutis and pellis, the former signifying the skin of a man, the other the hide of a beast; to the last of which, by an apt catachresis, the poet compares the coarse and rugged appearance of an old man's skin.

193. Pendent cheeks.] It is observable, that, in old persons, the cheeks not only in that part of them which is immediately below the eyes, hang in purses downwards, but also in that part which, in youth, forms the roundness, and contributes so much to the beauty and comeliness of the face, hang downwards in a relaxed and pendent state.

194. Tabraca, &c.] Now called Tunis, on the Mediterranean, near which was a wood, wherein was a vast quantity of apes.

195. Her old cheek.] Bucca properly signifies the cheek, or that part of it which swells out on blowing; but here it seems (by synec.) to denote the whole face, every part of which, in the animal he speaks of, especially when old, is in a wrinkled state.

Dryden has well preserved the humour of this simile:

Such wrinkles as a skilful hand would draw, For an old grandam-ape, when, with a grace, She sits at squat, and scrubs her leathern face.

196. The differences, &c.] The poet is here to be understood as observing, that, however, in the days of youth, one is distinguishable from another by different beauties of countenance, and strength of body, old age renders all distinctions void; and, in short, one old man is too like another to admit of them, both with respect to countenance and bodily strength.

199. Smooth head.] Bald with the loss of hair.

Frangendus misero gingivâ panis inermi: 200 Usque adeo gravis uxori, gnatisque, sibique, Ut captatori moveat fastidia Cosso. Non eadem vini atque cibi, torpente palato, Gaudia: nam coitûs jam longa oblivio: vel si Coneris, jacet exiguus cum ramice nervus; 205 Et quamvis totà palpetur nocte, jacebit. Anne aliquid sperare potest hæc inguinis ægri Canities ? quid, quod merito suspecta libido est, Quæ venerem affectat sine viribus? aspice partis Nunc damnum alterius: nam quæ cantante voluptas, 210 Sit licet eximius, citharædo, sivi Seleuco, Et quibus auratâ mos est fulgere lacerna? Quid refert, magni sedeat quâ parte theatri, Qui vix cornicines exaudiat, atque tubarum Concentus? clamore opus est, ut sentiat auris, 215 Quem dicat venisse puer, quot nunciet horas. Præterea minimus gelido jam in corpore sanguis Febre calet solà: circumsilit agmine facto Morborum omne genus, quorum si nomina quæras, Promptius expediam, quot amaverit Hippia mœchos, 220 Quo Themison ægros autumno occiderit uno;

199. Infancy, &c.] A running and drivelling nose, like a young child.

200. Unarm'd gum.] Having lost all his teeth, he has nothing left but his bare gums, to mumble his food withal.

202. The flatterer Cossus. Captator signifies one who endeavoureth to get or procure any thing, particularly he who flattereth a man to be his heir. (See sat. v. l. 98, note.) This mean occupation was frequent in Rome, and this Cossus seems to have been famous for it; yet old age, like what the poet has been describing, is sufficient, says he, even to disgust Cossus himself, so as to keep him away from paying his court.

203. The palate, &c.] Every thing now grows insipid; all difference of meats and drinks is lost. See this symptom of age mentioned by Barzillai, 2 Sam. xix. 35.

210. Another part. The hearing.

211. A harper.] Citharædus denotes that species of musician, who sung and played the harp at the same time.

Seleucus.] A noted musician, who, according to the fashion of those times, wore a rich embroidered garment when he sang upon the stage. This is meant in the next line, by aurata lacerna, as not only the case of Seleucus, but of others. Of this incapacity for relishing music, Barzillai also speaks, 2 Sam. xix. 35.

214. The cornets.] Cornicen (from cornu, an horn, and cano, to sing) signifies a blower on the horn, or cornet, the sound of which was probably very loud and harsh, as was that of the trum,

Bread is to be broken by the wretch with an unarm'd gum: 200 So very burthensome, to wife, and children, and himself, That he would move the loathing of the flatterer Cossus. The palate growing dull, the joys of wine and food are not The same: a long oblivion of those pleasures, Which are in vain invited to return, 205 Tho' every means be used to restore them. Has this important state any thing to hope for? What, but that the desire be deservedly suspected, Which, without power, affects gallautry. Now see The loss of another part-for what pleasure (has he) when a 210 Harper (tho' even the best) or Seleucus performs, And those whose custom it is to shine in a golden habit? What signifies it in what part of a great theatre he may sit, Who can hardly hear the cornets, and the sounding of the Trumpets? There needs a bawling, that the ear may perceive Whom his boy may say has come, how many hours he may bring word of.

Beside, the very little blood, now in his cold body,

Is only warm from fever: there leap around, form'd into a troop,

All kind of diseases, the names of which were you to ask,

I could sooner unfold, how many adulterers Hippia has loved, How many sick Themison has killed in one autumn; pets. If he be so deaf that he cannot hear these, he can't expect to hear the singers, and the softer instruments.

215. Bawling, &c.] His boy must bawl as loud as he can into his ear, when he would tell him who called to visit him, or to let him know what o'clock it was. They had not watches and clocks as we have, but sun-dials and hour-glasses, which a boy was to watch, and acquaint the master how the time went.

Horas quinque puer nondum tibi nuntiat, et tu MART. lib. viii. ep. 67. Jam conviva mihi, Caciliane, venis, 218. Warm from fever. The blood is so cold, and circulates so slowly, that nothing can warm or quicken it, but that hectic, feverish habit, which frequently is an attendant on the decays of old age.

Gelidus tardante senecta Sanguis hebet, &c.

Æn. v. l. 395, 6.

--- Leap around, &c.] Surround him on all sides, ready to rush upon him, like wild beasts leaping on their prey.

against him. Agmine facto. See Virg. An i. 86. from whence our poet borrows this expression. See sat. iii. 162, and note.
226. Hippia] See sat. vi. 82.—a woman famous for her debau-cheries. 221. Themison.] A physician much commended by Pliny and VOL. II.

Quot Basilus socios, quot circumscripserit Hirrus Pupillos: quot longa viros exsorbeat uno Maura die, quot discipulos inclinet Hamillus. Percurram citius, quot villas possideat nunc, 225 Quo tondente, gravis juveni mihi barba sonabat. Ille humero, hic lumbis, hic coxa debillis, ambos Perdidit ille oculos, et luscis invidet : hujus Pallida labra cibum capiunt digitis alienis. 230 Ipse ad conspectum cona diducere rictum Suetus, hiat tantum, ceu pullus hirundinis, ad quem Ore volat pleno mater jejuna. Sed omni Membrorum damno major dementia, quæ nec Nomina servorum, nec vultum agnoscit amiei, Cum quo præterità cœnavit nocte, nec illos, 235 Quos genuit, quos eduxit: nam codice sævo Hæredes vetat esse suos; bona tota feruntur Ad Phialen: tantum artificis valet halitus oris.

Celsus, though here spoken of in no very favourable light. Juvenal gives this name to some empiric, in derision.

221. Autumn.] The autumn was usually a sickly time at Rome. See sat. iv. l. 56, 7, and notes.

222. Allies, &c.] When the Romans had conquered any people, they reduced them into the form of a province, which, being subject to Rome, was governed by a Roman pretor, and the inhabitants were called socii, allies, and indeed, looked upon, in all respects, as such, not daring to refuse a confederacy with their conquerors. Basilus was one of these pretors, who shamefully plundered his province.

- Hirrus.] Some read Irus. - Whoever this was, his character is here noted, as a cheater and circumventer of youth, committed to his care and guardianship.

He that had the tuition of a ward was called tutor. The ward was called pupillus. The pupilli were orphans, who had lost their parents, and thus fell under the tuition of guardians, who frequently, instead of protecting them, plundered and cheated them out of their patrimony.

223: Maura.] See sat. vi. l. 306, note.

224. Hamillus. A school-master, famous for unnatural practices with his scholars.

226. Who clipping.] See sat. i. 25, and notes.

Cinnamus was a barber at Rome, who got a knight's estate, and, growing very rich, had several villas, and lived in a sumptuous manner; but, at last, he broke, and fled into Sicily. See MART. vii. epigr. 64.

227. One is weak, &c.] That host of diseases, mentioned 1. 218, 19, are here represented, as making their attacks on different parts of the body.

229. Of this.] Hujus-i. e. hominis.

How many of our allies Basilus, how many orphans Hirrus Has cheated. How many gallants the tall Maura can Dispense with in a day, how many disciples Hamillus may defile: Sooner run over how many country-houses he may now possess, 225 Who clipping, my beard, troublesome to me a youth, sounded. One is weak in his shoulder, another in his loins, another in his hip, Another has lost both his eyes, and envies the blind of one: The pale lips of this take food from another's fingers: He, at the sight of a supper, accustomed to stretch open his 230 Jaw, only gapes, like the young one of a swallow, to whom The fasting dam flies with her mouth-full. But, than all the loss Of limbs, that want of understanding is greater, which neither Knows the names of servants, nor the countenance of a friend, With whom he supp'd the night before, nor those 235 Whom he hath begotten, whom brought up: for, by a cruel will, He forbids them to be his heirs: all his goods are carried To Phiale: so much avails the breath of an artful mouth,

229. Take food, &c.] So feeble and childish, that he can't feed himself, and is forced to be fed by another.

230. He, at the sight, &c.] As soon as supper is served, he, as it were mechanically, stretches open his jaws; but, unable to feed himself, he only gapes, like a young swallow in the nest, when it sees the old one flying towards it with food in her mouth. This natural image is beautifully expressed.

233-4. Neither knows.] i. e. Recollects; his memory now failing.

234. The names of servants. The poet here brings his old man into the last stage of superannuation, when the understanding and memory fail, which, as he says, is worse than all the rest.

236. Brought up. Though he has not only begotten, but brought up his children, so that they must have lived much with him, yet they are forgotten: he makes a will, by which he disinherits them, and leaves all he has to some artful strumpet who has got possession of him.

- A cruel will. Codex, or caudex, literally means the trunk, stem, or body of a tree. Hence by metonym. a table-book, made of several boards joined together, on which they used to writehence, any writing, as a deed, will, &c. See sat. vii. 110.

237. Forbids them. He excludes them from inheriting his estate

-i. e. he disinherits them.

--- Are carried. Are disposed of, conveyed by the will.

238. To Phiale.] See above, 1. 236, note the first.

So much avails, &c.] Such an old dotard as this may be easily persuaded to any thing by an artful strumpet; so great an ascendency does she acquire over him by her artful and insinuating tongue.

Quod steterat multos in carcere fornicis annos. Ut vigeant sensus animi, ducenda tamen sunt 240 Funera gnatorum, rogus aspiciendus amatæ Conjugis, et fratris, plenæque sororibus urnæ. Hæc data pæna diu viventibus; ut renovatâ Semper clade domûs, multis in luctibus, inque Perpetuo mœrore, et nigrà veste senescant. Rex Pylius (magno si quicquam credis Homero) Exemplum vitæ fuit a cornice secundæ: Felix nimirum, qui tot per sæcula mortem Distulit, atque suos jam dextrâ computat annos, Quique novum toties mustum bibit : oro, parumper Attendas, quantum de legibus ipse queratur Fatorum, et nimio de stamine, cum videt acris Antilochi barbam ardentem: nam quærit ab omni, 239. Prison of a brothel.] Fornix—lit. an arch or vault in houses; also, meton a stew or brothel, because these were in vaults or wells under ground. Ainsw. Hence, from the darkness and filthiness of their situation, as well as from the confinement of the wretched inhabitants therein, who stood ready for every comer, Juvenal represents Phiale as having stood in carcere fornicis, which is describing her as a common prostitute.

Hor. lib, i. sat. ii. l. 30. alluding to the filth of these dungeons, eays:

Contra alius nullam nisi olenti in fornice stantem.

See Juv. sat. vi. l. 130, 1.

Career signifies also a starting-place at the chariot races—hence, by metonym. a beginning: in this sense it may mean the entrance of a brothel, where the harlots presented themselves to the view of the passers-by. Comp. sat. iii. l. 65, n. 1.

240. The the senses, &c.] i. e. Yet allow him to retain his senses in full vigour, what grievous scenes of distress has he to go through!

- Children.] So VIRG. Æn. vi. 1. 308.

Impositisque rogis juvenes ante ora parentum.

241. To be attended.] Ducere funera is a phrase peculiarly adapted to the ceremony of funerals, and probably it is derived from a custom of the friends of the deceased walking in procession before the corpse. Sat. i. 146.—See Grang. in loc. "Ducere—verbum sepulturæ. Albinov. ad Liviam. Funera ducuntur Romana per oppida Drusi."

The Pile. The funeral pile, on which the body was reduced to ashes.

242. Urns fill'd, &c.] i. e. With their bones and ashes, which it was customary to preserve in pots (after being gathered from the funeral pile) called urns.

-243. This pain, &c.] This is the sad lot of long-lived people, as it must be their fate to out-live many of their friends.

37

Which has stood for many years in the prison of a brothel. Tho' the senses of the mind may be strong, yet funerals of children 240 Are to be attended, the pile to be seen of a beloved Wife, and of a brother, and urns fill'd with sisters. This pain is given to long-livers, so that, the slaughter Of the family being continually renewed, in many sorrows, and in Perpetual grief, and in a black habit, they may grow old. 245 The Pylian king (if you at all believe the great Homer) Was an example of life second from a crow: Happy, no doubt, who thro' so many ages had deferr'd Death, and now computes his years with the right hand, And who so often drank new must: I pray, attend 250 A little-How much might he complain of the laws Of the fates, and of too much thread, when he saw the beard of Brave Antilochus burning: he demands of every friend 243-4. Slaughter of the family, &c.] Some part or other of which is continually dropping off.

244. Many sorrows. i. e. Bewailings of the death of friends.

245. Black habit.] By this we find, that the wearing of mourning for the loss of relations is very ancient; and that black was the colour which the ancients used on such occasions. See sat. iii. l. 213.

246. Pylian king.] Nestor, the king of Pylos, in Peloponnesus, who, according to Homer, is said to have lived three hundred years.

247. Second from a crow.] Cornix signifies a crow, or rook. This species of bird is fabled to live nine times the age of a man. Nestor (says the poet) stands second to this long-lived bird.

249. With the right.] The ancients used to count their numbers with their fingers; all under one hundred was counted on the left hand.

all above on the right.

250. So often drank, &c.] Mustum signifies new wine. The vintage, when this was made, was in the autumn; so that the poet here means to observe that Nestor lived for many returns of this season.

—— Attend.] The poet calls for attention to what he is going to prove, by various examples, namely, that happiness does not consist in long life.

251-2. Laws of the fates.] The ancients believed all things, even the gods themselves to be governed by the fates. Old men, who were from various causes afflicted, might be apt to complain of their destiny, and Nestor among the rest-

252. Of too much thread.] The fates were supposed to be three sisters, who had all some peculiar business assigned them by the poets, in relation to the lives of men. One held the distaff, another spun the thread, and the third cut it. q. d. How might he complain that the thread of his life was too long.

253. Antilochus. The son of Nestor, slain, according to Homer, Quisquis adest, socio, cur hac in tempora duret; Quod facinus dignum tam longo admiserit ævo. Hac eadem Peleus, raptum cum luget Achillem, Atque alius, cui fas Ithacum lugere natantem. Incolumi Trojâ Priamus venisset ad umbras Assaraci magnis solennibus, Hectore funus Portante, ac reliquis fratrum cervicibus, inter Iliadum lachrymas, ut primos edere planctus Cassandra inciperet, scissâque Polyxena pallâ, Si foret extinctus diverso tempore, quo non by Memnon, at the siege of Troy; according to Ovid, by Hector. His beard burning—i. e. on the funeral pile. This mention of the beard implies, that he was now grown to man's estate.

255

260

253. He demands, &c.] The poet here very naturally describes the workings and effects of grief, in the afflicted old man, who is now tempted to think, that his great age was granted him as a punishment for some greater crime than he could recollect to have committed, as he was permitted to live to see so sad an event as the death of his brave and beloved son. He is therefore represented as inquiring of his friends what could be the cause of his being reserved for such an affliction.

256. Peleus.] The father of Achilles, slain by Paris, who shot him in the heel in the temple of Apollo, the only part where he was vulnerable. His father Peleus had to lament his untimely death.

257. Another.] Laertes, a prince of Ithaca, father of Ulysses. He, during his son's absence, and wanderings over the seas, wearied himself with daily labour in husbandry, having no other attendant than an old maid-servant, who brought him food: during this period his constant petition to Jupiter was, that he might die.

Swimming Ithacus.] Ulysses was called Ithacus, from Ithaca, a country of Ionia were he reigned. After the destruction of Troy, he suffered many toils and hardships, for ten years together, before his return home. The word natantem perhaps alludes to his shipwreck near the island of Calypso, where he was forced to swim to save his life; or perhaps it may allude, in general, to the length of time he passed in sailing on the sea.

258. Troy being safe.] i. e. Had Troy stood, and remained in safety.

Priam.] The last king of Troy, who lived to see the city besieged by the Greeks for ten years together, and at length taken.

258-9. Shades of Assaracus, &c.] Had joined his ancestors' ghosts, or shades, in the infernal regions; i.e. had died in peace, and had been buried with the splendid funeral rites belonging to his rank. See Virg. En. i. 288; and Ainsw. Assaracus.

. 259. Hector carrying, &c.] Among the ancients, the corpse of the parent was carried forth to the funeral pile by the sons of the deceased. If Troy had remained in quiet, Priam's son Hector had

Which is present, why he should last till these times—
What crime he had committed worthy so long life. 255
The very same does Peleus, while he mourns Achilles snatch'd away,
And another, to whom it was permitted to lament the swimming Itha-

Troy being safe, Priam had come to the shades
Of Assaracus with great solemnities, Hector carrying The corpse, and the rest of the shoulders of his brethren, among
The tears of the Trojans, as soon as Cassandra should begin
To utter the first wailings, and Polyxena with a rent garment, Had he been extinct at another time, in which Paris not been slain by Achilles, but had survived his father, and have, as the custom was, been one of his bearers to the funeral pile.

260. The rest of the shoulders, &c.] Reliquis cervicibus—for cervicibus reliquorum, &c. Hypallage. According to Homer, Priam had fifty sons and twelve daughters; the former of which would have assisted Hector in carrying their father's corpse. Pliny says, (lib. vii. c. 44.) Quintus Metellus Macedonicus, a quatuor filiis illatus est rogo.

Priam was slain in the siege by Pyrrhus, the son of Achilles, and most of his children were destroyed. See Æn. ii. 501-54.

261. As soon as, &c.] This was the signal for the funeral procession to move forward towards the pile.

— Cassandra, &c.] She was the daughter of Priam and Hecuba. It was customary to hire women to mourn at burials, who went before the corpse to lament the dead; the chief of them who began the ceremony was called præfica, (a præficio, planctuum princeps. Ainsw.) This part must here most naturally have been taken by Cassandra, Priam's daughter, who would, doubtless, have put herself at the head of the mourning women.—See 2 Chron. xxxv. 25.

After the taking of Troy, she fell to the share of Agamemnon. She was married to Chorcebus, and debauched by Ajax Oileus, in the temple of Minerva. See Æn. i. 44. and ii. l. 403-7.

262. Polyxena, &c.] The daughter also of Priam, who gave her in marriage to Achilles; but he, coming into the temple of Apollo to perform the nuptial lites, was there treacherously slain by Paris. She was afterwards sacrificed at the tomb of Achilles. See before, 1.256, note.

--- Rent garment.] Rending the garments, in token of grief, was very ancient.

263. Been extinct.] i. e. If he had died.

At another time, &c.] i. e Before Paris prepared to sail into Greece, in order to ravish Helen from her husband Menelaus. Had this been the case, Priam would have been borne to the grave by his sons, and his funeral solemnized by the public lamentations of his daughters.

Cœperat audaces Paris ædificare carinas. Longa dies igitur quid contulit ? omnia vidit Evérsa, et flammis Asiam ferroque cadentem. Tunc miles tremulus posità tulit arma tiarà, Et ruit ante aram summi Jovis, ut vetulus bos, Qui domini cultris tenue et miserabile collum Præbet, ab ingrato jam fastiditus aratro. Exitus ille utcumque hominis: sed torva canino Latravit rictu, quæ post hunc vixerat, uxor. Festino ad nostros, et regem transeo Ponti, Et Cræsum, quem vox justi facunda Solonis Respicere ad longæ jussit spatia ultima vitæ. Exilium et carcer, Minturnarumque paludes, Et mendicatus victà Carthagine panis, Hinc causas habuêre. Quid illo cive tulisset Natura in terris, quid Roma beatius unquam, Si circumducto captivorum agmine, et omni 280

264. Daring ships.] So called from the daring design they were employed in; the execution of which occasioned the Trojan war, and the destruction of the country by the Greeks.

265. What therefore, &c.] The poet here applies this instance of old king Priam to his main argument against wishing to live to old age, seeing with how many sorrows it may be accompanied.

266. Asia falling. See VIRG. En. iii. l. 1. By Asia is here meant the Lesser Asia, containing the Greater and Lesser Phrygia, the kingdom of Priam.

267. Trembling soldier. Priam, now trembling, and almost worn out by age.

Diadem being laid aside.] Having laid aside all ensigns of royalty.

Bore arms. In defence of his country. See Æn. ii. 507

-558. where these parts of Priam's history are described.

268. Fell before the altar. Of Jupiter Herceus, erected by Priam in an open court belonging to the palace: hither he fled for succour and protection, but was slain by Pyrrhus. An. ii. 501, 2. 270. Ungrateful plough.] Prosopopeia.—The plough is here represented as ungrateful-as forgetting the labours of the old wornout ox, and despising him as now useless. Some understand aratro for agricola-meton.

271. Exit of a man. He died, however, like a man-this was not the case of his wife.

--- Fierce wife, &c.] i. e. Hecuba, wife of Priam, who, after the sacking of Troy, railed so against the Greeks, that she is feigned to have been turned into a bitch. Ovid. Met. lib. xiii. l. 567-9.

273. To our ozon To mention instances and examples among our own people.

-- The king of Pontus.] Mithridates, who maintained a long war with the Romans, but was at last routed by Pompey. He 270

275

280

Had not begun to build the daring ships.

What therefore did long life advantage him? he saw all things 263

Overturn'd, and Asia falling by fire and sword.

Then, a trembling soldier, the diadem being laid aside, he bore arms, And fell before the altar of high Jove, as an old ox,

Who, to the master's knife, offers his lean and miserable

Who, to the master's knife, offers his lean and miserable Neck, now despised by the ungrateful plough.

However, that was the exit of a man: but his fierce wife,

Who outlived him, bark'd with a canine jaw.

I hasten to our own, and pass by the king of Pontus,

And Crossus, whom the cloquent voice of just Solon Commanded to look at the last period of a long life.

Banishment and a prison, and the marshes of Minturnæ,

And bread begged in conquer'd Carthage,

Hence had their causes—what, than that citizen, had Nature on the earth, or Rome ever borne, more happy,

If, the troop of captives being led around, and in all would have shortened his days by poison, but had so fortified himself by an antidote, invented by him, and which still bears his name, that none would operate upon him. See sat. vi. l. 660, and note.

274. Crasus, whom, &c.] Crasus was the last king of Lydia, so rich, that Crasi divitize was a proverbial saying. He asked Solon (one of the wise men of Greece, and lawgiver of the Athenians) who was the happiest man?—The philosopher told him—"no man "could be said to be happy before death."—This, afterwards, Crasus found to be true; for, being taken prisoner by Cyrus, and ordered to be burned, he cried out—"Solon! Solon! Solon!"—Cyrus asked the reason of this, and was told what Solon had said; whereupon, considering it might be his own case, he spared his life, and treated him with much respect.—Respicere—to consider—mind—regard.

276. Marshes of Minturnæ, &c.] Caius Marius being overcome in the civil war by Sylla, was forced to skulk in the marshes of Minturnæ, a city by the river Liris, where he was found, taken, and imprisoned; he then escaped into Africa, where he lived in exile, and begged his bread in the streets of Carthage, which had been conquered by the Romans.

278. Hence had their causes.] All these misfortunes were owing to Marius's living so long—he died in the sixty-eighth year of his

- Than that citizen.] i. e. Than Marius.

280—2. If—when, &c.] If when, in his triumph after conquering the Cimbri, he had numbers of captives led around his triumphal car, and amidst all the pomp and glory of victory, he had breathed out his mighty soul, as he descended, after the triumph was over, from his chariot, he had been the happiest man in nature, or that Rome ever bred, and have escaped the miscries which afterwards befel him.

VOL. II.

Bellorum pompâ, animam exhalâsset opimam, Cum de Teutonico vellet descendere curru? Provida Pompeio dederat Campania febres Optandas; sed multæ urbes, et publica vota Vicerunt: igitur fortuna ipsius, et urbis Servatum victo caput abstulit. Hoc cruciatu Lentulus, hâc pænâ caruit, ceciditque Cethegus Integer, et jacuit Catilina cadavere toto.

285

Formam optat modico pueris, majore puellis Murmure, cum Veneris fanum videt anxia mater, Usque ad delicias votorum: cur tamen, inquit, Corripias? pulchrâ gaudet Latona, Dianâ. Sed vetat optari faciem Lucretia, qualem Ipsa habuit. Cuperet Rutilæ Virginia gibbum

290

282. Teutonic chariot.] The Teutones were a people bordering on the Cimbri, conquered by Marius—the chariot in which Marius rode in his triumph over these people, is therefore called Teutonic, as used on that occasion.

283. Provident Campania.] When first Pompey engaged in the civil war against Cæsar, he had a violent fever at Naples, and another at Capua, of which he was like to have died:—these seem to have been provided against the miseries which afterwards befel him.

284. To be wished for. In order to take him out of life, while he was great and happy.

285. Overcame them.] The united wishes and prayers of so many cities and people, for his recovery, prevailed against the effects of his sickness, and saved his life.

- His own fortune.] Which reserved him to be slain in his flight to Ægypt, after his defeat by Cæsar.

- That of the city.] Doomed to fall under the dominion of Pompey's enemy, after suffering so much by a civil war.

286. Took off, &c.] That life which had been preserved in a dangerous sickness (see note on 1. 285.) was destroyed after his defeat, and his head severed from his body by Achillas and Salvius, sent for that purpose from Ptolemy, who intended it as a present to Cæsar.

Of Pompey's death, see ANT. Univ. Hist. vol. xiii. p. 217.

287. Lentulus—Cethegus.] These were in the conspiracy with Catiline, and being put into prison, by order of Cicero, then consul, were strangled, so that their bodies were not dismembered.

288. Catiline, &c.] The famous conspirator, whose designs were detected and frustrated by Cicero, died in battle, without the loss of any part of his body. See Sallust. All these died young men, and thus were taken away from the miseries which those meet with who live to old age.

289. Moderate murmur.] The word murmur here implies that sort of muttering which they used at their prayers to the gods; this

The pomp of wars, he had breath'd forth his great soul,
When he would descend from the Teutonic chariot?
Provident Campania had given Pompey fevers
To be wished for; but many cities, and public vows
Overcame them: therefore his own fortune, and that of the city, 285
Took off his preserved head from him conquer'd: this torment,
This punishment Lentulus was free from; and Cethegus fell Entire, and Catiline lay with his whole carcase.

With moderate murmur, the anxious mother desires beauty

For her boys—with greater for her girls, when she sees the temple of Venus,

290

Even to the delight of her wishes. Yet, why, says she, Should you blame me? Latona rejoices in fair Diana But Lucretia forbids a face to be wished for, such As she had. Virginia would desire to accept the hump of Rutila, was louder, and more distinct, on some occasions than on others, according to the degree of fervency in the suppliant. Comp. Pers. sat. ii. 6—S.

289. Anxious mother, &c.] The poet here represents another popular folly, in supposing a mother anxious for having handsome children, and praying for this at the shrine of Venus, the fabled goddess of beauty.

291. Even to the delight, &c.] So that the highest and fondest of them might be gratified, and the delight of their accomplishment be equal to that which she felt in making them.

292. Blame me?] A question supposed from the mother to the poet, on his finding fault with her for what she did.

- Latona rejoices, &c.] She defends what she does by quoting an example.—Latona, daughter of Cous, one of the Titans, bore, to Jupiter, Apollo and Diana at the same birth.

293. Lucretia forbids, &c.] The poet answers the example brought for asking beautiful children, by the instance of Lucretia, whose beauty proved her undoing. She was a beautiful Roman lady, the daughter of Lucretius, prefect of the city, and wife of Tarquinius Collatinus, ravished by Sextus Tarquinius, son of Tarquinius Superbus, which she so resented, that she sent for her father and husband, and stabbed herself before them. The people of Rome, on this, rose in arms, expelled the Tarquins, and changed the monarchy to a commonwealth.

294. Virginia.] A Roman virgin exceedingly beautiful, whom her own father, to prevent her being exposed to the lust of Appius, one of the Decemviri, stabbed in the middle of the forum.

294—5. Rutila.] An ugly deformed old woman, above seventy-seven years old, as Pliny says, was in no danger of such a death, and therefore happier in her deformity than Virginia in her beauty; so that the latter might have gladly changed her person for that of Rutila.

| | Accipere, atque suam Rutilæ dare. Filius autem | 295 |
|---|---|------|
| | Corporis egregii miseros trepidosque parentes | |
| | Semper habet. RARA EST ADEO CONCORDIA FORMÆ | |
| , | ATQUE PUDICITIE! sanctos licet horrida mores | |
| | Tradiderit domus, ac veteres imitata Sabinas. | - |
| | Præterea, castum ingenium, vultumque modesto | 300 |
| | Sanguine ferventem tribuat natura benignâ | -12 |
| | Larga manu: (quid enim puero conferre potest plus | , 3 |
| | Custode, et cura Natura potentior omni?) | |
| | Non licet esse viros: nam prodiga corruptoris | . 1 |
| | Improbitas ipsos audet tentare parentes: | 305 |
| | Tanti in muneribus fiducia. Nullus ephebum | u J. |
| | Deformem sævå castravit in arce tyrannus: | |
| | Nec prætextatum rapuit Nero loripedem, vel | Ass. |
| | Strumosum, atque utero pariter, gibboque tumentem. | -74 |
| | I nunc, et juvenis specie lætare tui, quem | 310 |
| | Majora expectant discrimina. Fiet adulter | |
| | Publicus, et pœnas metuet, quascunque maritus | |
| | Exigit iratus: nec erit felicior astro | - |
| | Martis, ut in laqueos nunquam incidat: exigit autem | |
| | luterdum ille dolor plus, quam lex ulla dolori | 315 |

295. But a son, &c.] i. e. A son with an accomplished and beautiful person makes his parents unhappy, and keeps them in perpetual fear, so very rarely do beauty and modesty meet together.

296. Person. The word corporis, which literally signifies the body, is here used for the whole person of the man, per synec.

298. Homely house, &c.] i. e. Though the plain family, rough and honest, should have furnished him with the best morals, and brought him up in all the plain and virtuous simplicity of the old Sabines—(see sat. vi. l. 162, 3.—transmitting modesty and chastity by their own examples also.

300. Glowing, &c.] Easily blushing at every species of indecency. 303. More pow'rful, &c.] i. e. Who is more powerful than all outward restraints.—q. d. Natural good dispositions are more powerful preservatives against vice, than all the watchfulness and care of guardians and parents.

304. Must not be men. If they are to escape "the pollutions that "are in the world through lust," they must die young, and not be

The prodigal improbity, &c.] The offers of those who would corrupt their chastity; and who think no prodigality too great to seduce youth, will even attempt to corrupt the parents themselves, by bribing them, at any price, over to their side. Such is their extravagant wickedness.

306. Confidence in bribes.] So thoroughly persuaded are they that a bribe will carry their point.

- No tyrant, &c.] The poet shews another danger arising

And give her (shape) to Rutila. But a son, with a 295Remarkable person, always has miserable and trembling Parents-So rare is the agreement of Beauty AND CHASTITY !- Tho' the homely house chaste morals should Have transmitted, and imitated the old Sabines. Beside, a chaste disposition, and a countenance glowing 300 With modest blood, let bounteous nature give him With a kind hand, (for what more upon a boy, can Nature, more pow'rful than a guardian, and than all care, bestow?) They must not be men; for the prodigal improbity Of a corrupter dares to tempt the parents themselves: 305 So great is confidence in bribes. No tyrant ever Castrated a deform'd youth in his cruel palace: Nor did Nero ravish a noble youth club-footed, or one With a wen, and swelling equally in his belly and hump. Go now, and delight in the beauty of your young man, 310 Whom greater dangers await. He will become a public Adulterer, and will fear whatsoever punishment an angry Husband exacts: nor will he be happier than the star Of Mars, that he should never fall into snares: but sometimes That pain exacts more than any law to pain 315 from beauty, namely, that of being taken into the palaces of princes and great men, where they were kept for unnatural purposes, and castrated, in order to make their voices like those of women; now this might be the consequence of being handsome, but no deformed and ugly youth was ever served so. See sat. vi. 368—72.

308 Nero ravish, &c.] Alludes to the horrid amours of Nero with Sporus, whom he dressed in woman's apparel, and is said to have married. See sat. i. 60, note.

309. A wen.] Struma signifies a swelling, or wen, arising from a scrophulous habit, like what we call the king's evil. Strumosus, one that has this disorder.

--- Swelling, &c.] i.e. Pot-bellied and hump-backed.

310. Go now, &c. An ironical apostrophe to the mother (see 1, 289-91.) who is wishing for beautiful children.

311. Greater dangers, &c.] The older he grows, the more dangers will he be exposed to, even greater than those already mentioned.

— He will become, &c.] He will intrigue with married women, and, on detection by the husbands, be exposed to all the suffering which their rage and jeaously may inflict.

313. Happier than the star, &c.] As all destiny was supposed to be governed by the stars, so the word star (per metonym.) may signify destiny.—Will he have better luck than Mars, who, when in an amour with Venus, was surprised by her husband Vulcau, who enclosed them with a net, and exposed them to the sight of all the gods.

315. That pain.] Which an adulterer may have inflicted on him by an enraged husband.

Concessit. Necat, hic ferro, secat ille cruentis

Verberibus, quosdam mœchos et mugilis intrat.

Sed tuus Endymion dilectæ fiet adulter

Matronæ: mox cum dederit Servilia nummos,

Fiet et illius, quam non amat: exuet omnem

Corporis ornatum: quid enim ulla negaverit udis

Inguinibus, sive est hæc Hippia, sive Catulla?

Deterior totos habet illic fæmina mores.

Sed casto quid forma nocet? quid profuit olim

Hippolyto grave propositum? quid Bellerophonti?

Erubuit nempe hæc, ceu fastidita repulsa:

Nec Sthenobæa minus quam Cressa excanduit, et se

Concussêre ambæ. Mulier sævissima tunc est,

315. Than any law, &c.] i e. The pain which the gallant may suffer from the husband may possibly exceed any that the law would inflict, or has allowed, for such an offence.

316. With a sword.] Ferrum means any tool or weapon made with iron.—There seems here to be an imitation of Hor. lib. i. sat. ii.

1. 40-46.

316-17. With bloody scourges.] i. e. Most barbarously flogs the gallant with scourges, the blood following the strokes:

Ad mortem cæsus. Hor. ubi. supr.

317. The nullet, &c.] This was a punishment sometimes inflicted on adulterers, when caught in the fact, and must be attended with the most exeruciating pain. It was done by thrusting the fish up the fundament, and then drawing it out, with the fins laying hold of and tearing the part.

318. But your Endymion.] Another ironical apostrophe to the mother. See before, note on l. 310.

Endymion was a shepherd, fabled to have been fallen in love with by Cynthia, or the moon, who, that she might kiss him, laid him asleep on mount Latmus, in Caria, near the coast of the Archipelago.

The poet uses the name Endymion, here, in derision of the mother, whom he supposes to be so fond of her son, and so pleased with his beauty, as to think him as handsome, at least, as Endymion himself, and as likely to excite the love of some favourite lady, as Endymion was to excite the love of Conthia, and who will think to have him all to herself.—No, says the poet, this will only last till some lucrative temptation comes in his way, and then he will be as bad as others and just as profligate—for

319. When Servilia, &c.] This name may here be put for any lewd and profligate adulteress, who hired lovers for her pleasures. There may probably be an allusion to Servilia, the mother of Brutus, and sister of Cato, with whom Cæsar lived in illicit commerce.

When such a one pays him well, however he may dislike her person, he will be at her service.

Has granted. One kills with a sword, another cuts with bloody Scourges, and some adulterers the mullet enters.

But your Endymion will become the adulterer of some beloved

Matron: presently when Servilia shall give him money, He will become hers too whom he loves not: she will put off 320

Every ornament of her body: for what will any woman deny to Those she likes, whether she be Hippia or Catulla?

There a had woman has her whole manners.

But how does beauty hurt the chaste? what, once on a time, did

A solemn resolution benefit Hyppolitus? what Bellerophon? 325

Truly this redden'd as if scorned by a repulse:

Nor was Sthenobœa less on fire than the Cretan, and both Vexed themselves. A woman is then most cruel

320. Put off, &c.] She will strip herself of all her jewels and finery, part with every thing that's valuable, to supply the means of rewarding her lover.

322. Hippia.] See sat. vi. 82—112. A prodigal adulteress.
— Catulla.] See sat. ii. 49. A poor harlot.

q. d. However different in their circumstances, they will all meet in this point, viz. to spare nothing where a lover is in question.

323. There a bad woman.] On that one principle of self-gratification she forms all her conduct-there she shews herself kind, gencrous, and liberal, however worse in general than others.

324. How does beauty, &c.] Granting that beauty may be per-nicious, in instances like those above mentioned, yet how can it injure the chaste and virtuous?

325. A solemn resolution, &c.] This was the solemn resolve of Hippolytus, to refuse the love of his step-mother Phædra, who, for this, accused him of tempting her to incest. He fled away in a chariot by the sea side, but the horses taking fright at the sea-calves lying on the shore, overturned the chariot, and killed him.

- Bellerophon. Sthenobæa (the wife of Pætus, king of the Argives) falling in love with him, he refused her; at which she was so incensed, that she accused him to her husband: this forced him upon desperate adventures, which he overcame. Sthenobæa, hearing of his success, killed herself.

326. This redden'd, &c.] Phædra reddened with anger and resentment, as thinking herself despised.

327. Sthenobaa, &c.] See note on 1. 325,

--- The Cretan. Phadra was the daughter of Minos, king of Crete.

- Both.] Phædra and Sthenobæa.

328. Vexed themselves.] Concussere-The verb concutio literally signifies to shake, jog, or stir; and, when applied to the mind, to trouble, vex, or disquiet. Here it intimates, that these women shook or stirred themselves, into a fit of rage and vexation. It seems to be used metaphorically, from the custom of the wrestlers and box-

340

Cum stimulos odio pudor admovet. Elige quidnam
Suadendum esse putes, cui nubere Cæsaris uxor

Destinat: optimus hic, et formosissimus idem
Gentis patriciæ rapitur miser extinguendus

Messalinæ oculis: dudum sedet illa parato
Flammeolo; Tyriusque palam genialis in hortis
Sternitur, et ritu decies centena dabuntur

Antiquo: veniet cum signatoribus auspex.

Hæc tu secreta, et paucis commissa putabas?

Non nisi legitime vult nubere. Quid placeat, dic:

Nî parere velis, pereundum est ante lucernas:

ers at the theatres, who, before they engaged, gave themselves blows on the breast, or sides, to excite anger and fury. Thus the lion is said to shake his mane, and lash himself with his tail when he would be furious.

Si scelus admittas, dabitur mora parvula, dum res

328. Most cruel, &c.] A woman is then most savage and relentless, when, on being disappointed, the fear of shame adds spurs to her resentment, and her passion of love is changed to hatred. See Gen. xxxix. 7—20.

Virgil represents Juno as stirred up to her relentless hatred to Æneas, and the Trojans, from several motives; among the rest, from the contempt which had been shewn her by Paris, in his judgment against her at mount Ida.

Necdum etiam causæ irarum, sævique dolores, Exciderant animo, manet alta mente repôstum Judicium Paridis, spretæque injuria formæ, &c. &c. Æt

Æn. i. 29, 30, 31.

See also Æn. v. 5-7.

329. Choose, &c.] i. e. Think it over, and determine, all things considered, what advice you would give.

330. To him whom, &c.] Silius is meant here, a noble Roman, whom the empress Messalina so doated upon, that she made him put away his wife Julia Syllana, and resolved to marry him in the absence of her husband, the emperor Claudius, who was gone no farther than Ostia, a city near the mouth of the Tiber.

333. By the eyes, &c.] By her having fixed her eyes upon him, so as to become enamoured with him.—Of the horrid lewdness of this empress, see sat. vi. 115-31.

- Long she sits, &c.] The time seems long to her, while waiting for Silius.

333—4. Prepared bridal veil.] Which she had prepared for the ceremony. See sat. ii. l. 124, note on the word flammea; and sat. vi. 224.

334. Openly, &c.] She transacts her matter openly, without fear or shame; accordingly she omits nothing of the marriage ceremony—she put on the flame-coloured marriage veil—the conjugal bed was sumptiously adorned with purple, and prepared in the Lucullan gardens, a place of public resort. See note on 1. 338.

When shame adds goads to hatred. Choose what
You think to be advised, to him whom Cæsar's wife destines
To marry: this the best and most beautiful too
Of a patrician family is hurried, a wretch, to be destroy'd
By the eyes of Messalina: long she sits in her prepared Bridal veil, and openly the Tyrian marriage-bed is strowed
In the gardens, and ten times an hundred will be given by ancient 335
Rite: the soothsayer, with the signers, will come.
Do you think these things secret, and committed to a few?
She will not marry unless lawfully. Say—what like you?—
Unless you will obey, you must perish before candle-light.
If you commit the crime, a little delay will be given, till the thing 340

335. Ten times an hundred.] She had her portion ready, according to ancient custom. On this instance it amounted to the vast sum of one thousand sestertia. See sat. i. l. 406, note. This was supposed to be given to the husband, in consideration of the burdens of matrimony.

336. Soothsayer—signers, &c.] The soothsayer, who always attended on such occasions. Valer. lib. ii. says, that, among the ancients, nothing of consequence was undertaken, either in private or public, without consulting the auspices—hence a soothsayer attended on marriages. Auspex—quasi avispex—because they divined from the flight and other actions of birds.

The signatories were a sort of public notaries, who wrote and attested wills, deeds, marriage-settlements, &c. These also were present; for, before the marriage, they wrote down in tables (tabulis—see sat. ii. 58, note) by way of record, the form of the contract, to which they, with the witnesses, set their seals.

337. These things secret, &c.] That she does things privately, so that only a few chosen secret friends should know them? by no means.

338. Unless lawfully.] She determines to marry publicly, with all the usual forms and ceremonies; and this, says Tacitus, in the face of the senate, of the equestrian order, and of the whole people and soldiery. See Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. xiv. p. 344, note i.

- Say, what like you? Quid placeat—what it may please you to do.—Say, Silius, which part will you take in such a situation—what do you think best to do, under so fatal a dilemma?

839. Unless, &c.] If you refuse this horrid woman's offer, she will have you murdered before night.

340. If you commit the crime.] Of marrying the wife of another.

—— A little delay, &c.] You will probably live for a few days; the public rumour will reach the prince's ears, though later than the ears of others, as he will probably be the last who hears the disho-

VQL. 11,

Nota urbi et populo, contingat principis aures:
Dedecus ille domûs sciet ultimus. Interea tu
Obsequere imperio, si tanti est vita diêrum
Paucorum; quicquid melius, leviusque putaris,
Præbenda est gladio pulchra hæc et candida cervix.

345

Nil ergo optabunt homines? si consilium vis,
PERMITTES IPSIS EXPENDERE NUMINIBUS, QUID CONVENIAT NOBIS, REBUSQUE SIT UTILE NOSTRIS.
Nam pro judundis aptissima quæque dabunt Dî.
CARIOR EST ILLIS HOMO, QUAM SIBI: nos animorum Impulsu, et cæcâ magnâque cupidine ducti,
Conjugium petimus, partumque uxoris: at illis
Notum, qui pueri, qualisque futura sit uxor.
Ut tamen et poscas aliquid, voveasque sacellis
Exta, et candiduli divina tomacula porci;

355

nour done to his family, few, perhaps, daring to break such a thing to him.

343. The command. Of Messalina.

--- If the life of a few days, &c.] If you think that living a few days more or less is of so much consequence, that you will sooner commit a crime of such magnitude to gain a short respite, than risk an earlier death, by avoiding the commission of it, then to be sure you must obey; but whichever way you determine-

345, Neck, &c.] This beautiful person of yours will be sacrificed—either to Messalina's resentment, if you don't comply, or to the emperor's, if you do. However, the marriage took place, and they pleased themselves in all festivity that day and night; afterwards Silius was seized, by the emperor's command, and put to death—thus exhibiting a striking example of the sad consequences which often attend being remarkable for beauty. Messalina, soon after, was killed in the gardens of Lucullus, whither she had retired. See Ant. Univ. Hist, vol. xiv. p. 348, 9.

346. Shall men therefore, &c.] If all you say be considered, the consequence seems to be, that it is wrong to wish, or pray, for any thing.

Have advice. If you will be advised what is best to do, I answer-

347. Permit the gods, &c.] Leave all to the gods; they know what is best for us, and what is most suitable to our circumstances and situations.

349. Instead of pleasant things, &c.] They can, though we cannot, foresee all consequences which will arise, and therefore, instead of bestowing what may be pleasing, they will give what is most proper, most suitable, and best adapted to our welfare; and this, because mortals are dearer to them than we are to ourselves. Comp. 1 Pct. v. 7.

350—1. By the impulse, &c.] We are impelled to wish for things, merely from the strong desire we have to possess them; and

Known to the city and to the people, reaches the prince's ears, (He will last know the disgrace of his house.) In the mean while Do thou obey the command, if the life of a few days is Of such consequence; whatever you may think best and easiest, This fair and white neck is to be yielded to the sword.

This fair and white neck is to be yielded to the sword.

Shall men therefore wish for nothing? If you will have advice,
PERMIT THE GODS THEMSELVES TO CONSIDER WHAT MAY SUIT US, AND BE USEFUL TO OUR AFFAIRS.
For, instead of pleasant things, the gods will give whatever are fittest.
MAN IS DEARER TO THEM, THAN TO HIMSELF: we, led by the 350
Impulse of our minds, and by a blind, and great desire,
Ask wedlock, and the bringing forth of our wife: but to them
Is known, what children, and what sort of a wife she may be.
However, that you may ask something, and vow in chapels
Entrails, and the divine puddings of a whitish swine, do not reflect, as we ought, on the blindness of our minds, which cannot see farther than present things, and therefore are led to judge amiss of what may be for our good in the end.

355

352. Wedlock, and the bringing forth, &c.] We pray for a wife, and that that wife may bring forth children; but the gods only can foresee how either the wife or children may turn out, consequently, whether the gratification of our wishes may be for our happiness.

354. Ask something.] In the former part of this fine passage, the poet speaks of leaving all to the gods, in such an absolute and unreserved manner, as seemingly to exclude the exercise of prayer: as to outward things, such as power, riches, beauty, and the like, he certainly does, inasmuch as these matters ought to be left entirely to Providence, we not being able to judge about them; and, indeed, as he has shewn throughout the preceding part of this Satire, the having of these things may prove ruinous and destructive, therefore are not proper subjects either of desire or prayer: but now the poet finely shews, that there are subjects of prayer, which are not only desireable, but to be petitioned for, as conducive to our real good and happiness.

or perhaps any place consecrated to divine worship. Here it may signify the sacred shrines of their gods, before which they offered their vows, prayers, and sacrifices.

355. Entrails.] The bowels, or inwards, of animals, which were execta, (unde exta,) cut out, and offered in sacrifice.

—— Divine fuddings, &c.] Tomacula, or tomacla, from Gr. TELLIN, to cut, were puddings, or sausages, made of the liver and flesh of the animal, chopped and mixed together, and were called also farcimina—gut-puddings; and, like our sausages, were made by stuffing a gut taken from the animal with the above ingredients. These accompanied the sacrifices, and were therefore called divine.

ORANDUM EST, UT SIT MENS SANA IN CORPORE SANO. Fortem posce animum, et mortis terrore carentem; Qui spatium vitæ extremum inter munera ponat Naturæ, qui ferre queat quoscunque labores; Nesciat irasci; cupiat nihil; et potiores Herculis ærumnas credat, sævosque labores, Et Venere, et cænis, et plumis Sardanapali. Monstro quod ipse tibi possis dare: Semita certe

360

352. Whitish swine.] This was offered to Diana, under the name of Lucina, in order to make her propitious to child-bearing women, as also on other occasions. See Hor. lib. iii. ode xxii.

356. You must pray, &c.] As if the poet had said—"I by no means object either to sacrifices or prayers to the gods—provided what is asked be reasonable and good, we cannot be too earnest."

"what is asked be reasonable and good, we cannot be too earnest."

— A sound mind, &c.] q. d. Health of body and mind is the first of blessings here below—without a sound mind we can neither judge, determine, or act aright—without bodily health there can be no enjoyment.

357. A mind strong, &c.] Fortitude, by which, unmoved and undismayed, you can look upon death without terror.

358. The last stage, &c.] Ultimum spatium, in the chariot and horse-racing, signified the space between the last bound or mark, and the goal where the race ended. Hence, by an easy metaphor, it denotes the latter part of life, when we are near our end, and are about to finish our course of life.

So the apostle, 2 Tim. iv. 7. says-Tor deoutor TETELERA-I have finished my course.

358-9. Gifts of nature.] The word munus either signifies a gift, or a duty or office. If we take munera, here, in the former sense, we must understand the poet to mean, that true fortitude, so far from fearing death as an evil, looks on it as a gift or blessing of nature. So Mr. DRYDEN:

A soul that can securely death defy, And count it nature's privilege to die.

In the other sense, we must understand the poet to mean, that death will be looked upon, by a wise and firm mind, as an office, or duty, which all are to fulfil, and therefore to be submitted to as such, not with fear and dismay, but with as much willingness and complacency as any other duty which nature has laid upon us.

359. Any troubles, &c.] Any misfortunes, without murmuring and repining, much less sinking under them.

ons of the soul, as to control, on all occasions, those perturbations which arise within, and produce a violence of anger.

--- Covets nothing.] Being content and submissive to the will of providence, desires nothing but what it has, neither coveting what others have, or uneasy to obtain what we ourselves have not.

YOU MUST PRAY, THAT YOU MAY HAVE A SOUND MIND IN A SOUND BODY.

Ask a mind, strong, and without the fear of death;
Which puts the last stage of life among the gifts of Nature; which can bear any troubles whatsoever;
Knows not to be angry; covets nothing; and which thinks
The toils of Hercules, and his cruel labours, better Than the lasciviousness, and luxury, and plumes of Sardanapalus.
I shew what yourself may give to yourself: Surely the only

361. The toils of Hercules, &c.] Alluding to what are usually called-the twelve labours of Hercules.

362. Than the lasciviousness, Sc.] Such a mind as has been described, esteems the greatest sufferings and labours, even such as Hercules underwent, more eligible than all the pleasures and enjoyments of sensuality.

— Sardanapalus.] The last king of Assyria, whose life was such a scene of lasciviousness, luxury, and effiminacy, that he fell into the utmost contempt in the eyes of his subjects, who revolted; and he, being overcome, made a pile, set it on fire, and burnt himself, and his most valuable moveables, in it: "The only thing," says Justin, "he ever did like a man."

As the word venere, in this line, is metonymically used for lewdness, or lasciviousness, Venus being the goddess of these, and comis for all manner of gluttony and luxury, so plumis may here be used to denote softness and effeminacy of dress.

Plumæ, in one sense, is used sometimes to denote plates, scales, or spangles, wrought on the armour or accourtements of men or horses, one whereof was laid upon another. Garments also were adorned with gold and purple plumage, feather-work. Ainsw. See Æn. xi.

1. 770, 1.

363. What yourself may give, &c.] While others are disquieting themselves and asking for the gratification of their foolish and hurtful desires, let me tell you the only way to solid peace and comfort, and what it is in your own power to bestow upon yourself—I mean, and it is most certainly true, that there is no other way to happiness, but in the paths of virtue. Comp. Eccl. xii. 13, 14. The heathen thought that every man was the author of his own virtue and wisdom—but there were some at Rome, at that time, who could have taught Juvenal, that—EVERY GOOD GIFT, AND EVERY PERFECT GIFT, IS FROM ABOVE, AND COMETH DOWN FROM THE FATHER OF LICHTS.—Comp. Jer. x. 23.

Hor. lib. i. epist. xviii. l. 111, 12, says:

Sed satis est orare Jovem qui donat et aufert, Det vitam, det opes, æquum mî animum ipse parabo.

Cic. Nat. Deorum, lib. iii. c. xxxvi. declares it as a general opinion, that mankind received from the gods the outward conveniences of life—virtutem autem nemo unquam acceptam Deo retulit—" but TRANQUILLE PER VIRTUTEM PATET UNICA VITÆ. Nullum numen habes, si sit prudentia: sed te Nos facimus, Fortuna, deam, cœloque locamus.

365

"virtue none ever yet thought they received from the Deity." And again—"this is the persuasion of all, that fortune is to be had from the gods, wisdom from ourselves." Again—"who ever thanked the gods for his being a good man?—men pray to Jupiter, not that he would make them just, temperate, wise, but rich and prosuperous." 'Thus—"they became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened; professing themselves to be wise, they became fools." Rom. i. 21, 2.

365. You have no deity, &c.] If men would act prudently and wisely, we should no more hear of good or ill luck, as if the affairs of men were left to the disposal of Fortune, or chance, who manages them in a way of sport and caprice, independently of any endeavours of their own—ludum insolentem ludere pertinax. (See Hor. lib. iii. ode xxix. l. 49—52.) The goddess Fortune would no longer be a divinity in the eyes of mortals, if they were themselves prudent and careful in the management of themselves and their affairs.

It is not easy to do justice to the word numen, in this place, by any single one in the English language; at least I am not acquainted with any that can at once comprehend all its meanings: it includes the will, pleasure, and determination or decree of a deity—power, authority, a divine impulse—divine protection and favour—influence—also a deity, a god;—all this the heathen attributed to their goddess FORTUNE. 366. Thee we make a goddess, &c.] The ancient Greeks and Romans made a goddess of Fortune, which is, in reality, nothing more than a sudden and unexpected event of things-from FORS, luck, chance, hazard. These the heathen, who knew not God, deified in the imaginary being FORTUNE, which they substituted in the place of that wise, though mysterious, government of the world, and all things in it, by HIM "whose judgments are unsearchable, and "whose ways are past finding out!"—He has given to man, that "wisdom which is profitable to direct" (Eccl. x. 10.) in the affairs and concerns of common life; the due and proper exercise of which is the duty of man towards himself. This neglected, leaves him without excuse, whatever evil may happen: yet, under the strictest exercise of human wisdom and prudence, let us remember, that disappointment may defeat the ends proposed-this ought to awaken our confidence in the SUPREME DISPOSER OF ALL EVENTS, who knows what is best for us :

"And that should teach us,
"There's a divinity that shapes our ends,

"Rough-hew them how we will." HAMLET, act V. sc. ii.

The Greeks had many temples dedicated to Fortune, under the name of TYXH. Pindar makes her one of the destinies, the daughter of Jupiter. Ancus Martius, king of the Romans, first built a temple at Rome to this deity. Servius Tullus also built one at the PATH TO A QUIET LIFE LIES OPEN THROUGH VIRTUE. You have no deity, O Fortune, if there be prudence; but Thee we make a goddess, and place in heaven.

365

capitol. Afterwards the Romans consecrated temples to her under various titles, as Fortuna libera, redux, publica, equestris, &c. See BROUGHTON, Bibl. Hist. Sacr. tit FORTUNE.

Horace's description of this goddess, and her great power, forms one of the most beautiful of his odes. See lib. i. ode xxxv.

O Diva gratum quæ regis Antium, Præsens, &c. &c.

366. Place in heaven.] Give her a place among the gods.—q. d. As things are, men are foolish enough to erect temples to Fortune, make her a goddess, worship her as such, and attribute all their miscarriages and troubles, not to their own neglect, folly, and mismanagement, but to the power and influence of this imaginary deity.

For the ideas which the Romans entertained about the goddess

Fortune, see sat. iii. l. 39, 40. Sat. vi. l. 604-8.

I should observe, that some copies read, 1. 365,

Nullum numen abest, &c. No deity is absent, &c.

As if it were said, that if there be prudence, that is, if a man acts wisely and prudently, all the gods are present with him, not one absents himself from him; or, prudence is all-sufficient, and no other deity can be wanting. But the sense first above given, on the reading—nullum numen habes—appears to be most consonant to the intention of the two lines taken together.

I know not how to end my observations on this Tenth Satire of Juvenal, without calling it the finest piece, in point of composition, matter, and sentiment, which we have derived from heathen antiquity.—I should call it inimitably fine, had not the late Dr. Samuel Johnson's poem, on "The vanity of human wishes," appeared -such a copy, of such an original, is rarely to be met with.

END OF THE TENTH SATIRE.

SATIRA XI.

ARGUMENT.

The poet takes occasion, from an invitation which he gives to his friend Persicus to dine with him, to commend frugality, and to expose and reprehend all manner of intemperance and debauchery; but more particularly the luxury used by the Romans in their feasting. He instances some leved practices at their feasts, and reproves the nobility for making lewdness and debauchery the chiefest of their pleasures

TTICUS eximie si cœnat, lautus habetur: Si Rutilus demens: quid enim majore cachinno Excipitur vulgi, quam pauper Apicius? omnis Convictus, thermæ, stationes, omne theatrum De Rutilo. Nam dum valida ac juvenilia membra Sufficiunt galeæ, dumque ardens sanguine, fertur (Non cogente quidem, sed nec prohibente Tribuno) Scripturus leges, et regia verba lanistæ. Multos porro vides, quos sæpe elusus ad ipsum Line 1. If Atticus, &c.] The name of a very eminent person in Rome; but here it is meant to signify any one of great wealth and quality. If such a one gives a great entertainment, it being agreeable to his rank and fortune, deserves not any other name than that of splendour and munificence.

2. If Rutilus, &c.] One, who, by his extravagant gluttony, was reduced to the most shameful degree of poverty.

This likewise, is here made use of as a common name for all such characters.

If such a one make a splendid feast, we must call him mad.

2-3. A greater laugh, &c.] What can be a greater subject of ridicule among the vulgar, than Apicius in rags?

3. Apicius.] A noted epicure in the time of Nero; he spent an immense estate in eating and drinking: growing poor and despised, he hanged himself. See sat. iv. l. 23.

4. Company.] Convictus signifies a living together in one house, or at one table, and, perhaps, what we call clubs, or ordinaries.

--- Baths. Thermæ—hot baths. These were much resorted to, and were places of great gossipping and tattling. See sat. vii. 1. 233, and note.

The stations. Particular places in the city, where idle people

SATIRE XI.

ARGUMENT.

He opposes the temperance and frugality of the greatest men in former ages, to the riot and intemperance of the present. He concludes with repeating his invitation to his friend, advising him to a neglect of all care and disquiet for the present, and a moderate use of pleasures for the future.

IF Atticus sups sumptuously, he is accounted splendid:
If Rutilus, mad: for what is received with a greater Laugh of the vulgar, than poor Apicius? every Company, the baths, the stations, every theatre, [talk]
Of Rutilus. For while his strong and youthful limbs
Suffice for a helmet, and while ardent in blood, he is reported
(The tribune not compelling indeed, but neither prohibiting)
To be about to write the laws, and princely words of a fencer.
Moreover, you see many, whom the often-eluded creditor is wont used to meet and talk together, perhaps about the market-place, or forum; as in our towns, where there are commonly a number of idle people standing and talking together, in and near the market-place. See Ainsw. Statio, No. 6.

5

5. Of Rutilus.] De-about or concerning Rutilus.-q. d. He is the common subject of conversation at all these places.

--- Youthful-limbs, &c.] While in the prime of life, and fit to bear arms in the laudable service of his country, he is so reduced to poverty, by his luxury and extravagance, as to apply himself to the wretched trade of a fencer, or prize-fighter, for bread.

6. He is reported.] Or fertur may mean he is carried, by the necessity of his circumstances, to copy out the laws, rules, words of command (regia verba) and other matters of knowledge, necessary to make him a fencer, that he may be thoroughly qualified for the art.

7. The tribune not compelling, &c.] Hinting, that, though he was not compelled to such a practice of fencing, by the magistracy, as many had been by Nero for his inhuman diversion, yet it was a shame that he was suffered to undertake it, and not advised, or commanded, by the magistracy, to the contrary. See sat. viii. 193.

9. You see many, Ge.] Such fellows as Rutilus.

. YOL. II.

Creditor introitum solet expectare maselli, 10 Et quibus in solo vivendi causa palato est. Egregius cœnat, meliusque miserrimus horum. Et cito casurus jam perluceute ruinâ. Interea gustus elementa per omnia quærunt, Nunquam animo pretiis obstantibus: interius si 15 Attendas, MAGIS ILLA JUVANT, QUE PLURIS EMUNTUR. Ergo haud difficile est perituram arcessere summam Lancibus oppositis, vel matris imagine fractâ; Et quadringentis nummis condire gulosum Fictile: sic veniunt ad miscellanea lud?. 20 Refert ergo quis hæc eadem paret: in Rutilo nam Luxuria est; in Ventidio laudabile nomen Sumit, et a censu famam trahit. Illum ego jure

9. Often-eluded creditor.] Who had been often promised payment, but deceived over and over again; and who in vain had pursued them to come at his money.

10. Wait for, &c.] Knowing no place so likely to find them at, as in their way to market for provisions, at the entrance to which he places himself, in hopes to catch them, before they had spent the little remains of his money that he had lent them.

11. The purpose, &c. Who have no other design, or end of living, but eating and drinking.

12. The most wretched, &c.] When they are visibly falling into ruin, even the most wretched of them will live more expensively than ever, thinking, perhaps, to put a good face on the matter, the better to conceal their situation, and thus to maintain their credit some little time longer: or, perhaps, from mere desperation, seeing it is too late to retrieve their affairs, and they can be but ruined.—This is no uncommon thing in our day.

14. Meantime.] While they have any thing left.

— They seek, &c.] They ransack, as it were, earth, air, and water, for flesh of beasts, fowl, and fish, for dainties to please their taste.

15. The prices, &c.] They never consider or scruple the price which they are to pay-these do not stand in their way.

16. More intimately, &c.] More closely to the dispositions of such.

—— Please more, &c.] The dish pleases best that is dearest bought; therefore, i.e. to gratify their gluttony—

17. It is not difficult.] They make no sort of difficulty of procuring money, by pawning what they have.

Be wasted, &c.] Which will soon be gone, squandered away presently.

18. Dishes being parened.] Lanx signifies, literally, a great broad plate, a deep dish, or platter, to serve meat up in. Here, by lancibus, perhaps, is to be understood his plate in general, his family-plate, per synec. This he sends to the pawnbrokers to raise money upon for the present supply of his extravagance.

To wait for at the very entrance of the shambles, 10 And to whom the purpose of living is in the palate alone. The most wretched of these, and now soon to fall, (his Ruin already being clear,) sups the more elegantly, and the better. Meantime, they seek a relish thro' all the elements. The prices never opposing their inclination: if you attend 15 More intimately, THOSE THINGS PLEASE MORE, WHICH ARE BOUGHT FOR MORE.

Therefore it is not difficult to procure a sum that will be wasted, Dishes being pawned, or a broken image of their mother, And, for four hundred sesterces, to season a relishing Earthen dish: thus they come to the diet of a prize-fighter. It importeth, therefore, who may prepare these same things-for, in Rutilus,

It is luxury; in Ventidius a laudable name It takes, and derives its fame from his income. I should, by right,

18. Broken image, &c.] A family bust, or statue, broken to pieces that it may not be known, and pawned for the value of the gold or silver only.

19. Four hundred sesterces, &c.] When so many nummi are mentioned, sesterces (sestercii) are usually understood; the sestertius is often called absolutely nummus, because it was in most frequent use. Also, sestertius nummus, about 13d. of our money. See Kennet, book V. part ii. p. 13. Four hundred of these (about 21. 10s.) were laid out in seasoning a single dish.

20. Earthen dish.] Having pawned their plate, they are reduced to earthen ware. The dish is put here, by meton for its con-

-- To the diet, &c.] Miscellanea-a mixture of things without any order, a gallimawfry, an hotchpotch, such as the sword-players and prize fighters used to eat.- From their dainties they are at last reduced to the coarse diet, as well as to the mean occupation, of a common prize fighter. See l. 5, and note 2. Ludî, for ludii, the gen. of ludius—a stage-player, dancer, sword-player, and the like, who play on a stage.

21. It importeth therefore.] q. d. Therefore, that we may judge aright, and not indiscriminately, it importeth us to consider, who gives the entertainment, what are his circumstances-for that may be praise-worthy in those who can afford it, which is highly vicious, and blameable, in those who cannot.

In Rutilus.] Above mentioned. See note on 1. 2 .- To live splendidly, would, in such a one as Rutilus, deserve the name of extravagance and luxury, because he is poor, and can't afford it.

22. Ventidius. A noble Roman, who lived hospitably.

- A laudable name. The entertainments given by such a one are deservedly styled generous and magnificent.

23. Derives its fame.] The commendation which is justly bestowed upon it-its praise.

Despiciam, qui scit quanto sublimior Atlas
Omnibus in Libyâ sit montibus, hic tamen idem
Ignoret, quantum ferratâ distet ab arcâ
Sacculus: e cœlo descendit, γνῶθι σεαυτὸν,
Figendum, et memori tractandum pectore, sive
Conjugium quæras, vel sacri in parte senatûs
Esse velis. Nec enim loricam poscit Achillis
Thersites, in quâ se traducebat Ulysses
Ancipitem. Seu tu magno discrimine causam
Protegere affectas; te consule, dic tibi quis sis;
Orator vehemens, an Curtius, an Matho. Buccæ
Noscenda est mensura tuæ, spectandaque rebus

23. From his income. 1 From the great estate of the giver, who only lives in a magnificence suitable to his income.

23-4. By right, despise, &c.] Or justly, for he deserves it.

24. Atlas.] See sat. viii. l. 32, note.

26. A little bag.] Sacculus—a little bag, pouch, or purse, in which money is put.

27. Iron chest.] The rich used to keep their money in large chests armed with iron, to prevent their being broken open and robbed.

The poet means, that if a man has sense enough to distinguish the size of Atlas from that of other mountains which are inferior in size, and, at the same time, is foolish enough not to see the difference between his own narrow circumstances, and the fortunes of the rich, so as to regulate his manner of living accordingly, he is very deserving of the utmost contempt.

This was a saying of Chilon the Lacedemonian, and a very important one; for on self-know-ledge depends all other that can contribute to the right management and direction of human life: for no man, endowed with this, would plunge himself into difficulties, by undertaking what is beyond the reach of his abilities, either of mind, body, or estate. This apothegm of Chilo's was, with others, written up in golden letters at the temple of Apollo, at Delphos, and was therefore believed to come from heaven. Not but it is very sound theology, to say, that, to have the veil of pride and self-love taken away, so that we know ourselves aright, is the gift of God, and the foundation of all true and saving knowledge. See Jer. xvii. 9, 10.

28. Fixed, and revolved, &c.] As a constant maxim, and principle of action, and, as such, we should ever be mindful of it. Tracto—lit. signifies to handle, which, in a mental sense, by analogy, may signify to revolve in the mind.

29. Wedlock.] This instance of private and domestic concernmay stand also for all others of the like kind, in which self-knowledge is highly profitable to direct aright.

30. Senate. If you wish to be a senator, you ought to know yourself, that you may be able to judge whether you are fit for such

Despise him, who knows how much higher Atlas is Than all the mountains in Libya, yet this same person 25 Be ignorant, how much a little bag differs from an Iron chest: KNOW THYSELF—descended from heaven, To be fixed, and revolved in the mindful breast, whether You may seek wedlock, or would be in a part of For Thersites does not demand the 30 The sacred senate. Breast-plate of Achilles, in which Ulysses exposed himself Doubtful. Or whether you may affect to defend a cause in great Difficulty; consult thyself, tell thyself who thou art, ·A vehement orator, or Curtius, or Matho. The measure of Your abilities is to be known, and regarded in the greatest. 35 an office; for nothing can be more pernicious to the state than unable statesmen, as well as disgraceful to those who are so.

30. Thersites.] See sat. viii. 1. 269, note. Such a fellow as this could never think of contending for the armour of Achilles, or of making a third with Ulysses and Ajax in the dispute about it: he knew himself too well.

31. Exposed himself.] To ridicule—as the daw in the fable exposed itself to the derision of the other birds, when it had dressed itself in the borrowed plumes of the peacock. See Ainsw. Traduco, No. 5.

- 32. Doubtful.] As to his appearance, when he had the armour of Achilles on, no longer bearing his own semblance. Others give this passage another turn, and make it express the modesty of Ulysses, who shewed himself doubtful whether he should demand the armour or not, looking upon himself as unworthy to wear it. So FARNAB.
- 32—3. Great difficulty.] Where the controversy is very hazardous and difficult, and the cause requires an able advocate to defend it.

 33. Consult thyself.] Before you undertake, consult well your abilities for it.

Tell thyself, &c.] After much self-examination, let your own conscience answer, and tell you what manner of man you are.

34. A vehement orator.] Eloquent and powerful.

- Or Curtius.] Montanus, a man of very middling abilities.

—— Or Matho. See sat. i. l. 32, and note; vii. 129.—a fellow of no abilities, who, not succeeding at the bar, turned spy and informer.

35. Your abilities, &c.] Buccæ—lit. cheek, here (by synec.) put for the whole mouth, through which we speak; and this, for speaking itself, by metonym. The poet means, that the extent of a man's capacity should be considered, if he intends to plead at the bar; he should know his own powers of eloquence, and act accordingly.

--- Regarded.] This attention to the fitness of a man for what he undertakes should be regarded in all concerns whatsoever, from the highest to the lowest.

In summis, minimisque; etiam cum piscis emetur: Nec mullum cupias, cum sit tibi gobio tantum In loculis: quis enim te, deficiente crumenâ, Et crescente gula, manet exitus; ære paterno, Ac rebus mersis in ventrem, fœnoris atque Argenti gravis, et pecorum agrorumque capacem ? Talibus a dominis post cuneta novissimus exit Annulus, et digito mendicat Pollio nudo. Non præmaturi cineres, nec funus acerbum Luxuriæ, sed morte magis metuenda senectus. Hi plerumque gradus: conducta pecunia Romz, Et coram dominis consumitur: inde ubi paulum Nescio quid superest, et pallet fœnoris auctor, Qui vertêre solum, Baias, et ad Ostia currunt. Cedere namque foro jam non tibi deterius, quam 50 Esquilias a ferventi migrare Suburrâ. Ille dolor solus patriam fugientibus, illa Mæstitia est, caruisse anno Circensibus uno.

36. A fish, &c.] When he goes to the fish market, if his purse will only afford him a gudgeon, he should not think of buying so dear a fish as a muller; i. e. a man should always proportion his expenses to his pocket.

38. What end, &c.] What must increasing expense and gluttony, and a decreasing and failing purse, end in?

40. In your belly.] Your patrimony, both in goods and land, all spent to gratify your luxury and gluttony, all swallowed up by your voracious appetite.

--- Capable of containing, &c.] Not only the interest and principal of what the father left in personal estate, but also all his land, and stock thereon into the bargain.

By argenti gravis (joined with fœnoris, which signifies interest upon money lent) the principal money itself may be understood. Or the epithet gravis may here signify the best silver money, in contradistinction to the tenue argentum, venæque secundæ, sat. ix. 31.

Many interpret argenti gravis to denote silver in the rude heavy mass.

42. Such masters.] i. e. Owners, possessors.

--- After all, &c.] When all else is spent and gone.

43. The ring.] The mark of honour and distinction worn by Roman knights. They must be driven very hard to part with this; but having, by their extravagance, reduced themselves below the fortune and rank of the equestrian order, they have no right to claim it, or to wear the badge of it.

-- Pollio.] He was brought to that pass by his gluttony, that he was forced to sell his ring, and then beg for a livelihood.

-- Naked finger.] His finger bare, bereft of the ring which he used to wear upon it.

44. Ashes, &c.] Death never comes too soon; the funeral pile,

And in the least affairs; even when a fish shall be bought: Nor should you desire a mullet when you have only a gudgeon In your purse: for what end awaits thee, your purse failing, Your gluttony increasing: your paternal fortune, And substance, sunk in your belly, capable of containing 40 Interest and principal, and fields and flocks? From such masters, after all, last goes forth The ring, and Pollio begs with a naked finger. Ashes are not premature, nor is a funeral bitter To luxury, but old age more to be feared than death. 45 These are ofttimes the steps: money is borrowed at Rome, And consumed before the owners: then, when a little, I don't know what, is left, and the usurer is pale, Those who have changed the soil, run to Baiæ, and to Ostia. rate For, to depart from the forum, is not worse to you than To migrate to Esquilize from the hot Suburra. That is the only grief to those who fly their country, that The sorrow, to have been deprived of the Circensian games for one year.

which reduces them to ashes, is never bitter to such as these, whose maxim is--" a short life and a merry one," or, "let us eat and "drink, for to-morrow we die."

45. To luxury.] To gluttons and spendthrifts.

- More to be feared, &c.] Because it can be attended with nothing but poverty and disease.

46. Oftimes the steps.] Plerumque-for the most part, most commonly the degrees by which they proceed.

Borrowed at Rome.] They first take up money at Rome.
47. Before the owners.] Spent before the face of the late owners—i. e. of the people who lent it.

--- When a little, &c.] Before it is all gone, and they have just enough to carry them off, whatever the sum may be I don't know-

48. The usurer.] Lit. the increaser of interest—the money-lender—who, perhaps, may have taken such an advantage of their necessities, as to make them pay interest upon interest—

- Is pale.] With the fear of losing all his money.

49. Changed the soil.] Vertere solum, signifies to run one's country. Cic. pro domo. Those who have made off.

- Baix, and to Ostia.] See sat. iii. l. 4; and sat. viii. 171, n. 2. from whence they might take shipping, and make their escape into some other country.

50. For, to depart, &c.] To run away from Rome for debt is so common, that there is no more discredit in it, than changing the hot street of the Suburra (see sat. iii. v.) for the cool air of the Esquilian hill. See sat. v. 1. 77, 8. Foro is here put, by synec. for Rome itself. Or to depart from the forum, may imply their running away from justice.

53. Circensian games, &c.] These people have no other sorrow,

Sanguinis in facie non hæret gutta; morantur Pauci ridiculum, et fugientem ex urbe pudorem. 53 Experiêre hodie numquid pulcherrima dictu, Persice, non præstem vita, nec moribus, et re; Sed laudem siliquas occultus ganeo, pultes Coram aliis dictem puero; sed in aure placentas, Nam, cum sis conviva mihi promissus, habebis 60 Evandrum, venies Tirynthius, aut minor illo Hospes, et ipse tamen contingens sanguine cœlum; Alter aquis, alter flammis ad sidera missus. Fercula nunc audi nullis ornata macellis: De Tiburtino veniet pinguissimus agro 65 Hædulus, et toto grege mollior, inscius herbæ, Necdum ausus virgas humilis mordere salicti; or regret, at flying their country, than arises from their not being able to partake of the public diversions during their absence. See sat. iii. I. 223, note.

54. Drop of blood, &c.] They have lost all shame—they cannot blush.

54-5. Detain modesty, Sc.] The virtue of modesty is laughed at and ridiculed: she is, as it were, taking her flight from the city, and very few are for stopping her, or delaying her retreat.

56. This day, &c.] When you are to dine with me.

Experience, &c.] i. e. You shall be convinced, by your own experience, whether I am an hypocrite, saying one thing and doing another; and while I have been laying down such fair and becoming rules of economy, in what I have been saying, I practice them not, in fact, neither with respect to my way of life, nor my moral conduct.

—Re—in reality. Ter. And. act v. sc. i. l. 5.

58. Pulse.] Siliquas denotes bean or pea-pods, or the like; also the pulse contained therein—it stands for frugal and homely diet in general.

— Water-gruel.] Pultes.—Puls signifies a kind of diet which the ancients used, made of meal and water sodden together.—This also stands here for any thing of that homely kind.

59. Cakes.] These were dainties made with honey and other sweetmeats. Hor. Ep. lib. i. x. l. 11, 12, says:

Liba recuso,

Pane egeo jam mellitis potiore placentis.

I nauseate honied cakes, and long for bread.

FRANCIS.

You shall see, says the poet, whether I am a glutton in secret, though professedly abstemious; whether I recommend a meal of herbs, yet secretly gormandize on dainties; and when before company I order my servant to bring some homely fare, I secretly whisper him to bring some very luscious and delicate food.

60. Promised guest.] Since you have promised to be my guest at dinner.

You shall have.] i. e. You shall find in me-

Not a drop of blood sticks in the face, few detain Modesty, ridiculous and flying out of the city.

55

60

You shall this day experience, whether things most fair

In word, Persicus, I cannot practise, neither in my life, nor in my morals, and in deed;

But, a secret glutton, I can praise pulse, order water-gruel To the servant before others, but, in his ear, cakes.

For, since you are a promised guest to me, you shall have Evander, you shall come Tirynthius, or a guest less Than he, and yet he akin to heaven in blood, The one sent to the stars by water, the other by flames.

Now hear of dishes furnished from no shambles:
There shall come, from my Tiburtine farm, the fattest
Young kid, and more tender than all the flock, ignorant of grass,
Nor yet daring to bite the twig of the low willow;

61. Evander.] A king of Arcadia, who, having accidentally slain his father, sailed into Italy, and possessed himself of the place where afterwards Rome was built. He entertained Hercules, and hospitably received Æneas when he landed in Italy. See Virg. Æn. viii. 154, et seq.

— Tirynthius.] A name of Hercules, the son of Jupiter and Alcmena—she being born at Tiryns, a city of Peloponnesus, he was therefore called Tirynthius.

A guest less, &c.] Meaning Eneas—inferior in birth.
62. Yet he akin, &c.] Eneas was the son of Anchises and the goddess Venus.

63. By water.] Eneas was drowned in the Numicus, a river in Italy, which on that account was fabulously consecrated.

--- The other by flames.] Hercules burnt himself to death on Mount Œta, in Thessaly.

The poet seems to mean, that Persicus, his friend, should, on his coming to dine with him, find him another Evander with respect to the homeliness and simplicity of his entertainment; and that Persicus might consider himself as Hercules, or Æneas, or indeed both, with regard to the welcome he would find, and the hospitable reception he would meet with.

64. Now hear, &c.] Now hear your bill of fare, not a single article of which is furnished from the butcher's or poulterer's. Ma-cellum signifies a market for all manuer of provisions.

65. Tiburtine farm.] Tibur, a pleasant city of Italy, situate on the river Anio, about sixteen miles from Rome—in the neighbourhood of this, Juvenal had a farm. See Hor. Od. lib. i. ode vii. et al.

66. Ignorant of grass.] Never suffered to graze, but, like our house-lamb, fatted by suckling.

67. Nor yet daring.] Or attempting to browse on the twigs of the willow, which kids are very fond of, but they are apt to make the flesh bitter.

Qui plus lactis habet quam sanguinis; et montani
Asparagi, posito quos legit villica fuso.
Grandia præterea, tortoque calentia fœno
Ova adsunt ipsis cum matribus; et servatæ
Parte anni, quales fuerant in vitibus uvæ:
Signinum, Syriumque pyrum: de corbibus îsdem
Æmula Picenis, et odoris mala recentis,
Nec metuenda tibi, siccatum frigore postquam
Autumnum, et crudi posuere pericula succi.
Hæc olim nostri jam luxuriosa senatûs
Cæna fuit: Curius, parvo quæ legerat horto,
Ipse focis brevibus ponebat oluscula: quæ nunc
Squallidus in magna fastidit compede fossor,
Qui meminit, calidæ sapiat quid vulva popinæ.
Sicci terga suis, rara pendentia crate,

75

80

70

68—9. Mountain asparaguses.] Some wild sorts that grew on the mountains, inferior in flavour to the asparagus altilis, or that which was carefully cultivated in garden-beds. Asparagi, plur. may mean the young shoots of herbs that are to be eaten. See sat. v. 81, note.

69. Bailiff's wife, &c.] The feminine of villicus, a steward or bailiff, signifies the wife of such a one, a farmer's wife, and the like. The asparagus gotten for the dinner was not of the sort which is raised at a great expense, and gathered by people kept for such purposes, but the wild sort, and gathered by a woman, who at other times was employed in spinning.

70. Eggs-warm, &c.] Large new-laid eggs, brought in the nest, which was made of hay twisted together.

71. Are added. i. e. To the bill of fare.

- With the mothers, &c.] The same hens that laid them.

72. Grapes, &c.] Preserved for some time after their being gathered, so as to look quite fresh, as much so as when they were upon the vines.

73. The Signian.] Signia was a town in Italy, famous for pears and for rough wines—

Spumans immiti Signia musto.

SIL. viii. 380.

The Syrian pear.] These came from Tarentum, a city of Calabria, but were originally brought from Syria.

74. Apples, rivals to the Picene. Horace says, that the apples from Tibur were not so good as the Picene.

Picenis cedunt pomis Tiburtia succo.

Lib. ii. sat. iv. 70.

Therefore it was a high commendation of his apples, to say they rivalled those of Picenum.

- Recent odour.] Smelling as fresh as if just gathered.

75. To be feared, &c. You need not fear to eat them, since the cruder juices which they have in autumn are dried away, and now they are mellowed by the cold of winter, so that you are in no

Which has more of milk than blood. And mountain Asparaguses, which my bailiff's wife gather'd, laying her spindle aside. Great eggs besides, warm in the twisted hay, 70 Are added, with the mothers themselves; and, kept for a Part of the year, grapes, such as they were upon the vines: The Signian and Syrian pear: From the same baskets Apples, rivals to the Picene, and of a recent odour, Nor to be feared by you, after they have laid aside 75 The autumn, dried by cold, and the dangers of a crude juice. This, a long time ago, was the luxurious supper of the Senate: Curius put small herbs, which he had gather'd in his Little garden, over his small fire: which now A dirty digger, in a large fetter, despises, 80 Who remembers how the sow's womb of a cook's hot shop can relish. The back of a dry swine, hanging on a wide rack, danger from the sour and unripened juice of them, as you might be if you ate them in autumn, soon after they are gathered.

By autumnum (succum understood) is here meant the autumnal juice of the apple, which is crude, and apt to offend the stomach. See autumnus-a-um. Ainsw.

77. A long time ago.] Jam olim.—q. d. The senators of Rome would, in old times, not only have been content with such a supper as the above, but even have thought it luxury.

78. Curius.] Dentatus. When the ambassadors of the Samnites came to him, they found him boiling some pot herbs over the fire.

See sat. ii. l. 153, note.

80. A dirty digger, &c.] Slaves who had committed certain crimes, were put in irons, and made to dig in mines, or in the fields, or in stone-quarries. See sat. viii. 179, 80.

81. Who remembers, &c.] Who still retains the remembrance of his going into a cook's shop, and feasting on a sow's womb which was dressed there.

The paps of a sow with pig, together with a part of the belly, cut off from the animal, and dressed with proper seasoning, was a favourite dish among the Romans. Another favourite dish was the womb of a sow with pig. If this were taken from her while pregnant, it was called ejectitia: if after she had farrowed, porcaria; the former was reckoned the most delicious. See Hor. lib. i. epist. xv. l. 41. Pliny, lib. viii. c. 51, says this was forbidden by the censors.

Such homely and frugal fare, as pleased that great man Curius, is now, such is the state of luxury among all ranks of people, contemned even by the lowest and most abject slaves, who, in their better days, remember to have tasted fashionable dainties.

82. The back, &c.] What we call a flitch of bacon.

--- Wide rack.] Crates signifies a grate, whatever it be made of Moris erat quondam festis servare diebus,

Et natalitium cognatis ponere lardum,
Accedente novâ, si quam dabat hostia, carne.
Cognatorum aliquis titulo ter Consulis, atque
Castrorum, imperiis, et Dictatoris honore
Functus, ad has epulas solito maturius ibat,
Erectum domito referens a monte ligonem.
Cum tremerent autem Fabios, durumque Catonem,
Et Scauros, et Fabricios, rigidique severos
Censoris mores etiam collega timeret;
Nemo inter curas, et seria duxit habendum,
Qualis in oceani fluctu testudo nataret,

—if of wood, we call it a rack, which consists of a frame, in which are inserted bars of wood at distances from each other, and used in keeping bacon. The word rara intimates, that the bars were few, and at large distances from each other.

83. For festal days.] High days and holidays, as we say-as a great treat.

84. Bacon.] Lardum (quasi large aridum.) Sometimes this signifies bacon, sometimes the lard or fat of bacon. Here, perhaps, what we call a rasher, i. e. a slice of fat bacon broiled.

Birth-day feast.] Natalitium signifies a gift, or present, sent to one on his birth-day, or an entertainment made for one's friends and relations on such an occasion.

85. Fresh meat acceding.] To this, perhaps, some new or fresh killed meat was added.

If the sacrifice, &c.] If they offered a sacrifice, and any flesh of the victim remained to spare, it was reckoned and prized as an accidental rarity.

86. Some one of the kindred.] i. e. Of the person's kinsmen who made the feast.—Perhaps he alludes particularly here to Curius above mentioned, who was thrice consul, and a great general: he beat Pyrrhus, king of Epirus, and drove him out of Italy; and was remarkable for his courage, honesty, and frugality. See AINSW.

87. The honour of dictator.] This was a chief magistrate, chosen on some urgent occasion, whose power was absolute, from whom lay no appeal: his office was limited to six months, when there was a new election, either continuing the same, or choosing a new one.—
The dictator differed in nothing from a king, but in his name, and in the duration of his power.

88. Went to these feasts.] Homely as they were as to a sumptuous treat.

Sooner than usual. Leaving their work before the usual hour.

89. His erect spade. Raised high by being carried on his shoulder.

Subdued mountain. Where he had been at work, digging

It was the custom formerly to keep for festal days,
And to set bacon, a birth-day feast, before relations,
Fresh meat acceding, if the sacrifice afforded any.

Some one of the kindred, with the title of thrice consul, and
Who the commands of camps, and the honour of dictator
Had discharged, went to these feasts sooner than usual,
Bringing back his erect spade from a sudued mountain.
But when they trembled at the Fabii, and severe Cato,
And the Scauri, and Fabricii, and the severe manners
Of a rigid censor, even his colleague feared;
Nobody esteemed it to be reckon'd among his cares, and serious concerns,

What sort of tortoise might swim in the waves of the sea, the soil, and subduing its stubbornness, rendering it fit for the purposes of agriculture.

Ovid, Met. xi. 31. uses the word subjecte in this sense:

Boves presso subigebant vomere terram.

Virg, G. ii. 1. 114. uses the word domitum to denote the cultivation of land:

Aspice et extremis domitum cultoribus orbem.

90. Trembled, &c.] In old time, when the people stood in awe

- of great and good men.

Fabii, &c.] These names stand here, not only as personally referring to the great men mentioned, but referring also to all the grave and virtuous magistrates of old times, who, like them, reproved and censured vice.

Fabius was the name of a noble family in Rome, many of which had borne great offices with the highest credit. They are often mentioned by our poet.

—— Severe Cato.] Cato, called Censorius, is here meant, who was so called for his gravity and strictness in his censorship.

91. The Scauri.] See sat. ii. 1. 35, note.

— Fabricii.] The name of a family, of which was C. Fabricius Luscinus, a famous consul, who conquered Pyrrhus king of Epirus. One of this name was also censor. See sat. ix. 142.

92. His colleague feared.] Alluding to Fabius Maximus, who found fault with his colleague P. Decius, for being too remiss in his office of censor. See sat. ii. l. 121, note 2.

93. Nobody, &c.] No one thought it worth their care, or a matter of serious concern.

94. What sort of tortoise, &c.] Whether small or great. But in the days of the poet, when luxury was risen to a great height, people of fashion were very anxious to inlay their furniture, and particularly the couches which they lay upon at their entertainments, with the largest and finest pieces of tortoise-shell, to get at which, they spared no pains or expense. See sat. vi. 1. 380, and note.

Clarum Trojugenis factura ac nobile fulcrum:

Sed nudo latere, et parvis frons ærea lectis

Vile coronati caput ostendebat aselli,

Ad quod lascivi ludebant ruris alumni.

Tales ergo cibi, qualis domus atque supellex.

Tunc rudis, et Graias mirari nescius artes,

Urbibus eversis, prædarum in parte repertâ,

Magnorum artificum frangebat pocula miles,

Ut phaleris gauderet equus, cælataque cassis

Romuleæ simulacra feræ mansuescere jussæ

Imperii fato, et geminos sub rupe Quirinos,

Ac nudam effigiem clypeo fulgentis et hastâ,

Pendentisque Dei, perituro ostenderet hosti.

95. Couch, &c.] Fulcrum literally signifies a stay or prop; but, by synec. is used for the couch or bed itself, (see sat. vi. l. 22.) which was inlaid and adorned in the most expensive and splendid manner.

The Trojugenæ.] The nobles, whom the poet here, and elsewhere, satirically calls Trojugenæ, because they boasted their descent from the ancient Trojans, the first founders of the Roman empire after the siege of Troy. See sat. i. l. 100, note.

96. Naked side: Their couches had plain and ordinary sides, or sides which had no backs rising from them, to lean upon for their ease.

— Small beds.] They were frugal even in the size of their couches.

—— A brazen front, &c.] Having no other ornament than a plain piece of brass in front, with an ass's head, crowned with a garland, fixed, or, perhaps, carved upon it. This, from a superstition which prevailed in Tuscany, that it operated as a charm to protect their lands from damage, and made them fruitful, used ordinarily to be hung up in their fields and gardens.

98. Which. The ass's head, when hung out in the fields, &c.

—— Boys of the country, &c.] Was laughed at by the rustic children, who made sport at his awkward appearance. It may be doubted, whether the ornament of the ass's head crowned with a garland, perhaps of vine leaves, and put, or carved, it may be, on the ancient festal couches, had not some reference to Bacchus and his foster-father Silenus, the former of which was the supposed inventor of wine, and represented with a thyrsus, and garlands of vine leaves; the other, as a drunken old man, riding upon an ass.

99. Such was their food, &c.] i. e. They were all of a piece, as we say.

100. Then rude.] The soldier in those days was rough and hardy, and unskilled in the refinements of luxury.

— Unknowing, &c.] The Romans copied their luxury from the Greeks, the imitation of whom was, among them, as fashionable

About to make a famous, and noble couch for the Trojugenz: 95 But with a naked side, and on small beds, a brazen front

Shewed the vile head of an ass wearing a garland,

At which the wanton boys of the country made a jest.

Therefore such was their food, as was their house, and the furniture; Then rude, and unknowing to admire the Grecian arts, 100

Cities being overturned, in a found part of the spoils,

The soldier brake the cups of great artificers,

That his horse might rejoice in trappings, and that the embossed hel-

Likenesses of the Romulean wild-beast, commanded to grow tame By the fate of the empire, and under a rock the twin Quirini, And a naked image of the god (shining with shield and Spear, and impending) might shew to the foe about to perish.

as of the French among us. See sat. iii. 1. 60, 1. where the poet speaks of this with the highest indignation.

101. Cities being overturned. When besieged towns were taken and plundered.

A found part, &c.] i. e. In some part of a heap of spoils which the soldier met with in his plundering the place.

102. Brake the cups, &c.] When the rude and unpolished soldier possessed himself of vessels, curiously embossed or engraved by the hands of some of the chief Grecian artists, so far from prizing them, he brake them to pieces, in order to adorn his horse, as with pompous trappings.

103. Embossed helmet.] The soldier having found some fine large pieces of plate, with the designs under mentioned wrought upon it. brake out the figures, and fastened them to his helmet, that he might exhibit them to the eyes of a vanquished enemy, whom he was going to put to the sword, as ensigns of triumph.

104. Likenesses, &c.] Of the wolf which suckled Romulus and Remus-of Romulus and Remus, and of the god Mars.

- Commanded to grow tame.] So as not only not to hurt the two children, but to nourish them with her milk.

105. Fate of the empire.] That destiny, which had appointed Romulus to be the founder of the city and commonwealth of Rome, ordered also the means of his preservation when an infant, by ordaining that a savage beast should grow tame.

--- Under a rock.] The figures of the two brothers were de-cribed as lying under a rock, and sucking the she-wolf.

— Twin Quirini, &c. Romulus and Remus are here understood, though the name of Quirinus was given to Romulus only, after his consecration. The Roman people were also called Quirites. See sat. iii. l. 60, note.

106. A naked image, &c.] The image of Mars, the father and founder of the Roman name.

107. Impending.] Pendentis-hanging, or hovering over the children as their protector, with his glittering shield and sword.

Argenti quod erat, solis fulgebat in armis.

Ponebant igitur Thusco farrata catino
Omnia tunc; quibus invideas, si lividulus sis.

Templorum quoque majestas præsentior, et vox
Nocte fere mediâ, mediamque audita per urbem,
Littore ab oceani Gallis venientibus, et Dîs
Officium vatis peragentibus, his monuit nos.
Hanc rebus Latiis curam præstare solebat
Fictilis, et nullo violatus Jupiter auro.
Illa domi natas, nostrâque ex arbore mensas
Tempora viderunt: hos lignum stabat in usus,
Annosam si forte nucem dejecerat Eurus.
At nunc divitibus cœnandi nulla voluptas,
Nil rhombus, nil dama sapit: putere videntur
Unguenta, atque rosæ; latos nisi sustinet orbes

115

110

120

107. Might shew.] q. d. That the embossed helmet might exhibit to the foe about to die, the likenesses, &c.

108. What was of silver, &c.] All the silver gotten in war was only made use of to adorn their military accourrements.

109. Food of corn.] Farrata signifies all sorts of food made of corn, and here stands for the coarse and homely food of the ancient Romans, before luxury got in among them.

109-10. Tuscan dish.] i. e. Earthen ware, which was made at Aretum, a city of Tuscany; vessels made of it were called, therefore, vasa Aretina.

Aretina nimis ne spernas vasa monemus, Lautus erat Tuscis-Porsena fictilibus.

MART. lib. xiv. ep. 98.

110. Would envy, &c.] Though the luxury of our present times has taught us to despise such things, yet if we had lived then, we should have been ready to envy their plain, but wholesome fare, and the happiness which our ancestors derived from their plain, frugal, and homely way of living.

A little envious. Lividulus .- q. d. If you had had a spark of envy in your disposition, it would have been excited.

111. The majesty, &c.] i. e. The majesty of the gods in the temples. Metonym.

More present.] More propitious, more ready to help.

A voice, Sc. Alluding to the history of M. Cæditius, a plebeian, who acquainted the tribunes, that, as he was going along by the temple of Vesta, at midnight, he heard a voice, louder than human, say—"the Gauls are coming," and commanded him to tell the magistrates of this, that they might be warned of the danger.

the magistrates of this, that they might be warned of the danger.

113. Shore of the ocean. i. e. From the sea-shore, after having made a descent upon Italy; under Brennus, who was the commander of the Galli Senones, they routed the Romans at the river Allia, marched to Rome, and took it; but they were afterwards defeated and driven out of Italy by Camillus, who was called from exile, and made dictator.

What was of silver, shone in arms alone.

Therefore, they then put all their food of corn in a Tuscan Dish: which you would envy, were you a little envious.

110

The majesty of the temples was also more present, and a voice

Almost in the midst of the night, and heard thro' the midst of the city,

The Gauls coming from the shore of the ocean, and the gods, Performing the office of a prophet, warned us by these.

This care Jupiter was wont to afford the Latian

115

Affairs, fictile, and polluted by no gold.

Those times home-born tables, and out of our own tree, those Times saw; the wood stood for these uses,

If haply the east-wind had thrown down an old nut-tree.

But now there is no pleasure of supping, to the rich

120

The turbot, the venison is tasteless, the ointments

Seem to stink, and the roses; unless the wide orbs large

114. Office of a prophet.] By thus warning the Romans of their approaching danger. This was particularly the business of augurs, soothsayers, &c.

By these.] q. d. The voice gave warning of the enemy's approach, by these means (his) i. e. by the gods, who acted prophetically towards us.

115-16. Latian affairs.] The affairs of Italy, anciently called Latium.

116. Fictile.] Fictilis—earthen ware.—In those days of plainness and simplicity, when the images of Jupiter, and of the other gods, were made of potters' clay.

—— Polluted by no gold.] i. e. Before he had fine statues made out of the gold which had been taken by rapine and plunder. Comp.

sat. iii. l. 20.

117. Those times.] Of ancient simplicity.

Home-born tables, &c.] Our ancestors did not send into foreign countries for materials to make tables, as it is now the fashion to do: they were content with the wood of their own trees.

118. Stood, &c.] Was reserved and applied to make such household furniture as was wanted.

119. Nut-tree.] All fruits that have an hard shell are called nuces, such as almonds, walnuts, and the like. So the nucem, here, may signify any tree bearing such fruits—probably a walnut-tree is meant.

121. Venison.] Dama signifies a fallow deer, either buck or doe:

here it denotes the flesh which we call venison.

--- The ointments.] Of perfume, with which they anointed their hair at their convivial meetings. See Hor. lib. iii. ode xxix. l. 3, 4, 5.

122. Roses.] They made garlands and wreaths of roses and other flowers, which the guests were on these occasions. See Hor. ubi supr. and see ode the last, lib. i.

Grande ebur, et magno sublimis pardus hiatu, Dentibus ex illis, quos mittit porta Syenes, Et Mauri celeres, et Mauro obscurior Indus. Et quos deposuit Nabathæo bellua saltu, Jam nimios, capitique graves: hinc surgit orexis, Hinc stomacho vires: nam pes argenteus illis, Annulus in digito quod ferreus. Ergo superbum Convivam caveo, qui me sibi comparat, et res Despicit exiguas; adeo nulla uncia nobis Est eboris, nec tessellæ, nec calculus ex hâc Materià; quin ipsa manubria cultellorum Ossea: non tamen his ulla unquam opsonia fiunt Rancidula; aut ideo pejor gallina secatur. Sed nec structor erit, cui cedere debeat omnis

123. Ivory sustains, &c. 7 Unless their tables, which were of a round form (orbes) were set on huge pedestals of ivory. The circumference meant by orbes, is here put for the tables themselves. Synec.

- A lofty leopard, &c. The figure of a great leopard carved in ivory, put by way of pedestal to support the table.

A great gape.] His jaws represented as stretched wide open. 124. Those teeth.] Elephants' teeth.

The gate of Syene.] Porta is here put, as denoting Syene to be the door, or gate, as it were, through which, from the island, the passage lay into Ægypt, and thence to Rome. -Syene was the metropolis of an island of that name; and this island was called Insula Elephantina, from the number of its elephants. It belonged to Ægypt, and bordered on Æthiopia. He uses the word porta here. as Horace uses janua, when speaking of the city of Cumæ, as to be passed in the way to Baiæ. Sat. iii. 4, Janua Baiarum est.

125. Swift Moors. The poet is describing the places from whence the elephants came. Many came from Mauritania, the inhabitants whereof were called Mauri, who were remarkable for their swiftness and activity.

The Indian. The largest elephants came from India.

- Darker, &c.] Of a blacker colour or complexion.

126. A beast has deposited, &c.] Bellua signifies any great beast -here, an elephant. These animals shed their teeth, which are often found.

- Nabathaan forest. Some forest of Arabia, which was called Nabathæa, from כבית Nebith, the first-born of Ismael, the supposed father of the Arabs.

127. Too much and too heavy, &c.] The teeth of elephants grow to an enormous size and weight, so as to be burthensome to the animal when grown old, till they drop out through age.

--- Hence arises appetite, &c.] Orexis, from Gr. ogeyw, appeto,

135

Ivory sustains, and a lofty leopard, with a great gape,
Out of those teeth, which the gate of Syene sends,
And the swift Moors, and the Indian darker than the Moors,
And which a beast has deposited in a Nabathæan forest,
Now too much and too heavy for his head: hence arises appetite,
Hence strength to the stomach: for a silver foot to them,
Is what an iron ring would be upon the finger. Therefore the proud

Guest I am aware of, who compares me to himself, and despises 130

My little affairs; insomuch that I have not an ounce of ivory,

Nor are my squares, nor a chess-man of this Material: nay the very handles of my knives

Are of bone: yet by these no victuals ever become Rank; or is, therefore, a hen cut the worse.

Nor shall there be a carver, to whom every school ought cupio. The sight of this fine ivory is a sort of whet to their appetite (comp. l. 121, 2.)—gives vigour to the stomach.

128. A silver foot, &c.] A table set upon a foot made of silver they would scorn, as much as to wear a ring made of iron, instead of gold, upon their finger. The Romans were very anxious to appear with fine rings, and were so luxurious as to have different sorts for summer and winter. See sat. i. 28, 29. sat. vii. 140, 1.

129-30. Proud guest, &c.] Who can't sit down to a plain meal upon a plain table, but expects dainties set upon ivory.

130. Who compares, &c.] Who measures my fortune and expenses by his own, and expects me to entertain him as he entertains others.

131. Little affairs.] My plain and frugal manner of living, according to the smallness of my fortune.

Insomuch that, &c.] I am so much (adeo), so totally without a single ounce of ivory, that even the squares of my chess-board are without it, nor is one of the chess-men made of it.

Tessella is a small square stone, or piece of wood, with which they make chequer-work in tables, or boards. Here, probably, tessellæ means the chequers of a chess-board.

Calculus signifies a little pebble, or gravel-stone, with which they marked-hence calculi, chess-men, table-men. Ainsw.

The game of chess is much more ancient than the days of Juvenal; it is a common opinion that it was invented by Palamede, at the siege of Troy. See Chambers, art. Chess.

134. Tet by these, &c.] Though the handles of my knives are made of bone, yet my victuals suffer no damage, but taste as well, and are carved as well, as if my knife-handles were made of ivory.

136. A carver.] It was, among other instances of luxury, a fashion to have an artist, who had been taught to carve dexterously, at their entertainments: he, as well as the sewer who set on the dishes, was called structor, from struo, to prepare, or make ready.

--- School.] Pergula here signifies a place where the profeszers of any art, or science, taught their scholars publicly: I know Pergula, discipulus Trypheri doctoris, apud quem Et Scythicæ volucres, et Phænicopterus ingens, Et Gætulus orix, hebeti lautissima ferro Cæditur, et totâ sonat ulmea cœna Suburrâ. Nec frustrum capreæ subducere, nec latus Afræ Novit avis noster tyrunculus, ac rudis omni-Tempore, et exiguæ frustis imbutus ofellæ. Plebeios calices, et paucis assibus emptos Porriget incultus puer, atque a frigore tutus; Non Phryx, aut Lycius, non a mangone petitus Quisquam erit, et magno: cum poscis, posce Latine. Idem habitus cunctis, tonsi, rectique capilli, Atque hodie tantum propter convivia pexi.

not that we have an English word which exactly expresses it: in this sense of it-school, or academy, may come the nearest.

137. Doctor Trypherus. He was eminent for his skill in carving, which he taught in a public school; hence Juvenal ludicrously calls him doctor.

138. A large sumen. The udder of a sow, with the paps and part of the belly, cut from her the day after she has farrowed. See 1.81, note.

--- Pygarg. A sort of deer; perhaps a roe-buck.

139. Scythian birds. It is thought that pheasants are meant here; but the description is too vague, to be certain what birds are precisely meant.

--- Phanicopter.] So called from Gr. Poissusos, crimson, and TTEeor, a wing-a bird, having its wings of a crimson colour. The tongue of this bird was a great dainty among the Romans. Phoenicopterus.

Dat mihi penna rubens nomen: sed lingua gulosis MART. epigr. Ixxi. lib. xiii. Nostra sapit.

140. Gatulian goat.] Orix, a sort of wild goat, from Gatulia, a country of Africa.

Blunt iron. Some large knife, or some chopping instrument of iron, worn blunt with constant use.

141. Made of elm, &c.] Trypherus had all kind of provision for a feast made in wood, as the best material for the conveniency of teaching; the hacking and hewing of which, among the scholars, must have made no small noise.

Thro' all the Suburra.] A very public street in Rome, often mentioned before. The idea of carving being erected into a science, and taught by a public professor, but exercising his pupils on wooden subjects, is truly ludicrous. See sat. v. 121, note. 142. To take off, &c.] To carve according to art.

142-3. The side of an African bird] The wing of a turkey. This bird came from Numidia, a country of Africa-hence called gallus Numidicus .- To take off the wing (as we call the pinion, To yield, a disciple of doctor Trypherus, at whose house

An hare with a large sumen, and a boar, and a pygarg,
And Scythian birds, and a huge Phænicopter,
And a Gætulian goat, most delicious things, with a blunt iron
Are cut, and the feast made of elm sounds thro' all the Suburra.
Neither to take off a piece of a roe, nor the side of au African Bird, does my little novice know, and always rude,
And accustomed to the broken pieces of a little steak.
Plebeian cups, and bought for a few pence,
The homely boy, and safe from cold, shall reach forth.
There shall not be Phrygian or Lycian, nor any bought from
A slave-merchant, and costly: when you ask, ask in Latiu.
The same habit is to all, the hair cropp'd and straight, and part of the breast) of a roasted bird, without leaving some part behind, is reckoned to require some skill in carving.

150

And to-day comb'd only on account of our feast.

143. My little novice. Tyrunculus (dim. from tyro) signifies a young soldier, scholar, or a young beginner, in any science. Here it describes Juvenal's boy, as lately come out of the country, and beginning to learn his business.

- Always rude.] Untaught from his cradle to this hour.

144. Accustomed.] Used only perhaps to cut a piece off a collop, or steak, of some plain meat.

145. Plebeian cups.] Such as the common people use.

146. Homely boy, &c.] Incultus here, perhaps, rather means meanly dressed, not trimmed up, not spruce; and yet so clad as to keep him warm, to secure him from the cold—A frigore tutus.

--- Reach forth.] Porriget here describes the act of the servant, when he brings what is called for, and reaches or holds it forth to the guest, that he may take it. See sat. i. l. 70; and sat. v. l. 67.

to the guest, that he may take it. See sat. i. l. 70; and sat. v. l. 67.

147. Phrygian—Lycian, &c.] The nobility of Rome purchased elegant and handsome slaves, which were brought from Phrygia and Lycia, countries of Asia, by merchants who made it their business to traffic in slaves, and who, by using all arts to set them off to the best advantage, sold them at an extravagant price. These dealers were called mangones, because they painted the slaves, to make them look the better and sell the dearer; from Gr. μαγγανον, a deceit by some contrivance, such as witchcraft. See Ainsw. Or disguising a thing to make it look better than it is.

148. Ask in Latin.] For my poor boy understands no other language; therefore, when you ask, or call, for what you want, do it in Latin, or he won't understand you.

149. The same habit, &c.] All my servants are dressed and appear alike.

- Cropp'd and straight.] Not long and curled, like the fashionable waiters at table.

. 150. Comb'd only, &c.] On this occasion, indeed, their hair is Pastoris duri est hic filius, ille bubulci; Suspirat longo non visam tempore matrem, Et casulam, et notos tristis desiderat hædos: Ingenui vultûs puer, ingenuique pudoris, Quales esse decet quos ardens purpura vestit. Nec pugillares defert in balnea raucus Testiculos, nec vellendas jam præbuit alas; Crassa nec opposito pavidus tegit inguina gutto. Hic tibi vina dabit diffusa in montibus illis, A quibus ipse venit, quorum sub vertice lusit: Namque una atque eadem est vini patria, atque ministri. Forsitan expectes, ut Gaditana canoro Incipiat prurire choro, plausuque probatæ Ad terram tremulo descendant clune puellæ. Spectant hoc nuptæ, juxta recubante marito, 165 Quod pudeat narrasse aliquem præsentibus ipsis: Irritamentum Veneris languentis, et acres Divitis urticæ: major tamen ista voluptas Alterius sexûs: magis illa incenditur, et mox Auribus atque oculis concepta urina movetur. 170 combed out, with a little more care than usual, that they may appear neat and decent. So Hor. sat. viii. lib. ii. l. 69, 70.

Præcincti recte pueri, comptique ministrent.

153. Little cottage.] Where he was born and brought up. Comp. sat. ix. 1. 60, 1.

- Known kids.] Which he used to tend and play with.

154. Ingenuous countenance, &c.] An honest countenance, and a genuine unaffected modesty.

155. Such as it becomes, &c.] q. d. It would be well if the same could be said of our young nobility.

—— Glowing purple.] Alluding to the white robe, faced and trimmed with purple, which was worn by the young nobility till seventeen years of age. This was called prætexta, and those who wore it prætextati. It was worn also by magistrates, and other noble persons, as a mark or badge of honour. See sat. i. l. 78, note; and sat. ii. l. 170, note; and sat. x. 99.

156. Nor, hoarse.] Alluding to the change of the voice in boys at the age of puberty.

157. In the baths. Where youths exposed their naked persons, for purposes too horrid to explain.

159. Give you wine.] This modest boy of mine shall wait upon you at supper, and serve you.

With wine from his own country brought; and made From the same vines, beneath whose fruitful shade, He and his wanton kids have often play'd.

CONGREVA

162. A Gaditanian.] A spanish girl from Gades, now Cadiz. See sat. x. l. 1, note.

One is the son of an hardy shepherd, the other of an herdsman; He sighs after his mother not seen for a long time, And sad, longs for the little cottage, and the known kids. A lad of an ingenuous countenance, and of ingenuous modesty, Such as it becomes those to be, whom glowing purple clothes. Nor, hoarse, does he expose himself,

With indecency, when naked in the baths,

Nor, fearful, practise means to hide his nakedness.

He shall give you wine made in those mountains

From whence himself comes, under the top of which he played: 160 For the country of my wine, and of my servant, are one and the same.

Perhaps you may expect, that a Gaditanian, with a tuneful Company, may begin to wanton, and girls approved with applause

Lower themselves to the ground in a lascivious manner.

Married women behold this, their husband lying by,

165

Which it may shame any one to have related, they being present; A provocative of languishing desire, and sharp incentives

Of a rich man; yet that is a greater pleasure

Of the other sex, it is most affected by it, and soon

The eyes and ears are contaminated to a great degree.

170

162-3. Tuneful company.] An usual part of the entertainment, when great men feasted, was to have wanton women dance and sing in a lascivious manner. This custom was probably-

163. Approved. i.e. Encouraged by the applause of the compa-

164. Lower, &c.] By degrees, and at last seat themselves on the ground.

165. Their husband lying by 7 The husband and wife are here supposed to be both invited to the entertainment, and both, from the couches on which they lay at meals, beholding these indecencies, which were so great as not even to be related, without shame, (præsentibus ipsis) in their presence.

> Which brides do by their husband's side behold, Tho' shameful before them to be but told.

HOLYDAY.

167. A provocative, &c.] To stir up the enfeebled passions. - Sharp incentives. See urtica, used in a similar sense, sat. ii. 128.

168. A rich man. Who can afford the expense of such scenes as these, and is profligate enough to use them as incentives to his palled and depraved appetites.

169. The other sex.] Women are most delighted with such scenes as these. Neither here, any more than throughout the sixth Satire, does Juvenal conceal or spare the faults of the ladies of his time.

170. The eyes and ears. The former, by beholding the lewd gestures; the latter, by hearing the obscene songs of the dancing-woNon capit has nugas humilis domus: audiat ille
Testarum crepitus cum verbis, nudum olido stans
Fornice mancipium quibus abstinet ille fruatur
Vocibus obscœnis, omnique libidinis arte,
Qui Lacedæmonium pytismate lubricat orbem;
Namque ibi fortunæ veniam damus: alea turpis,
Turpe et adulterium mediocribus: hæc tamen illi
Omnia cum faciant, hilares nitidique vocantur.
Nostra dabunt alios hodie convivia ludos:
Conditor Iliados cantabitur, atque Maronis
Altisoni dubiam facientia carmina palmam;
Quid refert, tales versus quâ voce legantur?

23

180

171. An humble house, &c.] A small estate is not capable of throwing away expense on such follies.

___ Let him.] i. e. The rich and luxurious—so, ille fruatur, 1.

173.

172. The noise of shells.] These were, probably, shells jingled together in their hands as they danced, like the Spanish castaucts.

- With words. With obscene songs accompanying.

From which, &c.] i.e. Which a common prostitute, standing naked in a brothel, would be ashamed to utter. The common harlots in the brothels were slaves, purchased for that purpose by the leno, or pander; they were his property, and therefore Juvenal calls one of these mancipium, which signifies a thing or person bought and made over.

175. Who lubricates, &c.] Pytisma (from Gr. $\pi\text{varow}$, spuo, to spit) signifies a spirting out of wine betwixt the teeth when we taste it, or a throwing out of the bottom of the cup on the floor. Ainsw.

a throwing out of the bottom of the cup on the floor. Aln'sw.

—The Lacedemonian orb.] The Romans were very foud of fine pavements, or floors, made of marble, and inlaid with various kinds of it; among the rest, some came from Sparta, in small round forms, which were inserted in their proper places by way of ornament. When they had an entertainment, it was given in a room thus ornamented with a fine inland marble floor, on which the master of the house, and the guests, when they met at a feast, scrupled not to spirt their wine, or throw out, as the custom was, the bottom of the cup.

This, among the numerous readings and comments which learned men have given of this much controverted line, seems to be the best interpretation, because it nearly coincides with a passage in Horace to the same purpose:

Absumet hæres cæcuba dignior Servata centum clavibus; et mero Tinget pavimentum superbum Pontificum potiore cœnis.

Lib. ii. od. xiv. l. 25, &c.

Then shall the worthier heir discharge, And set th' imprison'd casks at large, An humble house does not contain these follies: let him hear
The noise of shells, with words, from which a naked slave
Standing in a stinking brothel abstains; let him enjoy
Obscene expressions, and all the art of lewdness,
Who lubricates the Lacedemonian orb with spirting wine;
For there we give allowance to fortune. The die is base,
Adultery is base in middling people: yet when they do
All these things, they are called joyous and polite.
Our feast to-day will give us other sports:
The author of the Iliad shall be repeated, and of lofty Maro
The verses making a doubtful palm.

And dye the floor with wine:
So rich and precious not the feasts
Of pontiffs cheer their ravish'd guests,
With liquor more divine.

FRANCIS.

The various reading of this line 175, as well as the various senses given, may be seen by consulting the various commentators in the Leyden quarto edit. 1695. See also Hor. Delph. on the above ode.

The poet's meaning is, that such scenes of obscenity, and such arts of lewdness, are only fit to be enjoyed by professed sensualists.

What does it signify with what voice such verses may be read?

176. There we give, &c.] In the case of a rich libertine, we make all due allowance for his large fortune, and don't blame his excesses, as we do those of people in a lower class of life.

The die is base, &c.] Gaming is reckoned very scandalous, adultery vile and abominable, in plebeians.

177. When they do, &c.] When people of quality, and of large fortunes, practise these things, they are looked upon as instances of cheerfulness and elegance; in short, as gentlemanlike qualifications.

179. Other sports. Amusements of a different kind than those above mentioned.

180. Author of the Hiad, Sc. Homer—parts of his Iliad shall be repeated. Canto may perhaps imply, that the Romans read, or repeated verses, in a sort of chant or singing. See sat. vii. 153, note.

Lofty Maro.] Virgil.—He derived the surname of Maro from his father—he was the most sublime of all the Latin poets.

181. A doubtful palm.] The palm, or chaplet, made of palm-twigs and leaves, was a token of victory.

Juvenal means to say, that it was doubtful which of the two excelled, Homer or Virgil. See sat. vi. 435, 6.

182. With what voice, &c.] With what tone of voice—i.e. so intrinsically valuable and excellent are the verses of these authors, that they can't lose their value, though read or repeated by ever so indifferent a toned voice. This line also seems to imply that verses were usually chanted or sung.

So Mr. Congreve:

It matters not with what ill tone they'r sung, Verse, so sublimely good, no voice can wrong. VOL. 11. Sed nunc dilatis averte negotia curis, Et gratam requiem dona tibi, quando licebit Per totam cessare diem: non fœnoris ulla Mentio; nec, prima si luce egressa reverti Nocte solet, tacito bilem tibi contrahat uxor, Humida suspectis referens multitia rugis, Vexatasque comas, et vultum, auremque calentem. Protinus ante meum, quicquid dolet, exue limen: Poue domum, et servos, et quicquid frangitur illis, Aut perit: INGRATOS ANTE OMNIA PONE SODALES. Interea Megalesiacæ spectacula mappæ Idæum solenne colunt, similisque triumpho Perda caballorum Prætor sedet: ac (mihi pace 195 Immensæ nimiæque licet si dicere plebis) -Totam hodie Romam Circus capit; et fragor aurem

183. Leave off business. Lay it quite aside—think not of it. - Cares deferr'd.] All cares put off for the present.

185. Idle, &c.] Having nothing else to do, but to enjoy yourself all the day long at my house.

-- Interest-money.] No talk of money matters.

186. Nor, if, &c.] Though, like many other husbands, you suffer from the irregularities of your wife.

187. Provoke you, &c.] Don't let the thoughts of this vex you, or let her make you angry, or tempt you to say a single word upon the subject, though, as the two next lines import, you should have found the most evident and undeniable circumstances of her guilt .-Contrahat bilem tibi-lit. contract, or draw together, choler to you.

188. Fine garments.] Multitia, or multicia-garments wrought so fine that the body might be seen through them. See sat ii. 1. 66.

190. Put off, &c.] Exue-a metaphorical expression taken from putting off clothes, &c. Divest yourself of all uneasiness at entering my doors.

191. Lay aside, &c. Pono also signifies to put off as clothes. He desires his friend to lay aside, or put off, all his domestic uneasinesses, arising from the mischief or misconduct of servants.

192. Ungrateful friends. Which are the bitterest trials of all. 193. Meantime.] This invitation of the poet to his friend was on a holiday, or day of the public games beginning.

Spectacles. The shews or games.

- Megalesian towel.] At the Circensian and Megalesian games, they hung out a towel (mappa) to shew that the sports were going to begin.-Nero introduced this custom; for hearing, as he sat at dinner, how impatiently the people expected his coming, he threw out at the window the towel with which he wiped his hands, to give the people notice that he had dined, and would soon be at the circus. Ever since this, the beginning of these games was announced by hanging out a towel.

But now leave off business, your cares deferr'd, And give yourself grateful rest, since you may Be idle throughout the whole day: of interest-money 185 No mention: nor, if gone forth at day-break, she is wont To be returned at night, let your wife provoke you, silent, to anger, Bringing back her fine garments with suspected wrinkles, Her hair disorder'd, and her countenance and ears glowing. Immediately put off before my threshold whatever grieves: 190 Lay aside home, and servants, and whatever is broken by them, Or is lost: BEFORE ALL-PUT AWAY UNGRATEFUL FRIENDS. Meantime, the spectacles of the Megalesian towel Grace the Idæan solemnity, and, like as in triumph, The pretor, a destroyer of horses, sits: and (if with the peace 195Of such an immense and superabundant crowd I might say it) This day the circus contains all Rome, and a noise strikes

The Megalesian games were in honour of Cybele, the mother of the gods. She was called μεγαλη Μητγρ, magna Mater, and from thence these games Megalesia, or ludi Magalenses; they began on the fourth of April, and lasted six days.

194. Idean solemnity.] Cybele was called Idea, from Ida, a mountain of Phrygia, where she was worshipped; and hence her festival was called Idæum solenne.

195. The pretor, a destroyer, &c.] He was an officer not unlike our mayor or sheriff. Sat. i. 101, note.—He was to oversee these sports, and sat in great state, while they were acting, to the destruction of many horses, which were spoiled on the occasion. See sat. x. 1. 36—40.

Many are for reading prædo, and suppose it to denote the pretor's acting sometimes unjustly, and determining the prizes wrongfully, taking them from the winning horses, and giving them to the losers, by which he might be said to rob the winners of their due.

Others think the word prædo is used, as a jest upon the pretor's fine trappings and gaudy dress on the occasion, as if he had robbed the horses of their finery to put upon himself.

There are other conceits upon this subject, but perda seems to give the most natural sense of the passage. I am, therefore, with Salmasius and others, for adopting it.

If with the peace, &c. If with their good leave I may take the liberty of saying so much without offence.—The poet here lashes the Roman people for their great eagerness to crowd after these shows, as if they thought nothing else worthy their attention. Sat. x. 1. 80, 1.

197. The circus.] Where those games were celebrated.

— A noise strikes, &c.] I hear a great shout, as of victory, which makes me suppose that the race is determined on the behalf of some favourite competitor.

Percutit, eventum viridis quo colligo panni. Nam si deficeret, mæstam attonitamque videres Hanc urbem, veluti Cannarum in pulvere victis Consulibus. Spectent juvenes, quos clamor, et audas Sponsio, quos cultæ decet assedisse puellæ: Nostra bibat vernum contracta cuticula solem, Effugiatque togam : jam nunc in balnea salvâ Fronte licet vadas, quanquam solida hora supersit 205 Ad sextam. Facere hoc non possis quinque diebus Continuis; quia sunt talis quoque tædia vitæ Magna. Voluptates commendat Rarior Usus,

198. The green cloth. The four parties, which ran chariot-races in the circus, were divided in several liveries, viz. green, russet, blue, and white. One of these factions was always favoured by the court, and, at this time, most probably, the green; which makes Juvenal fancy that he hears the shouts for joy, that their party had won the

199. Should fail. I If the green cloth should fail of the prize, or if the festival, which occasioned the celebration of these games, should be laid aside, and these shows fail, or cease.

200. This city. The people of Rome would be ready to break their hearts-reflecting on their immoderate fondness for these shows.

- The consuls. Paulus Æmilius and Terentius Varro.

201. Canna. A small town, near which Hannibal obtained a great victory over the Romans. See sat. x. l. 164, note.

Let youths behold.] i. e. Be spectators of these shows.

Whom clamour, &c.] Who may, without any indecency, make as much noise as they please in clapping and hallooing, and lay what bets they please on the side they take.

202. By a neat girl, &c.] By this we see that men and women sat promiscuously together on these occasions. See sat. iii. 1. 65, and note.

203. Contracted skin.] Once smooth, but now through age contracted into wrinkles.

- Drink the vernal sun. Let us avoid these crowds, and bask in the reviving rays of the sun, which now is bringing on the delightful spring. This was in the beginning of April. See above, note on 1. 193, ad fin.

204. Avoid the gown.] The gown was the common habit of the Romans, insomuch that Virg. An. i. 286, calls them gentem togatam. The poet, by togam, here means the people that wore it, by metonym. i. e. the Romans now crowding to the games-let us keep out of their way, that we may enjoy ourselves in quiet. 204.—5. Safe countenance, &c.] Without fear of being put out of countenance. The Romans used to follow their business till noon, that is, the sixth hour, our twelve o'clock; and then to the ninth hour, our three o'clock in the afternoon, they exercised and bathed My ear, from whence I gather the event of the green cloth.

For if it should fail, sad and amazed would you see

This city, as when the consuls were conquered in the dust

Of Cannæ. Let youths behold, whom clamour, and a bold

Wager becomes, and to sit by a neat girl.

Let our contracted skin drink the vernal sun,

And avoid the gown: even now to the baths, with a safe

Countenance you may go, tho' a whole hour should remain

To the sixth. You could not do this for five days

Successively: for the fatigues of such a life also themselves, and then went to their meals: but to do these sooner than the appointed hours was allowed only on festival days, or to persons aged and infirm; otherwise, to be seen going to the baths before the usual appointed hour was reckoned scandalous. See sat. i. l. 49, and note.

Are great: RARER USE COMMENDS PLEASURES.

206. You could not, &c.] i. e. Frequent feasts, and indulge in idleness;—however these may be occasionally pleasant, a continuance of them for a week together would grow irksome.

207. Such a life. Of ease and voluptuousness.

208. Rarer use, &c.] The poet concludes with a general sentiment, very applicable to all pleasures of sense, which, by continual use, pall and grow tiresome:

For frequent use would the delight exclude,
Pleasure's a toil when constantly pursued.

Congress.

Shakespeare, 2nd part of Hen. IV. act i. scene ii. has finely expressed the like sentiment:

If all the year were playing holidays,
To sport would be as tedious as to work;
But when they seldom come, they wish'd-for come.

END OF THE ELEVENTH SATIRE.

SATIRA XII.

ARGUMENT.

The Poet having invited Corvinus to assist at a sacrifice, which he intended to offer up, by way of thanksgiving for the safety of his friend Catullus from the danger of the seas, professes his disinter-

ATALI, Corvine, die mihi dulcior hæc lux, Quâ festus promissa Deis animalia cespes Expectat: niveam Reginæ cædimus agnam: Par vellus dabitur pugnanti Gorgone Maurâ. Sed procul extensum petulans quatit hostia funem, Tarpeio servata Jovi, frontemque coruscat: Quippe ferox vitulus, templis maturis et aræ, Spargendusque mero; quem jam pudet ubera matris Line 1. This day.] On which I am going to offer sacrifices, on account of my friend Catullus, the merchant's, escape from the dangers of the sea.

--- Corvinus.] Juvenal's friend, to whom this Satire is addressed.

— Birth-day.] Which was a day of great festivity among the Romans; they celebrated it yearly, offering thanksgiving offerings to the gods, and made feasts, to which they invited their friends, who made them presents on the occasion. See sat. xi. l. 84, note. See Hor. ode xi. lib. iv. l. 1—20. Virg. ecl. iii. l. 76.

2. Festal turf.] The altar of green turf, which our poet had built on the occasion, thus suiting his devotion to his circumstances.

Comp. Hor. lib. iii. od. viii. l. 2-4.

The animals promised.] i. e. To be offered in sacrifice to the gods.

3. Queen.] Juno, the queen of the gods. See Æn. i. 1. 50. The fabled wife of Jupiter, the supreme deity of the Romans.

A snowy lamb.] They offered white animals to the superior gods, black to the inferior. See Hor. lib. i. sat. viii. l. 27; and Virgil, Æn. iv. l. 61.

4. Equal fleece. A like fleece—i. e. a white one; or fleece, here, may, by synec. be put for the whole animal offered—a like offering.

Minerva.] Lit. the fighter with the Moorish gorgon.—The gorgons were supposed to be three, who inhabited near mount At-

SATIRE XII.

ARGUMENT.

estedness on the occasion, and, from thence, takes an opportunity to lash the Haridepeta, or Legacy-hunters, who flattered, and paid their court to rich men, in hopes of becoming their heirs.

I HIS day, Corvinus, is sweeter to me than my birth-day, In which the festal turf expects the animals promised To the gods: we kill to the queen a snowy lamb:

An equal fleece shall be given to Minerva.

But the petulant victim shakes his long extended rope, Kept for Tarpeian Jove, and brandishes his forehead:

For it is a stout calf, ripe for the temples and altar,

And to be sprinkled with wine; which is now ashamed to draw las, in Mauritania. Medusa is said to have been beloved by Neptune, who lay with her in the temple of Minerva, at which the goddess, being angry, changed the hair of Medusa into serpents, and so ordered it, that whoever beheld her should be turned into stone. She was killed by Perseus, the son of Jupiter and Danae, (with the help of Minerva,) as she lay asleep, who cut off her head: this was afterwards placed in the ægis, or shield, of Minerva.

5

Hyginus says, that Medusa was not slain by Perseus, but by Minerva. Britannic. in loc.

Sometimes the head of Medusa was supposed to be worn in the breast-plate of Minerva. See En. viii. l. 435-8.

5. Petulant victim, &c.] The wantonness and friskiness of the calf leading along in a rope, is here very naturally described.

6. Tarpeian Jove.] On the mons Capitolinus, otherwise called the Tarpeian hill, from the vestal virgin Tarpeia, who betrayed it to the Sabines, Jupiter had a temple, whence his titles—Tarpeian and Capitoline.

7. Ripe, &c.] The beasts were reckoned of a proper age and size for sacrifice, when the tail reached the hough, or joint, in the hinder leg.

8. Sprinkled, &c.] They used to pour wine on the heads of the sacrifices, between the horns. So Virg. Æn. iv. 1. 60, 1.

Ipsa tenens dextra parteam pulcherrima Dido, Candentis vaccæ media inter cornua fundit.

Hence the Greek epigram on the vine and the goat.

Ducere, qui vexat nascenti robora cornu. Si res ampla domi, similisque affectibus esset, 10 Pinguior Hispulla traheretur taurus, et ipsa Mole piger, nec finitima nutritus in herba, Læta sed ostendens Clitumni pascua sanguis Iret, et a grandi cervix ferienda ministro. Ob reditum trepidantis adhuc, horrendaque passi 15 Nuper, et incolumem sese mirantis amici. Nam præter pelagi casus, et fulguris ictum Evasi, densæ cœlum abscondêre tenebræ Nube una, subitusque antennas impulit ignis; Cum se quisque illo percussum crederet, et mox 20 Attonitus nullum conferri posse putaret Naufragium velis ardentibus. Omnia fiunt Talia, tam graviter, si quando poëtica surgit Tempestas. Genus ecce aliud discriminis: audi.

Κ'ην με φαγης επι είξαν ομως ετι καεποφερητω Οσσον επισπεισαι σοι, Τραγε, θυομενω. ANTHOL. ep. i.

"Though thou eatest me down to the very root, yet I shall bear fruit "Sufficient to pour on thee, O goat, when thou art sacrificed.

8. Is now ashamed, &c.] Hath left off sucking—is grown above

9. Teazes, &c. 1 It is usual for the young of all horned animals to butt against trees, as if practising for future fight-sometimes we see them in sport engaging one another.

10. If my fortune, &c.] The poet, throughout the above account of his sacrifices, as well as of the altar on which they were to be offered, shews his prudence and frugality, as well as his friendship for his preserved friend Catullus. He professes to shew his affection, not as he would, but as his fortune could afford it. Instead, therefore, of a white bull to Jupiter, and white cows to Juno and Minerva, he offers a white ewe-lamb to Juno, the same to Minerva, and a calf to Jupiter.

11. A bull.] The usual sacrifice to Jupiter was a white bull.

- Fatter than Hispulla. A fat, sensual lady, noted as infamous for keeping a player. Sat. vi. l. 74.

___ Drawn.] Dragged by ropes, fixed to the horns, to the altar, 11-12. With its very bulk slow. So fat that he could hardly

12. In a neighbouring pasture.] Not bred or fatted in the neighbourhood of Rome.

18. His blood shewing, &c.] By the colour and richness, as well as quantity of it.

- Clitumnus.] A river dividing Tuscany and Umbria, whose water, says Pliny, makes the cows, that drink of it, bring white calves: - whence the Romans, as Virgil and Claudian observe, were plentifully furnished with white sacrifices for Jupiter Capitolinus, See VIRG. Georg. lib. ii. 146-8.

Its mother's dugs, and teazes the oaks with its budding horn. If my fortune had been ample, and like my affection, 10 A bull, fatter than Hispulla, should be drawn, and with its very Bulk slow, nor nourish'd in a neighbouring pasture, But his blood shewing the glad pastures of Clitumnus, Should go, and his neck to be stricken by a great minister, On account of the return of my yet trembling friend, lately having 15 Suffer'd dreadful things, and wondering that he is safe. For, beside the hazard of the sea, and the stroke of lightning Escaped, thick darkness hid the sky In one cloud, and a sudden fire struck the sail-yards; When every one might believe himself struck with it, and presently, 20 Astonish'd, might think that no shipwreck could be Compared with the burning sails. All things become Such, as grievously, if at any time a poetic tempest Behold another kind of danger, hear,

14. A great minister.] Some interpret this, as referring to the quality of the person giving the blow, as if it were to be the chief pontiff, or sacrificer, and not one of his popæ, or inferior officers. Others think, that it refers to the size and strength of the person officiating, able to perform his office at one blow.

15. Tet trembling friend, &c.] This is a very natural circumstance, that a man, for some time after a narrow escape from an horrible danger, should shudder at the very thoughts of it, and stand amazed at his deliverance.

17: The hazard of the sea.] i. e. The danger of the waves.

17-18. Lightning escaped.] By which he might have been killed in an instant, but happily escaped the blow.

18. Thick darkness, &c.] So that they could take no observation, nor know where they were, or which way to steer. Such a circumstance is awfully related, Acts xxvii. 20.

19. A sudden fire, &c.] A flash of lightning struck the sail-yards, and set the sails on fire.

20. Might believe, &c.] Each person on board might think it levelled at him, it was so near him.

21. Astonish'd, might think, &c.] For in case of a shipwreck, some might escape on parts of the broken ship (comp. Acts xxvii. ult.); but if the ship were burnt, all must be consumed together: therefore, horrible as a shipwreck might be in the expectation, there could be no comparison, in point of horror, between this and a ship on fire.

22. All things become, &c.] The above circumstances of the danger from the waves, and of the greater horror of the ship's being struck with lightning, and the rigging set on fire, are ingredients in a poetical description of a tempest; even the imagination of the poet could not invent any thing more dreadful and grievous.

24. Another kind of danger.] i. e. Which Catullus was in.

| Et miserere iterum, quanquam sint cætera fortis | 25 |
|--|-------|
| Ejusdem: pars dira quidem, sed cognita multis, | |
| Et quam votivâ testantur fana tabellâ | 11.12 |
| Plurima. Pictores quis nescit ab Iside pasci? | 100 |
| Accidit et nostro similis fortuna Catullo, | |
| Cum plenus fluctu medius foret alveus, et jam | 30 |
| Alternum puppis latus evertentibus undis | |
| Arboris incertæ, nullam prudentia cani | |
| Rectoris conferret opem; decidere jactu | |
| Coepit cum ventis, imitatus Castora, qui se | |
| Eunuchum ipse facit, cupiens evadere damno | 35 |
| Testiculorum: adeo medicatum intelligit inguen. | |
| Fundite quæ mea sunt, dicebat, cuncta, Catullus; | - 1 |
| Præcipitare volens etiam pulcherrima, vestem | -10 |
| Purpuream, teneris quoque Mæcenatibus aptam: | |
| Atque alias, quarum generosi graminis ipsum | . 40 |
| Infecit natura pecus, sed et egregius fons | |
| Viribus occultis, et Bæticus adiuvat aër. | |

This, as afterwards appears, was from the ship's being half full of water, (1. 30.) and he forced to lose his property to save his life.

25. The rest, &c.] Of my friend's disasters, which I shall relate.

are of the same unfortunate nature.

26. Known to many.] Who have been in a like situation.

27. Many temples, &c.] Persons that escaped shipwreck used to have a painting made of the same scene which they had gone through, drawn upon a tablet, which they vowed to Neptune during their distress, and hung up in some temple near the sea-coast.

This was called votiva tabella. To this Horace alludes, lib. i. ode

v. ad fin, which see, and the note, Delph. edit.

28. Fed by Isis.] The Romans made so many vows to the Æ-gyptian goddess Isis, whom the merchants and seamen looked on as their patroness, that many painters got their bread by drawing the votivæ tabulæ, which were hung up in her temples, so great was the number of them.

30. Middle hold, &c. 7 i. e. The hold was half full, or full up to the middle.

31. Alternate side, &c.] Heeling her from side to side, by dashing against them alternately.

32. Uncertain wood.] It being now doubtful, whether the timbers could much longer stand the force of the beating waves upon her sides, or whether she would not go to pieces.

The prudence, &c.] All the skill and care of the old experienced master of the ship could afford no help.

33. He.] i. e. Catullus.

Began to compound, &c.] To bargain (as it were) for his life at the expense of his goods, by throwing them overboard. See Ainsw. Decido, No. 4.

25 And again pity, tho' the rest be of the same Kind; a dire portion indeed, but known to many, And which many temples testify with a votive Tablet-who knows not that painters are fed by Isis? The like fortune also happen'd to my Catullus; When the middle hold was full of water, and now 30 The waves overturning the alternate side of the ship Of uncertain wood, the prudence of the grey master Could confer no help: he began to compound With the winds by throwing overboard, imitating the beaver, who Makes himself an eunch, desiring to escape with the loss Of his testicles: thus medicated does he understand his groin. Throw out all things which are mine, says Catullus, Willing to throw over even the most beautiful things, a garment Of purple, fit also for tender Mæcenases: And others, the very sheep of which the nature of 40 The generous herbage dyed, but also a remarkable fount With hidden powers, and Bætic air helps.

34. Imitating the beaver, &c. This notion of the beaver is very ancient, and well introduced by our poet: but it is to be reckoned among those vulgar errors which have no foundation in truth.

In the first place, the liquid matter, which is called in medicine castoreum, is not found in the testicles, but enclosed in bags, or purses, near the anus of the animal.

In the next place, such an instance of violence upon itself was never known to be committed by the beaver.

See CHAMBERS-And Brown's Vulg. Err. book III. c. iv.

38. To throw over.] Into the sea.

The most beautiful things. His finest and most valuable merchandise. See Job ii. 4.

39. Tender Macenases. Mæcenas, the favourite of Augustus, was a very delicate and effeminate person, from whom people of such character were denominated Macenates. See sat. i. l. 66, note. Such persons were very finical and expensive in their dress, and therefore poor Catullus lost a good market for his purple dress, by throwing it overboard in the storm.

40. The very sheep, &c.] In this place the poet means, that the wool, of which these other garments were made, had a native tinge of a beautiful colour, owing to the particular nature of the soil, and water, and air, where the sheep were bred, so that the garments were made up without receiving any artificial dye.

41. A remarkable fount, &c.] The water of which, as well as the pasture where the sheep fed, was supposed to contribute to the fineness and colour of their wool.

42. Betic air.] The air of Betica, now Andalusia, in Spain, through which ran the river Betis, is here assigned its share in the improvement of the weol.

Ille nec argentum dubitabat mittere; lances Parthenio factas, urnæ cratera capacem, alla factas into Et dignum sitiente Pholo, vel conjuge Fusci. The state of Adde et bascandas, et mille escaria, multum Cælati, biberat quo callidus emptor Olyuthi. Sed quis nunc alius, quâ mundi parte, quis audet Argento præferre caput, rebusque salutem? Non propter vitam faciunt patrimonia quidam, Sed vitio cæci propter patrimonia vivunt. Jactatur rerum utilium pars maxima; sed nec Damna levant. Tunc, adversis urgentibus, illuc Recidit, ut malum ferro summitteret, ac se Explicat augustum: discriminis ultima, quando va la la seconda 53 Præsidia afferimus navem factura minorem. I nunc, et ventis animam committe, dolato a lange to the confirme

43. Disher.] Lanx signifies a great broad plate, or deep dish, to serve up meat in, which the Romans had carved and embossed at a great expense.

44. Parthenius.] Some curious artist, whose works were in high

stimation

An urn.] A measure of liquids containing four gallons.

45. Pholas. J. A drunken Centaur, who, when he entertained Hercules, produced a tun of wine at once.

Wife of Fuscus. Fuscus was a judge, noted by Martial for drunkenness, as his wife is here, in the good company of Pholus the drunken Centaur.

46. Baskets.] The bascaudæ were a kind of baskets which the Romans had from the ancient Britons. Vox Britannica. Ainsw.

Barbara de pictis veni bascauda Britannis. ... MART. xiv. 99.

A thousand dishes.] Escaria, from esca, seems to denote vessels of all shapes and sizes, in which meat was served up to table;

also plates on which it was eaten.

47. Wrought-work. Cælati, from cælo, to chase, emboss, or engrave.—This wrought work here mentioned is thought, from what follows, to have been the large wrought, i. e. chased or embossed, gold cup, that Philip, king of Macedon, used to drink out of, and to put under his pillow every night when he went to sleep. This must have been a very great, as well as valuable curiosity.

But as it is said multum calati, one should rather think, that the poet means a great quantity of wrought plate, which had once been the property of Philip; a set of plate, as we should say. Philip was killed by Pausanias three hundred and thirty-six years before Christ.

—Juvenal flourished about the latter end of the first century: so that this plate was very old.

—— Buyer of Olynthus.] This cup, and other pieces of valuable plate. he gave to Lasthenes, governor of Olynthus, a city of Thrace, to betray it into his hands. It was, from this, said of Philip, that

Nor did he hesitate to throw away his plate; dishes Made by Parthenius, a cup holding an urn, And worthy Pholus thirsting, or the wife of Fuscus, 45 And also baskets, and a thousand dishes, a great deal Of wrought-work, in which the cunning buyer of Olynthus had drunk. But who now is the other, in what part of the world, who dares Prefer his life to his plate, his safety to his goods? Some do not make fortunes on account of life, 50 But, blind with vice, live for the sake of fortunes. The greatest part of useful goods is thrown over, but Neither do the losses lighten. Then, the contrary (winds) urging, It came to that pass, that he should lower the mast with an axe, And free himself distressed: the last state of danger is, When we apply helps to make the ship less. Go now and commit your life to the winds, trusting to what he could not conquer by iron (i. e. his arms) he gained by gold.

48. But who now, &c. This implied commendation of Catullus seems here to be introduced by the poet, in order to lash the prevailing vice of covetousness, which was so great, as to make men love money beyond even life itself. It is said of Aristippus the philosopher, that, being on board a ship with pirates, he threw all his money overboard secretly, lest, finding it, they should throw him into the sea, in order to possess what he had.

50. On account of life, &c.] i. e. That they may spend them in the necessaries and comforts of life.

51. Blind, &c.] With the vice of avarice.

Live for the sake, &c. Thy do not get money that they may live, (see note, 1. 50.) but only live for the sake of money.

52. Useful goods, Sc. Not only articles of superfluity, such as fine embossed plate, and the like, but even useful necessaries, such as clothes, provisions, and, perhaps, a great part of the tackling of the ship, were thrown overboard on this occasion.

53. Losses lighten. Alleviate their danger; or, what they had lost by throwing overboard did not seem to lighten the ship, as she kept filling with water. See l. 30.

54. It came to that pass.] Illuc recidit.—Some read decidit, which has the same meaning here. Il en vint lá. Fr.

. — He. Catullus, who was probably the owner of the ship. - Should lower, &c.] i. e. Should cut away the mast, as we term it. Augustum, l. 55, has the sense of angustatum.

56. Apply helps, &c.] It is a sign of the utmost distress, when we are obliged to use helps to make the ship lighter, and less exposed to the wind, as by cutting away her masts, which is supposed to be the meaning of minorem in this place. Afferimus præsidia seems to have the same sense as Bon Sias sxewro, Acts xxvii. 17.

57. Go now, &c.] In this apostrophe the poet severely reproves those, who, for the sake of gain, are continually risking such danConfisus ligno, digitis a morte remotus Quatuor, aut septem, si sit latissima teda.

Mox cum reticulis, et pane, et ventre lagenze,
Aspice sumendas in tempestate secures.

Sed postquam jacuit planum mare, tempora postquam
Prospera vectoris, fatumque valentius Euro,
Et pelago; postquam Parcze meliora benignâ
Pensa manu ducunt hilares, et staminis albi
Lanificæ; modicâ nec multo fortior aurâ
Ventas adest; inopi miserabilis arte cucurit
Vestibus extensis, et, quod superaverat unum,
Velo prora, suo: jam deficientibus Austris,
Spes vitæ cum sole redit: tum gratus Iülo, gers as have been described. Comp. How. lib. i. ode iii. l. 9-24, 57. Trusting, &c.] The timber, of which the sides of the ships were made, was hewn in a rough manner into planks of four or seven fingers breadth in thickness; so that the passengers, having no more between them and the water, might be said to be no further removed from death. Alluding to a saying of Anacharsis the philosopher, who, on hearing one say that a ship was three fingers thick, answered, "then just so far from death are those who sail in her."

59. If the pine. Teda signifies the middle or heart of the pine-tree. Alnsw. Of this, it seems, they made the sides of their ships, after cutting or hewing it into planks. See note on 1.57. These were, at the thickest, seven fingers breadth, or thickness, measuring from one edge to the other on the same side. Teda here means the plank, by synec.

60. Provision-baskets.] Reticulis—twig baskets made like a net to carry provisions in; or bags made of network, used for that purpose by sailors, soldiers, and travellers, something like our knapsacks as to their purpose.

--- Belly of a flagon.] Lagena-a flagon, or bottle with a large belly, to keep wine in-q. d. a great-bellied flagon.

61. Axes to be used, &c.] To cut away the masts upon occasion. See l. 54. These may happen to be as necessary as your other seastores; therefore, in the next place (mox,) provide axes. Aspice—tide et memento. MARSHALL. To be used, sumendas—lit. to be taken.

62. But after, &c.] The narrative of Catullus's adventure is here resumed.

--- Lay smooth: Became calm, on the storm ceasing.

prevailed, (See Ainsw. Tempus, No. 2.) and things put on a more prosperous appearance.

62-3. The mariner.] Vector signifies a bearer, or carrier; also a passenger in a ship; likewise a mariner. See Arnsw.

65

A hewn plank, removed from death four

Fingers, or seven, if the pine be very large.

Immediately with your provision-baskets, and bread, and belly of a flagon,

60

Remember axes to be used in a storm.

But after the sea lay smooth, after the circumstances of the Mariner were favourable, and his fate more powerful than the east wind,

And the sea; after the cheerful destinies draw better

Tasks with a benign hand, and of a white thread

Are spinsters, nor much stronger than a moderate air

Is there a wind, the miserable prow ran with a poor device,

With extended garments, and, which alone was left,

With its own sail: the south winds now failing,

The hope of life return'd with the sun: then, acceptable to Iiilus, 70

63. Fate more powerful, &c.] The Romans believed every thing to be governed by fate, even the gods themselves.

64. The cheerful destinies, &c.] The parcæ, or fates. See sat. x. 252, note. Pensa—tasks enjoined to people that spin; also thread, &c. spin. Ducere pensa, to spin. Ainsw. See Hor. lib. iii. ode xxvii. l. 63.

65. White thread.] It was the opinion of the ancients, that when the destinies intended long life to a person, they spun white thread;

when death, black thread.

The phrase of ducere pensa, to spin, taken notice of in the last note, alludes to the action of the spinster, who draws the wool, or flax, from the distaff as she spins it; this she continues, till the task (pensum) assigned her, is finished.

66. Spinsters.] And are now become spinsters, &c.

67. The miserable, &c.] The shattered vessel left in a miserable plight. Prora (by synec.) may mean the vessel itself: but it literally signifies the forepart, the foredeck or forecastle of a ship; and so it is probably to be understood here, as the velo suo implies the sail proper to this part of the ship—the foresprit sail, as we call it. This was the only remaining sail.

--- Poor device.] She made a sad shift to make her way through the water, by the poor contrivance of the seaman's clothes spread out-vestibus extensis-to help her on.

68. Was left.] i. e. Had surmounted the violence of the storm. Superaverat, quasi supererat—remained; as in VIRG. Æn. v. 519.

Amissa solus palma superabat Acestas.

69. The south winds, &c.] Which were very dangerous on the coasts of Italy. See Hor, sat. i. l. 6; and lib. iii. ode iii. l. 4, 5. ode iii. lib. i. l. 14-16. These now began to abate.

70. Return'd with the sun.] With the day-light.

_____ Acceptable to Iulus, &c.] The Alban mount, on which Iulus Ascanius, the son of Eneas, built Alba longa. This is the sublime top, mentioned 1. 72.

Atque novercali sedes prælata Lavino,
Conspicitur sublimis apex, cui candida nomen
Scrofa dedit, (lætis Phrygibus mirabile sumen,)
Et nunquam visis triginta clara mamillis.
Tandem intrat positas inclusa per æquora moles,
Tyrrhenamque Pharon, porrectaque brachia rursum,
Quæ pelago occurrunt medio, longeque relinquunt
Italiam: non sic igitur mirabere portus,
Quos natura dedit: sed truncâ puppe magister
Interiora petit Baianæ pervia cymbæ
Tuti stagna sinûs: gaudent ibi vertice raso
Garrula securi narrare pericula nautæ.
Ite igitur, pueri, linguis animisque faventes,

30

The poet calls it gratus Iulo, because he left Lavinum, built by Æneas, to live at Alba.

71. Lavinum of his step-mother, Sc. When Iulus came to live at Alba, he left Lavinum to his mother-in-law Lavinia, the second wife of Æneas, (who had named the city Lavinum after his wife Lavinia.) Hence Juvenal says, novercali Lavino.

72-3. A white sow, &c.] From which the city was called Alba -white. See sat. vi. l. 176, note.

73. A wonderful udder, &c.] Sumen—the belly, paps, or udder of a sow. Ainsw.—Here, by synec it is to be understood to signify the sow. This was a sight much admired by the joyful Trojans, who, after all their dangers and toils, discovered, by this, their promised resting-place.

Hic locus urbis erit, requies ea certa laborum. An. lib. viii. l. 46.

Troy was the capital of Phrygia, a country of Lesser Asia, and sometimes taken for the whole country of Phrygia: hence the Trojans were called Phrygians.

74. Thirty dugs. With each a pig sucking at it. Æn. viii. 1. 45.

-- A sight never seen before.

75. She enters.] i. e. The ship enters.

—— Placed moles.] The moles, or piers, which had been placed, or built, to keep off the violence of the sea, and to form a safe and quiet harbour.

___ Included waters. The waters included between and within the moles.

76. Tyrrhene Pharos.] In this haven of Ostia, on the shore of the Tyrrhene sea, Claudius built a Pharos, or light-house, in imitation of that at Alexandria in Ægypt.

--- And again.] We once more return to the spot from whence we sat out.

---- Stretched-out arm, &c.] The two sides of the piers, or artificial mounts, like two arms, stretched so far into the Tyrrhene sea, that they seemed to enclose it as far as the middle way, and, as it were, to leave the coast of Italy behind.

78. You will not, &c.] This port, formed in this manner by art,

And an abode preferr'd to the Lavinum of his step-mother,
The sublime top is beheld, to which the name a white
Sow gave (a wonderful udder to the glad Phrygians)
And famous for thirty dugs never [before] seen.
At length she enters the placed moles, thro' the included waters, 7.5
And the Tyrrhene Pharos, and again the stretched out arms
Which meet the middle sea, and far leave
Italy: therefore you will not so admire the havens
Which nature has given: but the master, with mangled ship, Seeks the interior pools of the safe bay, pervious to
A Baian boat: there, with a shaved head, secure,
The sailors rejoice to relate their chattering dangers.

is much more wonderful than any port naturally formed by the shore itself; therefore the former is more to be admired than the latter.

80. The interior pools, &c.] The innermost part of this artificial haven, as the most secured from the sea.

Go then, boys, favouring with tongues and minds,

81. A Baian boat.] Little wherries were used at Baia to carry people in still water; perhaps from one side of the bay to the other.

— Shaved head, &c.] It was a custom, when in distress at sea, to invoke the aid of some god or other (see Jonah i. 5.) with a solemn vow of cutting off their hair, and offering it as an acknowledgment for their preservation. See Acts xxvii. 34. where Paul says, "there shall not an hair of your head perish: "alluding, probably, to this custom. As if he had said, "they should not need to shave and devote their hair, for they should be preserved without it." See Power's note.

82. The sailors rejoice, &c.] Take a delight to chatter and prate about what had happened to every boy they met. The poet says, garrula pericula—quia nautas garrulos reddebant—i. e. because they set the sailors a prating. Brit. See a like figure of speech, sat. vii. 49. Hypallage.—q. d. The chattering sailors delight to relate their dangers.

83. Boys.] Go, my boys-speaking to his servants. See sat. xi.

1. 151, where he describes his two servants-lads.

Favouring, &c.] Helping on the solemnity, by observing a profound silence and attention; this was always commanded during a sacrifice, that there might be no disturbance or interruption. In this view, favoo means to attend with silence. Ainsw. So Hor. lib. iii. ode i. l. 2.—Favete linguis, which Smart translates, Give a religious attention; and which is thus commented on in Delph. edit.

—Favete linguis. "Vox in sacris olim usitata, qua silentium im"perabatur." "An expression formerly used at sacrifices, or sa"cred rites, by which silence was commanded."

Go then, my boys, the sacred rites prepare, With awful silence, and attention hear.

POWER.

See VIRG. Æn. v. l. 71. Ore favete omnes, &c.

Sertaque delubris, et farra imponite cultris,
Ac molles ornate focos, glebamque virentem.
Jam sequar, et sacro, quod præstat, rite peracto,
Inde domum repetam, graciles ubi parva coronas
Accipient fragili simulachra nitentia cerâ.
Hic nostram placabo Jovem, Laribusque paternis
Thura dabo, atque omnes violæ jactabo colores.
Cuncta nitent; longos erexit janua ramos,
Et matutinis operatur festa lucernis.

Nec suspecta tibi sint hæc, Corvine: Catullus,

84. Put garlands, &c.] On solemn occasions all the temples of the gods were adorned with garlands.

So VIRG. Æn. ii. l. 248, 9.

Nos delubra Deûm

festa velamus fronde per urbem.

— Meal on the knives,] The custom was to make cakes with meal and salt, with which they sprinkled the sacrificing knife, the head of the victim, and the fire. Hence comes the word immolor, from the sacred mola or cake.

Virgil calls them salsæ fruges, Æn. ii. 132, 3.

Et salsæ fruges.

85. Soft hearths, &c.] The poet gave us to understand, I. 2, that his altar was made of turf, or green sod.

86. I'll soon follow.] i. e. After these preparations are made.

The sacred business, Se.] That of the public sacrifice, which I shall offer.

--- Which is best.] Quod præstat-i. e. which is the most material thing, and most necessary to be done.

87. Then return home. In order to offer private sacrifices on the little turf-altar to my domestic deities-— Little images, &c.] Little statues of the Lares, or house-hold gods, made of wax, neatly polished, so as to shine. Hence Hor. epod. ii. l. 66, calls them—renidentes Lares.

88. Slender crowns.] Small garlands, or chaplets. 89. Placate.] Appease and reader propitious.

Our Jupiter.] The favourer and guardian of our country; or, as the poet mentions the worship of Jupiter after his return home, we may suppose, that, among his other little statues, there was one of Jupiter, before which, as before the others, he intended to offer incense, in order to make him propitious.

Paternal Lares. Left me by my forefathers, who used to worship them as I do.—See note on sat. viii. 1. 110.

The Romans were very superstitious about these little images of the Lares; they thought no house safe without them, they constantly worshipped them, and, if they removed, they carried their Lares along with them: they were looked upon as tutelar deities, which protected their houses and lands. Put garlands on the temples, and meal on the knives,

And adorn the soft hearths, and the green glebe.

85

I'll soon follow, and the sacred business, which is best, being duly

I will then return home; where, little images, shining

With brittle wax, shall receive slender crowns.

Here I will placate our Jupiter, and to my paternal Lares

Will give frankincense, and will throw down all the colours of the 90

All things shine. My gate has erected long branches,

And joyful celebrates the feast with morning lamps. Nor let these things be suspected by you, Corvinus: Catullus,

90. Will give. Will offer; which they did, by putting it on the fire, and fumigating the images, or letting the smoke ascend before Throw down.] i. e. Will strew before them.

- All the colours, &c.] i. e. Violets of every colour.

91. All things shine.] Every thing looks gay.

— Has erected, &c.] Over the tops of the doors are long branches of laurel. This was usual on these festal occasions.

92. Joyful.] Having a joyful and festival appearance.

-- Celebrates.] Operatur. The verb operor, like facio, (see sat. ix. I. 117.) when it stands without any addition, signifies performing sacrifice. See also VIRG. ecl. iii. 77; and Georg. i. l. 339.

So the word mwy, in Hebr. See PARKH. Heb. and Eng. Lex.

חשד, No. 5.

The poet here means to say, that the very gates of his house bore a part in the solemnity on this joyful occasion. Some are for reading operitur, covered-i. e. the gates were covered with lamps as well as with laurel-branches. This makes a very clear sense; but I question whether operatur, as above explained, does not more exactly coincide with the epithet festa in this line. Operatur here is metaphorical, like Virgil's ridet ager.

--- Morning lamps.] It was a custom, on any joyful occasion, either of a public or private nature, to adorn the gates of their houses with branches of laurel, and with lamps, even in the daytime; which Tertullian mentions, in his apology, in the following passage :- " Cur die læto non laureis postes adumbramus? nec lucer-" nis diem infringimus?" " Why, on a joyful day, do we not over-" shadow our door-posts with laurels-nor infringe upon the day with " lamps?"

By the word matutinis, the poet means to say, he will light them early, out of zeal to his friend, that they might burn from morning to night.

My portal shines with verdant bays, And consecrated tapers early blaze.

93. Suspected, &c.] As if done with a mercenary view, or for selfish ends-as if to flatter my friend Catullus into making me his heir.

Pro cujus reditu tot pono altaria, parvos Tres habet hæredes. Libet expectare, quis ægram 95 Et claudentem oculos gallinam impendat amico Tam sterili. Verum hæc nimia est impensa: coturnix Nulla unquam pro patre cadet. Sentire calorem Si cœpit locuples Gallita et Paccius, orbi, Legitime fixis vestitur tota tabellis Porticus. Existunt, qui promittant hecatomben. Quatenus hic non sunt nec venales clephanti. Nec Latio, aut usquam sub nostro sidere talis Bellua concipitur : sed furva gente petita Arboribus Rutulis, et Turni pascitur agro 105 Cæsaris armentum, nulli servire paratum Privato: siquidem Tyrio parere solebant Hannibali, et nostris Ducibus, Regique Molosso, 94-5. Three little heirs.] Has three children to inherit his estate. 95. Glad to see.] Libet expectare—literally, it liketh me to expect; which certainly answers to the English idiom in the translation. 96—7. A friend so barren, &c.] So unlikely to leave any thing in his will to any body but his own family—who would sacrifice for such a one, I won't say a fine cock to Æsculapius for his recovery, but even an old rotten hen?—even this would not be worth while.

97. No quail.] Not even one of the least of birds. 98. Ever fall.] i. e. Be killed and offered in sacrifice.

—A father. i. e. For a man that is the father of children, and who, like Catullus, has heirs to his estate.

— Gallita and Paccius.] Two rich men who were childless, which made them fine objects for the hæredipetæ, or legacy-hunters.

99. Perceive heat. To be attacked with a fever.

— Every porch, &c.] Tota is here equivalent to omnis.—q. d. The whole of the porches, i. e. all the porches of the temples, are covered, as it were, with votive tablets for their recovery. These votive tablets were inscribed with the vows and prayers of those who hung them up. If the party, for whom these tablets were hung up, recovered, the offerers of the tablets thought themselves bound to perform their vows.

100. According to law.] Legitime here seems to mean, according to the stated custom and usual practice of such people, who made it a kind of law among them to act in this manner on such occasions; not that there was any public law to compel them to it.

101. There exist, &c.] Some there are, who would not scruple to vow an hundred oxen in sacrifice. Hecatombe is compounded of ενατον, an hundred, and βως, an ox; but it also denotes a sacrifice of an hundred sheep, or of any other animals, though primarily is to be understood of oxen, according to the etymology.

For whose return I place so many altars, has three Little heirs: I should be glad to see who would bestow 95 A hen, sick and closing her eyes, on a friend So barren: but this is an expense too great. No quail Will ever fall for a father. If rich Gallita and Paccius, Who are childless, begin to perceive heat, every porch Is clothed with tablets fixed according to law. 100 There exist who would promise an hecatomb. Forasmuch as there are no elephants to be sold, neither here Nor in Latium; nor any where in our climate is such A beast conceived, but, fetched from a dusky nation, Is fed in the Rutulian woods, and in the field of Turnus. 105 The herd of Cæsar, procured to serve no private Man: the ancestors of these, indeed, used to obey Tyrian Hannibal, and our generals, and the Molossian king, 102. Elephants, &c.] q. d. They can't get elephants indeed, or else they would vow an hecatomb of them.

102-3. Here nor in Latium.] Either here at Rome, or in the country of Italy at large. See note, sat. xi. 115.

104. Conceived.] i. e. Bred.

—— A dusky nation.] From the Moors or the Indians, who are of a swarthy or black complexion. See sat. xi. l. 125, note.

105. The Rutulian woods, &c.] In the forest near Lavinum, where Turnus the king of the Rutuli reigned, the country was called Etruria; now the dukedom of Tuscany.

106. The herd of Cesar.] Domitian, as a matter of state and curiosity, transported into Italy numbers of elephants; and, in the forest above mentioned, an herd of them might be seen together.

106-7. No private man.] They were not procured to be at any private man's command, but at the emperor's only, for his pleasure and amusement, in seeing them in the forest, and exhibiting them in public shows in the Circus.

107. Ancestors of these.] The elephants of former days were put to a nobler use.

—— Indeed.] Prateus, in his Interpretatio in usum Delph. explains the siquidem by enimvero, verily, truly, indeed—Marshall, by vero, which is much of the same import, and seems to mark a sarcastical contrast between the use of those noble animals by the warlike kings and generals of old time, and Domitian's getting them to Rome at a vast expense, for the empty gratification of his pride and ostentation.

107--8. Tyrian Hannibal.] Who got them from India, with persons to manage and train them up. Hannibal is called Tyrian, because Dido, who built Carthage, came from Tyre:—for this reason Virgil calls Carthage Tyriam urbem. The Carthaginians Tyrii.—In the second Punic war, when he came over the Alps into Italy, he brought elephants with him. See sat. x. l. 157, note.

108. Our generals.] Who took vast numbers of them .-- Metellus

Horum majores, ac dorso ferre cohortes, Partem aliquam belli, et euntem in prælia turrim. 110 Nulla igitur mora per Novium, mora nulla per Istrum Pacuvium, quin illud ebur ducatur ad aras. Et cadat ante Lares Gallitæ victima sacra, Tantis digna Deis, et captatoribus horum. Alter enim, si concedas mactare, vovebit De grege servorum magna, aut pulcherrima quæque Corpora; vel pueris, et frontibus ancillarum Imponet vittas: et, si qua est nubilis illi had two hundred and four elephants which followed his triumph after the defeat of Asdrubal the Carthaginian general .- Scipio, the fatherin-law of Pompey, had also elephants in his army in Africa. Appian says, thirty.

108. Molossian king.] Pyrrhus, king of the Molossians, first used elephants in Italy, when he came to help the Tarentines against the

109. Cohorts.] A cohort was a tenth part of a legion—several of these were in towers on the backs of elephants, and made part of the warlike force-partem belli.

110. A tower, &c. Towers, made of wood, and filled with armed men, were put on the backs of elephants, and thus carried into battle, where, partly by the trampling of elephants, partly by the arrows, javelins, and other missile weapons, discharged from the towers, great havock was made.

111. Therefore—no delay, &c.] Therefore it is not the fault of Novius, &c. that elephants are not offered, but because they can't get them.—If these legacy-hunters could procure elephants to sacrifice for the recovery of the people whom they have a design upon, they would not hesitate a moment about doing it.

Iphigenia domi, dabit hanc altaribus, etsi

112. Ivory.] Elephants, per meton. Here elephants are called ivory, from their large teeth of ivory. Georg. iii. 26. Æn. vi. 895. Virgil, on the contrary, calls ivory, elephant, by synec.

113. Before the Lares of Gailita. In order to procure their assistance and favour towards him, that they may recover him from his sickness.

The word Lares, in the largest sense, denotes certain demons, genii, or spirits, believed to preside on various occasions, distinguished by their epithets. As, Lares coelestes, some of the Dii majorum gentium; Lares marini, as Neptune, Palæmon, Thetis, &c.; Lares urbium, who were guardians of cities. The Lares also were public, as compitales, or viales, which were worshipped in the highways; or private, as the Lares domestici, or familiares, household or family deities, household gods, the protectors of the house and family. These last are usually intended by the word Lares, when used singly. See 1. 89, note. See Ainsw. Lar.

The note selecte on this line, suppose this Gallita to have been

And to carry cohorts on their back,

Some part of the war, and a tower going to battles.

Therefore there is no delay by Novius, no delay by Ister Pacuvius, but that that ivory should be led to the altars,

And fall a sacred victim before the Lares of Gallita,

Worthy of deities so great, and of the flatterers of these men.

For the one, if you allow him to slay, will vow

From his flock of servants, the great, or all the most beautiful

Bodies; or on his boys, and on the foreheads of his maids

Would put fillets: and if he has any marriageable some rich childless matron, whom Tacitus calls Cruspelina. Others believe it to be a rich old man of that name. It matters not to the subject which is right. See Juv. edit. 4to. 1695.

Iphigenia at home, he will give her to the altars, although

114. Worthy, &c.] The poet ironically styles these elephants worthy victims for such important deities as the Lares, who presided over the safety of such men, and worthy to express the huge friendship which the offerers bore them. Or, perhaps, by the word tantis, we may understand an humourous contrast, between the hugeness of the animal offered, and the littleness of the figures of the Lares before which they were offered; for the images of these were very small. See 1. 87, note: Captatores were people who flattered rich men, in hopes of being their heirs—legacy-hunters. See sat. x. 1. 202, note; and see Hox. lib. ii. sat. v. 1. 23, &c.

115. The one.] Pacuvius.—Alter, where two have been mentioned means one of them. That Pacuvius is here meant, appears from what follows, l. 125-8.

— If you allow, &c. I If he could have his own will, and could be permitted to do such a thing.

-- Vow. 7 i. e. Devote to death.

116. Flock of servants, &c.] He would pick out, from the number of his slaves, the stoutest of the men, or every one (quæque) of the most beautiful of either sex, to sacrifice.

117. His boys, &c.] He would even sacrifice those who were the instruments of his abominable pleasures.

118. Put fillets.] The vittæ were ribbands, or garlands, put on the foreheads both of the priest and of the victims.

118-19. Marriageable Iphigenia.] Any daughter in the prime of youth and beauty. Matura virgo-Hor. lib. iii. od. vi. l. 22.

Comp. Hor. lib. i. od. xxiii. l. 11, 12.

This alludes to the story of Agamemnon sacrificing his daughter Iphigenia, in order to procure a favourable wind for the departure of the Grecian fleet from Aulis, where, through the anger of the goddess Diana, it had been wind-bound for a considerable time, because the Greeks had killed an hind belonging to the goddess.

The oracle was consulted, and the answer was returned, that no wind could be had for their purpose, unless Agamemnon, the chief in the expedition, would offer up his daughter Iphigenia to appears

| Non speret tragicæ furtiva piacula cervæ. |
|--|
| Laudo meum civem, nec comparo testamento |
| Mille rates: nam si Libitinam evaserit æger, |
| Delebit tabulas, inclusus carcere nassæ, |
| Post meritum sane mirandum; atque omnia soli |
| Forsan Pacuvio breviter dabit. Ille superbus 125 |
| Incedet victis rivalibus. Ergo vides, quam |
| Grande operæ pretium faciat jugulata Mycenis. |
| Vivat Pacuvius, quæso, vel Nestora totum: |
| Possideat, quantum rapuit Nero: montibus aurum |
| Exæquet: nec amet quenquam, nec ametur ab ullo. |

the anger of Diana. Agamemnon, for the public good, brought his daughter to the altar, but the goddess, relenting, conveyed her away, and put an hind in her place.

119. Give her, &c.] Offer her up as a sacrifice.

120. Furtive expiation.] Alluding to Diana's stealing away Iphigenia, and substituting the hind in her place.

— Tragic hind.] Which had become a subject for the tragic writers, as Sophocles, Euripides, and others.

Pacuvius would consent to offer his daughter, though he were certain that nothing of this sort would happen to save her.

121. I praise my citizen.] I highly commend my fellow-citizen

Pacuvius for his wisdom and address.

- Nor do I compare, &c. To be sure the safety of a thousand ships, which could bring no peculiar and immediate profit to Agamemnon, and only answer a public purpose, is not to be compared with the last will and testament of a rich man, by which Pacuvius was to become so richly benefited as to possess his whole estate. Pacuvius therefore is certainly more justifiable than Agamemnon, in being willing to sacrifice his daughter .- A strong irony!

122. Escape Libitina. i. e. Should recover from his sickness. Libitina was a name given to Proserpine, as presiding over funerals; in her temple at Rome all things pertaining to funerals were sold, and the undertakers were called Libitinarii; hence, Libitina sometimes signifies death itself.

123. Cancel his will.] Lit. blot out the tables.—It has been before observed (sat. ii. l. 58.) that the Romans wrote on thin planks of wood, called tabulæ: these were smeared over with wax, on which the letters were made with the point of a sort of bodkin, called stylus, which was flat at one end, in order to blot out, or erase, such of the writing as they meant to cancel or alter. See Hor. sat. x. lib. i. l. 72.

--- Prison of a net.] Nassa signifies a net made of twigs, with a bait put into it, to catch fish.

The rich man is here represented as fairly hampered in the net which Pacuvius had laid for him-thoroughly taken in, as we say.

124. Desert truly wonderful. On account of such wonderful merit towards him, as Pacuvius had shewn, in lavishing such sacrifices for his recovery.

He may not expect the furtive expiation of the tragic hind.

I praise my citizen, nor do I compare with a last will
A thousand ships: for if the sick man should escape Libitina,
He'll cancel his will, enclosed in the prison of a net,
After desert truly wonderful; and every thing, perhaps,
Will give shortly to Pacuvius alone. He proud will 125
Strut, his rivals overcome. Therefore you see, how Great a reward of service she slaughter'd at Mycenæ may procure.
Let Pacuvius live, I beg, even all Nestor.
May he possess as much as Nero plunder'd—may gold equal Mountains; nor let him love any body, nor be loved by any body. 130

125. Will give shortly, &c.] Having cancelled his will, and erased all the legacies which he had left in it to other people, he now in a few words (breviter) makes Pacuvius his sole heir.

125—6. Will strut, &c.] Incedo sometimes means to walk or go in state. (Divûm incedo regina, says the haughty Juno, Æn. i. l. 50.) The poet here means, that this fellow will take state upon him, and strut with an insolence in his look and gait, triumphing over all those who had been his competitors for Gallita's favour.

126. Therefore you see, &c.] q. d. You see of what use the example of Agamemnon was to Pacuvius; for if that king of Mycenæ had not offered his daughter to have her throat cut, Pacuvius had never thought of sacrificing his daughter for the recovery of the rich man who made him heir to all his estate.

128. Let Pacuvius live, &c.] Long live Pacuvius! say I, (iron.) for the longer such a man lives, the more miserable must be be.

- All Nestor. Even to Nestor's age. See sat. x. 1. 246, 7,

note.

129. Nero plunder'd.] Who contrary to all laws, human and divine, not only plundered the people, but even the temples of the gods. The prodigious sums, which he extorted from the provinces, by unreasonable taxes, confiscations, &c. are almost incredible. He gave no office without this charge to the person who filled it—"You" know what I want—let us make it our business that nobody may "have any thing."

--- May gold, &c.] May heaps of ill-gotten wealth be his torment, and make him a prey to others, as others have been to him.

130. Nor let him love, &c.] This finishes completely the poet's imprecatory climax—for how thoroughly miserable must he be, who lives and dies a total stranger to the sweets of friendship.

END OF THE TWELFTH SATIRE.

SATIRA XIII.

ARGUMENT.

The Poet writes this Satire to Calvinus, to confort him under the loss of a large sum of money, with which he had intrusted one of his friends, and which he could not get again. Hence Juwenal

EXEMPLO quodeunque malo committitur, ipsi Displicet authori. Prima est hæc ultio, quod se Judice nemo nocens absolvitur; improba quamvis Gratia fallacis prætoris vicerit urnam. Quid sentire putas omnes, Calvine, recenti De scelere, et fidei violatæ crimine? Sed nec Tam tenuis census tibi contigit, ut mediocris Jacturæ te mergat onus: nec rara videmus Quæ pateris; casus multis hic cognitus, ac jam Line 1. With bad example.] Every evil deed which tends to set a bad example to others.

— Displeases, &c.] Gives him unpleasant sensations.

2. First revenge, &c.] The vengeance which first seizes upon him, arises from himself; his own conscience will condemn him, though he should have no other judge.

4. Should have overcome the urn, &c. Vicerit-i. e. should have defeated the urn's impartial decision, and have declared him innocent .- The pretor, who was the chief judge, had others appointed with him as assistants. The names of these were written upon little balls, and cast into an urn by the pretor: after they were shaken together, he drew out as many as the law required for the cause: after which the parties had power to reject such as they thought would be partial. The number of those excepted against were filled up by the pretor's drawing other names out of the urn. Then the judges, which were thus appointed, took an oath to judge according to law; but, on many occasions, others were often substituted by the pretor. The cause being heard, the pretor gave to each of the judges three waxen tables. On one was the letter A, to signify the acquittal or absolution of the defendant. On another C, to imply his condemnation. On another N L, for non liquet, signified that a farther hearing was necessary: which delay of the cause was called ampliation. Then the judges, being called upon, cast the billet, expressing their opinion, into the urn, according to which the pretor takes occasion to speak of the villainy of the times—shews that nothing can happen but by the permission of Providence—and that wicked men carry their own punishment about with them.

SATIRE XIII.

ARGUMENT.

W HATEVER is committed with bad example, displeases even The author of it. This is the first revenge, that, himself Being judge, no guilty person is absolved; altho' the wicked Favour of the deceitful pretor should have overcome the urn. What do you suppose all to think, Calvinus, of the recent Wickedness, and crime of violated faith? But neither Has so small an income come to your share, that the burden Of a moderate loss should sink you: nor do we see rare Those things which you suffer. This misfortune is known to many, and now pronounced sentence. But if the pretor was a wicked judge, and inclined that partiality should get the better of justice, he might so manage matters, in all these many turns of the business, that the defendant, however guilty, might appear to have the urn in his favour. This our poet very properly calls—Improba gratia fallacis prætoris.

5. What do you suppose, &c.] What, think you, are the opinions of people in general, of this injustice which you lately suffered, and of the breach of trust in your friend, of which you so loudly complain?

—— Calvinus. I Juvenal's friend, to whom he addresses this Satire. And here he comforts him by many considerations; first, that he must have all the world on his side—every body must join with him in condemning such a transaction.

7. So small an income. Another comfort is, that his circumstances are such, that such a loss won't ruin him. Census means a man's estate, or yearly revenue.

--- The burden, &c.] A metaphor taken from a ship's sinking by being overloaded.

8. Rare, Sc. His case was not singular, but very commonly happened to many as well as to Calvinus: he therefore must not look upon himself as a sufferer beyond others.

Tritus, et e medio Fortunæ ductus acervo. 10 Ponamus nimios gemitus. Flagrantior æquo Non debet dolor esse viri, nec vulnere major. Tu quamvis levium minimam, exiguamque malorum Particulam vix ferre potes, spumantibus ardens Visceribus, sacrum tibi quod non reddat amicus 15 Depositum. Stupet hæc, qui jam post terga reliquit Sexaginta annos, Fonteio Consule natus? An nihil in melius tot rerum proficis usu? Magna quidem, sacris quæ dat præcepta libellis, Victrix Fortunæ Sapientia. Dicimus autem Hos quoque felices, qui ferre incommoda vitæ, Nec jactare jugum, vità didicere magistrà. Quæ tam festa dies, ut cesset prodere furem, 10. Trite. 7 Common.

Drawn from the midst, &c.] Not taken from the top, or summit, of that heap of miseries, which Fortune stores up for mankind, but from the middle, as it were—not so small as not to be felt, nor so severe as to overwhelm you. He calls it, onus mediocris jacturæ, I. 7, 8.

11. Too many sighs.] Immoderate grief.

Moro violent, &c.] A man's concern should never exceed the proper bounds.

12. Than his wound.] Should not rise higher than that which occasions it requires. Sorrow should be proportioned to suffering.

13. Tho you, &c.] The poet here reproves the impatience and anger of his friend, who, instead of apportioning his grief to his loss, which was comparatively small, according to the preceding maxim (1.11, 12.) shewed a violence of grief and resentment on the occasion, which bespake him unable to bear, in any measure as he ought, a light injury or misfortune.

14. Burning, &c.] Your very bowels on fire with rage and indignation. We often find the intestines, such as the heart, liver, and bowels, or entrails, represented as the seat of moral feelings.

15. Your friend, &c.] The poet calls the money which Calvinus had intrusted his false friend with, and which he was afraid to lose, a sacred deposit, because delivered to him to keep, under the sacred confidence of friendship.

16. Does he wonder, &c.] Does my friend Calvinus, now turned of sixty, and consequently well acquainted with the nature of mankind from many years experience, stand astonished at such a common transaction as this?

17. Fonteius.] L. Fonteius Capito was consul with C. Vipsanius, in the reign of Nero.

18. Of so many things.] Of so many things of a like kind, which your knowledge of the world must have brought to your observation—has all your experience of men and things been of no use or profit to you?

20

Trite, and drawn from the midst of Fortune's heap.

Let us lay aside too many sighs. More violent than what is just,
The grief of a man ought not to be, nor greater than his wound.
Tho' you can hardly bear the least, and small particle
Of light misfortunes, burning with fretting

Bowels, because your friend may not return to you a sacred

Deposit. Does he wonder at these things, who already has left behind

His back sixty years, born when Fonteius was consul?

Do you profit nothing for the better by the experience of so many things?

Wisdom indeed, which gives precepts in the sacred books, Is the great conqueror of Fortune. But we call Those also happy, who, to bear the inconveniences of life, Nor to toss the yoke have learnt, life being their mistress.

What day so solemn, that it can cease to disclose a thief,

19. Wisdom, indeed, &c.] The volumes of philosophers, held sacred by the followers of them, contain rules for a contempt of fortune; and the wisdom by which they were indited, and which they teach, is the great principle which triumphs over the misfortunes we meet with. So Seneca, epist. 98. Valentior omni fortuna est animus sapientis.—The books of moral philosophy abound in maxims of this kind.

22. Nor to toss the yoke.] A metaphor taken from oxen which are restive, and endeavour to get rid of the yoke, by flinging and tossing their necks about.

The poet means, that much may be learned on the subject of triumphing over fortune from the sacred volumes of philosophy: but those are to be pronounced happy also, who, by the experience of life only, have learned to bear, with quietness, submission, and patience, any inconveniences, or misfortunes, which they may meet with.

Quicquid corrigere est nesas.

Levius sit patientia

Hor. lib i. ode xxiv. ad sin.

Superanda omnis Fortuna ferendo est.

VIRG. Æn. v. l. 710. See

Jer. xxxi. 18.

Life being their mistress, &c.] Their teacher or instructor—i. c. who are instructed by what they meet with in common life, and profit by daily experience.

That which before us lies in daily life
Is the prime wisdom.

MILTON.

23. What day, &c.] Festa dies signifies a day set apart for the observance of some festival, on which some sacrifices or religious rites were performed; a holiday, as we call it.

Festus also signifies happy, joyful. Perhaps the poet means to say, what day is so happy as not to produce some mischief or other?

| Perfidiam, fraudes, atque omni ex crimine incium |
|--|
| Quasitum, et partos gladio vel pyxide nummos? 25 |
| RARI QUIPPE BONI: numero vix sunt totidem, quot & 10 |
| Thebarum portæ, vel divitis ostia Nili. |
| Nunc ætas agitur, pejoraque sæcula ferri |
| Temporibus: quorum sceleri non invenit ipsa |
| Nomen, et a nullo posuit natura metallo. |
| Nos hominum Divûmque fidem clamore ciemus, |
| Quanto Fæsidium laudat vocalis agentem |
| Sportula. Die senior bulla dignissime, nescis |
| Quas habeat Veneres aliena pecunia? nescis |
| Ouem tua simplicitas risum vulgo moveat, cum |

24. Gain sought, &c.] Every sort of wickedness practised for the sake of gain.

25. Maney gotten.] Somebody or other murdered for their money, either more openly by the sword, or more secretly by poison.

Poison. Pyxis signifies a little box; but here, by meton. poison, which used to be kept in such boxes, by way of concealment and casiness of conveyance.

27. Thebes.] A city of Bocotia, built by Cadmus, the son of Agenor; it was called Heptapylos, from having seven gates.—There was another Thebes in Ægypt, built by Busiris, king of Ægypt, which was called Heliopolis, famous for an hundred gates. The first is meant here.

Mouths of the rich Nile.] Which were seven. The Nile is called rich, because it made Ægypt fruitful by its overflowing, thus enriching all the country within its reach.

28. An age, &c.] i. e. The present age in which we live, now passing on in the course of time. The verb ago, when applied to age or life, has this signification: hence agere vitam, to live. Si octogesimum agerent annum: if they were eighty years old. C1c.

— Worse ages.] The word sæculum, like ætas, means an age; a period of an hundred years.—Here the poet would represent the age in which he wrote, as worse than any that had gone before.

28—9. The times of iron.] The last of the four ages into which the world was supposed to be divided, and which was worse than the three preceding. See Ov. Met. lib. i.

29. Nature itself, &c.] The wickedness of the present age is so great, that nothing in nature can furnish us with a proper name to call it by.

30. Imposed, Sc. Lit. put it.—q. d. Nor has any name been affixed to it from any metal.—The first age of the world was named Golden, from its resembling gold in purity—and after this came the Silver, the Brazen, the Iron Age; but now the age is so bad, that no metal can furnish it with a name which can properly describe the nature of it. Nomen ponere signifies to put or affix a name—

Perfidy, frauds, and gain sought from every crime,
And money gotten by the sword, or by poison?

For GOOD MEN ARE SCARCE: they are hardly as many in number,
As the gates of Thebes, or the mouths of the rich Nile.
An age is now passing, and worse ages than the times of Iron: for the wickedness of which, nature itself has not Found a name, nor imposed it from any metal.

We invoke the faith of gods and men with clamour,
With as much as the vocal sportula praises Fæsidius Pleading. Say, old man, worthy the bulla, know you not What charms the money of another has? know you not What a laugh your simplicity may stir up in the vulgar, when

i. e. to name. Nature herself can find no metal base enough to call it by.

31. We invoke, &c.] Pro Deûm atque hominum fidem! was a usual exclamation on any thing wonderful, or surprising, happening.—q. d. We can seem much amazed, and cry out aloud against the vices of the age—we can call heaven and earth to witness our indignation.

32. The wocal sportula.] The dole basket; the hope of sharing which opens the mouths of the people who stand by Fæsidius while he is pleading at the bar, and makes them, with loud shouts, extol his eloquence: hence the poet calls it vocalis sportula. See a like manner of expression, sat. xii. 1. 82. See an account of the sportula, sat. i. 1. 95, note. Comp. sat. x. l. 46.

Hor. lib. i. epist. xix. l. 37, 8.

Non ego ventosæ plebis soffragia venor Impensis conarum, et tritæ munere vestis.

"I never hunt th' inconstant people's vote,
"With costly suppers, or a threadbare coat."

FRANCIS

The name Fæsidius, or Fessidius, as some editions have it, may mean some vain pleader of the time, who courted the applause of the mob, by treating them with his sportula. Perhaps no particular person may be only meant, but such sort of people in general.

33. Old man, worthy the bulla.] The bulla was an ornament worn about the necks of children, or at their breasts, made like an heart, and hollow within; they wore it till seventeen years of age, and then hung it up to the household gods.—Pers. sat. v. l. 31.

. The poet addresses himself to his old friend Calvinus, in a joking manner; as if he said—" Well, old gentleman," (comp. l. 16, 17.) "worthy again to wear your childish baubles, are you, at sixty years "old, such a child as not to know—"

34. What charms, &c.] i. e. As to be ignorant how great the temptation is, when a knave has other people's money in his power?

35. What a laugh, &c.] How the whole town will laugh at your simplicity.

35—6. When you require, &c.] q. d. If you expect that people won't forswear themselves, when perjury is so common.

Exigis a quoquam ne pejeret, et putet ullis Esse aliquod numen templis, aræque rubenti? Quondam hoc indigenæ vivebant more, prius quam Sumeret agrestem posito diademate falcem Saturnus fugiens: tunc, cum virguncula Juno, 40 Et privatus adhuc Idæis Jupiter antris. Nulla super nubes convivia Cœlicolarum, Nec puer Iliacus, formosa nec Herculis uxor Ad cyathos: et jam siccato nectare, tergens Brachia Vulcanus Liparæâ nigra tabernâ. 4.5 Prandebat sibi quisque Deus, nec turba Deorum Talis, (ut est hodie,) contentaque sidera paucis

36. Should think.] i. e. And require that they should think, &c.

37. Some deity, &c.] Should believe that religion is not all a farce, but that really there is not any of the temples without some deity which notices the actions and behaviour of men, so as to punish perjury and breach of faith.

The reddening altar.] i. e. Red with the blood of the sacrifices, or with the fire upon it. .

q. d. How childish would you appear, and what a laughter would be raised against you, if you professed to expect either religion or morals in the present age?

38. Natives.] Indigenæ.—The first natives and inhabitants of Italy, our home-bred ancestors.

Lived in this manner.] Avoiding perjury and fraud, and believing the presence of the gods in their temples, and at their al-

39. Saturn flying.] Saturn was expelled from Crete by his son Jupiter, and fled into Italy, where he hid himself, which from thence was called Latium, a latendo, and the people Latins. See VIRG. Æn. viii. 1. 319, 20. The poet means the Golden Age, (comp. sat. vi. l. 1, et seq. where Juvenal speaks of the simplicity of those times,) which the poets place during the reign of Saturn.

- Rustic sickle.] Or scythe, which Saturn is said to have invented, and to have taught the people husbandry, after his expulsion from his kingdom; for during the Golden Age, the earth brought forth every thing without culture. . See Ovid, Met. lib. i.

fab. iii.

His diadem, &c.] His kingdom being seized by his son Jupiter, and he being driven out of it.

40. When Juno, &c.] The daughter of Saturn, sister and wife to Jupiter-a little girl-i. e. before she was grown up, and marriageable. In sat. vi. l. 15, he speaks of Jupiter in a state of impuberty, in the time of the Golden Age.

41. Idean caves.] Jupiter, when born, was carried to mount Ida, in Crete, where he was concealed, and bred up, lest his father Saturn should devour him: See Ainsw. Saturnus.

You require from any not to forswear, and that he should think, that to any Temples there is some deity, and to the reddening altar?

Formerly our natives lived in this manner, before

Saturn, flying, took the rustic sickle, his diadem
Laid down: then, when Juno was a little girl,
And Jupiter as yet private in the Idæan caves.

No feasts of the Gods above the clouds,
Nor Iliacan boy, nor handsome wife of Hercules
At the cups; and now the nectar being drunk up, Vulcan

Wiping his arms black with the Liparæan shop.

45

Every god dined by himself, nor was the crowd of gods

Such, (as it is at this day,) and the stars content with a few

42. No feasts, &c.] No carousing, as in after times there was supposed to be. Comp. 1. 45.

43. Iliacan boy. Ganymede, the son of Tros, king of Troy, or Ilium, whom Jupiter, in the form of an eagle, snatched up from mount Ida, and, displacing Hebe, made cup-bearer at the feasts of the gods.

Wife of Hercules.] Hebe, the daughter of Juno, and cup-bearer to Jupiter; she happened to make a slip at a banquet of the gods, so was turned out of her place, and Ganymede put into it: she was afterwards married to Hercules.

44. The nectar, &c.] Nectar, a pleasant liquor, feigned to be the drink of the gods.—Siccato nectare, the nectar being all drunk up, the feast now over, (see sat. v. l. 47, siccabis calicem,) Vulcan retired to his forge.—All this happened after the Golden Age, but not during the continuance of it.

45. Wiping his arms.] From the soot and dirt contracted in his filthy shop.

Liparean.] Near Sicily were several islands, called the Lipary Islands; in one of which, called Vulcania, Vulcan's forge was fabled to be. See Virg. viii. 416, et seq. This was in the neighbourhood of wount Ætna. See sat. i. 1. 8.

46. Every god dined by himself.] The poet here, and in the whole of this passage, seems to make very free with the theology of his country, and, indeed to satirize the gods of Rome as freely as he does the people.

— Growd of gods.] The number of gods which the Romans worshipped, might well be called turba deorum, for they amounted to above thirty thousand."

47. This day.] The Roman Polytheism and idolatry went hand in hand with the wickedness of the times; they had a god for every vice, both natural and unpatural. The awful origin of all this, as well as its consequences, is set down by St. Paul, Rom. i. ver. 21—32.

The stars.] The heavens, per metonym.

Numinibus, miserum, urgebant Atlanta minori
Pondere. Nondum aliquis sortitus triste profundi Imperium, aut Siculă torvus cum conjuge Pluto,
Nec rota, nec Furiæ, nec saxum, aut vulturis atri
Pœna: sed infernis hilares sine regibus umbræ.
Improbitas illo fuit admirabilis ævo.
Credebant hoc grande nefas, et morte piandum,
Si juvenis vetulo non assurrexerat; et si
Barbato cuicunque puer: licet ipse videret
Plura domi fraga, et majores glandis acervos.
Tam venerabile erat præcedere quatuor annis,
Primaque Par adeo sacræ lanugo senectæ.
Nunc, si depositum non inficietur amicus,
Si reddat veterem cum tota ærugine follem,
Prodigiosa fides, et Thuscis digna libellis:

48. Urged miserable Atlas.] A high hill in Mauritania, feigned by the poets to bear up the heavens. See sat. viii. 32, note.

49. Shared the sadempire, &c.] The world as yet was not divided by lot among the three sons of Saturn, by which Neptune shared the dominion of the sea—Jupiter heaven—and Pluto the infernal regions.

50. His Sicilian Wife. Proserpine, the daughter of Ceres, whom Pluto ravished out of Sicily, and made her his wife.

51. A wheel.] Alluding to the story of Ixion, the father of the Centaurs—Jupiter took him up into heaven, where he would have ravished Juno, but Jupiter formed a cloud in her shape, on which he begat the Centaurs. He was cast down to Hell, for boasting that he had lain with Juno, where he was tied to a wheel and surrounded with serpents.

—— Furies. Of which there were three, Alecto, Megæra, Tisiphone. These were sisters, the daughters of Acheron and Nox; they are described with torches in their hands, and snakes, instead of hair, on their heads.

—— A stone.] Alluding to Sisyphus, the son of Æolus; he greatly infested Attica with his robberies, but being slain by Theseus, he was sent to hell, and condemned to roll a great stone up an hill, which stone, when he had got it to the top, rolled back again, so that his labour was to be constantly renewed.

51—2. Black vulture.] Prometheus was chained to mount Caucasus for stealing fire from heaven, where a black vulture was continually preying on his liver, which grew as fast as it was devoured. A

52. But the shades.] The ghosts of the departed—were —— Happy without infernal kings.] For there being, at that time, no crimes, there wanted no laws nor kings to enforce them; of course no punishments.

53. Improbity, &c.] Villainy of all kinds was scarcely known—any crime would have been a wonder.

55. If a youth, &c.] In those days of purity and innocence, the Deities, urged miserable Atlas with a less Weight. Nobody as yet shared the sad empire Of the deep, or fierce Pluto with his Sicilian wife. Nor a wheel, nor furies, nor a stone, or the punishment of the black Vulture: but the shades happy without infernal kings. Improbity was in that age to be wonder'd at. They believed this a great crime, and to be punish'd by death, If a youth had not risen up to an old man, and if 55 A boy to any who had a beard: tho' he might see At home more strawberries, and greater heaps of acorn. So venerable was it to precede by four years, And the first down was so equal to sacred old age. Now, if a friend should not deny a deposit, If he should restore an old purse with all the rust; Prodigious faithfulness! and worthy the Tuscan books!

highest subordination was maintained. It was a capital crime for a young man even to have sitten down in the presence of an old one, or if sitting, not to have risen up on his approach. Comp. Job xxix. 8.

So for a boy not to have done the same in the presence of a youth, now arrived at the age of puberty, which was indicated by having a beard.

56. The he might see, &c.] Strawberries, acoms, and such-like, are here supposed to be the first food of mankind in the Golden Age. The poet's meaning here is, that superiority in age always challenged the respect above mentioned, from the younger to the elder, though the former might be richer, in the possessions of those days, than the latter.

58. So venerable, &c.] So observant were they of the deference paid to age, that even a difference of four years was to create respect, insomuch that the first appearance of down upon the chin was to be venerated by younger persons, as the venerable beard of old age was by those grown to manhood; so there was an equal and proportionate subordination throughout.

60. Now.] In our day.

- Should not deny.] Either deny that he received it, or should not refuse to deliver it.

- A deposit.] Something committed to his trust.

61. With all the rust.] i. e. The coin, which has lain by so long as to have contracted a rust, not having been used. Meton.

62. Prodigious faithfulness!] Such a thing would be looked upon, in these times, as a prodigy of honesty.

A like sentiment occurs in Tea. Phorm. act i. sc. ii, where Davus returns to Geta some money which he had borrowed.

Dav. Accipe, hem:
Lectum est, conveniet numerus; quantum debui.
Ger. Amo te, et non neglexisse habeo gratiam.

Quæque coronatà lustrari debeat agnà:
Egregium sanctumque virum si cerno, bimembri
Hoc monstrum puero, vel mirandis sub aratro
Piscibus inventis, et fœtæ comparo mulæ;
Sollicitus tanquam lapides effuderit imber,
Examenque apium longà consederit uvà
Culmine delubri, tanquam in mare fluxerit amnis
Gurgitibus miris, et lactis vortice torrens.
Intercepta decem quereris sestertia fraude
Sacrilegà? quid si bis centum perdidit alter
Hoc arcana modo? majorem tertius illà
Summam, quam patulæ vix ceperat angulus arcæ?
Tam facile et pronum est Superos contemnere testes,
Si mortalis idem nemo sciat. Aspice quantà

Dav. Præsertim ut nunc sunt mores: adeo res redit, Si quis quid reddit, magna habenda est gratia.

62. Worthy the Tuscan books!] To be recorded there among other prodigies. It is said, that the art of soothsaying first came from the Tuscans, which consisted in foretelling future events from prodigies; these were recorded in books, and were consulted on occasion of any thing happening of the marvellous kind, as authorities for the determinations of the auspices, or soothsayers, thereupon.

63. Expiated, &c.] When any prodigy happened, the custom of the Tuscans was to make an expiation by sacrifice, in order to avert the consequences of ill omens, which were gathered from prodigies.

This the Romans followed.

—— A crowned she-lamb.] They put garlands of flowers, or ribbands, on the heads of the victims.—A she-lamb was the offering on such an occasion.

64. An excellent.] Egregium—ex toto grege lectum—i. e. as we say, one taken out of the common herd of mankind—choice—singular for great and good qualities.

65. Aboy of two parts.] A monstrous birth, as prodigious as a child born with parts of two different species: hence the Centaurs were called bimembres.

- Wonderful fishes, &c.] A wondrous shoal of fish unexpectedly turned up in ploughing the ground.

66. A mule with foal. Which was never known to happen. Though Appian, lib. i. says, that, before the coming of Sylla, a mule brought forth in the city. This must be looked on as fabulous.

. 67. Anxious:] Solicitous for the event.

- As if a shower, &c.] As if the clouds rained showers of stones.

68. A swarm, &c.] It was accounted ominous if a swarm of bees settled on an house, or on a temple.

-- Long bunch.] When bees swarm and settle any where,

65

117

And which ought to be expiated by a crowned she-lamb. If I perceive an excellent and upright man, I compare This monster to a boy of two parts, or to wonderful fishes Found under a plough, or to a mule with foal. Anxious as if a shower had pour'd forth stones, And a swarm of bees had settled, in a long bunch, On the top of a temple, as if a river had flow'd into the sea With wond'rous gulfs, and rushing with a whirlpool of milk. 70 Do you complain that ten sestertiums are intercepted by Impious fraud? what if another has lost two hundred secret Sestertiums in this manner? a third a larger sum than that, Which the corner of his wide chest had scarce received? So easy and ready it is, to contemn the gods who are witnesses, If that same thing no mortal can know. Behold, with how great they all cling to one another, and hang down, a considerable length, in the form of a bunch of grapes. Hence, VIRG. Georg. iv. 557, 8.

> --- Jamque arbore summâ Confluere, et lentis uvam demittere ramis.

69. A river, &c.] All rivers run into the sea, and many with great violence; therefore the poet cannot mean that there is any wonder in this-but in flowing with unusual and portentous appearances, such as being mixed with blood, which Livy speaks of, lib. xxiv. c. 10. or the like.

70. Rushing.] Torrens-violent, headlong, running in full stream, like the rushing of a land-flood, with dreadful violence, eddying in whirlpools of milk .- When we consider what has been said in the last seven lines, what an idea does it give us of the state of morals at Rome in the time of Juvenal!

71. Ten sestertiums.] About 801. 14s. 7d. of our money.

Intercepted.] i. e. Prevented from coming to your hands. 72. What if another, &c.] The poet endeavours to comfort his friend under his loss, and to keep him from indulging too great a concern about it, by wishing him to consider that he is not so great a sufferer as many others perhaps might be by a like fraud.

--- Secret, &c.] Arcana-q. d. bis centum sestertia arcanabeen the case of Juvenal's friend Calvinus.

74. Which the corner, &c.] Another, says he, may have lost so large a sum of money, as even to be greater than could be easily contained in a large chest, though stuffed at every corner, in which he had stowed it.

75. So easy and ready, &c.] So prone are men to despise the gods, who are witnesses to all their actions, that if they can but hide them from the eyes of men, they make themselves quite easy under the commission of the greatest frauds.

76. Behold, with how great, &c.] This contempt of the gods is carried so far, that men will not only defraud, but, with a loud

Voce neget; quæ sit ficti constantia vultûs. Per solis radios, Tarpeiaque fulmina jurat, Et Martis frameam, et Cirrhæi spicula vatis; Per calamos venatricis, pharetramque puellæ, Perque tuum, pater Ægæi Neptune, tridentem : Addit et Herculeos arcus, hastamque Minervæ, Quicquid habent telorum armamentaria eœli. Si vero et pater est, comedam, inquit, flebile gnati Sinciput elixi, Pharioque madentis aceto.

Sunt, in Fortunæ qui casibus omnia ponunt, Et nullo credunt mundum rectore moveri, Natura volvente vices et lucis, et anni, Atque ideo intrepidi quæcunque altaria tangunt.

unfaltering voice, and the most unembarrassed countenance, deny every thing that's laid to their charge; and this by the grossest perjury.

77. Feigned countenance.] Putting on, in his looks, a semblance of truth and honesty.

78. By the rays of the sun.] This was an usual oath. See Æn.

iii. 599, 600, and note. Delph. edit.

— Tarpeian thunderbolts.] i. e. The thunder of Jupiter, who had a temple of the Tarpeian rock. See sat. vi. l. 47, note.

79. Cyrrhwan prophet.] Apollo, who had an oracle at Delphos, near Cirrha, a city of Phocis, where he was worshipped.

80. Virgin-huntress.] Puellæ venatricis.—Diana, the fabled goddess of hunting; she, out of chastity, avoided all company of men, retired into the woods, and there exercised herself in hunting.

81. Trident.] Neptune's trident was a sort of spear with three prongs at the end, and denoted his being king of the sea, which surrounded the three then known parts of the world. With this instrument he is usually represented, and with this he was supposed to govern the sea, and even to shake the earth itself; so that there is no wonder that the superstitious heathen should swear by it, as Neptune was so considerable an object of their veneration and worship. See VIRG. Æn. i. 142-149, et al.

Father of Egeus.] Egeus was the son of Neptune, the father of Theseus. He reigned at Athens—he threw himself into the Ægean sea, which was so named after him.

82. Herculean bows.] Perhaps the poet particularly here alludes to those fatal bows and arrows of Hercules, which he gave to Philoctetes, the son of Pæas, king of Melibæa, a city of Thessaly, at the foot of mount Ossa; and which weapons, unless Philoctetes had carried to Troy, it was fated that the city could not have been taken. See VIRG. Æn. iii. 402, and note, Delph.

83. Armories of heaven.] Juvenal held the Roman mythology in great contempt-he certainly means here to deride the folly of imagining that the gods had arscuals or repositories of arms.

84. A father, &c.] Here is an allusion to the story of Thyestes,

A voice he denies it, what steadiness there is of feigned countenance. By the rays of the sun, and the Tarpeian thunderbolts he swears; And the javelin of Mars, and the darts of the Cyrrhæan prophet; By the shafts, and the quiver of the virgin-huntress, And by thy trident, O Neptune, father of Ægeus: He adds also the Herculean bows, and the spear of Minerva, Whatever the armories of heaven have of weapons: And truly if he be a father, I would eat, says he, a doleful Part of the head of my boiled son, and wet with Pharian vinegar. 85

There are who place all things in the chances of Fortune, And believe the world to be moved by no governor, Nature turning about the changes both of the light and year, And therefore intrepid they touch any altars whatsoever.

the brother of Atreus, who, having committed adultery with the wife of Atreus, Atreus in revenge killed and dressed the child born of her, and served him up to his brother at his own table.

The defrauder is represented as perjuring himself by many oaths; and now he wishes, that the fate of Thyestes may be his, that he may have his son dressed and served up to table for him to eat, if he be guilty of the fraud which is laid to his charge.

85. Part of the head.] Sinciput signifies the forepart, or, perhaps one half of the head, when divided downwards. See Ainsw. Quasi semicaput—or, a scindendo, from whence sinciput.

— Pharian vinegar.] Pharos was an island of Ægypt, from whence came the best vinegar, of which were made sauces, and seasonings for victuals of various kinds. The poet does not add this without an ironical fling at the luxury of his day.

86. There are, &c.] i.e. There are some so atheistically inclined, as to attribute all events to mere chance.

87. The world to be moved, &c.] Epicurus and his followers acknowledged that there were gods, but that they took no care of human affairs, nor interfered in the management of the world. So Hok. sat. v. lib. i. l. 101-3.

Deos didici securum agere zvum, Nec, si quid miri faciat natura, Deos id . Tristes ex alto cœli demittere tecto.

88. Nature, &c.] A blind principle, which they call nature, bringing about the revolutions of days and years-(lucis et anni)- acting merely mechanically, and without design.

89. Intrepid they touch, &c.] When a man would put another to his solemn oath, he brought him to a temple, and there made him swear, laying his hand upon the altar. But what constraint could this have on the consciences of those who did not believe in the interference of the gods—what alters could they be afraid to touch, and to swear by in the most solemn manner, if they thought that perjury was not noticed?

Est alius, metuens ne crimen pæna sequatur:

Hic putat esse Deos, et pejerat, atque ita secum:

Decernat quodcunque volet de corpore nostro

Isis, et irato feriat mea lumina sistro,

Dummodo vel cæcus teneam, quos abnego, nummos.

Et phthisis, et vomicæ putres, et dimidium crus

Sunt tanti? pauper locupletem optare podagram

Ne dubitet Ladas, si non eget Anticyra, nec

Archigene: quid enim velocis gloria plantæ,

Præstat, et esuriens Pisææ ramus olivæ?

UT SIT MAGNA, TAMEN CERTE LENTA IRA DEORUM EST. 100

Si curant igitur cunctos punire nocentes,

90. Another, &c.] The poet, having before mentioned atheists, who thought the world governed by mere chance, or, though they might allow that there were gods, yet that these did not concern themselves in the ordering of human affairs, now comes to another sort, who did really allow, not only the existence, but also the providence of the gods, and their attention to what passed among mortals, and yet such persons having a salvo, to console themselves under the commission of crimes, which he well describes in the following lines.

91. Thus with himself.] i. e. Thus argues with himself, allowing and fearing that he will be punished.

92. "Let Isis," &c.] Isis was originally an Ægyptian goddess; but the Romans having adopted her among their deities, they built her a temple at Rome, where they worshipped her. She was supposed to be much concerned in inflicting diseases and maladies on mankind, and particularly on the perjured.

93. Strike my eyes.] Strike me blind.

Angry sistrum. The sistrum was a musical instrument; it is variously described, but generally thought to be a sort of timbrel, of an oval, or a triangular form, with loose rings on the edges, which, being struck with a small iron rod, yielded a shrill sound. The Ægyptians used it in battle instead of a trumpet. It was also used by the priests of Isis at her sacrifices, and the goddess herself was described as holding one in her right hand.

Her angry sistrum—per hypallagen—for the angry goddess with her sistrum.

94. Keep the money, &c.] Juvenal here describes one, who, having money intrusted to him, refuses to deliver it up when called upon, and who is daring enough, not only to deny his ever having received it, but to defy all punishment, and its consequences, so that he may but succeed in his perjury and fraud, and still keep the money in his possession.

95. A phthisic.] (From Gr. φθισίς, a φθιω, to corrupt.) A consumption of the lungs.

Putrid sores.] Vomica-imposthumes of a very malignant kind.

95

Another is fearing lest punishment may follow a crime: 90 He thinks there are gods, and forswears, and thus with himself-

"Let Isis decree whatever she will concerning this body

" Of mine, and strike my eyes with her angry sistrum,

" So that, even blind, I may keep the money which I deny.

" Are a phthisic, or putrid sores, or half a leg of Such consequence? let not poor Ladas doubt to wish for "The rich gout, if he does want Anticyra, nor

" Archigenes; for what does the glory of a swift foot

" Avail him, and the hungry branch of the Pisæan olive?"

"Tho' THE ANGER OF THE GODS BE GREAT, YET CERTAINLY IT IS SLOW. 100

"If they take care therefore to punish all the guilty,

95. Half a leg. The other half being amputated, on account of incurable sores, which threatened mortification.

96. Of such consequence.] Tanti-of so much consequence-i. e.

as to counterbalance the joy of possessing a large sum of money.

- Ladas. The name of a famous runner, who won the prize at the Olympic games.

97. The rich gout.] So called, because it usually attacks the rich and luxurious.

-- If he does not want Anticyra.] i. e. If he be not mad. Anticyra, an island of the Archipelago, was famous for producing great quantities of the best hellebore, which the ancients esteemed good to purge the head in cases of madness. Whence naviga Anticyram, was as much as to say-you are mad. See Hor. lib. ii. sat. iii. l. 166.

98. Archigenes.] Some famous physician, remarkable, perhaps, for curing madness. See sat. vi. 235.

--- The glory of a swift foot, &c.] What good does the applause got by his swiftness do him? it will not fill his belly.

99. Hungry branch of the Piscan dive.] Pisa was a district of Elis, in Peloponnesus, in which was Olympia, where the Olympian games were celebrated: the victors in which were crowned with chaplets made of olive-branches, hence called Pisæan.

· The hungry branch-i. e. that will afford no food to the gainers of it. See note on 1. 93, ad fin.

The speaker here means, that to be sick and rich, is better than to be healthy and poor; that the famous Ladas, unless he were mad, would sooner choose to be laid up with the gout and be rich, than to enjoy all the glory of the Olympic games and be poor.

100. Tho' the anger, &c.] Another flatters himself, that, though punishment may be heavily inflicted some time or other, yet the evil day may be a great way off. See Eccl. viii. 11.

101. If they take care, Ge.] q. d. If they do observe the actions of men, and attend to what they do, so as to take order for the punishment of guilt, wherever they find it, yet it may be a great while before it comes to my turn to be punished.

Quando ad me-venient? sed et exorabile numen-

Fortasse experiar: solet his ignoscere. Multi Committunt eadem diverso crimina fato. Ille crucem pretium sceleris tulit, hic diadema. 105 Sic animum diræ trepidum formidine culpæ Confirmant. Tunc te sacra ad delubra vocantem Præcedit, trahere imo ultro, ac vexare paratus. Nam cum magna malæ superest audacia causæ, Creditur a multis fiducia: mimum agit ille, 110 Urbani qualem fugitivus scurra Catulli. Tu miser exclamas, ut Stentora vincere possis, Vel potius quantum Gradivus Homericus: audis, Jupiter, hæc? nec labra moves, cum mittere vocem Debueras, vel marmoreus, vel aheneus? aut cur 115 In carbone tuo chartâ pia thura solutâ

103. Exorable, &c.] It may be I shall escape all punishment; for perhaps I may obtain forgiveness, and find the Deity easy to be entreated.

--- He useth, &c.] i. e. Crimes of this sort, which are not committed out of contempt of the Deity, but merely to get a little money, he usually forgives.

104. Different fate.] Another subterfuge of a guilty conscience, is, that though, in some instances, wrong doers are punished grievously, yet in others they succeed so happily as to obtain rewards: so that the event of wickedness is very different to different people.

105. Borne the cross, &.] The same species of wickedness that has brought one man to the gallows, has exalted another to a throne.

106—7. Thus they confirm.] By all these specious and deceitful reasonings, they cheat themselves into the commission of crimes, and endeavour to silence the remonstrances and terrors of a guilty conscience.

108. He precedes, &c.] Thus confident, the wretch whom you summon to the temple, in order to swear to his innocence, leads the way before you, as if in the utmost haste to purge himself by oath.

---- Ready to draw, &c.] He is ready to drag you along by force, and to harass and teaze you to get on faster, in order to bring him to his oath.

109. When great impudence, &c.] When a man is impudent enough, however guilty, to set a good face upon the matter, this is mistaken by many for a sign of honest confidence, arising from innocence.

110. He acts the farce, &c.] Alluding to a play written by one Lutatius Catullus, called the Phasma, or Vision, (see sat. viii. 185, 6.) in which there was a character of a buffoon, who ran away from his master, after having cheated him, and then vexed, and even pro-

 When will they come to me ?—But, perhaps too, the derty

"Exorable I may experience: he useth to forgive these things.

" Many commit the same crimes with a different fate.

"One has borne the cross as a reward of wickedness, another a didem."

105

Thus the mind trembling with the fear of dire guilt
They confirm: then you, calling him to the sacred shrines,
He precedes, even ready of his own accord to draw you, and to teaze you.

For when great impudence remains to a bad cause,
It is believed confidence by many: he acts a farce,
Such as the fugitive buffoon of the witty Catullus.

You miserable exclaim, so as that you might overcome Stentor, Or rather as much as the Homerican Gradivus: "Do you hear,

"O Jupiter, these things? nor move your lips when you ought "To send forth your voice, whether you are of marble or of brass?

"or why,

"On thy coal, put we the pious frankincense from the loos'd voked him, that he might be brought to swear himself off, cheerfully proposing thus to be perjured. This play is lost by time, so that nothing certain can be said concerning this allusion; but what is here said (after Holyday) seems probable.

111. Witty Catullus.] Some expound urbani, here, as the cogno-men of this Catullus.

112. You miserable exclaim—] You, half mad with vexation at finding yourself thus treated, and in amazement at the impudence of such a perjury, break forth aloud.

- Stentor.] A Grecian mentioned by Homer, Il. & l. 785, 6.

to have a voice as loud as fifty people together.

113. Homerican Gradivus. See note, sat. ii. 1. 128. Homer says, (II. £. 860—2.) that when Mars was wounded by Diomede, he roared so loud that he frightened the Grecians and Trojans, and made a noise as loud as 10,000 men together.

In some such manner as this, wouldst thou, my friend Calvinus, exclaim, and call out to Jupiter.

114. Nor move your lips.] Canst thou be a silent hearer, O Jupiter, of such perjuries as these? wilt thou not so much as utter a word against such doings, when one should think thou oughtest to threaten vengeance, wert thou even made of marble or brass, like thine images which are among us?

115. Or why.] Where is the use—to what purpose is it?

116. Put we, &c.] See sat. xii. 1. 89, note.

116-17. From the loos d paper.] Some think that the offerers used to bring their incense wrapped up in paper, and, coming to the altar, they undid or opened the paper, and poured the incense out of it upon the fire.

But others, by charta soluta (abl. absol.) understand a reference

Ponimus, et sectum vituli jecur, albaque porci Omenta? ut video, nullum discrimen habendum est Effigies inter vestras, statuamque Bathylli. Accipe quæ contra valeat solatia ferre, Et qui nec Cynicos, nec Stoica dogmata legit A Cynicis tunicâ distantia; non Epicurum Suspicit exigui lætum plantaribus horti. Curentur dubii medicis majoribus ægri, Tu venam vel discipulo committe Philippi.

Si nullum in terris tam detestabile factum Ostendis, taceo; nec pugnis cædere pectus Te veto, nec plana faciem contundere palma; Quandoquidem accepto claudenda est janua damno, to the custom, mentioned sat. x. 55. (see note there,) of fastening pieces of paper, containing vows, upon the images of the gods, and taking them off when their prayers were granted, after which they offered what they had vowed.

117. "The cut liver," &c.] The liver cut out of a calf, and the cawl which covered the inwards of an hog, were usual offerings.

119. "The statue of Bathyllus."] A fiddler and a player, whose statue was erected in the temple of Juno, at Samos, by the tyrant Polycrates. - q. d. At this rate, I don't see that there is any difference between thy images, O Jupiter, and those that may be erected in honour of a fiddler.

In this expostulatory exclamation to Jupiter, which the poet makes his friend utter with so much vehemence, there is very keen raillery against the folly and superstition that prevailed at Rome, which Juvenal held in the highest contempt. This almost reminds one of that fine sarcasm of the prophet Elijah-1 Kings xviii. 27.

120. Hear, &c. The poet is now taking another ground to console his friend, by representing to him the frequency, not only of the same, but of much greater injuries than what he has suffered; and that he, in being ill used, is only sharing the common lot of mankind, from which he is not to think himself exempt.

---- Hear.] Accipe-auribus understood.

121. Neither hath read.] Never hath made these his study.

The Cynics. The followers of Diogenes.

___ Stoic doctrines.] The doctrines of Zeno and his followers, who were called Stoics, from sou, a porch where they taught.

Differing, &c. The people differed from each other in their dress, the Cynics wearing no tunic (a sort of waistcoat) under their cloaks, as the Stoics did; but both agreed in teaching the contempt of money, and of the change of fortune.

122. Epicurus. A philosopher of Athens, a temperate and sober man, who lived on bread and water and herbs: he placed man's chief happiness in the pleasure and tranquillity of the mind. He died of the stone at Athens, aged seventy-two. His scholars afterwards sadly perverted his doctrines, by making the pleasures of the " Paper, and the cut liver of a calf, and of an hog

"The white cawl? as I see, there is no difference to be reckon'd,

"Between your images, and the statue of Bathyllus."

Hear, what consolations on the other hand one may bring, And who neither hath read the Cynics, nor the Stoic doctrines, differing

From the Cynics by a tunic: nor admires Epicurus

Happy in the plants of a small garden.

The dubious sick may be taken care of by greater physicians,

Do you commit your vein even to the disciple of Philip. 125 If you shew no fact in all the earth so detestable,

I am silent: nor do I forbid you to beat your breast With your fists, nor to bruise your face with your open palm; Since, loss being received, the gate is to be shut, body the chief good, and ran into those excesses which brought a great scandal on the sect. Suspicit—lit. looks up to.

124. Dubious sick, &c.] Those who are so ill, that their recovery is doubtful, should be committed to the care of very experienced and able physicians.

So, those who are afflicted with heavy misfortunes, stand in need of the most grave and learned advice.

125. Commit your vein, &c.] A person whose cause of illness is but slight, may trust himself in the hands of a young beginner.

So you, Calvinus, whose loss is but comparatively slight, have no need of Stoics, or Cynics, or of such a one as Epicurus, to console you; I am sufficient for the purpose, though I do not read or study such great philosophers.

Philip.] Some surgeon of no great credit or reputation; but even his apprentice might be trusted to advise bleeding, or not, in a slight disorder. So you may safely trust to my advice in your present circumstances, though I am no deep philosopher; a little common sense will serve the turn.

The whole of these two last lines is allegorical; the ideas are taken from bodily disorder, but are to be transferred to the mind.

126. If you shew, &c.] Could you shew no act in all the world so vile as this which has been done towards you, I would say no more -I would freely abandon you to your sorrows, as a most singularly unhappy man.

· 127. Nor do I, &c.] i. e. Go on, like a man frantic with grief-beat your breast-slap your face till it be black and blue.

129. Since, &c.] In a time of mourning for any great loss, it was usual to shut the doors and windows.

___ Loss being received.] A loss of money incurred.—He is here rallying his friend Calvinus .- q. d. Inasmuch as the loss of money is looked upon as the most serious of all losses, doubtless you ought to bewail your misfortune, with every circumstance of the most unfeigned sorrow.

Et majore domûs gemitu, majore tumultu

Planguntur nummi, quam funera: nemo dolorem
Fingit in hoc casu, vestem diducere sunımam

Contentus, vexare oculos humore coacto:
Ploratur lachrymis amissa pecunia veris.
Sed si cuncta vides simili fora plena querelâ;
Si decics lectis diversâ parte tabellis,
Vana supervacui dicunt chirographa ligni,
Arguit ipsorum quos litera, gemmaque princeps
Sardonyches, loculis quæ custoditur eburnis:
Ten', ô delicias, extra communia censes

140
Ponendum? Quî tu gallinæ filius albe,

130. Mourning of the house, &c.] i. e. Of the family—for, to be sure, the loss of money is a greater subject of grief, and more lamented than the deaths of relations.

131. Nobody feigns, &c.] The grief for loss of money is very sincere, however feigned it usually is at funerals.

132. Content to sever, &c.] Nobody contents himself with the mere outward show of grief—such as rending the upper edge of a garment, which was an usual sign of grief.

133. Ven the eyes, &c.] To rub the eyes, in order to squeeze out a few forced tears.

See TERENT. Eun. act i. sc. i. where Parmeno is describing the feigned grief of Phædria's mistress, and where this circumstance of dissimulation is finely touched:

Hæc verba una mehercle falsa lacrumula, Quam, oculos terendo misere, vix vi expresserit Restinguet, &c.

So VIRG. Æn. ii. l. 196.

Captique dolis lachrymisque coacti.

134. Lost money is deplored, &c.] When we see a man deploring the loss of money, we may believe the sincerity of his tears.

The poet in this, and the preceding lines on this subject, finely satirizes the avarice and selfishness of mankind, as well as their hypocrisy, and all want of real feelings, where self is not immediately concerned.

135. If you see, &c.] q. d. However I might permit you to indulge in sorrow, if no instance of such fraud and villainy had happened to any body but yourself, yet if it be every day's experience, if the courts of justice are filled with complaints of the same kind, why should you give yourself up to grief, as singularly wretched, when what has happened to you is the frequent lot of others.

136. If tablets. i.e. Deeds or obligations written on tablets.

See sat. ii. l. 58, note.

- Read over, &c.] i.e. Often read over in the hearing of witnesses, as well as of the parties.

By the different party.] This expression is very obscure, and does not appear to me to have been satisfactorily elucidated by

And with greater mourning of the house, with a greater tumult,

Money is bewailed than funerals: nobody feigns grief [130
In this case, content to sever the top of the garment,

To vex the eyes with constrained moisture:

Lost money is deplored with true tears.

But if you see all the courts filled with the like complaint,

If, tablets being read over ten times, by the different party,

They say the hand-writings of the useless wood are vain,

Whom their own letter convicts, and a principal gem

Of a sardonyx, which is kept in ivory boxes.

Think you, O sweet Sir, that out of common things 140

You are to be put? How are you the offspring of a white hen, commentators. Some read diversa in parte, and explain it to mean, that the deeds had been read over in different places—variis in locis, says the Delphin interpretation. However, after much consideration, I rather approve of reading diversa parte, by the different (i. e. the opposite) party.—Pars means, sometimes, a side or party in contention. Ainsw. In this view, it exaggerates the impudence and villainy of a man who denied his deed or obligation, seeing that his adversary, the creditor, having frequently read over the deed, could not be mistaken as to its contents, any more than the debtor, who had signified and sealed it, as well as heard it read over.

137. They say.] i. e. The fraudulent debtors say, that the handwritings contained in the bonds are false and void.

Supervacui ligni, i. c. of the inscribed wooden tablets, which are of no use, though the obligation be written on them.

q. d. Notwithstanding the hand-writing appears against them, signed and sealed by themselves, and that before witnesses, yet they declare that it is all false, a mere deceit, and of no obligation whatsoever—they plead, non est factum, as we say.

138. Whom their own letter convicts. Whose own hand-writing proves it to be their own deed.

- A principal gem, &c.] Their seal cut upon a sardonyx of great value, with which they sealed the deed.

139. Which is kept, &c.] Kept in splendid cases of ivory, perhaps one within another, for its greater security. By this circumstance, the poet seems to hint, that the vile practice which he mentions, was by no means confined to the lower sort of people, but had made its way among the rich and great.

140. O sweet Sir.] Delicias-hominis understood. Comp. sat. vi.

47. An ironical apostrophe to his friend.

Deliciæ is often used to denote a darling, a minion, in which a person delights; here delicias might be rendered choice, favourite, i. e. of fortune—as if exempted from the common accidents of life—as if put or placed out of their reach.

141. How.] Why—by what means—how can you make it out?

The offering of a white hen.] The colour of white was Nos viles pulli nati infelicibus ovis ? Rem pateris modicam, et mediocri bile ferendam, Si flectas oculos majora ad crimina: Confer Conductum latronem, incendia sulphure cœpta, 145 Atque dolo, primos cum janua colligit ignes: Confer et hos, veteris qui tollunt grandia templi. Pocula adorandæ rubiginis, et populorum Dona, vel antiquo positas a rege coronas Hæc ibi si non sunt, minor extat sacrilegus, qui 150 Radat inaurati femur Herculis, et faciem ipsam Neptuni, qui bracteolam de Castore ducat. An dubitet, solitus totum conflare Tonantem? Confer et artifices, mercatoremque veneni, Et deducendum corio bovis in mare, cum quo 155 deemed lucky. This expression appears to have been proverbial in Juvenal's time to denote a man that is born to be happy and fortunate.

Some suppose the original of this saying to be the story told by Suetonius in his life of Galba, where he mentions an eagle, which soaring over the head of Livia, a little after her marriage with Augustus, let fall into her lap a white hen, with a laurel-branch in her mouth; which hen, being preserved, became so fruitful, that the place where this happened was called Villa ad Gallinas.

But the poet saying nothing of fruitfulness, but of the colour only, it is rather to be supposed that Erasmus is right, in attributing this proverb to the notion which the Romans had of a white colour, that it denoted luck or happiness, as dies albi, and albo lapillo notati,

and the like.

142. Unfortunate eggs.] The infelicibus ovis, put here in opposition to the white hen, seems to imply the eggs of some birds of unhappy omen, as crows, ravens, &c. figuratively to denote those who are born to be unfortunate.

Sæpe sinistra cavâ prædixit ab ilice Cornix.

Virg. ecl. i. 18; and ix. 15.

143. With moderate choler, &c.] i. e. Moderate wrath, anger, resentment, when you consider how much greater injuries others suffer from greater crimes.

144. Compare. Consider in a comparative view.

145. Hired thief.] Or cut-throat, who is hired for the horrid purpose of assassination.

Burnings begun with rulphur.] Which is here put by synec. for all sort of combustible matter with which incendiaries fire houses.

146. By deceit.] In a secret manner, by artfully laying the destructive materials, so as not to be discovered till too late to prevent the mischief.

- Collects the first fires.] So as to prevent those who are in

We, vile chickens hatched from unfortunate eggs? You suffer a moderate matter, and to be borne with moderate choler, If you bend your eyes to greater crimes: compare The hired thief, burnings begun with sulphur, 145 And by deceit, when the gate collects the first fires: Compare also these, who take away the large cups Of an old temple, of venerable rust, and the gifts Of the people, or crowns placed by an ancient king. If these are not there, there stands forth one less sacrilegious, who 150 May scrape the thigh of a gilt Hercules, and the very face of Neptune, who may draw off the leaf-gold from Castor. Will he hesitate, who is used to melt a whole Thunderer? Compare also the contrivers, and the merchant of poison,

And him to be launched into the sea in the hide of an ox, the house from getting out, and those who are without from getting in, to afford any assistance. It is not improbable that the poet here glances at the monstrous act of Nero, who sat Rome on fire.

155

147. Large cups, &c.] Who are guilty of sacrilege, in stealing the sacred vessels which have been for ages in some antique temple, and which are venerable from the rust which they have contracted by time.

148-9. The gifts of the people.] Rich and magnificent offerings, given to some shrine by a whole people together, in honour of the god that presided there.

: 149. Crowns placed, &c.] As by Romulus and other kings, whose crowns, in honour of their memory, were hung up in the temples of the gods.

. 150. If these are not there.] If it so happen that there be no such valuable relics as these now mentioned, yet some petty sacrilegious thief will deface and rob the statues of the gods.

151. Scrape the thigh, &c.] To get a little gold from it.
151-2. Face of Neptune.] Some image of Neptune, the beard whereof was of gold.

152. Draw off the leaf gold, &c. Peel it off, in order to steal it, from the image of Castor:-there were great treasures in his temple. See sat. xiv. l. 260.

153. Will he hesitate. At such comparatively small matters as these, who could steal a whole statue of Jupiter, and then melt it down-and who can make a practice of such a thing? A man who accustoms himself to greater crimes, can't be supposed to hesitate about committing less.

. 154. Contrivers, and the merchant of poison.] Those who make, and those who sell poisonous compositions, for the purposes of sorcery and witchcraft, or for killing persons in a secret and clandes. tine manner. See Hor. sat. ix. lib. i. 31; and epod. ix. l. 61.

155. Launched into the sea, &c.] Parricides were put into a sack made of an ox's hide, together with an ape, a cock, a serpent, and a dog, and thrown into the sea. See sat. viii. 214. The fate of

VOL. II.

Clauditur adversis innoxia simia fatis. Hæc quota pars scelerum, quæ custos Gallicus urbis Usque a Lucifero, donec lux occidat, audit ? Humani generis mores tibi nôsse volenti Sufficit una domus; paucos consume dies, et 160 Dicere te miserum, postquam illinc veneris aude. Quis tumidum guttur miratur in Alpibus? aut quis In Meroë crasso majorem infante mamillam? Cærula quis stupuit Germani lumina, flavam Cæsariem, et madido torquentem cornua cirro? 165 Nempe quod hæc illis natura est omnibus una. Ad subitas Thracum volucres, nubemque sonoram Pygmæus parvis currit bellator in armis: Mox impar hosti, raptusque per aëra curvis Unguibus a sævå fertur grue: si videas hoc 170 Gentibus in nostris, risu quaterere: sed illic, these poor innocent animals is very cruel, they having done no wrong. Deducendum. Met. See Virg. G. i. 255.

157. Keeper of the city.] Rutilius Gallicus was appointed, under Domitian, prefectus urbis, who had cognizance of capital offences, and sat every day on criminal causes.

158. From the morning.] Lucifero.—The planet Venus, when seen at day break, is called Lucifer—i. e. the bringer of light. See sat. viii. 12.

Nascère præque diem veniens age Lucifer almum Viro. ecl. viii. l. 17. Lucifer ortus erat—— Ov. Mer. iv. 664.

It is not to be supposed that the præfectus urbis literally sat from morning to night every day, but that he was continually, as the phrase among us imports, hearing causes, in which the most atrocious crimes were discovered and punished.

160. One house suffices.] q. d. If you desire to be let into a true history of human wickedness, an attendance at the house of Gallicus alone will be sufficient for your purpose.

Spend a few days, & c.] Attend there for a few days, and when you come away, dare, if you can, to call yourself unhappy, after hearing what you have heard at the house of Gallicus. Domus is a very general word, and need not to be restricted here to signify the private house of the judge, but may be understood of the court or place where he sat to hear causes.

162. Swoln throat, &c.] The inhabitants about the Alps have generally great swellings about their throats, occasioned, as some suppose, by drinking snow water. The French call these protu-berances on the outside of the throat-goitres.

163. Meroe.] An island surrounded by the Nile—See sat. vi. 527.—The women of this island are said to have breasts of an enormous size. Our poet is hardly to be understood literally.

164. Blue eyes, Ge.] Tacit. de Mor. Germ. says, that the Ger-

165

With whom an liarmless ape, by adverse fates, is shut up.

How small a part this of the crimes, which Gallieus, the keeper of the city,

Hears from the morning, until the light goes down?

To you who are willing to know the manners of the human race

One house suffices; spend a few days, and dare 160

To call yourself miserable, after you come from thence.

Who wonders at a swoln throat in the Alps? or who

In Meroë at a breast bigger than a fat infant?

Who has been amazed at the blue eyes of a German, his yellow

Hair, and twisting his curls with a wet lock?

Because indeed this one nature is to them all,

At the sudden birds of the Thracians, and the sonorous cloud.

The Pygmaan warrior runs in his little arms,

Soon unequal to the enemy, and seized, thro' the air, with crooked Talons, he is carried by a cruel crane : if you could see this In our nations, you would be shook with laughter: but there, mans have truces et cæruleos oculos, et comas rutilas-fierce and blue eyes, and red hair.

165. Twisting his curls.] Cornu-lit. an horn; but is used in ma-.ny senses to express things that bear a resemblance to an horn-as here the Germans twisted their hair in such a manner, as that the curls stood up and looked like horns.

--- A wet lock.] Cirrus signifies a curled lock of hair. The Germans used to wet their locks with ointment of some kind, perhaps that they might the more easily take, and remain in, the shape in which the fashion was to put them-something like our use of pomatum; or the ointment which they used might be some perfume. Comp. Hor. lib. ii. ode vii. l. 7, 8.

166. Because, &c. Nobody would be surprised at seeing a German as above mentioned, and for this reason, because all the Germans . do the same, it is the one universal fashion among them .- Natura sometimes signifies, a way or method.

167. Sudden birds, &c.] A flight of cranes coming unexpectedly from Strymon, a river of Thrace.

Strymoniæ grues .- See Virg. G. i. 120; Æn. x. 265.

Sonorous cloud. The cranes are birds of passage, and fly in great numbers when they change their climate, which they were supposed to do when the winter set in in Thrace; they made a great noise as they flew. See En. x. 265, 6.

168. Pygmaan warrior, &c.] The Pygmies (from πυγμη, the fist, or a measure of space from the elbow to the hand—a cubit) were a race of people in Thrace, which were said to be only three inches high. AINSW. Juvenal says, a foot, l. 173. They were said always to be at war with the cranes.

Little arms.] His diminutive weapons. 169. The enemy.] The cranes.

171. In our nations, &c.] In our part of the world, if an in-

Quanquam eadem assidue spectentur prælia, ridet
Nemo, ubi tota cohors pede non est altior uno.

Nullane perjuri capitis, fraudisque nefandæ
Pæna erit? abreptum crede hunc graviore catenâ
Protinus, et nostro (quid plus velit ira?) necari
Arbitrio: manet illa tamen jactura, nec unquam
Depositum tibi sospes erit: sed corpore trunco
Invidiosa dabit minimus solatia sanguis:
At vindicta bonum vitâ jucundius ipsâ
Nempe hoc indocti, quorum præcordia nullis
Interdum, aut levibus videas flagrantia causis:
Quantulacunque adeo est occasio, sufficit iræ.
Chrysippus non dicet idem, nec mite Thaletis Ingenium, dulcique senex vicinus Hymetto.

stance of this sort were to happen, it would appear highly ridiculous; to see a little man fighting a crane, and then flown away with in the talons of the bird, would make you shake your sides with laughter, from the singularity of such a sight.

172. The same battles, &c. In that part of the world, there being no singularity or novelty in the matter, though the same thing happens constantly, nobody is seen to laugh, however ridiculous it may be to see an army of people, not one of which is above a foot high.

The poet means to infer from all this, that it is the singularity and novelty of events which make them wondered at: hence his friend Calvinus is so amazed and grieved that he should be defrauded, looking upon it as peculiar to him; whereas, if he would look at what is going forward in the world, particularly in courts of civil and criminal judicature, he would see nothing to be surprised at, with respect to his own case, any more than he would be surprised, if he went among the Germans, to see blue eyes, and red hair, or locks curled and wetted with some ointment, seeing they all appear alike. Or if he were to go among the Pygmies, he would see no-body laugh at their battles with the cranes, which are constantly happening, and at the diminutive size of the Pigmy warriors, which isalike in all.

174. "No punishment," Sc.] Well, but, says Calvinus, though you observe that I am not to be surprised at what I have met with, because it is so frequent, is such a matter to be entirely unnoticed, and such an offender not to be punished?

"A perjured head."] A perjured person .- Capitis, per synec. stands here for the whole man. So Hor. lib. i. ode xxiv. l. 2.

Tam chari capitis.

175. Wicked fraud." In taking my money to keep for me, and then denying that he ever had it.

"Suppose," &c.] Juvenal answers-suppose the man who 180

185

Tho' the same battles may be seen constantly, nobody Laughs, when the whole cohort is not higher than one foot.

"Shall there be no punishment of a perjured head,

"And of wicked fraud?" "Suppose this man dragg'd away with 175 "A weightier chain immediately, and to be kill'd (what would anger "have more?)

"At our will: yet that loss remains, nor will ever

"The deposit be safe to you:" "but from his maimed body

"The least blood will give an enviable consolation.

"But revenge is a good more pleasant than life itself."

Truly this is of the unlearned, whose breasts you may see

Burning, sometimes from none, or from slight causes:

However small the occasion may be, it is sufficient for anger. Chrysippus will not say the same, nor the mild disposition

Of Thales, and the old man neighbour to sweet Hymettus, has injured you hurried instantly away to prison, and loaded with fetters heavier than ordinary-graviore catena.

176. "Be 'kill'd," &c.] Be put to death by all the tortures we could invent-(and the most bitter anger could desire no more)what then?

177. "That loss."] i. e. Which you complain of.

"Remains."] Is still the same.

178. "The deposit," &c.] The money which you deposited in his hands would not be the safer-i. e. at all the more secure.

179. "The least blood," &c.] True, replies Calvinus, but I should enjoy my revenge-the least drop of blood from his mangled body would give me such comfort as to be enviable; for revenge affords a pleasure sweeter than life itself.

181. "Truly this," &c.] Truly, says Juvenal, ignorant and foolish people think so.—q. d. This is the sentiment of one who is void of all knowledge of true philosophy—indocti.

- Whose breasts, &c. Præcordia signifies, literally, the parts about the heart, which is supposed to be the seat of the passions and affections; here it may stand for the passions themselves, which, says the poet, are set on fire, sometimes for no cause at all, sometimes from the most trivial causes, in silly people.

183. However small, &c.] Any trifling thing is sufficient to put them into a passion-but it is not so with the wise.

184. Chrysippus will not say, &c.] A famous Stoic philosopher, scholar to Zeno, who taught the government of the passions to be a chief good.

185. Thales. A Milesian, one of the seven wise men of Greece. He held that injuries were to be contemned, and was not himself easily provoked to anger.

--- The old man.] Socrates.

--- Neighbour to saveet Hymettus.] Hymettus, a mountain in Attica, famous for excellent honey, hence called dulcis Hymettus. See Hor. lib. ii. ode vi. 1. 14, 15. This mountain was not far Qui partem acceptæ sæva inter vinc'la cicutæ

Accusatori nollet dare. Plurima felix

Paulatim vitia, atque errores exuit omnes,

Prima docens rectum Sapientia; quippe minuti

Semper et infirmi est animi exiguique voluptas

Ultio. Continuo sic collige, quod vindictâ

Nemo magis gaudet, quam fœmina. Cur tamen hos tu

Evasisse putes, quos diri conscia facti

Mens habet attonitos, et surdo verbere cædit,

Occultum quatiente animo tortore flagellum?

195

Pœna autem vehemens, ac multo sævior illis,

Quas et Cæditius gravis invenit aut Rhadamanthus,

Nocte dieque suum gestare in pectore testem.

Spartano cuidam respondit Pythia vates, from Athens, where Socrates lived, and where he was put to

186. Who would not, &c.] It was a maxim of Socrates, that he who did an injury was more to be pitied than he who suffered it. He was accused of contemning the gods of Athens, and, for this, was condemned to die, by drinking the juice of hemlock; which he did with circumstances of calmness and fortitude, as well as of forgiveness of his accusers, that brought tears from all that were present with him in the prison during the sad scene.

An old scholiast has observed on this passage, as indeed some others have done, that one of his accusers, Melitus, was cast into prison with him, and asking Socrates to give him some of the poison, that he might drink it, Socrates refused it.

187. Received hemlock.] Which he had received from the executioner, and then held in his hand.—For an account of his death, see ANT. Univ. Hist. vol. vi. p. 407, note z. translated from Plato.

—— Happy wisdom.] The poet here means the teachings of the moral philosophers, some of which held, that, even in torments, a wise man was happy.

189. First teaching what is right, &c.] To know what is right is first necessary, in order to do it—this, therefore, is the foundation of moral philosophy, in order to strip the mind of error, and the life of vicious actions.

Vitæ philosophia dux, virtutis indagatrix, expultrixque vitiorum.

Cic. Tusc. v. ii.

"Philosophy is the guide of life, the searcher-out of virtue, the

"expeller of vice."

191. Thus conclude.] i. e. Conclude, without any farther reasoning, that the above observation, viz. that revenge is the pleasure of weak minds, is true, because it is so often found to be so in the weaker sex.

Persius uses the verb colligo in the sense of conclude, or infermendose colligis, you conclude falsely. Sat. v. l. 85.

193. To have escaped, Sc.] Though no outward punishment

Who would not, amidst cruel chains, give a part of
The received hemlock to his accuser. Happy wisdom,
By degrees puts off most vices, and all errors,
First teaching what is right: for REVENGE
IS ALWAYS THE PLEASURE OF A MINUTE, WEAK, AND LITTLE I MIND. Immediately thus conclude, because in revenge
Nebedy reigies more than a name. But why should reco

Is always the pleasure of a minute, weak, and little 190 Mind. Immediately thus conclude, because in revenge Nobody rejoices more than a woman. But why should you Think these to have escaped, whose mind, conscious of a dire Fact, keeps them astonished, and smites with a dumb stripe, Their conscience the tormentor shaking a secret whip?

195 But it is a vehement punishment, and much more cruel, than those Which either severe Cæditius invented, or Rhadamanthus, Night and day to carry their own witness in their breast.

The Pythian prophetess answer'd a certain Spartan, should await these evil-doers, and you may suppose them to have escaped quite free, yet their very souls, conscious of dreadful crimes, are all astonishment—their guilty conscience smiting them with silent, but severe, reproof.

195. The conscience.] i. e. Their conscience the executioner, shaking its secret scourge with terror over them.

A metaphor, taken from the whipping of criminals, whose terrors are excited at seeing the executioner's scourge lifted up and shaken over them.

Public whipping was a common punishment among the Romans for the lower sort of people. See Hor. epod iv. 1. 11.

196. Vehement punishment, &c.] The poet here means, that the torments of a wounded conscience are less tolerable than those of bodily punishment.—Comp. Prov. xviii. 14.

197. Severe Caditius.] A very cruel judge in the days of Vitellius; or, according to some, in the days of Nero.

Rhadamanthus.] One of the judges of hell. See sat. i. l. 10, note.

198: Their own witness, &c.] Continually bearing about with them the testimony of an evil conscience.

199. Pythian prophetess.] The priestess of Apollo, (called Pythius, from his slaying the serpent Python,) by whom Apollo gave answers at his oracle of Delphos.

The story alluded to is told by Herodotus, of one Glaucus, a Spartan, with whom a Milesian, in confidence of his honesty, had left a sum of money in trust. Glaucus afterwards denied having received the money, when it was demanded by the sons of the Milesian, and sent them away without it: yet he was not quite satisfied in himself, and went to the oracle, to know whether he should persist in denying it, or not. He was answered, that if he forswore the money, he might escape for a time; but for his vile intention, he and all his family should be destroyed. Upon this, Glaucus sent for the Milesians, and paid the whole sum. But what the oracle

Haud impunitum quondam fore, quod dubitaret 200 Depositum retinere, et fraudem jure tueri Jurando: quærebat enim quæ numinis esset Mens; et an hoc illi facinus suaderet Apollo. Reddidit ergo metu, non moribus; et tamen omnem Vocem adyti dignam templo, veramque probavit Extinctus tota pariter cum prole domoque, Et quamvis longâ deductis gente propinquis, Has patitur pœnas peccandi sola voluntas. Nam scelus intra se tacitum qui cogitat ullum, FACTI CRIMEN HABET: cedo, si conata peregit? Perpetua anxietas: nec mensæ tempore cessat; Faucibus ut morbo siccis, interque molares Difficili crescente cibo. Sed vina misellus Exspuit: Albani veteris pretiosa senectus foretold came to pass, for he and all his kindred were afterwards extirpated.

200. Time to come. Though he might escape for the present, yet, at a future time, he should not go without punishment.

Because he doubted.] Could suffer himself even to entertain a doubt in such a case as this.

201. A deposit. Of money committed to his trust.

- By swearing.] By perjury-jure jurando. Tmesis.

202. He asked, &c.] In hopes that he might get such an answer as would quiet his mind, and determine him to keep the money.

203. Would advise, &c.] Would persuade him to the fact—i. e.

to retain the deposit, &c.

204. From fear, not, &c.] More from a principle of fear of the consequences of keeping it, than an honest desire of doing right.

205. The voice of the shrine.] Adytum signifies the most secret and sacred place of the temple, from whence the oracles were supposed to be delivered.

--- Worthy the temple, &c.] It was reckoned highly for the reputation of the temple, when the things there foretold came to pass; on account of which, these oracles were usually delivered in equivocal terms, so that they might be supposed to tell truth, on whichever side the event turned out.

207. Deduced from a long race. Longa gente, from a long train of ancestors—all that were related to him, however distantly, were cut off.

208. These funishments, &c.] Thus was the mere intention of doing ill most justly punished.

210. Hulh the guilt, &c.] Is as really guilty as if he had accomplished it. In this, and in many other passages, one would almost think Juvenal was acquainted with something above heathenism. Comp. Prov. xxiv. 8, 9; and Matt. v. 28.

"Tell me," &c.] A question asked by Calvinus, on hearing what Juvenal had said above.—Tell me, says Calvinus, if what you

That in time to come he should not be unpunished, because he doubted 200

To retain a deposit, and defend the fraud by swearing: For he asked what was the mind of the Deity,

And whether Apollo would advise this deed to him.

He therefore restored it from fear, not from morals, and yet all The voice of the shrine, he proved worthy the temple, and true, 205 Being extinguished together with all his offspring, and family,

And with his relations, tho' deduced from a long race.

These punishments does the single will of offending suffer.

For he who within himself devises any secret wickedness,

HATH THE GUILT OF THE FACT.—" Tell me, if he accomlipsh'd "his attempts?" 210

" Perpetual anxiety: nor does it cease at the time of the table,

With jaws dry as by disease, and between his grinders

"The difficult food increasing. But the wretch spits out " His wine: the precious old age of old Albanian say be true, that the very design to do evil makes a person guilty of what he designed to do, what would be the case of his actually accomplishing what he intended, as my false friend has done?

211. "Perpetual anxiety."] Juvenal answers the question, by setting forth, in very striking colours, the anguish of a wounded conscience.—First, he would be under continual anxiety.

- "The time of the table." Even at his meals—his convivial hours.

212. "With jaws dry," Sc.] His mouth hot and parched, like one in a fever.

213. "Difficult food increasing." This circumstance is very natural—the uneasiness of this wretch's mind occasions the symptoms of a fever; one of which is a dryness of the mouth and throat, owing to the want of a due secretion of the saliva, by the glands appropriated for that purpose. The great use of this secretion, which, we call saliva, or spittle, is in masticating and diluting the food, and making the first digestion thereof; also to lubricate the throat and cesophagus, or gullet, in order to facilitate deglutition, which, by these means, in healthy persons, is attended with ease and pleasure.

But the direct contrary is the case, where the mouth and throat are quite dry, as in fevers—the food is chewed with difficulty and disgust, and cannot be swallowed without uneasiness and loathing, and may well be called difficilis cibus in both these respects. Wanting also the saliva to moisten it, and make it into a sort of paste for deglutition, it breaks into pieces between the teeth, and taking up more room than when in one mass, it fills the mouth as if it had increased in quantity, and is attended with a nausea, or loathing, which still increases the uneasiness of the sensation.

213-14. " Spits out his wine." He can't relish it, his mouth being out of taste, and therefore spits it out as comething nauseous.

VOL. II.

Displicet: ostendas melius, densissima ruga
Cogitur in frontem, velut acri ducta Falerno.
Nocte brevem si forte indulsit cura soporem,
Et toto versata toro jam membra quiescunt,
Continuo templum, et violati numinis aras,
Et (quod præcipuis mentem sudoribus urget)
Te videt in somnis: tua sacra et major imago
Humanâ turbat pavidum, cogitque fateri.
Hi sunt qui trepidant, et ad omnia fulgura pallent,
Cum tonat; exanimes primo quoque murmure cœli:
Non quasi fortuitus, nec ventorum rabie, sed
Iratus cadat in terras, et vindicet ignis.
Illa nihil nocuit, curâ graviore timetur
Proxima tempestas; velut hoc dilata sereno.

214. "Albanian."] See sat. v. l. 33, note. This was reckoned the finest and best wine in all Italy, especially when old. See Hor. lib. iv. ode xi. l. 1, 2.

215. " Shew him better."] If you could set even better wine than this before him, he could not relish it.

—— "The thickest wrinkle," &c.] His forehead would contract into wrinkles without end, as if they were occasioned by his being offered sour Falernan wine.

Densissima is here used, as in sat. i. 120, to denote a vast number: as we say a thick crowd, where vast numbers of people are collected together.

Falernan wine was in high repute among the Romans when it was of the best sort; but there was a kind of coarse, sour wine, which came from Falernus, a mountain of Campania, which, when drank, would occasion sickness and vomiting. See sat. vi. 1. 427, note; and sat. vi. 1. 429.

218. "His limbs tumbled over," &c.] Tumbling and tossing from one side of the bed to the other, through the uneasiness of his mind.

See sat. iii. 280, and note; and AINSW. Verso, No. 2.

219. "The temple—the altars," &c.] He is haunted with dreadful dreams, and seems to see the temple in which, and the altar upon which, he perjured himself, and thus profaned and violated the majesty of the Deity.

220. "What urges his mind," &c.] But that which occasions him more misery than all the rest (see AINSW. Sudor; and sat. i. 167.) is, that he fancies he beholds the man whom he has injured, appearing (as aggrandized by his fears) greater than a human form. The ancients had much superstition on the subject of apparitions, and always held them sacred; and (as fear magnifies its objects) they always were supposed to appear greater than the life. Hence Juvenal says, sacra et major imago. Comp. VIRG. Æn. ii. 1. 772, 3.

222. "Compels him to confess."] i. e. The villainy which he has been guilty of—a confession of this is wrung from him by the terrors which he undergoes; he can no longer keep the secret within his breast.

225

- "Will displease: if you shew him better, the thickest wrinkle 215
- Is gathered on his forehead, as drawn by sour Falernan.
- "In the night, if haply care hath indulged a short sleep,
 "And his limbs tumbled over the whole bed now are quiet,
- "Immediately the temple, and the altars of the violated Deity,
- "And (what urges his mind with especial pains)

 220
- "Thee he sees in his sleep: thy sacred image, and bigger
- "Than human, disturbs him fearful, and compels him to confess."
- "There are they who tremble, and turn pale at all lightnings
- "When it thunders: also lifeless at the first murmur of the heavens:
- "Not as if accidental, nor by rage of winds, but
- "Fire may fall on the earth enraged, and may avenge."
- "That did no harm"--" the next tempest is fear'd
- "With heavier concern, as if deferr'd by this fair weather.
- 223. "All lightnings," &c.] The poet proceeds in his description of the miserable state of the wicked, and here represents them as filled with horror by thunder and lightning, and dreading the consequences.

224. "First murmur," &c.] They are almost dead with fear, on hearing the first rumbling in the sky.

- 225. "Not as if," &c.] They do not look upon it as happening fortuitously, by mere chance or accident, without any direction or intervention of the gods, like the Epicureans. See Hor. sat. v. lib. i. 1. 101—3.
- "Rige of winds." Or from the violence of the winds, occasioning a collision of the clouds, and so producing the lightning, as the philosophers thought, who treated on the physical causes of lightning, as Pliny and Seneca.

226. "Fire may fall," &c.] The wretch thinks that the flashes which he sees and dreads, will not confine their fury to the skies, but, armed with divine vengeance, may fall upon the earth, and destroy the guilty.

227. "That did no harm." i. e. That last tempest did no mischief; it is now over and harmless:—"So far is well," thinks the unhappy wretch.

"The next tempest," &c.] Though they escape the first storm, yet they dread the next still more, imagining that they have only had a respite from punishment, and therefore that the next will certainly destroy them.

228. " As if deferr'd," &c.] As if delayed by one fair day, on purpose, afterwards, to fall the heavier.

This passage of Juvenal reminds one of that wonderfully fine speech, on a similar subject, which our great and inimitable poet, Shakespeare, has put into the mouth of king Lear, when turned out by his cruel and ungrateful daughters, and, on a desolate and barren heath, is in the midst of a storm of thunder and lightning.

LEAR. "Let the great gods "That keep this dreadful pother o'er our heads, Præterea lateris vigili cum febre dolorem Si cœpêre pati, missum ad sua corpora morbum 230 Infesto credunt a numine: saxa Deorum Hæc, et tela putant: pecudem spondere sacello Balantem, et Laribus cristanı promittere galli Non audent. Quid enim sperare nocentibus ægris Concessum? vel quæ non dignior hostia vità? 235 Mobilis et varia est ferme natura malorum. Cum scelus admittunt, superest constantia: quid fas, Atque nefas, tandem incipiunt sentire, peractis Criminibus. Tamen ad mores natura recurrit Damnatos, fixa et mutari nescia. Nam quis Peccandi finem posuit sibi? quando recepit Ejectum semel attrità de fronte ruborem?

" Find out their enemies now. Tremble thou wretch

" That hast within thee undivulged crimes,

"Unwhipt of justice: hide thee, thou bloody hand;
Thou perjur'd and thou simular man of virtue
Thou art incestuous: Caitiff, to pieces shake
That under covert and convenient seeming,

" Has practis'd on man's life! Close pent-up guilts,

" Rive your concealing continents, and cry

"These dreadful summoners grace!"— LEAR, act iii. sc. i.

229. "Pain of the side," &c.] The poet seems here to mean a pleurisy, or pleuritic fever, a painful and dangerous distemper.

- " A watchful fever."] i. e. A fever which will not let them sleep, or take their rest.

230. "Begun to suffer," &c.] On the first attack of such a disorder, they believed themselves doomed to suffer the wrath of an offended Deity, of which their illness seems to them an earnest.

232. "Stones and darts."] These were weapons of war among the ancients: when they attacked a place, they threw, from engines for that purpose, luge stones to batter down the wall, and darts to annoy the besieged.

Here the poet uses the words in a metaphorical sense, to denote the apprehension of the sick criminal, who thinks himself, as it were, besieged by an offended Deity, who employs the pleurisy and fever, as his artillery, to destroy the guilty wretch.

"To engage a bleating sheep," &c.] Or lamb—pecus may signify either.—It was usual for persons in danger, or in sickness, to engage by vow some offering to the gods, on their deliverance, or recovery; but the guilty wretches here mentioned, are supposed to be in a state of utter despair, so that they dare not so much as hope for recovery, and therefore have no courage to address any vows to the gods.

233. "Comb of a cock," &c.] So far from promising a cock to Esculapius, they have not the courage to vow even a cock's comb, as a sacrifice to their household gods.

234. " Allowed the guilty, &c.] Such guilty wretches can be al-

- " Moreover a pain of the side with a watchful fever,
- "If they have begun to suffer, they believe the disease sent 230
- "To their bodies by some hostile deity: they think these things
- "The stones and darts of the gods: to engage a bleating sheep
- "To the little temple, and to promise the comb of a cock to the Lares
- "They dare not; for what is allowed the guilty sick
- "To hope for? or what victim is not more worthy of life? 235
- "The nature of wicked men is, for the most part, fickle, and changeable;
- "When they commit wickedness, there remains constancy: what is
- "And what wrong, at length they begin to perceive, their crimes
- "Being finish'd: but nature recurs to its damned
- "Morals, fix'd, and not knowing to be changed. For who 240
- "Hath laid down to himself an end of sinning? when recover'd
- " Modesty once cast off from his worn forehead?

lowed no hope whatever-their own consciences tell them as much.

235. "Is not more worthy," &c.] i. e. Does not more deserve to live than they.

236. "Fickle and changeable."] i. e. Wavering and uncertain, at first: before they commit crimes, they are irresolute, and doubting whether they shall or not, and often change their mind, which is in a fluctuating state.

237. "Remains constancy." When they have once engaged in evil actions, they become resolute.

begin to reflect on what they have done—they are forcibly stricken with the difference between right and wrong, insomuch that they feel, for a while, a remorse of conscience; but notwithstanding this—

239. "Nature recurs," &c.] Their evil nature will return to its corrupt principles, and silence all remorse; fixed and unchangeable in this respect, it may be said—Naturam expellas furca tamen usque recurret. Hor. lib i. epist. x. l. 24.

241. "Hath laid down to himself," &c.] What wicked man ever contented himself with one crime, or could say to his propensity to wickedness, "hitherto shalt thou come, and no farther," when every crime he commits hardens him the more, and plunges him still deeper?—See sat. ii. 1. 83, note.

"When recover'd," &c.] No man ever yet recovered a sense of shame, who had once lost it.

242. "Worn forehead," &c.] Attritus signifies rubbed or worn away, as marble, or metals, where an hard and polished surface remains; so a wicked man, by frequent and continual crimes, grows hardened against all impressions of shame, of which the forehead is often represented as the scat. See Jer. iii. 3, latter part.

Quisnam hominum est, quem tu contentum videris uno Flagitio? dabit in laqueum vestigia noster Perfidus, et nigri patietur carceris uncum, Aut maris Ægæi rupem, scopulosque frequentes Exulibus magnis. Pœnâ gaudebis amarâ Nominis invisi: tandemque fatebere lætus Nec surdum, nec Tiresiam quenquam esse Deorum.

243. "Who is there," &c.] Who ever contented himself with sinning but once, and stopped at the first fact?

244. "Our perfidious wretch," &c.] Noster perfidus, says Juvenal, meaning the villain who had cheated Calvinus, and then perjured himself. As if the poet had said-Don't be so uneasy, Calvinus, at the loss of your money, or so anxious about revenging yourself upon the wretch who has perjured you; have a little patience, he won't stop here, he'll go on from bad to worse, till you will find him sufficiently punished, and yourself amply avenged.

244—5. "Into a snare."] He'll do something or other which will send him to gaol, and load him with fetters. Or—he will walk into a snare (comp. Job, xviii 8—10.) and be entangled in his own

245. " Suffer the hook," &c.] The uncus was a drag, or hook, by which the bodies of malefactors were dragged about the streets after execution. See sat. x. 1. 66.

But, by this line, it should seem as if some instrument of this sort was made use of, either for torture, or closer confinement in the dun-

246. "Rock of the Egean sea." Or, if he should escape the gallows, that he will be banished to some rocky, barren island in the Ægean sea, where he will lead a miserable life. Perhaps the island Seriphus is here meant. See sat. vi. 563.

and the other parts of the barriers of the 245

- "Who is there of men, whom you have seen content with one
- "Base action? our perfidious wretch will get his feet into
- "A snare, and will suffer the hook of a dark prison,

"Or a rock of the Ægean sea, and the rocks frequent

"To great exiles. You will rejoice in the bitter punishment

"Of his hated name, and at length, glad will confess, that no one of

"The gods, is either deaf, or a Tiresias."

246. "The rocks frequent," Sc.] The rocky islands of the Cyclades, (see sat. vi. 562, note.) to which numbers were banished, and frequently, either by the tyranny of the emperor, or through their own crimes, persons of high rank.

crimes, persons of high rank.

247. "You will rejoice," &c. You, Calvinus, will at last triumph over the villain that has wronged you, when you see the bitter sufferings, which await him, fall upon him-

248. "His hated name." Which will not be mentioned, but with the utmost detestation and abhorrence.

"At length-confess." However, in time past, you may have doubted of it, you will in the end joyfully own-

Province of the second

•

La Could United the Country of the C

248—9. "That no one of the gods," &c.] Whose province it is to punish crimes, is either deaf, so as not to hear such perjury, or blind, so as not to see every circumstance of such a transaction, and to punish it accordingly. Comp. l. 112—19.

249. "Tiresias." A blind soothsayer of Thebes, fabled to be stricken blind by Juno, for his decision in a dispute between her and her husband, in favour of the latter, who in requital gave him

-the gift of prophecy.

END OF THE THIRTEENTH SATIRE.

SATIRA XIV.

ARGUMENT.

This Satire is levelled at the bad examples which parents set their children, and shews the serious consequences of such examples, in helping to contaminate the morals of the rising generation, as we are apt, by nature, rather to receive ill impressions than good, and are, besides, more pliant in our younger than in our riper

PLURIMA sunt, Fuscine, et famâ digna sinistrâ, Et nitidis maculam hæsuram figentia rebus, Quæ monstrant ipsi pueris traduntque parentes. Si damnosa senem juvat alea, ludit et hærcs Bullatus, parvoque eadem movet arma fritillo, Nec de se melius cuiquam sperare propinquo Concedet juvenis, qui radere tubera terræ,

5

Line 1. Fuscinus.] A friend of Juvenal's, to whom this Satire is addressed.

--- Worthy of unfavourable report.] Which deserve to be ill spoken of, to be esteemed scandalous.

The word sinistra here is metaphorical, taken from the Roman superstition, with regard to any thing of the ominous kind, which appeared on the left hand; they reckoned it unlucky and unfavourable. See sat. x. l. 129, where the word is applied, as here, in a metaphorical sense.

2. Fixing a stain, &c.] A metaphor, taken from the idea of clean and neat garments being soiled, or spotted, with filth thrown upon them, the marks of which are not easily got out. So these things of evil report fix a spot, or stain, on the most splendid character, rank, or fortune—all which, probably, the poet means by nitidis re-

3. Which parents, &c.] The things worthy of evil report, which are afterwards particularized, are matters which parents exhibit to their children by example, and deliver to them by precept. Comp. 1. 9.

4. If the destructive die pleases, &c.] If the father be fond of play-

Wearing the bulla, &c.] His son, when a mere child, will imitate his example.—For the bulla, see sat. xiii. l. 33, note.

5. The same weapons, &c.] Arma, literally, denotes all kind of SATIRE XIV.

ARGUMENT.

years. From hence he descends to a Satire on avarice, which he esteems to be of worse example than any other of the vices which he mentions before; and concludes with limiting our desires within reasonable bounds.

THERE are many things, Fuscinus, worthy of unfavourable report,

And fixing a stain which will stick upon splendid things,
Which parents themselves shew, and deliver to their children.
If the destructive die pleases the old man, the heir wearing the bulla
Will play too, and moves the same weapons in his little dice-box. 5
Nor does the youth allow any relation to hope better of him,
Who has learnt to peel the funguses of the earth, warlike arms and armour; and, by met. all manner of tools and implements, for all arts, mysteries, occupations, and diversions. AINSW. The word is peculiarly proper to express dice, and other implements of gaming, wherewith the gamesters attack each other, each with an intent to ruin and destroy the opponent.—See sat. i. 92, note.

5. Little dice-box.] Master, being too young to play with a large dice-box, not being able to shake and manage it, has a small one made for him, that he may begin the science as early as possible.

-See Ainsw. Fritillus.

6. Nor does the youth allow, &c.] The poet, having mentioned the bringing up children to be gamesters, here proceeds to those who are early initiated into the science of gluttony. Such give very little room to their family to hope that they will turn out better than the former.

7. To peel the fungues of the earth.] Tuber (from tumeo, to swell or puff up) signifies what we call a puff, which grows in the ground like a mushroom—a toad stool. But I apprehend that any of the fungous productions of the earth may be signified by tuber; and, in this place, we are to understand, perhaps, truffles, or some other food of the kind, which were reckoned delicious. Sat. v. l. 116, note.

____ To peel.] Or scrape off the coat, or skin, with which they are covered.

Boletum condire, et eodem jure natantes
Mergere ficedulas didicit, nebulone parente,
Et canâ monstrante gulâ. Cum septimus annus
Transierit puero, nondum omni dente renato,
Barbatos licet admoveas mille inde magistros,
Hinc totidem, cupiet lauto cœnare paratu
Semper, et a magnâ non degenerare culinâ.

Mitem animum, et mores, modicis erroribus æquos
Præcipit, atque animas servorum, et corpora nostrâ
Materia constare putat, paribusque elementis?
An sævire docet Rutilus? qui gaudet acerbo
Plagarum strepitu, et nullam Sirena flagellis
Comparat, Antiphates trepidi laris, ac Polyphemus, 20

15

10

8. A mushroom.] The boletus was reckoned the best sort of mushroom. Comp. sat. v. l. 147. See Ainsw. Condio.

9. Beccaficos.] Ficedulas—little birds which feed on figs, now called beccaficos, or fig-peckers; they are to this day esteemed a great dainty.

It was reckoned a piece of high luxury to have these birds dressed, and served up to table, in the same sauce, or pickle, with funguses of various kinds.

—— A prodigal parent.] Nebulo signifies an unthrift, a vain prodigal; and is most probably used here in this sense. See AINSW.

Nebulo, No. 2.

10. A grey throat, &c.] Gula is, literally, the throat or gullet; but, by met. may signify a glutton, who thinks of nothing but his gullet. So yearne, the belly, is used to denote a glutton; and the apostle's quotation from the Cretan poet, Tit. i. 12. yearsest appoint, instead of slow bellies, which is nonsense, should be rendered lazy gluttons, which is the undoubted sense of the phrase.

Cana gula here, then, may be rendered an hoary glutton—i. e. the old epicure, his father setting the example, and shewing him the art of luxurious cookery.

10. The seventh year, &c.] When he is turned of seven years of age, a time when the second set of teeth, after shedding the first, is not completed, and a time of life the most flexible and docile.

12. Tho' you should place, &c.] Though a thousand of the grave-est and most learned tutors were placed on each side of him, so as to pour their instructions into both his ears at the same time, yet they would avail nothing at all towards reclaiming him.—q. d. The boy having gotten such an early taste for gluttony, will never get rid of it, by any pains which can be taken with him for that purpose.

The philosophers and learned teachers wore beards; and were therefore called barbati. They thought it suited best with the gravity of their appearance.

Pers. sat. iv. 1. 1, calls Socrates—barbatum magistrum. See Hore lib. ii. sat. iii. l. 35, and note.

10

To season a mushroom, and, swimming in the same sauce; To immerse beccaficos, a prodigal parent,

And a grey throat shewing him. When the seventh year Has passed over the boy, all his teeth not as yet renewed, Tho' you should place a thousand bearded masters there,

Here as many, he would desire always to sup with a Sumptuous preparation, and not to degenerate from a great kitchen. Does Rutilus teach a meek mind and manners, kind to small errors, 15

And the souls of slaves, and their bodies, does he think
To consist of our matter, and of equal elements?—

Or does he teach to be cruel, who delights in the bitter Sound of stripes, and compares no Siren to whips,

The Antiphates and Polyphemus of his trembling household— 2

13. He would desire, &c.] He would never get rid of his inclina-

13-14. With a sumptuous preparation.] With a number of the most delicious provisions, dressed most luxuriously, and served up in the most sumptuous manner.

14. Not to degenerate, &c.] Either in principle or practice, from the profuse luxury of his father's ample kitchen.

So true is that of Hor. Epist. lib. i. epist. ii. 1. 68, 9.

Quo semel imbuta est recens, servabit odorem. Testa diu.

15. Rutilus.] The name of some master, who was of a very cruel disposition towards his servants.

Kind to small errors.] Making allowance for, and excusing small faults.

16. And the souls of slaves, &c.] Does he think that the bodies of slaves consist of the same materials, and that their souls are made up of the same elements as ours, who are their masters? Does he suppose them to be of the same flesh and blood, and to have reasonable souls as well as himself? Sat. vi. 221.

18. Or does he teach to be cruel. Instead of setting an example of meckness, gentleness, and forbearance, does he not teach his children to be savage and cruel, by the treatment which he gives his slaves?

18—19. In the bitter sound of stripes.] He takes a pleasure in hearing the sound of those bitter stripes, with which he punishes his slaves.

19. Compares no Syren, &c.] The song of a Siren would not, in his opinion, be so delightful to his cars, as the crack of the whips on his slaves' backs.

20. The Antiphates and Polyphemus, &c.] Antiphates was a king of a savage people near Formiæ, in Italy, who were eaters of man's flesh.

Polyphemus the Cyclops lived on the same diet, See VIRG. Æn.

Tum felix, quoties aliquis tortore vocato Uritur ardenti duo propter lintea ferro? Quid suadet juveni lætus stridore catenæ, Quem mire afficiunt inscripta ergastula, carcer Rusticus? Expectas, ut non sit adultera Largæ Filia, quæ nunquam maternos dicere mæchos Tam cito, nec tanto poterit contexere cursu, Ut non ter decies respiret? conscia matri Virgo fuit; ceras nunc hâc dictante pusillas Implet, et ad mœchum dat eisdem ferre cinædis. Sic natura jubet : velocius et citius nos Corrumpunt vitiorum exempla domestica, magnis Cum subeunt animos authoribus. Unus et alter Forsitan hæc spernant juvenes, quibus arte benigna, Rutilus is here likened to these two monsters of cruelty, inasmuch as that he was the terror of his whole family, which is the sense of laris in this place.

21. Then happy. It was a matter of joy to him. ___ As often as any one.] i. e. Of his slaves. ___ The tormentor, &c.] Comp. sat. vi. 479, and note.

22. Is burnt, &c.] Burnt with an hot iron on his flesh, for some petty theft, as of two towels or napkins. These the Romans wiped with after bathing.

23. What can he advise, &c.] What can a man, who is himself so barbarous, as to be affected with the highest pleasure at hearing the rattling of fetters, when put on the legs or bodies of his slaveswhat can such a father persuade his son to, whom he has taught so ill by his example?

24. Branded slaves-a rustic prison.] Ergastulum-lit. signifies a workhouse, a house of correction, where they confined and punished their slaves, and made them work. Sometimes (as here, and sat. vi. 150.) it means a slave. -- Inscriptus-a-um, signifies marked, branded; inscripta ergastula, branded slaves-comp. l. 22, note .- q. d. Whom the sight of slaves branded with hot irons, kept in a workhouse in the country, where they are in fetters (l. 23.) and which is therefore to be looked on as a country-gaol, affects with wonderful delight. We may suppose the ergastula something like our bridewells.

25. Larga. Some famous lady of that day—here put for all such characters.

Should not be, &c.] When she has the constant bad example of her mother before her eyes. Comp. sat. vi. 239, 240.

26. Who never, &c.] Who could never repeat the names of all her mother's gallants, though she uttered them as fast as possibly she could, without often taking breath before she got to the end of the list, so great was the number. Comp. sat. x. 223, 4.

28. Privy, &c.] She was a witness of all her mother's lewd pro-

Then happy, as often as any one, the tormentor being called, Is burnt with an hot iron on account of two napkins?

What can he who is glad at the noise of a chain advise to a youth. Whom branded slaves, a rustic prison, wonderfully

Delight ?-- Do you expect that the daughter of Larga should not 25 An adulteress, who never could say over her mother's gallants,

So quickly, nor could join them together with so much speed, As that she must not take breath thirty times? privy to her mother

Was the virgin: now, she dictating, little tablets

She fills, and gives them to the same pimps to carry to the gallant. So nature commands; more swiftly and speedily do domestic Examples of vices corrupt us, when they possess minds From those that have great influence. Perhaps one or two Young men may despise these things, for whom, by a benign art, ceedings, and was privy to them; which is the meaning of conscia in this place. See sat. iii. l. 49.

29. Now.] i. c. Now she is grown something bigger, she does as her mother did.

She dictating. The mother instructing, and dictating what she shall say.

- Little tablets.] Cera signifies wax-but as they wrote on thin wooden tablets smeared over with wax, ceras, per met, means the tablets or letters themselves. See sat. i. l. 63.

Some understand by ceras pusillas, small tablets, as best adapted to the size of her hand, and more proper for her age, than large ones. As the boy (l. 5.) had a little dice-box to teach him gaming, so this girl begins with a little tablet, in order to initiate her into the science of intrigue. But perhaps, by pusillas ceras the poet means what the French would call petits billets-doux.

- 30. She fills.] i. e. Fills with writing.

- The same pimps, &c.] Cinædus is a word of a detestable meaning; but here cinædis seems to denote pimps, or people who go between the parties in an intrigue.

The daughter employs the same messengers that her mother did, to carry her little love-letters.

31. So nature commands, &c.] Thus nature orders it, and therefore it naturally happens, that examples of vice, set by those of our own family, corrupt the soonest.

32. When they possess minds, &c.] When they insinuate themselves into the mind, under the influence of those who have a right to exercise authority over us. See AINSW. Auctor, No. 6.

33. One or two. Unus et alter-here and there one, as we say, may be found as exceptions, and who may reject, with due contempt, their parents' vices, but then they must be differently formed from the generality.

34. By a benign art, &c.] Prometheus, one of the Titans, was feigned, by the poets, to have formed men of clay, and put life into them by fire stolen from heaven.

stration -. follow

Et meliore luto finxit præcordia Titan. 35 Sed reliquos fugienda patrum vestigia ducunt; Et monstrata diu veteris trahit orbita culpæ. Abstineas igitur damnandis: hujus enim vel TATO SET POST Una potens ratio est, ne crimina nostra sequantur Ex nobis geniti; quoniam dociles imitandis Turpibus et pravis omnes sumus : et Catilinam Quocunque in populo videas, quocunque sub axe: Sed nec Brutus erit, Bruti nec avunculus usquam. Nil dictu fædum, visuque hæc limina tangat, Intra quæ puer est. Procul hinc, procul inde puella 45 Lenonum, et cantus pernoctantis parasiti. Maxima debetur pyero reverentia. Si quid Turpe paras, ne tu pueri contempseris annos: Sed peccaturo obsistat tibi filius infans. Nam si quid dignum Censoris fecerit irâ, 50

The poet here says, that, if one or two young men are found who reject their father's bad example, it must be owing to the peculiar favour of Prometheus, who, by a kind exertion of his art, formed their bodies, and particularly the parts about the heart (præcordia), of better materials than those which he employed in the formation of others.

ra c'

36. Footsteps, &c.] As for the common run of young men, they are led, by the bad example of their fathers, to tread in their fathers steps, which ought to be avoided.

37. Path of old wickedness, &c.] And the beaten track of wickedness, constantly before their eyes, draws them into the same crimes.

38. Abstain therefore, &c. Refrain therefore from ill actions—at least we should do this, if not for our own sakes, yet for the sake of our children, that they may not be led to follow our vicious examples, and to commit the same crimes which they have seen in us.

40. In imitating, &c.] Such is the condition of human nature, that we are all more prone to evil than to good, and, for this reason, we are easily taught to imitate the vices of others.

41. A Catiline, &c.] See sat. viii. 231. Vicious characters are easily to be met with, go where you may.

43. Brutus.] M. Brutus, one of the most virtuous of the Romans, and the great assertor of public liberty.

Uncle of Brutus. Cato of Utica, who was the brother of Servilia, the mother of Brutus, a man of severe virtue.

So prone is human nature to evil, so inclined to follow bad example, that a virtuous character, like Brutus or Cato, is hardly to be found my where, while profligate and debauched characters, like Catiline, abound all the world over—this would not be so much the case, if parents were more careful about the examples which they set their children.

to the state of the state of 44. Filling J Indecent, obscene.

And with better clay, Titan has formed their breasts.

35
But the footsteps of their fathers which are to be avoided, lead the rest.

And the path of old wickedness, long shewn, draws them.

Abstain therefore from things which are to be condemned: for of thisat least

There is one pow'rful reason, lest those who are begotten by us-Should follow our crimes; for in imitating base and wicked 40 Things we are all docile; and a Catiline

You may see among every people, in every clime:

But neither will Brutus, nor uncle of Brutus, be any where.

Nothing filthy, to be said, or seen, should touch these thresholds, Within which is a boy. Far from hence, from thence the girls 4

Of bawds, and the songs of the nightly parasite:

The greatest reverence is due to a boy. If any base thing

You go about, do not despise the years of a boy,

But let your infant son hinder you about to sin.

For if he shall do any thing worthy the anger of the censor,

50

44. Should touch, &c.] Should approach those doors, where there are children, lest they be corrupted. Therefore—

45. Far from hence, &c.] Hence far away, begone; a form of speech made use of at religious solemnities, in order to hinder the approach of the profane. So Horace, lib. iii. ode i. l. 1, when he calls himself musarum sacerdos, says, Odi profanum vulgus et ar-

VIRG. Æn. vi. 258, 9, makes the Sibyl say :

Procul, O procul este profani
Totoque absistite luco.

45-6. Girls of bawds.] The common prostitutes, who are kept by common panders, or pimps, for lewd purposes.

46. The nightly parasite.] Pernoctans signifies tarrying, or sitting up all night.—The parasites, who frequently attended at the tables of great men, used to divert them with lewd and obscene songs, and for this purpose would sit up all night long.

47. Greatest reverence, &c.] People should keep the strictest guard over their words and actions, in the presence of boys; they cannot be under too much awe, nor shew too great a reverence for decency, when in their presence.

48. You go about, &c.] If you intend, or purpose, or set about, to do what is wrong, don't say, "There's nobody here but "my young son, I don't mind him, and he is too young to mind "me:"—rather say, "My little boy is here, I will not hurt his "mind by making him a witness of what I purposed to do, therefore "I will not do it before him."

50. Of the censor.] The censor of good manners, or moram judex, was an officer of considerable power in Rome, before whom offenders against the peace and good manners were carried and censured. Sat. iv. l. 12.

(Quandoquidem similem tibi se non corpore tantum, Nec vultu dederit, morum quoque filius,) et cum Omnia deterius tua per vestigia peccet, Corripies nimirum, et castigabis acerbo Clamore, ac post hæc tabulas mutare parabis. Unde tibi frontem, libertatemque parentis, Cum facias pejora senex? vacuumque cerebro Jampridem caput hoc ventosa cucurbita quærat?

55

Hospite venturo, cessabit nemo tuorum:
Verre pavimentum, nitidas ostende columnas,
Arida cum totâ descendat aranea telâ:
Hic læve argentum, vasa aspera tergeat alter:
Vox domini fremit instantis, virgamque tenentis.
Ergo miser trepidas, ne stercore fæda canino

60

d. q. Now, if, in after times, your son should be taken before the censor, for some crime cognizable and punishable by him.

52. Shew himself, &c.] (For he will exhibit a likeness to his father, not in person, or face only, but in his moral behaviour and conduct; therefore, if you set him a bad example, you must not wonder that he follows it, and appears his father's own son in mind as well as in body.)

53. Offend the worse, &c.] And it is most probable, that following your steps has made him do worse than he otherwise would.

54. You will, &c.] You will call him to a severe account. Ni-mirum here is to be understood like our English-forsooth.

—— And chastise, &c.] You will be very loud and bitter in your reproaches of his bad conduct, and even have thoughts of disinheriting him, by changing your last will. See sat. ii. 58, tabulas.

56. Whence, &c.] With what confidence can you assume the countenance and authority of a father, so as freely to use the liberty of parental reproof? We may suppose sumas to be understood in this line.

57. When, &c.] When you, at an advanced age, do worse than the youth with whom you are so angry.

This head, &c.] When that brainless head of yours may, for some time, have wanted the cupping-glass to set it right—i. c.

when you have for a long time been acting as if you were mad.

58. Ventose cupping-glass.] Cucurbita signifies a gourd, which, when divided in half, and scooped hollow, might, perhaps, among the ancients, be used as a cupping instrument. In after times they made their cupping instruments of brass, or horn, (as now they are made of glass,) and applied them to the head to relieve pains there, but particularly to mad people. The epithet ventosa, which signifies windy, full of wind, alludes to the nature of their operation, which is performed by rarifying the air which is within them, by the application of fire, on which the blood is forced from the scarified skin into the cupping-glass, by the pressure of the outward air; so

55

60

(Since he, like to you not in body only, nor in countenance, Will shew himself, the son also of your morals,) and when He may offend the worse, by all your footsteps, You will, forsooth, chide, and chastise with harsh Clamour, and after these, will prepare to change your will. Whence assume you the front, and liberty of a parent, When, an old man, you can do worse things, and this head, Void of brain, long since, the ventose cupping-glass may seek?

A guest being to come, none of your people will be idle.

"Sweep the pavement, shew the columns clean,
"Let the dry spider descend with all her web:

Let one wipe the smooth silver, another the rough vessels:"
The voice of the master, earnest, and holding a rod, blusters.
Therefore, wretch, dost thou tremble, lest, foul with canine dung, that the air may be called the chief agent in this operation—The operation of cupping on the head in phrensies is very ancient.

59. A guest, &c.] When you expect a friend to make you a visit, you set all hands to work, in order to prepare your house for his reception.

60. & Sweep the pavement," &c.] " Sweep" (say you to your servants) " the floors clean-wipe the dust from all the pillars."

The Roman floors were either laid with stone, or made of a sort of mortar, or stucco, composed of shells reduced to powder, and mixed in a due consistency with water; this, when dry, was very hard and smooth. Hence, Britannicus observes, pavimentum was called ostraceum, or testaceum.—These floors are common in Italy to this day.

The Romans were very fond of pillars in their buildings, particularly in their rooms of state and entertainment. See sat. vii. 182, 3. The architraves, and other ornamental parts of pillars, are very apt to gather dust.

61. "Dry spider," &c.] The spiders, which have been there so long as to be dead and dried up, sweep them, and all their cobwebs, down.

62. " Smooth silver." The unwrought plate, which is polished and smooth.

and uneven, by reason of the embossed figures upon it, which stand out of its surface. See sat. i. 76.—So Æn. ix. 263.

Bina dabo argento perfecta atque aspera signis

63. Holding a rod.] To keep them all to their work, on pain of being scourged.

Blusters.] He is very loud and earnest in his directions to get things in order-

64. Therefore, &c.] Canst thou, wretch that thou art, be so solicitous to prevent all displeasure to thy guest, by his seeing what may be offensive about thine house, either within or without, and,

VOL. 11.

Atria displiceant oculis venientis amici? Ne perfusa luto sic porticus: et tamen uno Semodio scobis hæc emundet servulus unus: Illud non agitas, ut sanctam filius omni Aspiciat sine labe domum, vitioque carentem? Gratum est, quod patriz civem populoque dedisti, 70 Si facis, ut patrize sit idoneus, utilis agris, Utilis et bellorum, et pacis rebus agendis : Plurimum enim intererit, quibus artibus, et quibus hunc tu Moribus instituas. Serpente ciconia pullos Nutrit, et inventa per devia rura lacerta: 75 Illi eadem sumptis quærunt animalia pennis. Vultur jumento, et canibus, crucibusque relictis, Ad fœtus properat, partemque cadaveris affert. Hinc est ergo cibus magni quoque vulturis, et se Pascentis, proprià cum jam facit arbore nidos. 80 for this purpose, art thou so over-anxious and earnest, when a very little trouble might suffice for this, and at the same time, take no pains to prevent any moral filth or turpitude from being seen in your house by your own son? This is the substance of the poet's argument.

65. Thy courts. A trium signifies a court-yard, a court before an house, ahall, a place where they used to dine. Alnsw. All these may be meant, in this place, by the plur atria; for, to all these places their favourite dogs might have access, and of course, might daub them.

66. The porch, &c.] A sort of gallery, with pillars, at the door (ad portam) of the house; or a place where they used to walk, and so liable to be dirty.

- Servant boy.] Servulus (dim. of serves) a servant lad.

67. Saw-dust, &c.] Scobs signifies any manner of powder, or dust, that cometh of sawing, filing, or boring. Probably the Romans sprinkled over the floors of their porticos with saw-dust, as we do our kitchens and lower parts of the house with sand, to give them a clean appearance, and to hinder the dirt of people's shoes from sticking to the floor. See Holyday, note 3, on this Satire, who observes, that Heliogabalus was said to strew his porticus, or gallery, with the dust of gold and silver.

68. Manage it, &c. I viz. To keep your house sacred to virtue and good example, and free from all vicious practices, that your son may not be corrupted by seeing them.

70. Acceptable, &c. I i. e. To the public, that, by begetting a son, you have added to the country a subject, and to Rome a citizen.

71. If you make him, &c. I If you so educate and form him, that he may be an useful member of society.

- In the fields.] Well skilled in agriculture.

72. In managing affairs, &c.] Capable of transacting the business of a soldier, or that of a lawyer or senator. The opposition

Thy courts should displease the eyes of a coming friend?

65

Lest the porch should be overspread with mud? and yet one servant boy,

With one half bushel of saw-dust, can cleanse these:

Dost thou not manage it, that thy son should see

Thine house, sacred without all spot, and having no vice?

It is acceptable, that you have given a citizen to your country and people, 70

If you make him, that he may be meet for his country, useful in the fields,

Useful in managing affairs both of war and peace:

For it will be of the greatest consequence, in what arts, and with what morals

You may train him up. With a serpent a stork nourishes

Her young, and with a lizard found in the devious fields;

They, when they take their wings, seek the same animals.

The vulture with cattle, and with dogs, and with relicks from crosses, Hastens to her young, and brings part of a dead body.

Hence is the food also of a great vulture, and of one feeding Herself, when now she makes nests in her own tree.

80

75

of belli et pacis, like arma et togæ, in cedant arma togæ, seems to carry this meaning.

So Holyp .- the helmet or the gown.

The old Romans were careful so to breed up their sons, that afterwards they might be useful to their country in peace or war, or ploughing the ground. J. DRYDEN, junior.

73. In what arts, &c.] So as to make him useful to the public.

— What morals, &c.] So as to regulate his conduct, not only as to his private behaviour, but as to his demeanour in any public office which he may be called to.

74. A stork nourishes, &c.] i. e. Feeds her young ones with makes and lizards.

75. Devious fields.] Devius (ex de and via-quasi a recta via remotum) signifies out of the way, or road.

Devia rura may be understood of the remote parts of the country, where serpents and lizards are usually found.

76. Take their awings.] i. e. The young storks, when able to fly and provide for themselves, will seek the same animal for food, with which they were fed by the old ones in the nest.

77. With cattle, &c.] The vulture feeds her young-jumentowith the flesh of dead cattle, and of dead dogs.

Relicks from crosses.] i. e. Feeds on the remains of the bodies of malefactors that were left exposed on crosses, or gibbets, and brings part of the carcase to her nest—1. 78.

79. Hence, &c.] From thus being supplied with such sort of food by the old one, the young vulture, when she is grown up to be a great bird, feeds upon the same,

80. When now, Sc.] She feeds herself and her young in the same

Sed leporem, aut capream, famulæ Jovis, et generosæ
In saltu venantur aves: hinc præda cubili
Ponitur: inde autem, cum se matura levârit
Progenies stimulante fame, festinat ad illam,
Quam primum rupto prædam gustaverat ovo.
Ædificator erat Centronius, et modo curvo
Littore Cajetæ, summa nunc Tiburis arce,
Nunc Præpestinis in montibus, alta parabat

Littore Cajetæ, summa nunc Tiburis arce,
Nunc Prænestinis in montibus, alta parabat
Culmina villarum, Græcis, longeque petitis
Marmoribus, vincens Fortunæ atque Herculis ædem;
Ut spado vincebat Capitolia nostra Posides.
Dum sic ergo habitat Centronius, imminuit rem,
Fregit opes, nec parva tamen mensura relictæ
Partis erat: totam hanc turbavit filius amens.

Dum meliore novas attollit marmore villas.

Ouidam sortiti metuentem Sabbata patrem, manner, whenever she has a nest of her own, in some tree which she appropriates for building in.

95

85

81. Handmaids of Jove. Eagles. See Hor. lib. iv. ode iv. 1. 1, et seq. where the eagle is called ministrum fulminis alitem, because supposed to carry Jove's thunder. See Francis, note there.

(81 -2. Noble birds, &c.] Not only eagles, but the falcons of various kinds, hunt hares and kids, and having caught them, carry them to their nests to feed their young with.

.83. Thence, &c.] i. e. From being fed with such sort of food when young.

--- The mature progeny.] The young ones, when grown up, and full fledged.

84. Raised itself, &c.] Upon its wings, and takes its fight.

— Hunger stimulating] When sharpened by hunger.

84-5. Hastens to that firey.] To the same sort of food.

85. Which it had first lasted, &c.] Which it had been used to from the time it was first hatched—rupto ovo, from the broken egg—from its very egg-shell, as we say.

86. Centronius.] A famous extravagant architect, who, with his son, (who took after him,) built away all his estate, and had so many palaces at last, that he was too poor to live in any of them.

87. Caieta.] A sea-port in Campania, not far from Baiæ, built in memory of Caieta, nurse to Æneas. See Æn. vii. l. 1—4. The shore was here remarkably sinuous and crooked.

. - Summit of Tibur.] See sat. iii. 192, note.

88. Pranestine mountains.] On the mountains near Præneste, a city of Italy, about twenty miles from Rome.

-- Was preparing, Planning and building, thus preparing them for habitation.

88-9. The high tops, &c.] Magnificent and lofty country-houses.

But the hare or the kid, the handmaids of Jove, and the noble Birds, hunt in the forest: hence prey is put In their nest: but, thence, the mature progeny, when It has raised itself, hunger stimulating, hastens to that Prey, which it had first tasted, the egg being broken.

85

Centronius was a builder, and now on the crooked
Shore of Caieta, now on the highest summit of Tibur,
Now in the Prænestine mountains, was preparing the high Tops of villas, with Grecian, and with marble sought Afar off, exceeding the temple of Fortune and of Hercules:

90
As the eunuch Posides out-did our capitols.
While thus, therefore, Centronius dwells, he diminished his estate,

While thus, therefore, Centronius dwells, he diminished his estate, He impaired his wealth, nor yet was the measure of the remaining Part small: his mad son confounded all this,

While he raised up new villas with better marble.

95

Some chance to have a father who fears the Sabbaths,

89. With Grecian, &c.] Finished in the most superb taste with Grecian and other kinds of foreign marble.

90. Temple of Fortune.] There was one at Rome built of the finest marble by Nero-but here is meant that at Præneste.

- Of Hercules.] At Tibur, where there was a very great library.

91. Eunuch Posides, &c.] A freedman and favourite of Claudius Cæsar, who was possessed of immense riches; he built on the shore at Baiæ some baths which were very magnificent, and called, after him, Posidianæ.

Our capitals.] Of which there were several, besides that at Rome, as at Capua, Pompeia, and other places. But the poet means particularly the capitol at Rome, which, after having been burnt, was rebuilt and beautified most magnificently by Domitian.

'92. While thus, &c.] While he thus builds and inhabits such expensive and magnificent houses, he outruns his income.

93. Nor yet, &c.] Nevertheless, though he lessened his fortune, yet there was no small part of it left.

94. His mad son, &c.] His son, who, from the example of his father, had contracted a sort of madness for expensive building, confounded the remaining part of his father's fortune, when it came to him after his father's death.

95. Raised up new villas, &c.] Endeavouring to excel his father, and to build at a still greater expense, with more costly materials.

This instance of Centronius and his son is here given as a proof of the poet's argument, that children will follow the vices and follies of parents, and perhaps even exceed them (comp. l. 53.); therefore parents should be very careful of the example which they set their children.

96. Some chance, &c.] Sortiti-i. e. it falls to the lot of some.

Nil præter nubes, et cæli numen adorant : Nec distare putant humanâ carne suillam, Quâ pater abstinuit; mox et præputia ponunt: Romanas autem soliti contemnere leges, Judaïcum ediscunt, et servant, ac metuunt jus, Tradidit arcano quodeunque volumine Moses: Non monstrare vias, eadem nisi sacra colenti; Quæsitum ad fontem solos deducere verpos. Sed pater in causa, cui septima quæque fuit lux Ignava, et partem vitæ non attigit ullam

100

103

96. Fears the Sabbaths. Not only reverences the seventh day, but the other Jewish feasts, which were called Sabbaths.

The poet having sliewn, that children follow the example of their parents in vice and folly, here shews, that in religious matters also children are led by their parents' example.

97. Reside the clouds. Because the Jews did not worship images, but looked toward heaven when they prayed, they were charged with worshipping the clouds, the heathen having no notion but of worshipping some visible object,

- The Deity of heaven.] Juvenal, though he was wise enough to laugh at his own country gods, yet had not any notion of the ONE TRUE GOD, which makes him ridicule the Jewish worship.

However, I doubt much, whether, by numen cœli, in this place, we are not to suppose Juvenal as representing the Jews to worship the material heaven, "the blue ætherial sky," (as Mr. Addisson phrases it in his translation of the 19th Psalm,) imagining that they made a deity of it, as he supposed they did of the clouds-this I think the rather, as it stands here joined with nubes, and was likewise a visible object. See TAGIT. Hist. v. initio.

As for the God of Heaven, he was to Juvenal, as to the Athenians, wyras 25 9805, (see Acts xvii. 23.) utterly unknown; and therefore the poet could not mean him by numen coeli,-" After the "wisdom of God, the world by wisdom knew not God." 1 Cor. i.

21.

98. Savine's flesh to be different from human.] They think it as abominable to eat the one as the other. Here he ignorantly ridicules their observance of that law, Lev. xi. 7, &c.

99. The father, &c.] He treats it as a matter of mere tradition, as if the son only did it because his father did it before him.

Soon they lay aside, &c.] Here he ridicules the right of circumcision, which was performed on the eighth day after their birth, according to Gen. xvii. 10, et seq.

100. Used to despise, &c.] It being their wonted custom and practice to hold the laws of Rome, relative to the worship of the gods in particular, in the highest contempt. See Exod. xxiii. 24.

101. They learn. From their childhood. Ediscunt-learn by heart.

They adore nothing beside the clouds, and the Deity of heaven: Nor do they think swine's flesh to be different from human, From which the father abstain'd; and soon they lay aside their fore-

But used to despise the Roman laws,

They learn, and keep, and fear the Jewish law,
Whatsoever Moses hath delivered in the secret volume:
Not to shew the ways, unless to one observing the same rites,
To lead the circumcised only to a sought-for fountain;
But the father is in fault, to whom every seventh day was Idle, and he did not meddle with any part of life.

101. And fear. And reverence-

102. Whatsoever Moses, &c.] i. e. Whatsoever it be that Moses, &c.—From this passage it appears, that Moses was known and acknowledged, by the heathen, to be the lawgiver of the Jews.

— Secret volume.] By this is meant the Pentateuch, (so called from πεντε, five, and τευχος, a book or volume,) or five books of Moses. A copy of this was kept, as it is to this day, in every synagogue, locked up in a press, or chest (arca), and never exposed to sight, unless when brought out to be read at the time of worship in the synagogue, and then (as now) it was returned to its place, and again locked up. This is probably alluded to by Juvenal's epithet of arcano, from arca—as Romanus, from Roma. See Ainsw. Arcanus-a-um.—Volumine, from volvo, to roll, denotes that the book of the law was rolled, not folded, up. See sat. x. 126, note.

of the law was rolled, not folded, up. See sat. x. 126, note.

103. Not to shew the ways, &c.] They were forbidden certain connexions with the heathen—but when the poet represents them so monstrously uncharitable, as not to shew a stranger the way to a place which he was inquiring after, unless he were a Jew, he may be supposed to speak from prejudice and misinformation. So in the next line-

104. To lead, &c.] He supposes, that, if a man, who was not a Jew, were ever so thirsty, and asked the way to some spring to quench his thirst, they would sooner let him perish than direct him to it. But no such thing was taught by Moses. See Exod. xxii. 21; and ch. xxiii. 9.

Verpos, like Horace's apella, is a word of contempt.

105. The father, &c.] Who, as the poet would be understood, set them the example.

Every seventh day, &c.] Throughout the year this was observed as a day of rest, the other sabbaths at their stated times. The poet ignorantly imputes this merely to an idle practice, which was handed down from father to son, not knowing the design and importance of the divine command.

as related to the necessaries of common life. The Jews carried this to a superstitious height—they even condemned works of necessity

Sponte tamen juvenes imitantur cætera: solam
Inviti quoque avaritiam exercere jubentur.
Fallit enim vitium specie virtutis, et umbrâ,
Cum sit triste habitu, vultuque et veste severum,
Nec dubie tanquam frugi laudatur avarus,
Tanquam parcus homo, et rerum tutela suarum
Certa magis, quam si fortunas servet easdem Hesperidum serpens, aut Ponticus: adde quod hunc, de Quo loquor, egregium populus putat, atque verendum
Artificem: quippe his crescunt patrimonia fabris.
Sed crescunt quocunque modo, majoraque fiunt
Incude assiduâ, semperque ardente camino.

and charity, if done on the Sabbath. See John vii. 23. They also declared self-defence to be unlawful on the Sabbath-day. See Ann.

Univ. Hist. vol. x. p. 272.

107. Young men, &c.] The poet now begins on the subject of avarice, in order to shew how this also is communicated from father to son: but here he makes a distinction. As to other vices, says he, youth want no force to be put upon them to incline them to imitation; whereas, this of avarice, being rather against their natural bent towards prodigality, requires some pains to be taken, in order to instill it into their minds.

108. Commanded, &c.] They have much pains taken with them to force them, as it were, into it, against their natural inclinations.

109. Vice deceives, &c.] They are deceived at first, by being taught to look upon that as virtuous, from its appearance, which in truth, in its real nature and design, is vicious. Nothing is more common than for vice to be concealed under the garb of virtue, as in the instance which the poet is about to mention. In this sense it may be said—Decipimur specie recti. Hor. de Art. 1. 25.

110. Sad in habit, &c.] The poet, in this line, in which he is describing vice, wearing the garb, and putting on the semblance, of wisdom and virtue, has probably in his eye the hypocrites, whom he so severely lashes at the beginning of the second Satire. See sat. ii.

1. 1-20.

Habitu here means outward carriage, demeanour, manner. Sad

-triste-grave, pensive, demure.

—— Severe in countenance, &c.] A severity of countenance, and a negligence in dress, were supposed characteristic of wisdom and virtue, and were therefore in high esteem among the philosophers, and those who would be thought wiser and better than others. Hence, in order to deceive, these were assumed by vicious people. See Matt. vi. 16.

111. Doubtfully praised, &c.] Nobody doubts his sincerity, or that he is other than his appearance bespeaks him, viz. a frugal man, and careful of his affairs, which is certainly a laudable character.

nerable

Young men, nevertheless, imitate the rest of their own accord; only Avarice they are commanded to exercise against their wills; For vice deceives under the appearance and shadow of virtue, When it is sad in habit, and severe in countenance and dress. 110 Nor is the miser doubtfully praised as frugal, As a thrifty man, and a safeguard of his own affairs, More certain, than if, those same fortunes, the serpent Of the Hesperides or of Pontus should keep. Add, that This man, of whom I speak, the people think an excellent, and ve-

Artist, for to these workmen patrimonies increase: But they increase by whatsover means, and become greater By the assiduous anvil, and the forge always burning.

Sic timidus se cautum vocat, sordidus parcum.

115

113. More certain, &c.] At the same time he is acting from no better principle, than that of the most sordid avarice, and takes care to hoard up and secure his money-bags in such a manner, as that they are safer than if guarded by the dragon which watched the garden of the Hesperides, the daughters of Atlas, from whence, notwithstanding, Hercules stole the golden apples; or by the dragon, which guarded the golden fleece at Colchos, in Pontus, from whence, notwithstanding, it was stolen by Jason.

114. Add.] We may also add to this account of the character here spoken of, that he is in high estimation with the generality of people, who always judge of a man by what he is worth.

At bona pars hominum, decepta cupidine falsa, Nil satis est, inquit, quia tanti quantum habeas, sis.

Hor. lib. i. sat. i. l. 61, 2.

" Some self-deceiv'd, who think their lust of gold

" Is but a love of fame, this maxim hold-" No fortune's large enough, since others rate

"Our worth proportion'd to a large estate."

FRANCIS.

115. The people think, &c.] They reckon this man, who has been the fabricator of his own fortune to so large an amount, an excellent workman in his way, and to be highly reverenced.

116. To these eworkmen, &c.] Fabris here is metaphorical, and is applied to these fabricators of wealth for themselves, because those who coined or made money for the public were called fabri, or monetæ fabricatores. Faber usually denotes a smith—i. e. a workman in iron and other hard materials, a forger, a hammerer: so these misers, who were continually at work to increase their wealth, might be said to forge and hammer out a fortune for themselves, and in this sense might be called fabri. To such as these, says the poet, riches increase.

117. By whatsoever means.] They were not very scrupulous or nice, as to the means of increasing their store, whether by right or

118. By the assiduous anvil, and the forge, &c.] The poet still VOL. II.

Et pater ergo animi felices credit avaros,
Qui miratur opes, qui nulla exempla beati
Pauperis esse putat; juvenes hortatur, ut illam
Ire viam pergant, et eidem incumbere sectæ.
Sunt quædam vitiorum elementa: his protinus illos
Imbuit, et cogit minimas ediscere sordes.

Mox acquirendi docet insatiabile votum:
Servorum ventres modio castigat iniquo,
Ipse quoque esuriens: neque enim omnia sustinet unquam
Mucida cœrulei panis consumere frusta, Hesternum solitus medio servare minutal continues his metaphor. As smiths, by continually beating their iron on the anvil, and having the forge always heated, fabricate and complete a great deal of work; so these misers are always forging and fashioning something or other to increase their wealth. Their incessant toil and labour may be compared to working at the anvil, and the burning desire of their minds to the lighted forge. Camino here is to be understood of the forge or furnace in which the iron is heated.

119. The father therefore, &c. T Seeing these men abound in wealth, and not recollecting what pains it cost them, both of body and mind, to acquire it, thinking the rich are the only happy people, and that a poor man must be miserable-

121. Exhorts his young men. His sons that are growing up.

122. To go that way.] To tread in the steps of these money-getting people.

— Apply earnestly, &c.] Incumbo signifies to apply with earnestness and diligence to any thing. The father here recommends it to his sons, to apply themselves diligently to the practices of these people, whom the poet humourously styles a sect—as if they were a sect of philosophers, to which the word properly belongs. Those who joined in following the doctrines of Plato, were said to be of the Platonic sect—so secta Socratica.—Secta comes from sequer, to follow.

123. Certain elements, &c.] Certain rudiments or beginnings.—
The father does not all at once bid his sons to be covetous; but insiruates into their minds, by little and little, sordid principles. This he does as soon as they are capable of receiving them, which I take to be the meaning of protinus here.—Imbuo signifies to season meat, or the like; so, by metaph, to season the mind—also to furnish, or store.

124. Compels them to learn, &c. Trom his example, little paltry acts of meanness and avarice-minimas sordes.

And the father therefore believes the covetons happy of mind,
Who admires wealth, who thinks that there are no examples 120
Of an happy poor man; he exhorts his young men that they May persist to go that way, and apply earnestly to the same sect.
There are certain elements of vices; with these he immediately seasons
Them, and compels them to learn the most trifling stinginess.
By-and-by he teaches an insatiable wish of acquiring: 125
He chastises the bellies of the servants with an unjust measure,
He also hung'ring: for neither does he ever bear
To consume all the musty pieces of blue bread,
Who is used to keep the hash of yesterday in the midst of

is the inordinate love of money. Amor habendi. Virg. Æn. viii.

126. He chastises, &c.] The poet in this, and in some of the following lines, particularises certain instances of those minime sordes, which he had hinted at 1.124, and which the father is supposed to set an example of to his sons, in order to season and prepare their minds for greater acts of sordidness and avarice.

First, Juvenal takes notice of the way in which the father treats his servants. He pinches their bellies, by withholding from them their due allowance of food, by giving them short measure, which is implied by iniquo modio. The Romans measured out the food which they gave their slaves; this was so much a month, and therefore called demensum, from mensis—or rather, perhaps, from demetior—whence part. demensus-a-um.

We find this word in Ter. Phorm. act i. sc. i. l. 9. where Davus representing Geta, as having saved something out of his allowance, as a present for the bride of his master's son.

Quod ille unciatim vix de demenso suo, Suum defraudans genium, comparsit miser.

Geta had saved of his corn, of which the slaves had so many measures every month, and turned it into money. Modium was a measures sure of about a peck and an half. Ainsw.

127. He also hung'ring.] Half starving himself at the same time.

Neither does he, Sc.] He does not suffer, or permit, all the pieces of bread, which are so stale as to be blue with mouldiness, and musty with being hoarded up, to be eaten up at once, but makes them serve again and again.

129. The hash, &c.] Minutal--a dish made with herbs and meat, and other things chopped together--from minuo, to diminish, or make a thing less.

of yesterday.] Which had been dressed the day before, and now served up again. This he will still keep, though in the month of September, a time of year when, from the autumnal damps, victuals soon grow putrid. The blasts of the south-wind at that time were particularly insalubrious. See sat. vi. 516, note.

Septembri; nec non differre in tempora cœnæ

Alterius, conchen æstivi cum parte lacerti

Signatam, vel dimidio putrique siluro,

Filaque sectivi numerata includere porri:

Invitatus ad hæc aliquis de ponte negaret.

Sed quo divitias hæc per tormenta coactas?

Cum furor haud dubius, cum sit manifesta phrenesis,

Ut locuples moriaris, egenti vivere fato?

Interea pleno cum turget sacculus ore,

CRESCIT AMOR NUMMI QUANTUM IPSA PECUNIA CRESCIT;

Et minus hanc optat, qui non habet. Ergo paratur

130. Also to defer, &c.] Who accustoms himself to keep for a second meal.

131. The bean.] Conchis .- See sat. iii. 293, note.

Sealed up. Put into some vessel, the cover or mouth of which was sealed up close with the master's seal, to prevent the servants getting at it. Or perhaps into some cupboard, the door of which had the master's seal upon it.

131.—2. Part of a summer fish.] Lacerti restivi.—What fish the lacertus was, I do not any where find with certainty. Ainsworth calls it a kind of cheap fish usually salted. This, mentioned here, is called a summer fish; I suppose, because caught in the summer time; and for this reason, no doubt, not very likely to keep long sweet.

132. With half a stinking shad.] See sat. iv. 33; and AINSW.

Silurus: Lit. and with an half and putrid silurus.

133. To shut up.] Includere—i. c. to include in the same sealed vessel.—The infinitive includere, like the servare, 1.129, and the non differre, l. 130, is governed by the solitus, l. 129.

--- Number'd threads, &c.] Sectivi porri.—In sat. iii. 293, 4. Juvenal calls it sectile porrum. See there.—There were two different species of the leek; one sort was called sectum, sectile, and sectivum—the other capitatum; the former of which was reckoned the worst. See Plin. lib. xix. c. 6.

From the bottom of a leek there are fibres which hang downwards, when the leek is taken out of the ground, which the poet here calls fila, or threads, which they resemble. He here humourously represents a person so sordidly avaricious, as to count the threads, or fibres, at the bottom of a leek, that if one of these should be missing he might find it out.

The epithets, sectivum and sectile, are given to that sort of leek, from its being usual to cut or shred it into small pieces when mixed with victuals of any kind. See Ainsw. Sectivus.

134. Invited from a bridge.] See sat. iv. 116. The bridges about Rome were the usual places where beggars took their stand, in order to beg of the passengers.

The poet, to finish his description of the miser's hoard of victuals,

135

September; also to defer, to the time of another supper, 130

The bean, sealed up with part of a summer

Fish, or with half a stinking shad,

And to shut up the number'd threads of a sective leek :

Any one invited from a bridge to these, would refuse.

But for what end are riches gather'd by these torments, Since it is an undoubted madness, since it is a manifest phrensy,

That you may die rich, to live with a needy fate?

In the mean time, when the bag swells with a full mouth,

THE LOVE OF MONEY INCREASES, AS MUCH AS MONEY ITSELF INCREASES;

And he wishes for it less, who has it not. Therefore is prepared 140 here tells us, that if this wretch were to invite a common beggar to such provisions as he kept for himself and family, the beggar would refuse to come.

135. But for what end, &c.] Some verb must be understood here, as habes, or possides, or the like—otherwise the accusative case is without a verb to govern it. We may then read the line—

To what purpose do you possess riches, gathered together by these torments—i. e. with so much punishment and uneasiness to yourself?

See sat. x. l. 12, 13.

136. Undoubted madness, &c.] So Hon. sat. iii. lib. ii. l. 82.

Danda est hellebori multo pars maxima avaris, Nescio an Anticyram ratio illis destinet omnem.

Misers make whole Anticyra their own; Its hellebore reserved for them alone.

FRANCIS.

For Anticyra, see above, Juy. sat xiii. l. 97, note.

137. A needy fate, &c.] i. e. To share the fate of the poor; to live as if destined to poverty and want, for the sake of being rich when you die, a time when your riches can avail you nothing, be they ever so great.

138. When the bag swells, &c.] And all this, for which you are tormenting yourself at this rate, you find no satisfaction or contentment in; for when your bags are filled up to the very mouth, still you want more. The getting of money, and the love of money increase together: the more you have, the more you want.

Crescit indulgens sibi dirus hydrops, &c. See Hor. lib. ii. ode ii. and lib. iii. ode xvi. l. 17, 18.

Crescentem sequitur cura pecuniam Majorumque fames.

140. He wishes for it less, &c.] A poor man looks no farther than for a supply of his present wants; he never thinks of any thing more.

Therefore.] Because thou art insatiable in thy desires.

Is prepared, &c.] Not content with one country-house, another is purchased, and gotten ready, prepared for thy reception, as one will not suffice.

Altera villa tibi, cum rus non sufficit unum, Et proferre libet fines ; majorque videtur, Et melior vicina seges : mercaris et hanc, et Arbusta, et densâ montem qui canet olivâ: Quorum si pretio dominus non vincitur ullo, 145 Nocte boves macri, lassoque famelica collo Armenta ad virides hujus mittentur aristas : Nec prius inde domum, quam tota novalia sævos In ventres abeant, ut credas falcibus actum. Dicere vix possis, quam multi talia plorent, Et quot venales injuria fecerit agros Sed qui sermones? quam fœdæ buccina famæ? Quid nocet hoc? inquit: tunicam mihi malo lupini, Quam si me toto laudet vicinia pago

142. It likes you to extend, &c. You think the present limits of your estate too confined, and therefore you want to enlarge them.

143. Neighbour's corn. Arista is properly the beard of corn, and, by synec. the whole ear; and so the corn itself, as growing. You take into your head that your neighbour's corn looks better than yours, therefore you determine to purchase, and to possess yourself of his estate.

144. Groves of trees. Arbustum signifies a copse or grove of trees, pleasant for its shade.

-- Which is white, &c.] The bloom of the olive is of a white, or light grey colour. Densa here means a vast quantity. See sat. i. 120, note.

145. With any firice of which, &c.] If you cannot tempt the owner to part with them for any price which you offer for the purchase, then you have recourse to stratagem to make him glad to get rid of them.

146. By night the lean owen, &c.] In the night time, when you are not likely to be discovered, you turn your oxen, which are half-starved, and your other herds of grazing beasts, which are kept sharp for the purpose, into your poor neighbour's corn.

146-7. Tired necks.] That have been yoked, and at work all day, and therefore the more hungry.

147. To the green corn, &c.] In order to eat it up.

148. Nor may they depart home, &c.] They are not suffered to stir homeward, till they have eaten up the whole crop, as clean as if it had been reaped.

The whole crop. Tota novalia. Novale est, saith Pliny, quod alternis annis seritur-" Land sown every other year," and therefore produces the more plentiful crops. Here, by met. novalia signifies the crops that grow on such land .- See VIRG. Geor. i. l.

151. Injury, &c. Many have had reason to complain of such treatment, and have been forced to sell their land to avoid being ruined.

Another villa for you, when one country seat is not sufficient;
And it likes you to extend your borders; and greater appears
And better your neighbour's corn: you bny also this, and Groves of trees, and the mountain which is white with the thick olive:

With any price of which if the owner be not prevailed on,
By night the lean oxen, and the famished herds, with tired
Necks, will be sent to the green corn of this man.

Nor may they depart home from thence, before the whole crop

Is gone into their cruel bellies, so that you would believe it done by sickles.

You can hardly say, how many may lament such things,
And how many fields injury has made to be set to sale.

And now many needs injury has made to be set to sale:

"But what speeches? how the trumpet of foul fame?"—

"What does this hurt?" says he: "I had rather have the coat of a lupine,

"Than if the neighbourhood in the whole village should praise me

152. " What speeches?"] What does the world say of you, says the poet, for such proceedings ?

"Trumpet of foul fame" - The poet is interrupted before he has finished, by the cager answer of the person to whom he is supposed to be speaking, and with whom he is expostulating.

153. "What does this hurt?"] Says the miser-what harm can what the world says do? See Hor. sat. i. l. 64-7.

- Coat of a lupine.] Lupinus signifies a kind of pulse, of a bitter and harsh taste, covered with a coat, husk, or shell. See VIRG. G. i. l. 75, 6. Isidorus says, that the best definition of lupinus is, eno the houns, quod vultum gustantis amaritudine contristet. Ainsworth thinks that lupinus signifies what we call hops; and this seems likely, as we may gather from the story in Athenœus, lib. ii. c. xiv. where he relates of Zeno the Stoic, that he was ill-tempered and harsh, till he had drunk a quantity of wine, and then he was pleasant and good-humoured. On Zeno's being asked the reason of this change of temper, he said, that "the same thing happened to "him as to lupines; for lupines," says he, "before they are soaked in "water are very bitter; but when put into water, and made soft by "steeping, and are well soaked, they are mild and pleasant."-Hops grow with coats, or laminæ, one over another. But whatever be the exact meaning of lupini, the meaning of this hasty answer of the miser's is as follows: "Don't talk to me of what speeches are made " about me, or what the trumpet of fame may spread abroad, to the disadvantage of my character. I would not give a pin's head " for all they can say against me, if I do but get rich :- but I would " not give the husk of a lupine for the praise of all the town, if my "farm be small, and afford but a poor crop."

q. d. If I am rich, they can't hurt me by their abuse; but if poor, their praise will do me no good. .

Exigui ruris paucissima farra secantem. 155 Scilicet et morbis et debilitate carebis, Et luctum et curam effugies, et tempora vitæ Longa tibi post hæc fato meliore dabuntur; Si tantum culti solus possederis agri, Quantum sub Tatio populus Romanus arabat. Mox etiam fractis ætate, ac Punica passis Prælia, vel Pyrrhum immanem, gladiosque Molossos. Tandem pro multis vix jugera bina dabantur Vulneribus: merces ea sanguinis atque laboris Nullis visa unquam meritis minor, aut ingratæ Curta sides patriæ: saturabat glebula talis Patrem ipsum, turbamque casæ, quâ fœta jacebat Uxor, et infantes ludebant quatuor, unus Vernula, tres domini: sed magnis fratribus horum

155. The very scanty produce.] Paucissima farra.—Far denotes all manner of corn. Paucissima need not be taken literally in the superlative sense, but as intensive, and as meaning, a very small, an exceeding scanty crop of corn. See note on densissima lectica, sat. i. 1. 120, n. 2. The comparative and superlative degrees are often used by the Latin writers only in an intensive sense.

156. I warrant, &c.] Here the poet is speaking ironically, as if he said to the miser—To be sure, Sir, people like you, who are above the praise or dispraise of the world, are doubtless exempted too from the calamities which the rest of the world suffer, such as sickness and infirmities. See sat. x. l. 227. You are also out of the reach of affliction and sorrow. See sat. x. l. 242—4. Carebis—you will be without—free from.

158. After these things, &c.] Add to all this, that you must live longer than others, and be attended with uncommon happiness—meliore fato—with a more prosperous and more favourable destiny.

159. If you alone possess'd, &c.] Provided that you were so wealthy as to possess, and be the sole owner of as much arable land as the people of Rome cultivated, when the empire was in its infancy, under Romulus, and Tatius the Sabine; who, for the sake of the ladies he brought with him, was received into the city, and consociated with Romulus in the government. However this might be considered as small, to be divided among all the people, yet, in the hands of one man, it would be a vast estate.

161. Afterwards.] In after times—mox—some while after.

— Broken with age.] Worn out with age and the fatigues of war. Gravis annis miles. Hor. sat. i. 5.

161—2. Had suffer'd the Punic wars.] Had undergone the toils and dangers of the three wars with the Carthaginians, which almost exhausted the Romans.

162. Cruel Pyrrhus.] The king of Epirus, who vexed the Ro-

"Cutting the very scanty produce of a little farm;"

I warrant you will want both disease and weakness,

And you will escape mourning and care: and a long space of life,

After these things, will be given you with a better fate;

If you alone possess'd as much cultivated ground, As, under Tatius, the Roman people ploughed.

160

Afterwards even to those broken with age, and who had suffer'd the Wars, or cruel Pyrrhus, and the Molossian swords, At length hardly two acres were given for many Wounds. That reward of blood, and of toil, Than no deserts ever seem'd less, or the faith small

165

Of an ungrateful country. Such a little glebe satisfied The father himself, and the rabble of his cottage, where big lay

The wife, and four infants were playing, one a little

Bond-slave, three masters: but for the great brothers of these mans with perpetual wars, but, at last, was defeated and driven out of Italy.

162. Molossian swords.] The Molossi were a people of Epirus, who fought against the Romans in Pyrrhus's army. See sat. xii. 1. 108, note.

163. At length.] i. e. After so many toils and dangers.

— Hardly two acres.] Jugerum—an acre, so called from jugum boum, being as much land as a yoke of oxen could plough in a day. Scarcely so much as two acres were given as a reward for many wounds in battle.

165. Than no deserts, &c.] And this portion of two acres, given to a soldier, as a reward for the blood which he had shed, and the toils he had undergone in the service of his country, was never found fault with as too little for his deserts, or as an instance of a breach of faith in his country towards him, by rewarding him less than he had reason to expect. Curtus means little, short, curtailed, imperfect, broken. Curta fides may be applied to express a man's coming short of his promise.

166. Little glebe.] Such a small piece of arable land.

166-7. Satisfied the father.] The poor soldier, who was the father of a numerous family.

167. Rabble of his cottage.] Consisting of his wife and many children, some small, others grown up.

- Big.] i. e. Big, or great, with child.

169. Bond-slave—three masters.] One of the four children that were playing together, was a little bond-slave born of a she slave. The three others were children of the wife, and therefore masters over the little slave, but all playing together, happy and content.

- Great brothers. The elder children now big enough to go out to labour.

A scrobe vel sulco redeuntibus, altera cona 170 Amplior, et grandes fumabant pultibus ollæ. Nunc modus hic agri nostro non sufficit horto. Inde fere scelerum causce, nec plura venena Miscuit, aut ferro grassatur sæpius ullum Humanæ mentis vitium, quam sæva cupido 175 Indomiti censûs; nam dives qui fieri vult, Er cito vult fieri : sed quæ reverentia legum? Quis metus, aut pudor est unquam properantis avari ? Vivite contenti casulis et collibus istis. O pueri, Marsus dicebat et Hernicus olim, Vestinusque senex ; panem quæramus aratro, Qui satis est mensis: laudant hoe numina ruris, Quorum ope et auxilio, gratæ post munus aristæ, 170. Ditch or furrow, &c.] Coming home from their day's work, at digging and ploughing.

Contingunt homini veteris fastidia quercûs.

171. More ample. Their being grown up, and returning hungry from their labour, required a more copious meal, than the little ones who staid at home.

- Great pots.] Pots proportionably large to the provision which was to be made.

Smoked with pottage.] Boiling over the fire. Puls was a kind of pottage made of meal, water, honey, or cheese and eggs sodden together. Ainsw.

172. Measure of ground. I viz. Two acres, which, in ancient days, was thought a sufficient reward for an old valiant defender of his country, after all his dangers, toils, and wounds, and which provided for, and made him and all his family happy, is not, as times go, thought big enough for a pleasure-garden.

173. Thence, &c.] From covetousness. Comp. 1. 175.

—— Causes of villainies, &c.] i. e. From this vile principle arise, as from their source, all manner of cruel and bad actions. See 1 Tim. vi. 10. former part.

more poisons, &c.] Contrived more methods of destroying people in order to come at their property, either by poison or the sword. See James iv. 1, 2.

175. A cruel desire.]. Which thinks no act of cruelty too great, so that its end may be accomplished.

So Virg. Æn. iii. 1. 56, 7.

Quid non mortalia pectora cogis Auri sacra fames?

176. Unbounded.] Lit. untamed—i. e. that cannot be kept or restrained within any bounds. A metaphor taken from animals that are wild and untamed, which are ungovernable, and not to be restrained.

--- He who would be rich.] So the apostle, 1 Tim. vi. 9. ob

BUNOMENON WARTEN.

180

From the ditch or furrow returning, another supper 170 More ample, and great pots smoked with pottage. Now this measure of ground is not sufficient for our garden. Thence are commonly the causes of villainies, nor more poisons Has any vice of the human mind mixed, or oftener Attacked with the sword, than a cruel desire 175 Of an unbounded income; for he who would be rich, Would be so quickly too. But what reverence of the laws? What fear, or shame, is there ever of a hastening miser?-

4 Live contented with those little cottages and hills, "O youths," said the Marsian and Hernician formerly,

And the old Vestinian, "let us seek bread by the plough, Which is enough for our tables: the deities of the country approve 66 this. By whose help and assistance, after the gift of acceptable corn,

"There happen to man loathings of the old oak.

177. Would be so quickly.] And therefore takes the shortest way to carve for himself, through every obstacle.

--- Reverence of the laws. The laws which are made to restrain all acts of murder, and violence, and fraud, are put totally out of the question, he treads them under his feet.

178. Hastening miser.] A covetous man who hastens to be rich, has neither fear nor shaine; he dreads not what the laws can do to him, nor what the world will say of him. See Prov. xxviii. 22.

179. "Live contented," &c.] The poet here mentions what was the doctrine of aucient times, in the days of simplicity and frugality, by introducing the exhortation of some wise and thrifty father to his children.

180. "O youths," &c.] Such was the language formerly of the fathers among the Marsi, the Hernici, and the Vestini, to their children, in order to teach them contentment, fragality, and industry.

. - Marsian. The Marsi were a laborious people, about fifteen miles distant from Rome.

Hernician.] The Hernici, a people of New Latium.
181. Vestinian.] The Vestini were a people of Latium, bordering on the Sabines.

- " Seek' bread by the plough," &c.] Let us provide our own bread by our industry, as much as will suffice for our support.

182. "Deities of the country."] The Romans had their rural gods, as Ceres, Bacchus, Flora, &c. which they particularly worshipped, as presiding over their lands, and as at first inventing the various parts of liusbandry.

183. " By whose help," &c.] He means particularly Bacchus, who first found out the use of wine, and Ceres, who found out corn and

184. " Loathing," &c.] Since the invention of agriculture, and the production of corn, men disdain living upon acorns, as at first they did. See sat. vi. l. 10; and VIRG. G. i. l. 5-23. where may

Nil vetitum fecisse volet, quem non pudet olto
Per glaciem perone tegi; qui summovet Euros
Pellibus inversis: peregrina, ignotaque nobis
Ad scelus atque nefas, quodcunque est, purpura ducit.
Hæc illi veteres præcepta minoribus: at nunc
Post finem autumni mediâ de nocte supinum
Clamosus juvenem pater excitat: accipe ceras,
Scribe, puer, vigila, causas age, perlege rubras
Majorum leges, aut vitem posce libello.
Sed caput intactum buxo, naresque pilosas
Annotet, et grandes miretur Lælius alas.
Dirue Maurorum attegias, castella Brigantûm, be seen an invocation to Bacchus and Ceres, and the other rural dei-ties, as the inventors and patrons of agriculture.

185. "Any thing forbidden," &c.] Those who are bred up in poverty and hardship, are unacquainted with the temptations to vice, to which those who are in high life are liable.

186. "Thro' ice to be cover'd," & c. Pero-a sort of high shoe, made of raw leather, worn by country people as a defence against snow and cold. Ainsw.

187. "Inverted skins." The skins of beasts with the wool or hair turned inwards next the body, to defend it from the cold winds, and to keep the wearer warm.

Thus shod and thus clothed were the hardy rustics of old time; they lived in happy ignorance of vice and luxury, and of all offences to the laws.

"Even January, "Even January, and unknown to us. The introduction of this, as well as other articles of foreign luxury, is the forerunner of all manner of vice and wickedness; for when once people cast off a simplicity of dress and manners, and run into luxury and expense, they go all lengths to supply their vanity and extravagance. It cannot be said of any such—nil. vetitum fecisse volet.

189. These precepts, &c.] Such were the lessons which those rustic veterans taught their children, and delivered to the younger part of the community, for the benefit of posterity.

But nodu.] i. e. As matters are now, fathers teach their children very different lessons.

190. After the end of Autumn.] When the winter sets in, and the nights are long and cold.

From the middle of the night.] As soon as midnight is turned. 190—1. The noisy father.] Bawling to wake his son, who is lying along on his back (supinum) in his bed fast asleep.

191: " The waxen tablets." See note on 1. 30.

192. " Write."] Pen something that you may get money by.

" Watch."] Set,up all night at study.

"He will not do any thing forbidden, who is not ashamed 185

"Thro' ice to be cover'd with an high shoe; who keeps off the east " wind

"With inverted skins. Purple, foreign, and unknown to us,

" Leads to wickedness and villainy, whatsoever it may be."

These precepts those ancients gave to their posterity: but now, After the end of Autumn, from the middle of the night, the noisy 190

Father rouses the supine youth: "Take the waxen tablets,

Write, boy, watch, plead causes, read over the red

"Laws of our forefathers, or ask for a vine by a petition.

"But your head untouched with box, and your hairy nostrils, "Lelius may take notice of, and admire your huge arms.

"Destroy the tent's of the Moors, the castles of the Brigantes, 192. "Plead causes." Turn advocate—be called to the bar.

"Read over," Sc.] Study the law.
192-3. "The red laws."] So called, because the titles and beginning of the chapters were written in red letters. Hence the written law was called rubrica. See PERS. sat. v. l. 90.

193. " Ask for a vine," &c.] For a centurion's post in the army

-draw up a petition for this.

The centurion, or captain over an hundred men, carried, as an ensign of his office, a stick or batoon in his hand, made out of a vinebranch; as our captains do spontoons, and our serjeants halberds. See sat. viii. 1. 247. note.—If a man were to advise another to petition for an halberd, it would be equivalent to advising him to petition to be made a serjeant. So here, the father advising his son to petition for a vine, i. e. vine-branch, is equivalent to his petitioning to be made a centurion.

164. "Untouched with box."] Your rough and martial appearance, owing to your hair lying loose, and not being combed. The Romans made their combs of box-wood.

- "Hairy nostrils." Another mark of hardiness; for effe-minate and delicate people plucked off all superfluous hairs. See sat. ii. 11, 12. where hairiness is mentioned as a mark of hardiness and courage.

195. "Lelius."] Some great general in the army may notice these things as bespeaking you fit for the army.

"Huge arms."] Probably rough with hair. See above, n. 2. on l. 194 .- Ala signifies the armpit, also the arm. See AINSW.

196. "Destroy the tents of the Moors." Go and do some great exploit—distinguish yourself in an expedition against the people of Mauritania. Attegiæ (from ad and tegere, to cover) signifies cot-tages, huts, cabins, tents, and the like, in which people shelter themselves from the weather.

"Castles of the Brigantes."] Of the inhabitants of Britain. The people of Lancashire, Yorkshire and other northern parts of England, were called Brigantes; they had strong castles.

200

Ut locupletem aquilam tibi sexagesimus annus
Afferat: aut longos castrorum ferre labores
Si piget, et trepido solvunt tibi cornua ventrem
Cum lituis audita, pares, quod vendere possis
Pluris dimidio, nec te fastidia mercis
Ullius subeant ablegandæ Tiberim ultra:
Nec credas ponendum aliquid discriminis inter
Unguenta, et corium: Lucri bonus est odor ex ee
Qualibet. Illa tuo sententia semper in ore
Versetur, Dîs atque ipso Jove digna, poëtæ:
Unde habeas Quærit nemo; sed oportet habere,
Hoc monstrant vetulæ pueris poscentibus assem:
Hoc discunt omnes ante Alpha et Beta puellæ.
Talibus instantem monitis quemcunque parentem
Sic possem affari: dic, ô vanissime, quis te

197. "That a rich eagle," &c.] The Roman ensign was the figure of an eagle, which was carried at the head of every regiment. The care of this standard was committed to the eldest captain of the regiment, and was a very rich post.

The father is here exhorting his son to go into the army; in order to which, first, he is to petition for the vine-rod, or centurion's post; then he exhorts him to go into service, and distinguish himself against the enemy, that, at sixty years old, he may be the eldest captain, and enrich himself by having the care of the standard, which was very lucrative. Hence Juvenal calls it locupletem aquilam.

198. "Or if to bear," &c.] If you dislike going into a military life, 199. "The horns," &c.] If the cornets and trumpets throw you into a panic at the sound of them, so that you are ready to befoul yourself when you hear martial music.

200. "You may jurchase," &c.] You may go into trade, and buy goods which you may sell for half as much more as they cost you.

201. "Nor let the dislike," &c.] Don't be nice about what you deal in, though ever so filthy, though such as must be manufactured on the other side of the Tiber.

202. "Sent away beyond the Tiber." Tanning, and other noisome trades, were carried on on the other side of the river, to preserve the city sweet and healthy.

203. "Do not believe," &c.] Do not take it into your head that one thing, which you may get money by, is better than another. So as you do but enrich yourself, let it be the same thing to you, whether you deal in perfumed ointments, or stinking hides.

204. "The smell of gain," &c.] He alludes to the answer made by Vespasian to his son Titus, who was against raising money by a tax on urine.—Titus remonstrated with him on the meanness of such an imposition: but he, presenting to his son the first money that accrued to him from it, asked him whether the smell offended him. Ant. Univ. History, vol. xv. p. 26.

"That a rich eagle to thee the sixtieth year

" May bring: or if to bear the long labours of camps

"It grieves you, and the horns heard with the trumpets loosen

"Your belly, you may purchase, what you may sell

200

66 For the half of more, nor let the dislike of any merchandise,

"Which is to be sent away beyond the Tiber, possess you.

66 Do not believe there is any difference to be put between

"Ointments and an hide. The smell of GAIN IS SWEET

"From any thing whatsoever. Let that sentence of the poet 205

"Be always in your mouth, worthy the gods, and of Jove himself:

"Nobody asks from whence you have, but it behoves you to have."

This, the old women shew to the boys asking three farthings:

This, all the girls learn before their Alpha and Beta.

Whatsoever parent is instant with such admonitions,

210

I might thus-speak to: "Say, (O most vain man,) who commands

205. "Sentence of the poet," &c.] i. e. Of the poet Ennius, quoted 1. 207.

206. "Be always in your mouth."] Be always at your tongue's end, as we say.

"Worthy the gods," &c.] Juvenal very naturally represents this old covetous fellow, as highly extolling a maxim so exactly suited to his sordid principles.

See Moliere's Avare, act iii. sc. v. where the miser is so pleased with a saying which suits his principles, as to want it written in letters of gold.

207. " Nobody asks," &c.]

T' have money is a necessary task,

From whence 'tis got the world will never ask. J. DRYDEN, Jun.

And therefore only take care to be rich, nobody will inquire how you came so. The poet, in the next two lines, humourously observes the early implanting this doctrine in the minds of children.

208. This, the old women, &c.] This maxim, old women, when their children ask them for a trifle to buy playthings, or some trash to eat, always take care to instil into their minds; they take this opportunity to preach up the value of money, and the necessity of having it, no matter how; nobody will trouble their head about that.

The Roman As was about three farthings of our money.

209. This, all the girls, &c.] In short, children of the other sex too are taught this before their A B C. No marvel then, that avarice is so general and so ruling a principle.

210. Is instant.] Takes pains to impress such maxims upon his children.

211. Thus speak to.] Thus address myself to.

Festinare jubet? meliorem præsto magistro Discipulum: securus abi: vincêris, ut Ajak Præteriit Telamonem, ut Pelea vicit Achilles. Parcendum est teneris; nondum implevere medullas Nativæ mala nequitiæ: cum pectere barbam Cœperit, et longi mucronem admittere cultri, Falsus erit testis, vendet perjuria summâ Exiguâ, Cereris tangens aramque pedemque. Elatam jam crede nurum, si limina vestra 220 Mortiferà cum dote subit : quibus illa premetur Per somnum digitis? nam quæ terrâque marique Acquirenda putes, brevior via conferet illi: Nullus enim magni sceleris labor. Hæc ego nunquam Mandavi, dices olim, nec talia suasi: 225 Mentis causa malæ tamen est, et origo penes te:

212. "To hasten."] Who bid thee be in such a hurry to teach your son such principles? why begin with him so young, and take so much pains?

"I warrant."] So præsto signifies here. See Ainsw.

Præsto, No. 8.

— "The scholar better," &c.] A greater proficient than yourself in avarice, and in every other vice, in which you may instruct him.

213. " Depart secure." Make yourself quite secure and easy upon this subject.

—— As Ajan," &c.] Your son will outdo you in avarice, as much as Ajax surpassed his father Telamon, or as Achilles surpassed his father Peleus, in valour and warlike achievements.

215. "You must spare," &c. You must make allowance for the tenderness of youth, and not hurry your son on too fast; have patience with him, he'll be bad enough by-and-by.

"Their marrows," &c.] The evil dispositions and propensities with which they were born (mala nativæ nequitiæ) have not had time to grow to maturity, and to occupy their whole minds, marrow fills the bones. The marrow, which is placed within the bones, like the bowels, which are placed within the body, is often figuratively, and by analogy, made use of to signify the inward mind.

Tully says, Fam. xv. 16. Mihi hæres in medullis—I love you in my heart. And again, Philip. i. 15. in medullis populi Romani, ac visceribus hærebant—they were very dear to the Roman people.

217. "To comb his beard."] i. e. When he is grown up to maturity.

"To admit the point," &c.] The edge of a razor—a periphrasis for being shaved. See sat. i. 25; and sat x. 226.

218. "Sell perjuries," &c.] He will forswear himself for a very small price.

219. "Touching both the altar," &c.] It was the custom among

- Thee to hasten? I warrant the scholar better than
- "The master: depart secure: you will be outdone, as Ajax
- "Surpassed Telamon, as Achilles outdid Peleus.
- 4 You must spare the tender ones: as yet their marrows the evils 215
- " Of native wickedness have not filled: when he has begun "To comb his beard, and to admit the point of a long knife,
- "He will be a false witness, he will sell perjuries for a small
- "Sum, touching both the altar and foot of Ceres."
- "Already believe your daughter-in-law carried forth, if your thresh-" olds
- " She enters with a deadly portion. By what fingers will she be pressed
- "In her sleep?--for, what things you may suppose to be acquired
- "By sea and land, a shorter way will confer upon him:
- " For of great wickedness there is no labour. These things I never
- " Commanded, may you some time say, nor persuaded such things, 225
- "But the cause of a bad mind, nevertheless, and its origin, is in you:

the Romans, on occasion of solemn oaths, to go to a temple, and, when they swore, to lay their hand upon the altar of the god. Here, to make his oath the more solemn, the miser's son is represented, not only as laying his hand upon the altar of Ceres, but also on the foot of her image: See sat. iii. l. 144, and note.

219. " Of Ceres."] The altar of Ceres was reckoned the most sacred, because, in the celebration of her worship, nothing was to be admitted that was not sacred and pure. Sat. vi. 1. 50.-

220. " Your daughter-in-law." Your son's wife—pronounce herdead, if she comes within your doors with a large fortune, for your son, her husband, will murder her, in order to get the sole possession

" Carried forth."] i. e. To be buried, or, as the manner then was, to be burned on the funeral pile. See TER. Andria, act i. sc. i. l. 90. See sat. vi. l. 566.

221. " With a deadly portion."] Mortifera cum dote-i. e. which is sure to occasion her death. by the hands of her covetous husband.

"By what fingers," &c.] How eager will his fingers be to strangle her in her sleep!

222. " For, what things," &c.] What you may suppose others to get by traversing land and sea, in order to trade and acquire riches, your son will find a shorter way to come at, by murdering his wife.

224. "There is no labour." There is very little trouble in such a business as this, it is soon done.

224-5: "I never commanded," &c. The time may come, when, seeing your son what I have been describing, you will be for exculpating yourself, and you may say—"I never gave him any such or"ders—this was owing to no advice of mine."

226. " But the cause," &c.] The poet answers-No, you might not specifically order him to do such or such an action, but

SAT. XM.

Nam quisquis magni censûs præcepit amorem; Et lævo monitu pueros producit avaros: Et qui per fraudes patrimonia conduplicare Dat libertatem, totas effundit habenas 230 Curriculo; quem si revoces, subsistere nescit; Et te contempto rapitur, metisque relictis. Nemo satis credit tantum delinquere, quantum Permittas: adeo indulgent sibi latius ipsi. Cum dicis juveni, stultum, qui donet amico, 235 Oui paupertatem levet, attollatque propinqui; Et spoliare doces, et circumscribere, et omni Crimine divitias acquirere, quarum amor in te est, Quantus erat patriæ Deciorum in pectore, quantum Dilexit Thebas, si Græcia vera, Menœceus, 240 In quarum sulcis legiones dentibus anguisthe principle from which he acts such horrid scenes of barbarity and villainy, is owing to the example which you have set him, and originates from the counsel which you have given him to enrich himself by all means, no matter how; therefore all this is penes te—lies at your door.

227. "Whoever has taught," &c.] Whoever has given a son such precepts as you have given yours, in order to instil into him an unbounded love of wealth.

228. "Foolish admonition," &c.] So Lævus seems to be used, Æn. ii. 54; and eclog. i. 16. Si mens non læva fuisset. See Ainsw. Lævus, No. 2. But perhaps it may mean unlucky, unfortunate, like inistro.—See this Satire, l. 1, and note.

Or lavo may be here understood, as we sometimes understand the word sinister, when we mean to say, that a man's designs are indirect, dishonest, unfair.

Produces covetous boys." Brings up his children with covetous principles.

230. "Gives liberty." &c.] i. e. So far from checking such dispositions, gives them full liberty to exercise themselves, pleased to see the thriftiness of a son, who is defrauding all mankind, that he may double his own property.

"Loosens all the reins," Sc.] Gives full and ample loose to every kind of evil. A metaphor, taken from a charioteer, who by loosening the reins, by which he holds and guides the horses, too freely, they run away with the chariot, and when he wants to stop them he cannot.

231. " Which if you would recall," &c. 7 It is in vain to think of stopping or recalling such a one, who knows no restraint.

232. "Tou contemned."] Having forfeited the authority of a father, all you can say, to stop his career, is held in the utmost contempt.

"The bounds being left." As the charioteer is run away with by his horses (see note above, 1. 230.) beyond the bounds of

- 46 For whoever has taught the love of a great income,
- And, by foolish admonition, produces covetous boys,
 - "And he who to double patrimonies by frauds,
 - "Gives liberty, loosens all the reins to the chariot,

230

- "Which if you would recall, it knows not to stop,
- " And, you contemned, and the bounds being left, it is hurried on.
- "Nobody thinks it enough to offend so much, as you may "Permit, so much do they indulge themselves more widely."
- "When you say to a youth, he is a fool who may give to a friend,
- Who may lighten, and raise up the poverty of a relation; 236
- "You both teach him to rob, and to cheat, and by every crime
- 46 To acquire riches, the love of which is in thee,
- "As much as of their country was in the breast of the Decii, as much "As Menœceus loved Thebes, if Greece be true, 240
- "As Menœceus loved Thebes, if Greece be true,
 "In the furrows of which, legions from the teeth of a snake the race; so your son, who has had the reins thrown upon the neck of his vices, can neither be stopped, nor kept within any bounds whatsoever in his wickedness, but is hurried on, rapitur, by his passious, without any power of control.

233. "Nobody thinks it enough." &c.] Nobody will ever draw a line, so as to stop just at a given point, and only sin as far as he is permitted, and no farther.

234. " So much do they indulge."] So prone are they to indulge their propensity to evil, in a more extensive manner.

235. "When you cay," &c.] When you tell your son, that giving money to help a distressed friend, or relation, is a folly.

236. "Who may lighten," &c.] Alleviate his distress, and raise up his state of poverty into a state of plenty and comfort.

237. "You both teach him to rob." By thus seeking to destroy the principles of humanity and charity within him, you teach him, indirectly at least to rob, to plunder other people.

"To cheat." Circumscribere—to over-reach and circumvent, that he may enrich himself.

"By every crime," &c.] To scruple no villainy which can enrich him.

239. "The Decii." The father, son, and grandson, who, for the love they bare their country, devoted themselves to death for its service. See sat. viii. 254, note.

240. "Menaceus."] The son of Creon, king of Thebes, who, that he might preserve his country, when Thebes was besieged by the Argives, devoted himself to death; the oracle having declared, that Thebes would be safe, if the last of the race of Cadmus would willingly suffer death.

"If Greece be true."] If the Grecian accounts speak truth.
241. "In the furrows of which," Sc.] He alludes to the story of Cadmus, who having slain a large serpent, took the teeth, and sowing them in the ground, there sprang up from each an armed

Cum clypeis nascuntur, et horrida bella capessunt Continuo, tanquam et tubicen surrexerat una. Ergo ignem, cujus scintillas ipse dedisti, Flagrantem late, et rapientem cuncta videbis. 245 Nec tibi parcetur misero, trepidumque magistrum In caveâ magno fremitu leo tollet alumnus. Nota Mathematicis genesis tua: sed grave tardas Expectare colos: morieris stamine nondum Abrupto: jam nunc obstas, et vota moraris; Jam torquet juvenem longa et cervina senectus. Ocyus Archigenem quære, atque eme quod Mithridates Composuit, si vis aliam decerpere ficum, Atque alias tractare rosas: medicamen habendum est, Sorbere ante cibum quod debeat aut pater aut rex. 255 Monstro voluptatem egregiam, cui nulla theatra, man; these presently fell to fighting, till all were slain except five, who escaped with their lives. See Ovid, Met. lib. iii. fab. i. See AINSW. Cadmus.

243. "Trumpeter too had risen." To set them together by the ears. See above, 1. 199, note. The Romans had cornets and trumpets to give the signal for battle.

244. "The fire," &c.] The principles which you first communicated to the mind of your son, you will see breaking out into action, violating all law and justice, and destroying all he has to do with; like a fire that first is kindled from little sparks, then spreads far and wide, till it devours and consumes every thing in its way.

246. "Nor will he spare," &c.] He will not even spare you that are his own wretched father, or scruple to take you off (i. e. murder you) to possess himself of your property.

247. " The young lion," &c.] Alluding to the story of a tame lion, which, in the time of Domitian, tore his keeper, that had brought him up, to pieces.

Læserat ingrato leo perfidus ore magistrum.

MARTIAL, Spectac. epigr. 10.

248. "Your nativity," &c.] But, say you, the astrologers, who cast nativities, and who by their art can tell how long people are to live, have settled your nativity, and calculated that your life will be

- " But it is grievous."] But, says Juvenal, it is a very irksome thing to your son.

249. "To expect slow distaffs."] To be waiting while the fates are slowly spinning out your thread of long life. See sat. iii. 27, note; and sat. x. 252, note.

-- " You'll die," &c.] You'll be taken off by a premature death, not by the course of nature, like those who live till their thread of life is cut by their destinies. See the references in the last note above.

"With shields are born, and horrid wars undertake

" Immediately, as if a trumpeter too had risen with them.

"Therefore the fire, the sparks of which yourself have given,

"You will see burning wide, and carrying off all things.

"Nor will he spare your miserable self, and the trembling master

"The young lion in his cage, with great roaring, will take off."

"Your nativity is known to astrologers."-" But it is grievous "To expect slow distaffs: you'll die, your thread not yet

"Broken off: you even now hinder, and delay his wishes, 250 " Now a long and stag-like old age torments the youth.

" Seck Archigenes quickly, and buy what Mithridates "Composed, if you are willing to pluck another fig,

"And to handle other roses: a medicine is to be had,

"Which either a father, or a king, ought to sup up before meat." 255 I shew an extraordinary pleasure, to which no theatres,

250. "You even now hinder," Sc.] You already stand in your son's way, and delay the accomplishment of his daily wishes for your death, that he may possess what you have.

251. " Stag-like old age." The ancients had a notion that stags, as well as ravens, were very long-lived.

Cic. Tuscul. iii. 69, says, that Theophrastus, the Peripatetic philosopher, when he was dying, accused nature for giving long life to ravens and stags, which was of no signification; but to men, to whom it was of great importance, a short life. See sat. x. l. 247.

- "Torments the youth." Gives the young man, your son, daily uneasiness and vexation, and will, most likely, put him upon some means to get rid of you; therefore take the best precautions you

252. " Archigenes." | Some famous physician; see sat. vi. 235: and sat. xiii. 98 .- to procure from him some antidote against poi-

"Buy what Mithridates," &c.] See sat. vi. 660, note.

253. " If you are willing," Sc.] It you wish to live to another autumn-the time when figs are ripe.

254. "Other roses."] And to gather the roses of another spring. - " A medicine is to be had," &c.] You must get such an antidote against poison, as tyrants, who fear their subjects, and as fathers, who dread their children, always ought to swallow before they eat, in order to secure them from being poisoned at their meals; the tyrant, by some of his oppressed and discontented subjects-the father, by a son who wants to get his estate.

256. I shew, &c.] The poet is now about to expose the folly of avarice, inasmuch as the gratification of it is attended with cares, anxieties, and dangers, which its votaries incur, and for which they are truly ridiculous. Now, says he, monstro voluptatem egregiam -I'll exhibit an highly laughable scene, beyond all theatrical entertainments, &c.

Nulla æquare queas Prætoris pulpita lauti, Si spectes, quanto capitis discrimine constent Incrementa domûs, æratâ multus in arcâ Fiscus, et ad vigilem ponendi Castora nummi, 260 Ex quo Mars ultor galeam quoque perdidit, et res Non potuit servare suas : ergo omnia Floræ Et Cereris licet, et Cybeles aulæa relinguas, Tanto majores humana negotia ludi. An magis oblectant animum jactata petauro 265 Corpora, quique solent rectum descendere funem, 256. No theatres. Nothing upon the stage is half so ridiculous. 257. No stages of the sumptuous pretor.] It was the office of the pretor to preside, and have the direction at the public games. sat. x. l. 36-41, notes.

The pulpitum was the higher part of the stage, where poets recited their verses in public.

It also signifies a scaffold, or raised place, on which the actors exhibited plays.

The pretor is here called lautus—sumptuous, noble, splendid, from the fine garments which he wore on those occasions, as well as from the great expense which he put himself to, in treating the people with magnificent exhibitions of plays and other sports. Sat. vi. 378,

258. If you behold, &c.] If you only observe what hazards and perils, even of their lives, those involve themselves in, who are increasing and hoarding up wealth-so far from security, danger and riches frequently accompany each other, and the means of increasing wealth may consist in the exposing life itself to danger.

259. Increase of an house. The enlargement and increase of family-property.

- In a brazen chest.] See sat. xiii. l. 74; and Hor. sat. i. lib. i.

1. 67. The Romans locked up their money in chests.

260. Placed at watchful Castor. i.e. At the temple of Castor. -They used to lay up their chests of treasure in the temples, as places of safety, being committed to the care of the gods, who were supposed to watch over them. Sat. x. 25, note, ad fin.

261. Since Mars, &c.] The wealthy used to send their chests of money to the temple of Mars; but some thieves having broken into it, and stolen the treasures, even stripping the helmet from the head of Mars's image, they now sent their treasures to the temple of Castor, where there was a constant guard; hence the poet says, vigilem Castora.

The avenger.] When Augustus returned from his Asian expedition, which he accounted the most glorious of his whole reign, he caused a temple to be built in the capitol to Mars the Avenger. See Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. xiii. p. 507, 8, and note f.

261-2. His own affairs, &c. The poet takes an opportunity

No stages of the sumptuous pretor, you can equal, If you behold, in how great danger of life may consist The increase of an house, much treasure in a brazen Chest, and money to be placed at watchful Castor, 260 Since Mars, the avenger, also lost his helmet, and his own Affairs he could not keep. Therefore you may leave All the scenes of Flora, and of Ceres, and of Cybele, By so much are human businesses greater sports. Do bodies thrown from a machine more delight The mind, and those who are used to descend a strait rope, here, as usual, to laugh at the gods of his country. See sat. xiii. 39-52.

265

263. The scenes. Aulæa were hangings, curtains, and other ornaments of the theatres; here, by synec. put for the theatres themselves.

You may leave, says the poet, the public theatres; you will not want the sports and plays which are exhibited at the feasts of Flora, Ceres, or Cybele, to divert you.

264. By so much, &c.] You may be better entertained, and meet with more diversion, in observing the ridiculous businesses of mankind.

265. Bodies thrown from a machine, &c.] The petaurum (from πεταυρον, pertica, a perch, a long staff or pole) was a machine or engine, made of wood, hung up in an high place, out of which the petauristæ (the persons who exhibited such feats) were thrown into the air, and from thence flew to the ground. AINSW.

Others say, that the petaurus was a wooden circle, or hoop, through which the petauristæ threw themselves, so as to light with their feet upon the ground.

Holyday gives a plate of the petaurum, which is taken from Hieron. Mercurialis, whom he calls an excellent Italian antiquary, and represents the petaurus like a swing, in which a person sits, and is drawn up by people who pull ropes, which go over a pole at top, placed horizontally, and thus raise the petaurista into the air, where probably he swung backwards and forwards, exhibiting feats of activity, and then threw himself to the ground upon his feet. See more on this subject, Delph. edit. in notis.

Whatever the petaurus might be, as to its form, it appears, from this passage of Juvenal, to have afforded an amusement to the spectators, something like our tumbling, vaulting, and the like.

266. To descend a strait rope, Ge. First climbing up, and then sliding down. Or if we take rectum here in the sense of tensum, stretched, we may suppose this a periphrasis for rope-dancing.

After all, taking the two lines together, I should doubt whether the poet does not mean rope dancing in both, and whether the petaurum, according to the definition given by Ainsworth, signifies, here, any thing else than the long pole which is used by ropeQuam tu, Corycia semper qui puppe moraris, Atque habitas, Coro semper tollendus et Austro,
Perditus, ac vilis sacci mercator olentis?
Qui gaudes pingue antiquæ de littore Cretæ 270
Passum, et municipes Jovis advexisse lagenas?
Hic tamen ancipiti figens vestigia planta
Victum illa mercede parat, brumamque famemque
Illa reste cavet: tu propter mille talenta,
Et centum villas temerarius. Aspice portus, 275
Et plenum magnis trabibus mare: plus hominum est jam
In pelago: veniet classis, quocunque vocarit Spes lucri; nec Carpathium, Gætulaque tantum dancers, in order to balance them as they dance, and throw their bodies into various attitudes on the rope. Comp. l. 272-4.

267. Than thou.] q. d. Art not thou as much an object of laughter-full as ridiculous?

Who always abidest.] Who livest on shipboard, and art tossed up and down by every gale of wind.

- A Corycian ship.] i. e. Trading to Coryciam, a promontory in Crete, where Jupiter was born.

Æquora transiliet: sed longe Calpe relictà, 269. Wretched. Perditus signifies desperate, past being reclaimed, lost to all sense of what is right.

— A stinking sack.] Olentis is capable of two senses, and may be understood either to signify that he dealt in filthy stinking goods, which were made up into bales, and packed in bags; or that he dealt in perfumes, which he brought from abroad; but by the epithet vilis, I should rather think the former.

271. Thick squeet wine. Passum was a sweet wine made of withered grapes dried in the sun. Uva passa, a sort of grape hung up in the sun to wither, and afterwards scalded in a lixivium, to be preserved dry, or to make a sweet wine of. Ainsw. The poet calls it pingue, from its thickness and lusciousness.

The countrymen of Jove.] Made in Crete, where Jove was born. See sat. iv. 1. 33.

272. He nevertheless, &c.] The rope-dancer above mentioned, l. 265, 6.

- Fixing his steps.] Upon the narrow surface of the rope.

— With doubtful foot.] There being great danger of falling. Planta signifies the sole of the foot.

273. By that recompence.] Which he receives from the spectators for what he does.

--- Winter and hunger.] Cold and hunger. See Hor. lib. i. sat. ii. l. 6.

274. He avoids.] Cavet-takes care to provide against.

— You on account, &c.] The poor rope-dancer ventures his limbs to supply his necessary wants; you rashly expose yourself to much greater dangers, to get more than you want.

275

Than thou, who always abidest in a Corycian ship,

And dwellest always to be lifted up by the north-west wind, and the south.

Wretched, the vile merchant of a stinking sack?

Who rejoicest, from the shore of ancient Crete, to have brought 270 Thick sweet wine, and bottles the countrymen of Jove.

He nevertheless fixing his steps, with doubtful foot,

Procures a living by that recompence; and winter and hunger By that rope he avoids: you on account of a thousand talents,

And an hundred villas are rash. Behold the ports,

And the sea full with large ships-more of men are now On the sea: the fleet will come wherever the hope of gain

Shall call; nor the Carpathian and Gætulian seas only

Will it pass over, but, Calpe being far left,

274. A thousand talents.] Amounting to about 187,500%. of our money. See HOLYDAY, note 9, on this Satire.

275. An hundred villas.] Or country houses, when one would satisfy any reasonable mind.

--- Are rash. Rashly run yourself into all the dangers of the

- Behold the ports. What numbers of ships are there fitting for

276. Large ships. The sea covered with ships. Trabs signifies a beam, any large piece of timber. With these ships were built; but here, by meton. is meant the ships themselves. See VIRG. Æn.

iii. 191 .- cava trabe currimus æquor.

— More of men, &c.] Plus hominum—the greater part of the people.—q. d. There are more people now at sea than on land. This hyperbole (for we can't take the words literally) is to be understood to express the multitudes who were venturing their lives at sea for gain. So with us, when any thing grows general, or gets into fashion, we say-every body follows it-all the world does it.

277. The fleet will come. No matter how distant or perilous the voyage may be, in whatever part of the world money is to be gotten, the hope of gain will induce, not merely, here and there, a single ship, but a whole fleet at once to go in search of it.

278. Carpathian and Gatulian seas.] The Carpathian sea lay between Rhodes and Ægypt, and was so called from the island Carpathus.

By the Gætulian, we are to understand what now is called the Straits of Gibraltar.

279. Calpe being far left, &c.] Calpe, a mountain or high rock on the Spanish coasts (hod. Gibraltar), and Abyla (now Ceuta) on the African coast, were called the pillars of Hercules. These pillars were generally believed, in Juvenal's time, to be the farthest west.

VOL. II.

Audict Herculeo stridentem gurgite solem.

Grande operæ pretium est, ut tenso folle reverti
Inde domum possis, tumidâque superbus alutâ,
Oceani monstra, et juvenes vidisse marinos.
Non unus mentes agitat furor : ille sororis
In manibus vultu Eumenidum terretur et igni.
Hic bove percusso mugire Agamemnona credit;
Aut Ithacum: parcat tunicis licet atque lacernis.
Curatoris eget, qui navem mercibus implet
Ad summum latus, et tabulâ distinguitur undâ;
Cum sit causa mali tanti, et discriminis luijus,
Concisum argentum in titulos faciesque minutas.
Occurrunt nubes et fulgura: solvite funem,

280. The sun hissing. Alluding to the notion of the sun's arising out of the ocean in the east, and setting in the ocean in the west.

—— Herculean gulph.] i. e. The Atlantic ocean, which, at the Straits, was called the Herculean gulph, because there Hercules is supposed to have finished his navigation, and on the two now opposite shores of Spain and Africa, which then united, (as is said,) to have built his pillars; (see note above, 1. 279.) If they sailed beyond these, they fancied they could, when the sun set, hear him hiss in the sea, like red-hot iron put into water. This was the notion of Posidonius the philosopher, and others.

281. It is a great reward of labour.] Grande opers pretium-a labour exceedingly worth the while! Ironice.

—— A stretched purse.] Filled full of money.

282. A swelled bag.] Aluta signifies tanned or tawed leather; and, by metonym, any thing made thereof, as shoes, scrips, or bags of any kind—here it means a money-bag.

--- Swelled.] Distended-puffed out-with money.

233. Monsters, &c.] Whales, or other large creatures of the deep.

—— Marine youths.] Tritons, which were supposed to be half men, half fish.—Mermaids also may be here meant, which are described with the bodies of young women, the rest like fishes.

Desinat in piscem mulier formosa superne. Hon. de Art. Poet. l. 4.

284. Not one madness, Sc.] i. e. Madness does not always shew itself in the same shape; men are mad in different ways, and on different subjects.

—— He, in the hands of his sister, &c.] Alluding to the story of Orestes, who, after he had slain his mother, was tormented by furies: his sister Electra embracing him, endeavoured to comfort him, but he said to her—" Let me alone, thou art one of the furies; "you only embrace me, that you may cast me into Tartarus." Euripe in Orest.

285. Eumenides.] The three furies, the daughters of Acheron

Will hear the sun hissing in the Herculean gulph. 280 It is a great reward of labour, that with a stretched purse, Wou may return home from thence, and proud with a swelled bag, To have seen monsters of the ocean, and marine youths. Not one madness agitates minds: he, in the hands of his sisters, Is affrighted with the countenance, and fire of the Eumenides. 285 This man, an ox being stricken, believes Agamemnon to roar, Or Ithacus. Tho' he should spare his coats and cloaks. He wants a keeper, who fills with merchandise a ship To the topmast edge, and by a plank is divided from the water; When the cause of so great evil, and of this danger, Is silver battered into titles, and small faces. Clouds and lightnings occur: "Loose the cable"- and Nox-Alecto, Tisiphone, and Megæra. They were called Eumenides, by antiphrasis, from evuerns, kind, benevolent. They are described with snakes on their heads, and with lighted torches in their hands.

286. This man, an ox being stricken, &c.] Ajax, on the armour of Achilles being adjudged to Ulysses, (see Ov. Met. lib. xiii.) ran mad, and destroyed a flock of sheep, thinking he was destroying the Greeks. He slew two oxen, taking one for Agamemnon, the other for Ulysses. See Sophoc. Ajax Mastigophorus.

287. Ithacus.] Ulysses, king of Ithaca. See sat. x. 257.

- Spare his coats, &c.] Though he should not be so furiously mad, as to tear his clothes off his back.

288. Wants a keeper. Curatoris eget-stands in need of somebody to take care of him.

- Who fills, &c.] Who, for the hopes of gain, loads a ship so deep, that there is nothing left of her above the water, but the appermost part, or edges of her sides.

289. A plank, &c. Has nothing between him and the fathomless deep but a thin plank. See sat. xii. 57-9.

290. When the cause, &c.] The only motive to all this.
291. Silver battered, &c.] A periphrasis for money.—The silver of which it was made, was first cut into pieces, then stamped with the name and titles of the reigning emperor, and also with a likeness of his face. See Matt. xxii. 20, 1.

292, Clouds and lightnings occur.] The weather appears cloudy, and looks as if there would be a storm of thunder and lightning; but this does not discourage the adventurer from leaving the port.

Loose the 'calle." | Says he; "unmoor the ship, and " prepare for sailing."

Funem may signify either the cable with which the vessel was fastened on shore; or the cable belonging to the anchor, by which she was fastened in the water.

Frumenti dominus clamat, piperisque coëmptor;
Nil color hic cœli, nil fascia nigra minatur:
Æstivum tonat: infelix, ac forsitan ipsâ
Nocte cadet fractis trabibus, fluctuque premetur
Obrutus, et zonam lævâ morsuve tenebit.
Sed, cujus votis modo non suffecerat aurum,
Quod Tagus, et rutilâ volvit Pactolus arenâ,
Frigida sufficient velantes inguina panni,
Exiguusque cibus; mersâ rate naufragus assem
Dum petit, et pictâ se tempestate tuetur.
Tantis parta malis, curâ majore metuque
Servantur: misera est magni custodia censûs.

300

293. Cries the owner, &c.] The owner of the freight calls out aloud.

— The buyer-up of pepper.] Juvenal does not simply say, emptor, the buyer, but coemptor, the buyer-up; as if he meant to describe a monopolizer, who buys up the whole of a commodity, in order to sell it on his own terms.

294. "This colour of the heaven."] This dark complexion of the sky.

—— "This black cloud." Fascia signifies a swathe or band. A thick cloud was called fascia, because it seemed to swathe or bind up the sun, and hinder its light: but, perhaps, rather from its being an assemblage of many clouds collected and bound, as it were, together.

295. "It is summer thunder."] Nothing but a mere thunder shower, which will soon be over, and which in summer time is very common, without any storm following.

Unhappy wretch.] Who is blinded by his avarice, so as to consider no consequences.

296. Beams being broken.] Shipwrecked by the ensuing tempest, he will fall into the sea, the timbers of his ship broken to pieces.

297. His girdle, &c.] Some think that the ancients carried their money tied to their girdles, from whence Plautus calls a cut-purse-sector zonarius. But I should rather think that they carried their money in their girdles, which were made hollow for that purpose. See Hor. epist ii lib. ii 1. 40. Suet. Vitell. c. 16. says—Zona se aureorum plena circumdedit.

- Left hand.] While he swims with his right.

- Or with his bite.] i. e. With his teeth, that he may have both hands at liberty to swim with.

298. But for him, &c.] Whose wishes were boundless, and whose desires after wealth were insatiable.

299. Tagus.] A river of Portugal. See Ov. Met. ii. 251.

Pactolus.] A river in Lydia, called also Chrysorrhoas.—Both these rivers were said to have golden sands. See Hor. epod. xv. 20.

(Cries the owner of the wheat, and the buyer-up of pepper—)
"Nothing this colour of the heaven, nothing this black cloud threat-

"It is summer-thunder."—Unhappy wretch! and perhaps that very 295

Night he will fall, the beams being broken, and be pressed down by a wave, Overwhelmed, and will hold his girdle with his left hand, or with his bite.

But for him, for whose wishes a while ago the gold had not sufficed, Which Tagus, and Pactolus rolls in its shining sand,

Rags covering his cold thighs will suffice,

300

And a little food; while, his ship being sunk, shipwrecked, he Asks a penny, and beholds himself in a painted tempest.

Things gotten with so many evils, with greater care and fear Are kept—miserable is the custody of great wealth.

299. Rolls.] Or throws up, by the course of its waters over the sands, so that it is found at low water. This is said to be the case of some waters in Africa, which flow down precipices with great impetuosity, and leave gold-dust, which they have washed from the earth in their passage, in the gullies and channels which they make in their way.

300. Rags covering, &c.] This very wretch, who could not before have been satisfied with all the gold of the Tagus and Pactolus, is now, having been shipwrecked and ruined by the loss of his all, very content, if he can but get rags to cover his nakedness from the inclemency of the weather.

301. A little food.] Bestowed upon him in charity, or purchased with the few pence he gets by begging.

301—2. He asks a penny.] Who before wanted a thousand talents, more than he had, to content him. See l. 274. See sat. v. l. 144, note 2.

302. A painted tempest.] Persons who had lost their property by shipwreck used to have their misfortune painted on a board, and hung at their breasts, to move compassion in the passers by; as we often see sailors and others begging in the streets, with an account of their misadventures written on paper or parchment, and pinned on their breasts.

303. With so many evils.] But suppose all this be avoided, and the man comes home rich and prosperous, still he is not happy: he must be harassed with continual care, anxiety, and dread, in order to keep what he has gotten, and these may give him more uneasiness than any thing else has given him in the pursuit of his wealth.

304. Miserable is the custody, &c.] The constant watchfulness, the incessant guard, that are to be kept over heaps of wealth, added to the constant dread of being plundered, may be truly said to make

Dispositis prædives hamis vigilare cohortem

Servorum noctu Licinus jubet, attonitus pro
Electro, signisque suis, Phrygiâque columnâ,
Atque ebore, et latâ testudine dolia nudi
Non ardent Cynici: si fregeris, altera fiet
Cras domus; aut eadem plumbo commissa manebit.
Sensit Alexander, testâ cum vidit in illâ
Magnum habitatorem, quanto felicior hic, qui Nil cuperet, quam qui totum sibi posceret orbem,
Passurus gestis æquanda pericula rebus.
Nullum numen habes, si sit prudentia: nos te,
Nos facimus, Fortuna, Deam, Mensura tamen quæ

the owner lead a miserable life. This is well described by Horace, sat. i. 1. 76—9.

305. Licinus.] The name of some very rich man. It stands here for any such.—Wealthy—prædives, very rich, beyond others wealthy.

306. Buckets set in order.] Hama signifies a water-bucket made of leather. Ainsw.—Dispositis, properly disposed, so as to be ready in case of fire.

____ Affrighted.] Half distracted, as it were, with apprehension.

307. His amber. Lest he should lose his fine cups and other vessels made of amber. Electrum also signifies a mixture of gold and silver, whereof one fifth part was silver. Answ.

--- His statues.] Signum denotes a graven, painted, or molten image, a figure of any thing.

—— Phrygian column.] His fine ornamented pillars, made of marble brought out of Phrygia, a country of the Lesser Asia.

308. For his ivory] His furniture made or inlaid with ivory.-

See sat. xi. l. 122-4, and notes.

Broad tertoise-shell.] His couches, and other moveables, richly inlaid and ornamented with large and valuable pieces of tortoise-shell. See sat. xi. 94, and note.

The casks, &c.] Dolia, the plural put for the singular, per synec. The cask of Diogenes, the Cyuic philosopher, is here meant, which was not made of wood, as has been commonly supposed, but of clay baked, and so in no danger of fire. Dolium signifies any great vessel, as a tun, pipe, or hogshead.—In these dolia the ancients used to keep their wine. Hence Ter. Heaut, act iii. sc. i. 1. 51. Relevi omnia dolia—which some translators have rendered, "I have pierced every cask." But, however that may be agreeable to our idiom, piercing an earthen vessel, which the dolium was, is not to be supposed. Lino signified the securing the mouth, or bung hole, of any vessel with pitch, rosin, or wax, to prevent the air's getting in, to the prejudice of what might be contained in it: and as this was never omitted, when any vessel was filled with wine, hence it is used for putting wine into casks.

Wealthy Licinus commands his troop of servants, with 305 Buckets set in order, to watch by night, affrighted for His amber, and for his statues, and his Phrygian column, And for his ivory, and broad tortoise-shell. The casks of the naked Cynic don't burn: should you break them, another house Will be made to-morrow, or the same will remain solder'd with 310 lead.

Alexander perceived, when he saw, in that cask, The great inhabitant, how much happier this man was, who Desired nothing, than he, who required the whole world, About to suffer dangers to be equalled to things done. Thou hast no divinity, O Fortune, if there be prudence: thee we, 315 We make a goddess. Nevertheless the measure of an estate

Hor. Od. lib. i. ode xx. l. 1--3.

Vile potabis modicis Sabinum Cantharis, Græca quod ego ipse testa Conditum LEVI.

Relino-evi, signifies, consequently, to remove the rosin, or pitch, upon opening the vessel for use.

309. Break them.] Should you dash them all to pieces, so as not to be repaired, such another habitation is very easily provided.

310. Solder'd with lead] Any fracture or chink may easily be stopped, by fixing some lead over it, or pouring some melted lead into the crack, which would fill it up.

311. Alexander. Alexander the Great might easily perceive how much happier, and more content, Diogenes was in his poverty, than he who coveted empire so much as not to be content with one world. This alludes to the story of Alexander's coming to Corinth, where he found Diogenes, and not being saluted by him, Alexander went up to him, and asked him "if he could do any "thing for him?" "Yes," said Diogenes, "stand from between me " and the sun."

In that cask. Testa. This shews that the vessel, or hogs-head, which Diogenes lived in, was not made of wood.

312. The great inhabitant.] Diogenes, the chief of the Cynics, very properly so styled, from zuwy, zuvos, a dog, from the snarling surliness of their manners; of this we have a specimen in the answer of Diogenes to Alexander above mentioned.

314. About to suffer, &c.] i. e. To expose himself to, and to undergo dangers, proportionate to his attempts to accomplish his vast designs, and equal to all the glory which he might acquire.

315. No divinity, &c.] See sat. x. l. 365, 6, and notes.
316. The measure, &c.] If I were asked what I thought a competency sufficient to furnish the comfortable necessaries of life, I would answer as followsSufficiat censûs, si quis me consulat, edam.

In quantum sitis atque fames et frigora poscunt:
Quantum, Epicure, tibi parvis suffecit in hortis:
Quantum Socratici ceperunt ante Penates.

NUNQUAM ALIUD NATURA, ALIUD SAPIENTIA DICIT.

Acribus exemplis videor te claudere; misce
Ergo aliquid nostris de moribus; effice summam,
Bis septem ordinibus quam lex dignatur Othonis.

Hæc quoque si rugam trahit, extenditque labellum,

Sume duos Equites, fac tertia quadringenta:
Si nondum implevi gremium, si panditur ultra;

318. As much, &c.] That which will suffice—as much as is required for food and raiment. So St. Paul, 1 Tim. vi. 8.

Nescis quo valeat nummus; quam præbeat usum?

Panis ematur, olus, vini sextarius; adde

Queis humana sibi doleat natura negatis. Hor. sat. i. 1. 73—5.

"Would you the real use of riches know?

"Bread, herbs, and wine are all they can bestow.
"Or add what Nature's deepest wants supplies,
"These, and no more, thy mass of money buys."

FRANCIS.

So Pope, in his use of riches, Eth. ep. iii. 1. 81, 2.

"What riches give us let us first inquire,

"Meat, fire, and clothes-what more? meat, clothes, and fire."

319. Little garden.] See sat. xiii. 122, 3. hortis, plur. per synec. pro horto, sing.

320. Socratic Penates, &c.] i. e. As much as Socrates required and took for the maintenance of his household. Here, by meton. called Penates, from the household gods which were in his house.

— Before.] i. e. In earlier times, before Epicurus. Socrates died four hundred years before Christ; Epicurus two hundred and seventy-one.

321. Nature never says, &c.] i. e. Nature and wisdom always agree in teaching the same lesson. By nature, here, we must understand that simple principle which leads only to the desire of the necessary comforts of life.

If we go farther, the term nature may extend to the appetite and passions, which, in their desires and pursuits, suit but ill with the dictates of wisdom.

Mr. Pope, Eth. epist. iii. l. 25, 6.

"What nature wants" (a phrase I must distrust)
"Extends to luxury, extends to lust," &c.

322. I seem to confine, &c.] By saying this, I may seem, perhaps, too severe, and to circumscribe your desires in too narrow a compass, by mentioning such rigid examples of persons, of what you may think sour dispositions.

323. Our manners.] That I may not be thought too scanty in

Which may suffice, if any should consult me, I will declare.

As much as thirst and hunger, and cold require;

As much, Epicurus, as sufficed thee in thy little garden;

As much as the Socratic Penates had taken before.

Samuch as the Socratic Pe

my allowance, I will permit you to mingle something of our more modern way of thinking and living.

323. Make the sum, &c.] Suppose you make up, together with what I have mentioned as sufficient, a sum equal to a knight's estate, which, by a law of Roscius Otho the tribune, called the Roscian law, was to amount to four hundred sestertia revenue per annum, about 3,1251. of our money.

324. Twice seven ranks, &c.] Fourteen ranks or rows of seats in the theatre were assigned to the equestrian order. See Hor. ep. iv.

1. 15, 16; and Juv. sat. iii. l. 155, 6, and notes.

325. If this also draws, &c.] If this contracts your brow into a frown, and makes you pout out your lips, as in disdain or displeasure—as we say, hang the lip—i. e. if this, as well as the examples before mentioned, of Socrates and Epicurus, displeases you—

326. Take two knights.] Possess an estate sufficient for two of the equestrian order. See above, 1. 323, note 2.

- Make the third four hundred.] E'en add a third knight's estate, have three times four hundred sestertia.

327. Filled your bosom, &c.] A metaphor alluding to the garments of the ancients, which were loose, and which they held open before to receive what was given to them. Comp. 1s. lxv. 6, 7. Luke vi. 38.

The poet means—If I have not yet satisfied your desires by what I allow you: if I have not thrown enough into your lap, as we say.

See sat. vii. 215, and note.

--- Opened farther.] The metaphor is still continued-q. d. If your desires are still extended beyond this.

328. Fortune of Crasus.] The rich king of Lydia. See sat. x.

—— Persian kingdoms.] The kings of Persia, particularly Darius and Xerxes, were famed for their magnificence and riches.

329. Suffice your mind.] Will be sufficient to gratify your desires.

— Riches of Narcissus.] A freedman and favourite of Claudius Cæsar, who had such an ascendency over the emperor, as to

VOL. 11. B

Nec Crœsi fortuna unquam, nec Persica regna Sufficient animo, nec divitiæ Narcissi, Indulsit Cæsar cui Claudius omnia, cujus Paruit imperiis, uxorem occidere jussus.

930 prevail on him to put Messalina to death, after her paramour Silius. See sat. x.l. 330—345. Claudius would have pardoned her adultery, but, at the instigation of Narcissus, he had her killed in the

Neither the fortune of Cræsus, nor the Persian kingdoms,
Will ever suffice your mind, nor the riches of Narcissus,
To whom Claudius Cæsar indulged every thing, whose Commands he obey'd, being ordered to kill his wife.

gardens of Lucullus. By the favour of the emperor, Narcissus was possessed of immense wealth.

END OF THE FOURTEENTH SATIRE.

SATIRA XV.

ARGUMENT.

The Poet in this Satire, which he is supposed to have written when he was under his banishment into Ægypt, relates the mortal and irreconcileable hatred, which sprung from a religious quarrel between the Ombites and Tentyrites, inhabitants of two neighbouring cities of Ægypt—and describes, in very lively colours, a bloody fray which happened between them. He seems to lay this as a ground for those fine reflections, with which he finishes the Satire, on the nature, use, and intention of civil society.

In reading this Satire, it is difficult not to advert to the monstrous cruelties which superstition and bigotry have brought on mankind, while those who have disgraced the Christian name by bearing it, have, with relentless fury, inflicted tortures and death on thousands of innocent

QUIS nescit, Volusi Bithynice, qualia demens Ægyptus portenta colat? Crocodilon adorat Pars hæc: illa pavet saturam serpentibus Ibin. Effigies sacri nitet aurea cercopitheci. Dimidio magicæ resonant ubi Memnone chordæ, Line 1. Bithynian Volusius.] Who this Volusius was does not appear; all that we know is, that he came from Bithynia, a country of the Lesser Asia, and was undoubtedly a friend of Juvenal, who addresses this Satire to him.

5

2. Mad Ægypt.] Demens not only means mad, i. e. one that has lost his senses, but also silly, foolish; which perhaps is meant here, in allusion to the silly superstition which possessed the minds of the Ægyptiaus in religious matters.

--- This part. One part of Ægypt.

Adores a crocodile.] That part of Ægypt which lies near the river Nile worships the crocodile; a dreadful amphibious animal, shaped something like a lizard, and, from an egg little bigger than that of a goose, grows to be thirty feet long. The Ægyptians know how high the river will rise that year, by the place where the crocodiles lay their eggs. The crocodile was worshipped with divine honours, because these animals were supposed to have destroyed the Libyan and Arabian robbers, who swam over the river and killed many of the inhabitants.

SATIRE XV.

ARGUMENT.

people, for no other crime than a difference of opinion in religious matters.

MARSHALL, in his note on line 36, thus expresses himself—" Hinc si"multas et odium utrique populo orichantur, nempe ex diversitate re"ligionum, que in mundo etiam Christiano, Di boni! quantas stra-

" ges excitavit !"

The attentive reader of this Satire will find a lively exhibition of these principles which actuate bigots of all religions, zealots of all persuasions; and which, as far as they are permitted, will always act uniformly against the peace and happiness of mankind. He may amuse himself with allegorizing the Ombites and Tentyrites into emblems of blind zeal and party rage, which no other bounds than want of power have kept from desolating the earth.

WHO knows not, Bithynian Volusius, what monstrous things Mad Ægypt can worship? this part adores a crocodile; That fears an Ibis saturated with serpents. A golden image of a sacred monkey shines,

Where the magic chords resound from the half Memnon.

3. An Ibis.] A certain bird, which is a great destroyer of serpents. See Ainsw.

5

4. A golden image, &c.] In another part of Ægypt, viz. at Thebes, they worship the image of a monkey made of gold. Cercopithecus is derived from the Gr. κεξκος, a tail, and πιθηκος, an ape.—The difference between the ape and the monkey is, that the ape has no tail; the monkey has, and usually a very long one.

5. Magic chords, &c.] At Thebes, in Ægypt, there was a colossal statue of Memnon, a king of Æthiopia, who was slain by Achilles at the siege of Troy: this statue was made of hard marble, and with such art, that a lute, which was in its hand; would itself give a musical sound when the beams of the sun came upon it.

Cambyses, king of Persia, ruined the city, and caused the statue to be broken about the middle, imagining the sound to proceed from some contrivance within, but nothing was found. From this time the music was thought to be magical. Strabo says, that he and others heard the music about one in the afternoon, but confesses he could not understand the cause.

Atque vetus Thebe centum jacet obruta portis.

Illic cœruleos, hic piscem fluminis, illic
Oppida tota canem venerantur, nemo Dianam.
Porrum et cæpe nefas violare, aut frangere morsu.
O sanctas gentes, quibus hæc nascuntur in hortis
Numina! lanatis animalibus abstinet omnis
Mensa: nefas illic fætum jugulare capellæ;
Carnibus humanis vesci licet. Attonito cum Tale super cænam facinus narraret Ulysses
Alcinöo, bilem aut risum fortasse quibusdam
Moverat, ut mendax aretalogus: in mare nemo
Hunc abicit, sævá dignum verâque Charybdi, Fingentem immanes Læstrygonas atque Cyclopas!
Nam citius Scyllam, vel concurrentia saxa

15

10

- 6. Hundred gates.] At Thebes, in Ægypt, there was an hundred gates; the city from thence was called Hecatompolis. This city was destroyed by Cambyses, who conquered Ægypt. It was originally built by Busiris, the fabled son of Neptune. See sat. xiii. k 27, and note.
- 7. Sea-fish.] Coruleos—because taken out of the sea, which by reflecting the blue sky, appears of an azure or sky-blue colour. So Virg, Æn. iii. 208.

Adnixi torquent spumas, et cœrula verrunt-i. e. æquora.

8. Worship a dog.] They worship their good Anubis under this form. See sat. vi. 533, note:

— Nobody Diana.] They worship the hound, but not the huntress. Juvenal seems to mistake here, for Herodotus observes that Diana was worshipped in that country under the name of Bubastis; which adoration, under another name, might occasion this mistake. But see Ainsw. Bubastis.

9. A sin to violate a leek, & c.] "Perhaps our poet here goes a little beyond the strict truth, to heighten the ridicule, though there might be possibly some foundation for such an opinion, from the scrupulous abstinence of some of that nation from particular vegetables, as lentils, beans and onions, the latter of which the priests abominated, as some pretend, because Dictys, who had been brought up by Isis, was drowned in seeking after them; or rather, because onions alone, of all plants, thrive when the moon is in the wane." Sec. Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. i. p. 484.—For the religion of Ægypt, see also ib. p. 467, et seq.; and Abr. of Hutchinson, p. 122.

10. O holy nations, &c.] Meaning the various parts of Ægypt, whose worship of leeks and onions he has just mentioned. This sarcasm is very natural after what he has said.

11. Every table, &c.] i. e. They never eat sheep, or lambs.

12. Offspring of a she-goat.] i. e. A kid.

The hatred of the Ægyptians to the Israelites, both as shepherds and as Hebrews, is supposed to have arisen from the latter killing and sacrificing these beasts, which were held sacred and worshipped

And ancient Thebes lies overthrown with its hundred gates.

There sea-fish, here a fish of the river; there

Whole towns worship a dog, nobody Diana.

It is a sin to violate a leek or onion, or to break them with a bite.

O holy nations, for whom are born in gardens

10

These deities! Every table abstains from animals bearing

Wool: it is there unlawful to kill the offspring of a she-goat,

But lawful to be fed with human flesh. When Ulysses Was telling, at supper, such a deed to the astonish'd

Alcinous, perhaps, in some, he moved anger or 15

Laughter, as a lying babbler .- " Into the sea does nobody "Throw this fellow, worthy of a cruel and true Charybdis, "Feigning huge Læstrygonians, and Cyclops?

"For sooner Scylla, or the concurring rocks in Ægypt. See Gen. xliii. 32; and xlvi. 34. See Ant. Un. Hist. vol. iii p. 333, b.

13. Human flesh.] Drop. lib. ii. c. 4. says, that in a time of famine in Ægypt, when the Ægyptians were sorely pressed with hunger, they spared their sacred animals, and ate the flesh of men.

13-14. When Ulysses was telling, &c.] Ulysses, arriving at the island of Phæacia, or Corcyra (now Corfu), was entertained by Al-cinous the king, to whom he related his travels.

15-16. Anger or laughter.] He recited such monstrous incredibilities, that no doubt he excited the spleen of some of the company, and the laughter of others.

16. Lying Babbler] Aretalogus (from agern and horos) signifies a talkative philosopher, who diverted great men at their tables by discourses on virtue. From hence this word has been frequently used for a talkative person, a jester, a buffoon.

who heard the strange tales of Ulysses, when at the court of Alcinous, expressing himself as in an amaze, that nobody should take him and throw him into the sea for his strange lies. Abicit—i. e. abjicit.

17. Worthy of a true Charybdis.] He has told such a romance about a feigned whirlpool, which he calls Charybdis, in the Straits of Sicily, that he certainly deserves a real one for his pains.

18. Feigning huge Lestrygonians.] A rude and savage people near Formiæ, in Italy; they were like giants, and devoured men.—See Odyss. z.

. - Cyclops.] These were represented as man-eaters. See Odyss. i. Also VIRG. Æn. iii. 616, et seq.

19. Sooner Scylla, &c.] I can sooner believe his tales about Scylla, (the daughter of Phorcys, the father of the Gorgons,) who is said to be changed into a dangerous rock in the midway between Italy and Sicily. See Virg. ecl. v. 74—7.

Goncurring rocks, &c.] Called Cyaneæ, otherwise Symplegadæ, two rocks at a small distance from the Thracian Bosphorus,

Cyanes, plenos et tempestatibus utres

Crediderim, aut tenui percussum verbere Circes,

Et cum remigibus grunnisse Elpenora porcis.

Tam vacui capitis populum Phæaca putavit?

Sic aliquis merito nondum ebrius, et minimum qui

De Corcyræâ temetum duxerat urnâ:

Solus enim hoc Ithacus nullo sub teste canebat.

Nos miranda quidem, sed nuper consule Junio

Gesta, super calidæ referemus mænia Copti;

Nos vulgi scelus, et cunctis graviora cothurnis:

Nam scelus, a Pyrrhâ quanquam omnia syrmata volvas,

30

so close to one another, that they seem at a distance to be one; and as one passeth by, he would think they dash against each other: they were therefore called Symplegadæ, from Gr. our and πλησσω, to strike together.

20. "Bags full of tempests." When Ulysses arrived at the island of Æolus, that king of the winds enclosed the adverse ones in leathern bags, and hung them up in Ulysses's ship, leaving at liberty the west wind, which was favourable. But the companions of Ulysses untied the bags, being curious to know what they contained, and let out the adverse winds; immediately a tempest is raised, which drives the ship back to the Æolian isles, to the great displeasure of Æolus, who rejects Ulysses and his companions. They then sail to the Læstrygons, where they lose eleven ships, and, with one only remaining, proceed to the island of Circe. See Odyss. z. ad init.

21. "Wand of Circe."] She was said to be the daughter of Sol and Perseis; she was a sorceress. She poisoned her husband, the king of the Scythians, that she might reign alone; for which, being expelled her kingdom, she went into Italy, and dwelt in a promontory called the Cape of Circe, whither Ulysses and his companions were driven (see the last note ad fin.) many of whom, by a touch of her magic wand, she turned into swine; at last, on entreaty, she restored them to their former shapes.

22. " Elpenor."] One of Ulysses' companions.

--- "Swine-rowers."] The crew of the ship, who rowed her, were turned into swine, and grunted like that animal. In those days the ships were rowed with oars, as well as driven by sails.

23. "Has he thought," &c.] Has this Ulysses so mean on opinion of the Phæacians, as to imagine them so empty-headed, so void of understanding, that they should receive such a pack of incredible stories, of bags, of tempests, &c. &c.? But even these are more probable, and sooner to be believed, than what he relates of the Læstrygons and Cyclops, as if they were man-eaters; this shocks all belief.

24. Thus deservedly, &c.] The above reflections would be very just, and proper for any one to make, unless he had drunk away his senses, and was incapable of distinguishing truth from falsehood.

25. Strong wine Temetum, a word signifying strong wine,

" Of Cyane, and bags full of tempests

"Would I have believed, or, struck by the slender wand of Circe,

"Elpenor with his swine-rowers to have grunted.

"Has he thought the Phæacian people are so empty-headed?"

Thus deservedly any one, not as yet drunk, and who a very little Strong wine from a Corcyræan urn had drawn:

25

For Ulysses related this without any witness.

We will relate wonderful things, and lately done (Junius being Consul) upon the walls of warm Coptus;

We the wickedness of the vulgar, and more grievous than all buskins: For wickedness, tho' you should turn over all the tragedies 30 from Gr. το μεθυ, vinum; whence μεθυσχω, to be drunk. So from temetum comes temulentus, drunken. See Hor. Epist. lib. ii.

epist. ii. l. 163.

25. Corcyraan urn.] Corcyra, an island in the Ionian sea, on the coast of Albania, anciently called Phæacia. So that the poet means the wine of that country, made by the Phæacians, who were famous for luxury. The urn signifies the vessel (or hogshead, as we call it) out of which they drew the wine, in order to drink it.

26. Ulysses related this, &c.] He told these storics entirely on his own credit, having no witness present to avouch the truth of what he said, therefore he might reasonably be disbelieved.

— Related.] Canebat.—The word cano, when it signifies to relate or report, particularly applies to things uttered by poets, who do not always stick to truth, but indulge their fancies in strange improbabilities: it is therefore here well applied to Ulysses, when telling such stories to Alcinous.

Why Ulysses was called Ithacus, see sat. x. 257, note 2.

27. We will relate, &c.] I shall now relate something very astonishing, not merely on my own authority, but which can be attested, as lately and publicly transacted.

27—8. Junius being consul.] Some consule Vinco, others Junco; but no such name of a consul appears as Vincus, or Juncus. Junius Sabinus was consul with Domitian, an. U. C. 836, N. C. 84. The poet dates the time of his facts for the greater certainty.

28. Upon the walls. &c.] i. e. At Coptus-in the city.

Warm Coptus.] A metropolitan city of Ægypt near the Nile, over which the sun at noon is vertical; therefore Juvenal calls it warm or hot. He names the place, as well as the time, where the things happened which he is going to relate.

29. The valgar. I am not going to tell facts which relate to my-self, or to any single individual, but what was committed by a whole people.

Than all buskins.] More grievous than is to be found in any tragedy. Cothurnus, the buskin worn by the actors of tragedy, is often, as here, used to denote tragedy itself, by uncton. See sat. vi. 633—5, note.

30. For wickedness, &c.] i. e. Though you should turn over all vol. 11.

Nullus apud Tragicos populus facit. Accipe nostro Dira quod exemplum feritas produxerit ævo.

Inter finitimos vetus atque antiqua simultas, Immortale odium, et nunquam sanabile vulnus Ardet adhuc Ombos et Tentyra. Summus utrinque 35 Inde furor vulgo, quod numina vicinorum Odit uterque locus; cum solos credat habendos Esse Deos, quos ipse colit: sed tempore festo Alterius populi rapienda occasio cunctis · Visa inimicorum primoribus ac ducibus; ne 40 Lætum hilaremque diem, ne magnæ gaudia cænæ Sentirent, positis ad templa et compita mensis, . Pervigilique toro, quem nocte ac luce jacentem Septimus interdum Sol invenit. Horrida sane Ægyptus: sed luxuria, quantum ipse notavi, 4.5

the tragedies which have been written since the days of Deucalion and Pyrrha, when mankind were restored after the flood, you will find no poet representing a piece of barbarity, as the act of a whole people at once, as in the instance I am going to relate.

30. All the tragedies.] Syrmata were long garments used by actors in tragedy. Here, by metonym. (like cothurnis in the preceding line,) put for tragedies.

31—2. Hear what an example.] Now attend, and I will tell you my story, in which you will find an example which was the effect of the most savage barbarity, perpetrated in our days, not merely by an individual, but by a whole nation together.

33. Ancient grudge, &c.] Here the poet begins his narrative of the quarrels between the Ombites and the Tentyrites, two people of Ægypt, who were neighbours, and who hated one another mortally, on account of their difference in religion.

35. On both sides.] They were, on each side, equally inveterate in their malice to each other. The word Tentyra, in this line, is in the accusative plur. and so afterwards, 1. 76.

36. The vulgar.] This rage of one people against the other spread itself, not only among the chiefs, (1. 39.) but among the common people on both sides.

—— Because the deities, &c.] The Ombites abominated the objects of the Tentyrites, worship, and those of the Ombites were equally detested by the Tentyrites—neither allowing that there were any gods worthy of worship but their own.

Their quarrel was on the score of religion, which is always the most implacable of ,all others.

The Ombites worshipped the crocodile, which the Tentyrites destroyed; these worshipped the hawk.

38. In a festival time.] The custom of feasting seven days for the happy overflowing of the Nile was annually observed by the Ombites.

39. All the chiefs, &c.] The chiefs of the other people, that is,

From Pyrrha, no whole people commits among the tragedians. Hear What an example dire cruelty has produced in our time.

There burns as yet an old and ancient grudge, An immortal hatred, and a wound not to be healed,

Between the bordering Ombos and Tentyra. Thence, on both sides, 35 The highest fury in the vulgar, because the deities of their neighbours Each place hates, since it can believe them only to be accounted Gods, which itself worships: but, in a festival time,

There seem'd, to all the chiefs and leaders of the other people,

An opportunity to be seized, lest 40

A glad and cheerful day, lest the joys of a great feast

They should be sensible of, the tables being placed at the temples and streets.

And the wakeful bed, which, lying night and day, Sometimes the seventh sun found. Rude indeed is Ægypt, but in luxury, as far as I have remarked, of the Tentyrites, thought this a fine opportunity, which should not be lost, to spoil their sport at their festival.

45

40-1. Lest a glad, &c.] They determined to prevent their festive mirth, and to embitter the joy of their feasts.

42. The tables being placed, &c.] In the crocodile's temple.

— And streets. Compita—places where several ways met, in which the country people came together to their wakes, and to perform their sacrifices, when they had made an end of their husbandry.

The Ombites are here said to do the same at their festival in the city of Coptus.

43. The wakeful bed.] The ancients, as has been before observed, lay on beds, or couches, at their meals. The poet calls it the wakeful bed, from the length of time the beds were occupied by the feasting guests, who sat up night and day for many days together, as the next line informs us.

44. Sometimes the seventh sun found.] The Ægyptians held the number seven sacred, and more especially believed, that during their festival of seven days the crocodiles lost their natural cruelty.

Hence the poet means, that the sun, at his rising, found them lying on the festal couches for seven days together.

45. But in luxury, &c.] q.d. The people of Ægypt are rude and uncultivated; but in the article of luxury, the rabble, barbarous as they are, equal the Canopians themselves, at least in that part of the country where I have been. See sat. i. l. 26, note on Canopus.

—— As far as I have remarked.] It is to be observed, that Juvenal, having inserted into his writings some sharp lines against Paris a player, a favourite of Domitian, was banished into Ægypt, under a pretence of sending him with a military command; so that, during his abode there, he had a full opportunity to observe the manners of the people, and to make his remarks upon them.

Barbara famoso non cedit turba Canopo. Adde quod et facilis victoria de madidis, et Blæsis, atque mero titubantibus. Inde virorum Saltatus nigro tibicine, qualiacunque Unguenta, et flores, multæque in fronte coronæ: 50 Hinc jejunum odium: sed jurgia prima sonare Incipiunt animis ardentibus: hæc tuba rixæ. Dein clamore pari concurritur, et vice teli Sævit nuda manus: paucæ sine vuluere malæ: Vix cuiquam aut nulli toto certamine nasus 55 Integer: aspiceres jam cuncta per agmina vultus Dimidios, alias facies, et hiantia ruptis Ossa genis, plenos oculorum sanguine pugnos. Ludere se credunt ipsi tamen, et pueriles Exercere acies, quod nulla cadavera calcent: 60 Et sane quo tot rixantis millia turbæ, 47. Add too.] q. d. It is moreover to be observed.

-- Victory, &c. 1 It is a very easy matter to get the better of people, when they are so drunk as hardly to be able to speak, or stand upon their legs, and, of course, very unable to defend themselves. See 1 Samt. xxx. 16, 17. 1 Kings xvi. 9.

48. There. 7 i. e. On the part of the Ombites.

49. Of the men, &c.] The men diverted themselves with dancing.

A black piper.] A black Æthiopian playing on his pipe, as the music to their dances.

--- Ointments, such, &c. It was customary at feasts to anoint the head with sweet-smelling ointments; but these vulgar Ægyptians were not very nice in this matter, but made use of any grease that came to hand.

50. And flowers. It was also usual to make chaplets of flowers, which they put on their heads. See sat. xi. 121, 2, and notes.

-- On the forehead.] The crowns, or chaplets of flowers, surrounded the heads of those that wore them, on these occasions, but were most conspicuous about the forehead and temples.

51. Here.] i. e. Among the other party, the Tentyrites .- The

hinc in this line, answers to the inde, l. 48.

- Fasting hatred.] The Tentyrites, on the contrary, were fasting, and their hatred, like their hunger, was fierce and insatiable. Their hatred was like an hungry appetite, which longs after some-thing to satisfy it. Jejunum is here metaphorical, and taken from the idea of an hungry person who longs for food; so did their hatred hunger after the destruction of their adversaries the Ombites.

First brawlings, &c. The Tentyrites began to fray with bitter reproaches and abuse.

52. To sound.] To utter forth as loud as they could. Metaph. from the sounding a trumpet for battle.

55

The barbarous rabble does not yield to infamous Canopus.

Add too, that the victory is easy over the drunken and stammering,

And reeling with wine: There a dancing

Of the men, with a black piper; ointments such

As they were, and flowers, and many chaplets on the forehead; 50

Here, fasting hatred: but their first brawlings they begin
To sound, their minds burning: these the trumpet of the quarrel.

Then they engage with equal clamour, and instead of a weapon The naked hand rages: few cheeks without a wound:

Scarce to any, or to none, in the whole engagement, a nose Whole: already you might see, throughout all the bands, half Countenances, other faces, and bones gaping from their broken

Cheeks, fists full of the blood of their eyes. Nevertheless they believed themselves to play, and to exercise

Puerile battles, because they can tread on no corpses: 60 And indeed, for what purpose are so many thousands of a fighting

52. Minds burning.] i.e. Their minds on fire, as it were, with anger, malice, and revenge, against the Ombites.

--- These.] The reproaches and abuse which they uttered.

The trumpet, &c.] Alluding to the custom of giving the signal for battle by the sound of a trumpet, when two armies met. This was supplied by the foul and provoking abuse which the Tentyrites gave the Ombites. See sat. xiv. l. 199.

53. With equal clamour.] This roused the Ombites, and both sides were equally clamorous and noisy in their abuse of each other—this brought them to blows.

- Instead of a weapon, &c.] Having no darts, swords, or other weapons, they went to fighting with their fists.

56. All the bands.] Agmen, properly, signifies an army, a company of soldiers, chiefly infantry.—The poet here humourously applies the word agmina to these fist-warriors.

.. 56-7. Half countenances.] Some having an eye beat out, others their teeth, and the like.

57. Other faces.] So mauled, as to be disfigured in such a manner, that they could hardly be known to be the same persons.

--- Bones gaping, &c.] Their jaw-bones fractured, and appearing through the wounds in their cheeks.

58. Blood of their eyes.] Which had been torn, or knocked out of their heads.

59. Nevertheless, &c.] Notwithstanding all this mischief, nobody had been killed, they therefore had not the satisfaction of treading any of their enemies' dead bodies under their feet; therefore they reckoned all that had hitherto happened no more than mere sport—no better than children's play, as we say.

61. What purpose, &c.] What signifies, say they, such a number of fighting people, if no lives be lost?

Si vivunt omnes? ergo acrior impetus, et jam Saxa reclinatis per humum quæsita lacertis Incipiunt torquere, domestica seditionis Tela; nec hos lapides, quales et Turnus, et Ajax, 65 Vel quo Tydides percussit pondere coxam Æneæ; sed quos valeant emittere dextræ Illis dissimiles, et nostro tempore natæ: Nam genus hoc vivo jam decrescebat Homero. Terra malos homines nunc educat atque pusillos; 70 Ergo Deus quicunque aspexit, ridet, et odit. A diverticulo repetatur fabula: postquam Subsidiis aucti, pars altera promere ferrum Audet, et infestis pugnam instaurare sagittis: Terga fugæ celeri præstantibus hostibus instant, Qui vicina colunt umbrosæ Tentyra palmæ. Labitur hic quidam nimia formidine cursum. Præcipitans, capiturque; ast illum in plurima sectum

62. The attack is sharper. This whets their appetite for mischiet, and they fall to with still more acrimony than before.

63. Stones, &c.] They picked up the stones, wherever they could find them, on the ground where they fought.

--- Arms reclined.] They stooped, directing their arms downwards to the ground, to gather stones, which they began to throw.

64. Domestic weapons, &c.] Domestica tela—the commonly usual, familiar weapons, in such quarrels as these, among a rabble, who fall together by the ears. Seditio means a mutinous rising—also quarrel, strife—among people of the same neighbourhood.

65. Turnus.] Who took up a stone, and threw it at Æneas. This stone is said to have been so large, as hardly to be lifted by twice six men of moderate strength and stature. See Æn. xii. 1. 896—901.

—— Ajax.] See II. n'. 1. 264—70. where Hector and Ajax are throwing stones at each other; when Ajax takes up a mill-stone, and throws it at Hector, which broke his shield.

. 66. Tydides.] Diomede, the son of Tydeus, who threw a stone, as hig as two men could lift, at Æneas, and wounded him on the hip. 11 £.1. 303, 4.

The poet applies these silly stories, one should suppose, rather to laugh at them, than any thing else.

67. But those, &c.] The stones with which the Ombites and Tentyrites attacked each other, were not such as were wielded and thrown by Turnus, &c. but such as could be managed by the hands of the present race of men, who are greatly inferior, in size and strength, to those Homerican heroes.

69. For this race, &c.] This race had degenerated even in the days of Homer; for speaking of the stone which Diomede threw at Æneas, Homer says

Multitude, if all live? therefore the attack is sharper, and now Stones, gotten throughout the ground with arms reclined, They begin to throw, the domestic weapons Of sedition; nor these stones such as both Turnus and Ajax, 65 Or with the weight with which Tydides struck the thigh Of Æneas: but those that right hands unlike to them Could send forth, and born in our time: For this race was decreasing, Homer being yet alive. The earth now brings forth bad men, and small; 70 Therefore whatever god hath beheld them, he laughs and hates. Let the story be fetched back from the digression. After they Were increased with succours, one party dares to draw The sword, and to renew the fight with hostile arrows. They urge their enemies, giving their backs to swift flight, 73 Who inhabit Tentyra near the shady palm-tree. Here one slips down, hastening his course with too much Fear, and is taken; but him cut into a great many

> --- μεγα εργον, ο 8 δυο γ' ανδρε Φεροιεν Οίοι νυν βροτοι ειτιν.

A vast weight, which two men, such as there are now, could not carry. Il. é. l. 303, 4.

So Virgil, speaking of the stone which Turnus threw at Æneas,

Æn. xii. 899, 900-

Vix illud lecti bis sex cervice subirent, Qualia nunc hominum producit corpora tellus.

70. The earth now brings forth, &c.] The present race of men are bad as to their morals, and small as to their size, if compared with those of old time—thus has the human race degenerated.

71. Whatever god, &c.] No superior being can behold them, without laughing at the ridiculous contentions of such diminutive creatures, and hating the abominable principles which produce them-

72. Let the story, &c.] q. d. But to return to the story, from my digression about Ajax, &c.

73. Increased with succours, &c.] Were augmented by some auxiliaries.

-- One party.] The Tentyrites. Comp. sat. xii. 115, note.
-- Dares to draw, &c.] Ventures to draw the swords with which their auxiliaries had furnished them. Comp. 1. 53, 4.

75. Urge their enemies.] i. e. The Ombites, who had turned their backs, and were running away as fast as they could.

76. Who inhabit Tentyra, &c.] Tentyra orum, an island and city of Ægypt, near which there was a mountain covered with palm-trees. q. d, The Tentyrites urged—pressed upon—the flying Ombites. This line should stand in construction before 1. 75.

77. Here. Just at this juncture.

--- One, &c.] One of the flying Ombites, in his over fear and haste, fell down, and was taken prisoner by the Tentyrites.

Frustra ac particulas, ut multis mortuus unus Sufficeret, totum corrosis ossibus edit 80 Victrix turba: nec ardenti decoxit aheno, Aut verubus: longum usque adeo, tardumque putavit Expectare focos, contenta cadavere crudo. Hinc gaudere libet, quod non violaverit ignem, Quem summâ cœli raptum de parte Prometheus Donavit terris: elemento gratulor, et te Exsultare reor: sed qui mordere cadaver Sustinuit, nihil unquam hâc carne libentius edit : Nam scelere in tanto ne quæras, aut dubites, an Prima voluptatem gula senserit: ultimus autem Qui stetit absumpto jam toto corpore, ductis Per terram digitis, aliquid de sanguine gustat.

Vascones (ut fama est) alimentis talibus usi Produxère animas : sed res diversa : sed illic

79. One dead man, &c.] They cut this poor creature into as many pieces as they could, that every one might have a bit of him, sufficient for a taste.

80. The victorious rabble, &c.] Or multitude of the Tentyrites, entirely devoured him.

80-1. Bones being gnawed. They gnawed and picked his bones.

81. Nor did they boil him. Decoxit is singular, but agrees with turba (1.81.), which being a noun of multitude, the singular verb is best translated here in the plural number. So putavit in the next line.

82. Or with spits.] Or roast the pieces of him on spits.

So very long, &c.] Their impatience was too great for them to wait the kindling and burning of fire, and the tedious process of boiling or roasting.

83. Content with the raw carease.] They were perfectly contented with eating his dead body quite raw. Contenta here relates to the victrix turba.

84. Hence we may rejoice, &c.] The poet addresses his friend Volusius; and, I'do suppose, with an intent here, as elsewhere, when he can find occasion, to sneer at the superstitious notions of his countrymen, relative to their mythology, particularly with regard to the fable of Prometheus. See sat. iv. l. 133, note. We may on this occasion, says he, be glad that these Tentyrites offered no pollution to the sacred element of fire, by dressing human flesh with it.

85. Which Prometheus, &c.] See sat. iv. l. 133, note.

--- From the highest part of heaven.] From Jupiter himself, and brought it down to earth.

86. I congratulate the element.] I wish it joy of its escape from pollution.

-- And thee, &c.] As for thee, Volusius, I think thou must Pieces and particles (that one dead man for many Might suffice) the victorious rabble ate all up, the bones 80 Being gnawed: nor did they boil him in a burning kettle Or with spits: they thought it so very long, and tardy To wait for fires, content with the raw carcase. Hence we may rejoice, that they did not violate fire, Which Prometheus, stolen from the highest part of heaven, 85 Gave to the earth. I congratulate the element, and thee I think to exult : but he, who bore to gnaw the carcase, Never ate any thing more willingly than this fiesh: For in so great wickedness ask not, nor doubt, whether The first gullet perceived a pleasure. But he 90 Who stood farthest, the whole body now consumed, his fingers Being drawn along the ground, tastes something of the blood.

The Vascons (as the report is) using such aliments, Prolong'd their lives: but the matter is different: but there exult in this circumstance as well as myself. The introduction of these reflections, in the close of his mock-heroic account of the battle, makes very much for supposing that he speaks ironically here, as where he introduces Turnus, Ajax, and Diomede, 1.65, 6.

87. He who bore, &c.] The man who could endure to bite, and champ between his teeth, human flesh, did it, no doubt, with as much relish as he would eat any thing else, especially as his appetite was sharpened by the malice which he bare the Ombites.

89. Ask not, nor doubt, &c.] You need not question or doubt whether people, capable of committing so horrible a wickedness as this, to glut their revenge, had a delight in it; and whether those who were present at the beginning of the meal, and so had their first share of the flesh, felt a pleasure in devouring it.

90-1. He who stood.] He, whoever he was, that stood farthest off, perhaps not being able to get through the crowd to the spot where the flesh was devoured, till the whole was consumed-

91. His fingers, &c.] He observing some of the blood on the ground, scraped it up with his fingers, and then sucked them with great satisfaction, as affording him, at least, a taste of his enemy's blood. This must stand as a sufficient reason, against all doubt, that the eaters of the carcase had the highest pleasure in so doing—1. 89, 90.

93. The Vascons.] A people of Spain, inhabiting between the river Ebro and the Pyrenian mountains. They were besieged by Metellus and Pompey, and reduced to such necessity, that the living were forced to eat the dead, but were at last relieved by Sertorius, a general of Marius's party.

As the report is.] As the story goes, as we say.

Using such aliments. Eating human carcases.

91, Prolong'd their lives. Which otherwise must have been lost in the straitness of the siege, which occasioned a severe famine.

—— Different.] But this was a very different thing from feeding;

Fortunæ invidia est, bellorumque ultima, casus 95 Extremi, longæ dira obsidionis egestas. Hujus enim, quod nunc agitur, miserabile debet Exemplum esse cibi: sicut modo dicta mihi gens Post omnes herbas, post cuncta animalia, quicquid Cogebat vacui ventris furor, (hostibus ipsis Pallorem, ac maciem, et tenues miserantibus artus) Membra aliena fame lacerabant, esse parati Et sua: quisnam hominum veniam dare, quisve Deorum Viribus abnuerit dira atque immania passis; Et quibus ipsorum poterant ignoscere manes, Quorum corporibus vescebantur? melius nos Zenonis præcepta monent: nec enim omnja, quædam Pro vitâ facienda putat : sed Cantaber ûnde Stoicus, antiqui præsertim ætate Metelli? Nunc totus Graias, nostrasque habet orbis Athenas. Gallia causidicos docuit facunda Britannos:

on human flesh, as the Tentyrites did, out of choice, and out of revenge on their enemies.

95. Envy of Fortune.] The poor Vascons were under the frowns of Fortune; they experienced the malice of that fickle goddess. See sat. iii. 1. 39, 40; and sat. vi. 1. 604. and Hor. lib. i. ode xxxiv. 1. 14, et seq. and ode xxxv. per tot.

--- Utmost of wars. The utmost distress which war could occasion.

95-6. Extreme misfortunes.] The very last symptoms of desperation.

96. Dire want, &c.] See above, note on l. 93, 94.

97. Which is now in question.] i, e. The matter which I am now treating, viz. the Vascons eating human flesh.

97-8. Ought to be lamented, &c.] Is not to be looked upon as a crime, but as a most lamentable instance of such a thing.

98. As the nation. &c.] The Vascons just mentioned above.
99. After all herbs, &c.] After they had consumed all sorts of herbs, and of beasts, and whatsoever else the cravings of their hungry stomachs had driven them to devour.

100. The very enemies, &c.] Their condition was so desperate, and their famished looks and appearance so shocking, as to move even their enemies to pity them. See Ps. cvi. 46.

101. Their slender limbs.] The very flesh wasted from their bones. 102. Tore for hunger, &c.] They tore, through stress of hunger, the limbs of those that had died, and were almost ready to serve themselves in the same manner. See Deut. xxviii. 53-7.

103. Who of men, &c.] All this was excusable from the dire necessity of their situation, therefore they ought to be forgiven, not only by men, but by the gods themselves.

Is the envy of Fortune, and the utmost of wars, extreme Misfortunes, the dire want of a long siege.

For the example of this food, which is now in question, ought To be lamented: as the nation, which I just now mentioned,

After all herbs, after all animals, whatever

The fury of an empty belly urged, (the very enemies themselves 100 Pitying their paleness, and leanness, and their slender limbs,)

They tore for hunger the limbs of others, ready to have eaten

Their own too. Who of men, or of the gods, would have refused To pardon forces that had suffered dire and cruel things,

And whom the manes of those very people, whose bodies

They were fed with, might forgive? better us

The precepts of Zeno admonish; he thinks not all things, some

Are to be done for life. But a Cantabrian whence

A Stoic-especially in the age of old Metellus?

Now the whole world has the Grecian, and our Athens:

Eloquent Gaul taught the British lawyers-- 110

105

104. Forces.] Viribus—i. e. men who had suffered so much by exerting all the force of their strength and courage to defend their city against the besiegers.

105. Whom the manes, &c.] Who could think of condemning a people under such circumstances of distress, when the ghosts which once inhabited the bodies which they devoured must be supposed to forgive them.

107. The precepts of Zeno, &c.] He was the founder of the Stoics; and taught, that though some things might be done to preserve life (pro vita), yet not every thing; indeed, not any thing that was unbecoming or dishonest.

108. A Cantabrian. The Vascons were a people of the Canta-brians, in the south-east of Spain.

108—9. Whence a Stoic. How should such a barbarous and ignorant people know any thing about Zeno—whence could a poor Vascon be made a Stoic?

109. In the age of old Metellus.] Who lived before arts, sciences, and philosophical knowledge, flourished as they do now. See l. 93,

note 1.

110. Now the whole world.—] Now learning and philosophy are every where extended, and Grecian as well as Roman letters disseminated. None, therefore, could now plead ignorance, and be excusable on that account, as the poor Vascons undoubtedly were.

——The Grecian, and our Athens.] The Grecian Athens was the seat of learning and philosophy, from whence the Romans received them, and so cultivated them, as to make Rome another Athens, as it were.

111. Eloquent Gaul, &c.] See sat. i. l. 44, note; and sat. vii. 147, 8. Some of the Gallic orators came over to Britain, and taught eloquence.

De conducendo loquitur jam rhetore 'Thule. Nobilis ille tamen populus, quem diximus: et par Virtute atque fide, sed major clade Saguntus Tale quid excusat. Mæotide sævior ara Ægyptus: quippe illa nefandi Taurica sacri Inventrix homines (ut jam, quæ carmina tradunt,-.Digna fide credas) tantum immolat : ulterius nil, Aut gravius cultro timet hostia. Quis modo casus Impulit hos? quæ tanta fames, infestaque vallo Arma coëgerunt tam detestabile monstrum Audere? anne aliam, terra Memphitide sicca,

115

120

112. Thule.] To determine exactly, among so many different opinions as are given about the part of the world here meant by Thule, is not very easy: some say it means Iceland, others Schetland. It is certain that it was the farthest northern part known to the Romans. VIRG. Georg. i. I. 30; calls it ultima Thule. Ainsworth calls it an island the most remote in the northern parts, either known to the Romans, or described by the poets.

The idea of such a remote and desolate part of the earth sending for a rhetorician to refine their speech, throws an air of banter on what he has been saying, from l. 107, about Zeno's precepts, &c. as if, in such a case of necessity as that of the Vascons, precepts of learning and philosophy could countervail the calls of nature, sinking under the extremity of hunger.

113. That people whom, &c.] The Vascons.

Were noble. In their persevering and steady resistance, to the very last, in the defence of their besieged city.

113-14. Equal in valour and fidelity, &c. \ Saguntus was a city of Spain beyond the river Ebro, a most faithful ally to the Romans; for when they had holden out against Hannibal, and were almost famished, rather than submit, they chose to burn themselves, their wives, and children, which was the cause of the second Punic war. Virtus here signifies military courage.

The Saguntines equalled the Vascons in the noble defence which they made, and exceeded them in the slaughter of themselves and families, rather than submit to the enemy.

115. Excuses, &c.] Such a thing as eating the flesh of dead men may stand excused, if excited by such distress as the Saguntines were in, especially when compared with the slaughter made upon themselves, and all that were dearest to them.

- Ægypt is more cruel.] i. e. The Tentyrites, a people of Ægypt, whose cruelty we have been relating.

115-16. Maotic altar. An altar near the lake Maotis, sacred to Diana, where they sacrificed strangers-which horrid cruelty continued till the coming of Pylades and Orestes.

116. Tauric inventress.] Diana Taurica, so called from her being worshipped by the people of Taurica, where this altar was; and Thule now speaks of hiring a rhetorician.

Yet that people whom we have spoken of, were noble: and equal

In valour and fidelity, but greater in slaughter, Saguntus,

Excuses something like this. Ægypt is more cruel than the Mæotic Altar: for that Tauric inventress of a wicked 115

Rite (as now you may believe what verses deliver,

As worthy credit) only slays men: nothing beyond,

Or more grievous, does the victim fear, than a knife. But what calamity

Impelled these? what so great hunger, and arms hostile

120

To a rampart, have compelled them, so detestable a monstrous thing To attempt? could they have done other displeasure, the land therefore the poet calls her the inventress of these cruel rites, wherein strangers were sacrificed.

Or Taurica may mean the country itself, which is called the inventress, &c. because Thoas, king of Chersonesus Taurica, was the inventor of this horrid barbarity. He was slain by Orestes, who went thither to fetch away his sister.

117- What verses deliver.] You may, after the history which I have given you of the Tentyrites, believe any thing that the poets have written on the subject of crucky. He alludes to Eurip. Trag.

Iphig. in Taurus.

118. Nothing beyond.] Men are here killed in sacrifice, but nothing is further doue, such as devouring their dead bodies, and the like: therefore the victim has nothing to fear, after having his throat cut.

120. Impelled these.] i. e. These Tentyrites—what has driven them to such excess of barbarity? what calamitous circumstances have happened to force them into such savageness?

- So great hunger.] Can they plead the necessities of famine like the besieged Vascons?

- And arms.] The power of an enemy's arms, to which they must either submit or die, like the Saguntines?

120—1. Hostile to a rampart.] That are levelled at the rampart, or trench, which surrounds the besieged, with a determination to destroy, and are calculated for that purpose.

121. Have compelled them.] Like the poor people above spoken of.

——So detestable a monstrous thing.] As to eat a dead human body, pick the very bones, and lick the blood from off the ground.

122. Other displeasure, &c.] The river Nile overflowed Ægypt at a certain time of the year, and fertilized the country. If this did not happen, the Ægyptians used to do some horrid act of cruelty, thinking thereby to provoke the river to overflow the country. This was taken from the example first set by Busiris, who slew a man in sacrifice; but it was the very man himself who proposed the expedient. We have the story in Ovid, de Art. Am.

H a co ...

Invidiam facerent nolenti surgere Nilo?

Quâ nec terribiles Cimbri, nec Britones unquam,

Sauromatæque truces, aut immanes Agathyrsi,

Hâc sævit rabie imbelle et inutile vulgus,

Parvula fictilibus solitum dare vela phaselis,

Et brevibus pictæ remis incumbere testæ.

Nec pænam sceleri invenies, nec digna parabis

Supplicia his populis, in quorum mente pares sunt

Et similes ira atque fames. Mollissima corda

Humano generi dare se natura fatetur,

Quæ lachrymas dedit; hæc nostri pars optima sensûs.

Plorare ergo jubet casum lugentis amici;

Dicitur Ægyptus caruisse juvantibus arva Imbribus, atque annos sicca fuisse novem. Quum Thrasilus Busirin adit, monstratque piari Hospitis effuso sanguine posse Jovem. Illi Busiris: fies Jovis hostia primus, Inquit, et Ægypto tu dabis hospes aquam.

By this we see that an human sacrifice was offered to placate Jupiter; this was the first intention, in order to obtain an overflowing of the Nile. In after times the Ægyptians lost sight of this, and exercised acts of cruelty, thinking, by this, to irritate the Nile, and to make it overflow the whole country. Solebant occolæ immani quadam crudelitate illum ad inundationem irritare. See Marsall, and Britan. in loc.

Or did the miscreants try this conjuring spell,
In time of drought to make the Nile to swell

TATE.

Having given the opinions of others on this passage, I now must give my own; for doing acts of cruelty, in order to obtain a benefit from the river, which they might suppose to be already angry with them, from its withholding its water, appears to be very strange.

I should think the poet's meaning to be, that these Ægyptians, the Tentyrites, had, without any necessity compelling them to it, without any excuse to extenuate their crime, been guilty of so monstrous a wickedness, that they could not have found out any other so likely to provoke the Nile to withhold its waters in a time of drought, and to bring a famine upon the country, by thus increasing the Nile's unwillingness to help them.

So a late translator—" What worse impiety could they commit, to provoke the Nile to stay within its banks when the country of

" Ægypt is chapt with drought?

And HOLYDAY:

Could they have more made their kind Nilus slow To rise, and their parch'd Memphian land o'erflow?

122-3. Land of Memphis. The city of Memphis (now Grand Cairo) was the grand metropolis of that part of Ægypt, and therefore gave its name to it. The Nile there divided, and intersected the land in various places, so as to resemble the form of a delta; that part of Ægypt was therefore called the Delta.

Of Memphis being dry, to the Nile unwilling to rise?
With which neither the terrible Cimbri, nor the Britons ever,
And the fierce Sauromatæ, or the cruel Agathyrsi,
With this fury the weak and useless vulgar raged,
Accustomed to spread little sails in earthen boats,
And to ply the short oars of a painted earthen vessel.
Nor can you find a penalty for the wickedness, nor prepare Punishments worthy these people, in whose mind equal
And alike are hunger and anger. Most tender hearts
Nature confesses herself to give to human kind,
Who has given tears, this best part of our sense.

[friend;
She commands, therefore, to bewail the misfortune of a mourning

124. Cimbri.] See sat. viii. l. 249, note. The poet calls them terribiles, not only from their hardy valour, but, probably, from the destruction and havock which they had made of several of the Roman armies.

--- Britons.] A hardy warlike people of Germany. Tacit.

125. Fierce Sauromata. See sat. ii. 1. 1, note.

Agathyrsi.] A people of Sarmatia: they were named after Agathyrsus, a son of Hercules.

The poet means to say, that the Tentyrites raged with a fierceness and cruelty, with which these great, mighty, and warlike nations never did.

126. Weak and useless vulgar.] A contemptible and worthless rabble.

127. Accustomed to spread, &c.] They made vessels of burnt clay, in which they sailed upon the Nile a fishing.

128. The short oars &c.] They painted their little earthen boats, by way of ornament, and rowed them with short oars.

The poet mentions these circumstances of their boats, to shew the contemptibleness and vanity of these Ægyptians.

129. Find a penalty, &c.] In short, the baseness and wickedness of the Tentyrites exceeds all power of finding any punishment or torture adequate to their deserts.

130. In whose mind, &c.] They make no distinctions in their mind, between the necessity which has forced others to eat human flesh, and doing this themselves from a mere principle of anget and malice.

132. Nature confesses, &c.] From the evidence of what we feel within ourselves, we may gather, as from the confession of a fact, the truth of it, that nature has furnished us with hearts susceptible of the tenderest feelings.

133. Has given tears.] Those outward symptoms of sorrow and compassion, which are given to no other creature.

This best fiart, &c.] Because by flowing in pity and commiscration, they be peak the most amiable qualities of the mind.

134. She commands, therefore, &c.] To sympathize with our friends in their griefs may be called a dictate of nature, See Rom. xii. 15.

135

Squaloremque rei; pupillum ad jura vocantem Circumscriptorem, cujus manantia fletu Ora puellares faciunt incerta capilli. Naturæ imperio gemimus, cum funus adultæ Virginis occurrit, vel terrà clauditur infans, Et minor igne rogi. Quis enim bonus, aut face dignus 140 Arcana, qualem Cereris vult esse sacerdos, Ulla aliena sibi credat mala? separat hoc nos A grege brutorum, atque ideo venerabile soli Sortiti ingenium, divinorumque capaces, Atque exercendis capiendisque artibus apti, . 145

135. Squalid appearance, &c.] It was customary for persons arranged in a court of judicature to appear in rags and dirtiness, in order to move the compassion of the judges. But as squalor signifies, sometimes, "the sorrowful and mourning estate of those that " are arraigned or accused," this idea of the word may be heremeant at least inclusively. See AINSW. Squalor, No. 3.

· 136. His defrauder.] i. e. His guardian, who was left in trust with his person and estate during his minority, and has cheated and defrauded him. Circumscriptor means a cozener, a cheater, one that circumvents or over-reaches another.

Girl-like hairs, &c. The tenderness, youth, and innocence of the poor orphan-his hair, like that of a girl, long and hanging loose, and dishevelled; his smooth and delicate face, wet with the tears flowing from his eyes, and his appearance altogether, is such, as to render it almost uncertain to the beholders of which sex the sufferer is, who is thus obliged to cite his iniquitous guardian into a court of justice, in order to obtain redress. See sat. x. l. 222, note on Hirrus.

138.—9. An adult virgin, &c.] When we meet the funeral of v beautiful young woman, snatched away by the hand of death in all the bloom of youth, nature bids us mourn-we can't resist its impulse.

This circumstance, here introduced by our poet, reminds one of an exquisitely fine and tender passage on a like event. Hamlet, act v. sc. i. where the Queen says of the deceased Ophelia, who had been prematurely snatched away by death:

> " Sweets, to thee sweet, farewell! Scattering flowers. "I hop'd thou would'st have been my Hamlet's wife;

" And not t' have strew'd thy grave."

See TER. And. act. i. sc. i. 1. 77-109.

139. An infant is shut up, &c.] The law forbad burning the bodies of infants that died before they had lived forty days —or (according to some) before seven months old, when they had teeth. They used to bury them in a place which was called Suggrundarium. See AINSW.

[&]quot; I thought thy bride-bed to have deck'd, sweet maid,

145

And the squalid appearance of a criminal; an orphan calling to the laws

His defrauder, whose girl-like hairs make his Countenance, flowing with weeping, uncertain.

By command of nature we groan, when the funeral of an adult

Virgin occurs, or an infant is shut up in the earth, [thy 140 And less than the fire of the pile. For what good man, or wor-The secret torch, such as the priest of Ceres would have him to be,

Thinks any evils alien from himself? This separates us

From the herd of brutes, and therefore we alone having shared A venerable disposition, and being capable of divine things,

And apt for exercising and understanding arts,

140. Less than the fire, &c.] i. e. Too little to be burnt on a funeral pile. See the last note.

140-1. Worthy the secret torch.] i. e. Worthy to be initiated into, or to be present at, the sacred rites, which were celebrated in honour of the goddess Ceres.

These rites were celebrated by night; the worshippers carried lamps, or lighted torches, in their hands, in memory of Cercs, who, by fire-light, had sought after her daughter Proscrpine, when she was stolen by Pluto out of Sicily. Ceres is fabled to have lighted those fires, which have burned ever since, on the top of mount Ætna.

141. Such as the priest of Geres, &c.] None were admitted to the Eleusinian mysteries (for so the rites of Geres were called, from Eleusis, a town in Attica, built by Triptolemus, who, being instructed by Geres, taught the people to sow corn) but those, who by the priest were pronounced chaste and good, free from any notorious crime.

142. Thinks any evils, &c.] q. d. There is no real good man who can think himself unconcerned in the misfortunes of others, be they what they may: his language will be like this in Terence.

Homo sum, humani nihil a me alienum puto. Heaut. act i. sc. i. l: 25.

- This separates us, &c.] i. e. This distinguishes men from brutes, who know nothing of this.

143. And therefore.] i. e. For this very end and purpose, that we may sympathize with others.

144. A venerable disposition.] A disposition and inclination to partake in others' sorrows, is deserving the highest esteem and reverence, and this has fallen to the lot of mankind alone.

——Capable of divine things. A capacity to apprehend divine things is the property of man alone. This is a very great truth; but, alas! how sad an use the wise men of this world made of this gloriously-distinguished faculty, may be seen—Rom. i. 21, 22, et seq.

145. Apt for exercising, &c.] The invention, understanding, and

VOL. II.

Sensum a cœlesti demissum traximus arce,

Cujus egent prona, et terrem spectantia. Mundi Principio indulsit communis conditor illis Tantum animas; nobis animum quoque, mutuus ut nos Affectus petere auxilium, et præstare juberet, Dispersos trahere in populum, migrare vetusto De nemore, et proavis habitatas linquere sylvas; Ædificare domos, Laribus conjungere uostris Tectum alind, tutos vicino limine somnos Ut collata daret fiducia : protegere armis Lapsum, aut ingenti nutantem vulnere civem ; Communi dare signa tubâ, defendier îsdem Turribus, atque una portarum clave teneri.

exercise of the arts, whether mechanical, or others, are also peculiar to man.

146. We have drawn. Traximus-i. e. we have derived, as we should say.

Sense. Moral sense, reason.

- Sent down. Demissum-let down. Traximus demissum seems to be metaphorical, taken from the idea of a cord, or chain, let down from on high, which a person below takes hold of, and draws down to himself.

146. From the calestial top.] Arx signifies the top, peak, or ridge of any thing, as of a rock, mountain, or hill; also a palace, temple, or tower, often built on high. See sat. xiv. l. 86-8. Hence heaven, or the residence of the gods, is called arx celi.

Nos tua progenies, cœli quibus annuis arcem.

Æn. i. 254.

147. Which.] i. e. Which moral sense.

Prone things, &c.] Beasts, called prona, from their inclining, with the face stooping downward to the earth; whereas man is crect, and looks upward. Here seems to be an imitation of Ovid, Met. lib. i. l. 84-7.

> Pronaque cum spectent animalia cætera terram, Os homini sublime dedit cœlumque tueri Jussit, et erectos ad sidera tollere vultus.

So Sallust. Omnes homines quise se student præstare cæteris animalibus, &c. que natura prona, et ventri obedientia finxit. Bell. Catil. ad init.

148. The common builder, &c.] i. c. Common nature, for Juvenal ascended no higher—the God of nature he knew not. Compare I. 132-4. See Acts xvii. 23-9.

- To them. i. e. To the brute creation.

149. Only souls.] Animas—a principle of mere animal life; which is called the spirit of a beast, Eccl. iii. 21.

To us a mind also.] To us human beings nature has not only given a principle of animal life, but also a rational mind, by which we reflect, and judge, and reason. The anima, or soul, is

Have drawn sense sent down from the coelestial top,

Which prone things, and things looking on the earth, want.

The common builder of the world at the beginning indulged to them Only souls; to us a mind also, that a mutual affection

Might command us to seek, and to afford help:

150

To draw the dispersed into a people, to migrate from the old

Forest, and to leave woods inhabited by our ancestors:

To build houses, to join to our habitations

Another roof, that safe slumbers, by a neighbouring Threshold, a contributed confidence might give: to protect with A fallen citizen, or one staggering with a great wound:

To give signs with a common trumpet, to be defended with the same

Towers, and to be secured by one key of the gates.

that by which we live; the animus, or intellectual mind, is that by which we are wise above the brutes. See sat. vi. l. 530, note.

149. A mutual affection.] The end for which this intellectual mind is given us, so far as it relates to the purposes of society, is, to incline us to bestow, as well as to require, mutual good offices towards each other; and therefore it disposes us to mutual affection.

151. The dispersed, &c.] To collect men, who are naturally dispersed, and bring them together into society.

- To migrate, &c.] To depart from the woods and forests, the ancient abodes of the earliest ages, where men lived in common with the beasts, and to coalesce and unite in civil society. See sat. vi. l. 2-7.

153. To build houses.] For habitation, instead of living in dens and caves, like beasts.

- To join, &c.] To join our houses to one another, for the greater safety and convenience of the whole, against robbers, wild beasts, &c.

155. Threshold, Limine stands here, per syn. for the house itself. - A contributed confidence.] That by thus joining houses (the original of cities and towns) each might receive and impart a confidential notion of safety, in the night time particularly, when men sleep, and, of course, are more exposed to dangers.

To protect with arms, &c.] To protect in war, from the hands of the enemy, a fellow-citizen who had fallen, or was reeling with loss of blood from wounds.

157. To give signs, &c.] When on an expedition in time of war, to obey one common signal, given by the trumpet for battle.

158. Towers.] Turris signifies a tower, or any thing like it; so any fortified place.

Secured by one key, &c.] To be enclosed within the same walls, and locked up in security by the same key of the gates.

The poet, by what he has said, has shewn the great advantages of men above brutes, in having a rational mind, which can direct them

Sed jam serpentum major concordia: parcit

Cognatis maculis similis fera: quando leoni

Fortior eripuit vitam leo? quo nemore unquam

Expiravit aper majoris dentibus apri?

Indica tigris agit rabidâ cum tigride pacem

Perpetuam: sævis inter se convenit ursis.

Ast homini ferrum lethale incude nefandâ

Produxisse parum est; cum rastra et sarcula tantum

Assueti coquere, et marris ac vomere lassi

Nescierint primi gladios excudere fabri.

Aspicimus populos, quorum non sufficit iræ

Occidisse aliquem; sed pectora, brachia, vultum

Crediderint genus esse cibi. Quid diceret ergo,

Vel quo non fugeret, si nunc hæc monstra videret to form societies, so that, by mutual help and assistance, they can secure and protect each other. All this is agreeable to the dictates of their common nature, and thus it ought to be; but such is the corruption and depravity of mankind, that, as the poet proceeds to shew, there is little of this to be found; on the contrary, beasts are not so cruel to their own species as men are.

not so cruel to their own species as men are.

159. Concord of serpents, &c.] These venomous creatures do not hurt their own species; they agree better than men now do with each other.

160. Spares his kindred spots.] The leopard recognises the leopard, and avoids hurting him, whom he sees, by his spots, to be related to the same species with himself.

165. But, &c.] The poet having, in several instances, shewn the harmony and agreement which subsist among the most fierce and savage beasts, now proceeds to apply this to his main argument in this place, which is to prove, that the concord between these creatures is greater than is to be found among the human race towards each other; and indeed, that man towards man is now so savage, as to fabricate weapons for their mutual destruction, and this without any remorse or concern.

166. To have produced, &c.] Lit. to have lengthened out deadly iron, &c.—i. e. by drawing it out, with hammering it ou the anvil, into the length of a sword, a deadly weapon, and most fatal: the poet therefore calls the anvil on which it is made impious, as being instrumental to the forming of this mischievous weapon.

—— Is little.] Is to be looked upon as a trifle, in comparison of what mankind are now capable of. See 1. 161—71.

- Whereas.] Cum-although, albeit.

Being accustomed, &c.] The first smiths set up their trade only to forge instruments of husbandry, and made nothing else. Coquere signifies, here, to heat in the fire. Alnsw.

167. Tired with mattocks, &c.] They wearied themselves daily in making hoes or mattocks, or ploughshares, for tillage.

But now the concord of serpents is greater: a similar Beast spares his kindred spots. When, from a lion,

Did a stronger lion take away life? in what forest ever,

Did a boar expire by the teeth of a larger boar?

The Indian tyger observes a perpetual peace with a fierce

Tyger: there is agreement with savage bears among themselves.

But for man the deadly sword from the impious anvil

165

To have produced is little; whereas, being accustomed only to heat

Rakes and spades, and tired with mattocks and the ploughshare,

The first smiths knew not how to beat out swords.

We see people, to whose anger it does not suffice

To have killed any one, but the breasts, the arms, the face,

170

They believed to be a kind of food. What therefore would he have said,

Or whither would he not have fled, if now Pythagoras could have seen 168. Knew not how, &c.] So far from hammering iron into swords, they did not even know how to set about it.

169. We see people, &c.] Meaning the savage Tentyrites before mentioned, who ate human flesh, and looked upon it as a species of ordinary food.

172. Pythagoras.] The famous philosopher, who left his country Samos, then under the tyrant Polycrates, and travelled over India, through Ægypt, in search of knowledge. He forbad the eating of animals on account of the transmigration of souls; he would not allow himself to eat all sorts of vegetables, but abstained from beans, which he is supposed to have learnt from the Ægyptian priests, when he was in that country, who abstained from beans, and thought it unlawful to sow or to look upon them. Herodot. Euterpe.

What, says the poet, would Pythagoras have said, if he had seen these Ægyptians, these Tentyrites, tearing and devouring human flesh? to what part of the earth would not he have flown, to have avoided such a sight? who, so far from holding it lawful to eat human flesh, would not eat the flesh of any animal any more than he would have eaten the flesh of a man, nor would he indulge his appetite with every kind of vegetable.

The reason of this strange piece of superstition, of abstinence from beans, is not known; many causes have been assigned for it, which are full as absurd as the thing itself. The reader may find many of these collected in Holyday, note 14, on this Satire. See also Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. i. p. 53.

According to the story of his life, written by Iamblicus, we may suppose that neither Pythagoras, nor any of his followers, would ever reveal the cause of abstinence from beans.—It seems that Dionysius the tyrant, the younger, desiring to know the secret, caused two Pythagoreans to be brought before him, a man and his wife, Pythagoras? cunctis animalibus abstinuit qui Tanquam homine, et ventri indulsit non omne legumen.

who being asked, "why the Pythagoreans would not eat beans?"
—"I will sooner die (said the man) than reveal it."—This, though threatened with tortures, he persisted in, and was, with indignation, sent away. The wife was then called upon, and being asked the

The second secon

in the agent is easily a second the party of Allegan and the second of the

 These monstrous things? who abstain'd from all animals, as from A man, and did not indulge every kind of pulse to his belly.

same question, and threatened also with tortures, she, rather than reveal it, bit out her tongue, and spit it in the tyrant's face. Of Pythagoras, see Ovid, Met. lib. xv. l. 60, et seq.

END OF THE FIFTEENTH SATIRE.

The second second

SATIRA XVI.

ARGUMENT.

This Satire is supposed to have been written by Juvenal while he commanded in Egypt, (see sat. 20. l. 45, note 2.); he sets forth, ironically, the 'advantages and privileges of the soldiery, and how happy they are beyond others whom he mentions.

Many have thought that this Satire was not written by Juvenal; but I think that the weight of evidence seems against that opi-

QUIS numerare queat felicis præmia, Galle,
Militiæ? nam si subcautur prospera castra,
Me pavidum excipiat tyronem porta secundo
Sidere: plus etenim fati valet hora benigni,
Quam si nos Veneris commendet epistola Marti,
Et Samia genitrix quæ delectatur arena.
Commoda tractemus primum communia, quorum

Line 1. Gallus.] Who this was does not appear; some friend, doubtless, of Juvenal, to whom he addresses this Satire.

—— Can number, &c.] i. e. Can reckon up the advantages and emoluments arising from a military life?

2. Now since. The subject of the Satire is proposed, l. 1, though not entered upon till 1. 7. The intermediate lines, beginning at Nam si, &c. î. 2, to the end of 1. 6, are digressional, and humourously introduce the poet, now eighty years old, and forced into the service as a punishment, wishing to enter into the army with a lucky planet, as a soldier of fortune: the cheerfulness with which he seems to bear his misfortune, must have afforded no small disappointment to his enemies.—I have rendered the Nam si, as marking the transition to the poet's wish for himself. See Ainsw. Nam, No. 5, 6; and Si, No. 2.

——Prosperous camps, &c.] Where people make their fortunes.
3. I.et the door.] Let my first entrance be attended with the good omen of some favourable star. It was a great notion among the Romans, that their good or ill fortune depended on the situation of the stars, at certain times, and on certain occasions. Sat. vii. 1. 194, note.

—— A fearful beginner.] Tyro signifies a fresh-water soldier, a young beginner, a novice; these are usually fearful at first, being unused to the fatigues and hazards of war.

SATIRE XVI.

ARGUMENT.

nion, and that there are many passages so exactly in the style of Juvenal, as to afford the strongest internal evidence that it was written by him. It may be granted not to be a finished piece, like the rest; but if we only regard it as a draught or design of a larger work, it is a valuable hint on the oppression and inconveniences of a military government.

WHO, O Gallus, can number the advantages of the happy Soldiery? now since prosperous camps may be gone into,
Let the door receive me, a fearful beginner, with a favourable Star: for an hour of kind fate avails more,
Than if an epistle of Venus were to commend us to Mars,
And the mother who delights in the Samian sand.

Let us first treat common advantages; of which that will

It is to be remembered, that Juvenal, who had passed his life in the study of letters, and in writing, was sent away from Rome into Ægypt, under pretence of giving him a military command, but indeed to exile him, for having satirized Paris the player, a minion of Domitian. See sat. vii. l. 92, note. This was in a very advanced stage of our poet's life; therefore, though an old man, he might properly call himself a young soldier, unskilled and fearful.

4. An hour of kind fate, &c.] One lucky hour under the influence of some friendly planet. See Hor. lib. ii. ode xvii. l. 17.

et seq.

5. Epistle of Venus, &c.] Than if Venus, the mistress of the god of war, were to write him a recommendatory letter in my favour, and this to be seconded by another from his mother Juno, here meant by genitrix. The poet, in this place, is again sneering at the mythology of his country. Comp. sat. xiii. 1. 40—7.

at the mythology of his country. Comp. sat. xiii. 1. 40—7.

6. Delights in the Samian sand.] Juno was worshipped at Samos, a sandy island in the Icarian sea, where she was educated and married to Jupiter; she was said to have a great delight in this island.

See Æn. i. l. 19, 20.

7. Let us first treat common advantages. The poet now enters on his subject; and begins, first, with those privileges of the military, which are common to all of them, from the highest to the lowest.

Haud minimum illud erit, ne te pulsare Togatus Andeat: imo etsi pulsetur, dissimulet, nez Audeat excussos Prætori ostendere dentes, 10 Et nigram in facie tumidis livoribus offam, Atque oculos medico nil promittente relictos: Bardiacus Judex datur hæc punire volenti, Calceus et grandes magna ad subsellia suræ, Legibus antiquis castrorum, et more Camilli 15 Servato, miles ne vallum litiget extra, -Et procul a signis. Justissima Centurionum Cognitio est igitur de milite; nec mihi deerit Ultio, si justæ defertur causa querelæ: Tota cohors tamen est inimica, omnesque manipli 20

8. A Gorunsman.] Any common Roman, called togatus from wearing a gown; as a soldier is called armatus, from wearing arms—1. 34, post.

9. May not dare.] No common man dare strike you if you are a soldier.

--- Tho' he. Though he should be ever so beaten by you.

—— Let him dissemble.] Let him conceal it; let him counterfeit, and pretend, that he came by the marks, which the soldier's blows have left, some other way.

10. Nor dare to shew, &c.] Though the soldier has knocked the man's teeth out of his head, yet let not the man dare to complain to the superior officer, or shew his mangled mouth.

-- Pretor.] The prætor militaris was the general, or commander in chief. See AINSW. Prætor.

11. Black Bump, &c.] His face beat black and blue, as we say, and full of lumps and swellings.

12. And eyes left, &c.] His eyes left in such a condition, as to make it impossible for the Surgeon to promise a recovery of them.

13. A Bardiac Judge. Bardiacus, or Bardaicus, a military judge, something like our judge advocate in the army, who had the sole cognizance of all military causes, and of such as arose within the camp: so called from bardi, an ancient people of Gaul, who wore a particular sort of dress, that was adopted by the Romans, and used by the military. This judge, being of the army, wore this dress, and therefore is called Bardiacus, which signifies, of the country of Gaul, or dressed like Gauls. Ainsw.

- Willing to punish, &c.] If a man will venture to complain, he will be referred to the tribunal of the military judge.

14. A shoe, &c.] Calceus signifies any shoe, but probably means here a particular shoe worn by soldiers, which, like those of our rustics was filled with nails at the bottom. See sat. iii. 247, 8, note.

--- Large buskins.] These seem to have been the upper parts of the caligæ, as the lower were the calcei, or shoes; for the caliga, being a sort of harness for the foot and leg, the lower part, or cal-

Hardly be the least, that a gownsman to strike you
May not date. Even the he may be stricken, let him dissemble,
Nor dare to shew his teeth beat out to the pretor,
And a black bump in his face with swelled bluenesses,
And eyes left, the physician promising nothing.
A Bardiac judge is given to one willing to punish these things,
A shoe, and large buskins at the great benches,
The ancient laws of camps, and the custom of Camillus
15
Being observed, that a soldier should not litigate without the trench,
And far from the standards. Most just is therefore the trial
Of centurions concerning a soldier; nor will revenge
Be wanting to me, if a cause of just complaint be brought:
Yet the whole cohort is inimical, and all the companies ceus, covered the foot, the upper part, or sura, reached up to the calf of the leg: they were like our half boots, and in the front had the figure of a lion, or some fierce beast.

14. At the great Benches. The benches on which the superior magistrates sat were called tribunalia, those on which the lower magistrates sat were called subsellia; so that the epithet magna, here, is probably ironical.

The poet means, that the complainant is referred to a military judge, who takes his seat on the bench in his military habit.

15. Laws of Camps.] These complaints were not tried by the civil laws and institutions, but by the old military laws.

— The custom of Camillus.] L. Furius Camillus, during the ten years siege of Veii, a city of Tuscany, famous for the slaughter of the Fabii there, made a law, that no soldier should be impleaded without the camp, or at a distance from the standard, that he might always be on the spot in case of an engagement: so that if a man received an injury, as in the case above put, from a soldier, he could prosecute him no where but before the military judge, and that by the martial law.

17. Most just is therefore, &c. ? The igitur, here, relates to what the poet mentions in the preceding lines, concerning the trial of a soldier, which was ordained to be before a military tribunal; no other had cognizance of the cause where a soldier was a party.—Now as this was ordained by law, and to prevent the military from being absent at a distance from the camp, in case of a sudden attack from an enemy, and, for this reason, must be for the public good and safety, it must be deemed highly proper and just.

18. Nor will revenge, &c.] q. d. Though a centurion be judge, yet were I, supposing myself a common person, who prosecute a soldier on good and reasonable grounds, really to make out my came to be true and just, I shall have sentence in my favour, and as far as the judge is concerned, I shall be avenged of my adversary: but notwithstanding this—

20. The whole cohort.] The whole regiment, as it were, will be against the man who complains against a soldier.

30

Consensu magno officiunt. Curabitis ut sit Vindicta et gravior quam injuria. Dignum erit ergo Declamatoris Mutinensis corde Vagelli, Cum duo crura habeas, offendere tot caligatos, Millia clavorum. Quis tam procul absit ab urbe? 25 Præterea, quis tam Pylades, molem aggeris ultra Ut veniat? lachrymæ siccentur protinus, et se Excusaturos non sollicitemus amicos. Da testem, Judex cum dixerit: audeat ille

Et credam dignum barba, dignumque capillis. 20. All the companies.] Manipli, for manipuli, of which there were ten in a regiment, and answer to our companies of foot .-

Here may be meant all the common soldiers.

Nescio quis, pugnos vidit qui, dicere, vidi;

Manipulus was a small band of soldiers, which, in the days of Romulus, when the Roman army was but in a poor condition, tied an handful of hay or grass to the top of a spear, and carried it by way of ensign. We have adopted this term, and often call a small detachment of soldiers an handful of men.

21. Obstruct.] i. e. The course of justice.

--- With great consent.] With the most hearty and earnest united opposition; so that, if you should have the centurion, who tries the cause, on your side, his sentence can't be carried into execution for fear of a mutiny, the soldiers banding together as one man to oppose it.

- You will take care, &c.] You soldiers (tota cohors-omnesque manipli) will take care, that vengeance, even heavier than the injury complained of, shall await the plaintiff, and that he shall find the remedy worse than the disease. Comp. l. 24, and note.

23. The heart of Vagellius, &c.] Therefore the man who could affront a soldier, or sue him for an injury, and attempt to plead his cause against him, must have the resolution and impudence of that brawling lawyer of Mutina (hod. Modena), who, for a fee, would undertake the most dangerous and desperate causes.

24. Since you have two legs.] (Which are now safe and sound) to be objects of mischief to the soldiers, who will kick your shins with their clouted shoes, and break them.

- Common soldiers. Caligatos-having the caliga on their feet and legs stuck full of nails and spikes, hence called caligati. See sat. iii. 222-18, and notes.

25. Thousands of nails. Each soldier having a great number. - So far from the city.] Who can be so foolish and ignorant, so unacquainted with the ways of the world, and especially with the manners of the soldiery, as to venture upon any quarrel with a soldier?-Quis tam procul absit ab urbe?-q. d. Who can be so ignorant of the world!

The expression seems proverbial: the people in a town, or great city, as Rome was, must be supposed to know mankind better than 30

Obstruct with great consent. You will take care, that there be Vengeance, heavier than the injury. It will, therefore, be worthy The heart of the declaimer Vagellius of Mutina,

Since you have two legs, to offend so many common soldiers,

Thousands of nails. Who can be so far from the city? 25 Besides, who is so much a Pylades, beyond the mole of the rampart

That he would come? let tears immediately be dried up, and let us Not solicit friends about to excuse themselves,

When the judge says-" Give evidence:" let him dare,

(I know not who,) who saw the blows, say-" I saw," And I will believe him worthy the beard, and worthy the locks, rustics, who live in the country, and are usually raw and ignorant;

hence called inurbani, rude, simple, homely.

So the Greeks used the word assess, (from ass, a city, particularly Athens,) to denote a sharp man, well acquainted with the ways of the world; answering, in great measure, to the English word politic, which is from the Latin politicus, and this from Gr. Tolis, a 26. So much a Pylades.] So much like Pylades; alluding to Pylades, the friend of Orestes, who underwent all dangers with him and for him, and even exposed his life for him, when he went to Taurica to expiate his crimes at the altar of Diana Taurica. See Eurip.

Iphigen. in Tauris.

Whom, beside all I have been saying of your own personal dangers from the soldiery, could you find such a friend, as to expose his safety for your sake, and enter within the camp to plead your cause or to take your part?

- Mole of the rampart. The Romans used to surround their encampments with vast heaps or banks of earth, thrown up by way of rampart. The mass of earth which formed this might properly be called moles aggeris. A person could not get into the camp without first passing this.—Who would, says the poet, venture beyond this for your sake?

27. Let tears, &c.] Cease to implore with tears your friends to help you.

28. About to excuse themselves.] Forbear to solicit your friends, who, instead of complying with such a request, will find a thousand excuses for not complying with your solicitations.

29. When the judge says, &c.] But suppose you could prevail on a friend to go with you, to be a witness for you in the cause, who saw you beaten by the soldier, and suppose the judge calls on the cause, and bids you produce your evidence; let any man (I know not who-I name nobody) but let me see the man who dares to swear publicly in court that he saw the blows given-

31. Worthy the beard, &c. I will allow him to be a man of primitive virtue, fidelity, and courage; such as resided in our great anMajorum: citius falsum producere testem Contra paganum possis, quam vera loquentem Contra fortunam armati, contraque pudorem.

Præmia nunc alia, atque alia emolumenta notemus
Sacramentorum. Convallem ruris aviti
Improbus, aut campum mihi si vicinus ademit;
Aut sacrum effodit medio de limite saxum,
Quod mea cum vetulo coluit puls annua libo,
Debitor aut sumptos pergit non reddere nummos.

Vana supervacui diceus chirographa ligni;
Expectandus erit, qui lites inchoet, annus
Totius populi: sed tunc quoque mille ferenda
Tædia, mille moræ; toties subsellia tantum

4.5

cestors, who knew not our modern effeminacy; they neither shaved their beards, nor cut their hair.

Sternuntor; jam facundo ponente lacernas

32. You might sooner produce, &c.] Paganus literally signifies one in, or of, the country, or country village; here it is used in contradistinction to a soldier. It is more easy to bring a false accusation, and support it by false testimony, against such a one, than to bring a true accusation, and to support it by true testimony, against either the property or honour of a soldier—armati.—See ante, 1. 8, note.

36 Of ouths.] When soldiers were inlisted, they took an oath of allegiance and fidelity to the emperor, to their country, and to their general.

Now, says Juvenal, let us consider some farther privileges of taking the oaths as a soldier, and, by this, being enrolled in the army.

A dale. Convallis signifies a vale or valley, enclosed on both sides with hills, commonly the most fruitful part of an estate. See

Ps. lxv. 13.

--- My ancestral estate.] My family-estate, descended to me from my ancestors.—He speaks as a common person.

37. Or a field.] Some other favourite spot.

If a wicked neighbour hath by violence entered and disseized me of these.

38. Hath dug up, &c. If he hath removed my boundary.

The stones which were set up for boundaries were held sacred; they adorned them with chaplets, and every year offered to the god Terminus, on the top of the boundary stones, sacrifices of honey, meal, and oil, made into cakes. This composition was called puls. See Ainsw.—And the cakes, liba. See ib. libum.

— Middle border.] i. e. Which stood on the line between my estate and my neighbour's. It was always reckoned a grievous offence-to remove a land-mark; it was expressly forbidden in the divine law - Deut. xxvii. 17.

39. An old cake.] This institution of a yearly sacrifice to the

Of our ancestors; you might sooner produce a false witness Against a villager, than one speaking what is true Against the fortune of a soldier, and against his reputation.

Now other advantages, and other emoluments, let us note, 35

Of oaths. A dale of my ancestral estate,

Or a field, if a wicked neighbour, has taken away from me; Or hath dug up the sacred stone from the middle border,

Or hath dug up the sacred stone from the middle border,
Which my annual puls hath rever'd with an old cake:
Or a debtor goes on not to render money taken,
Saying the hand-writings of the useless wood are void;
The year of the whole people, which will begin suits,
Will be to be waited for: but then also a thousand fatigues
Are to be borne, a thousand delays: so often the benches are only

Are to be borne, a thousand delays; so often the benches are only Spread. Now eloquent Cæditius laying by his garments, god Terminus, the god of boundaries, was as old as the days of Numa Pompilius, the successor of Romulus.

45

40. A debtor goes on, &c.] A man that has borrowed a sum of money continues to refuse the payment.

41. Saying the hand-writings, &c.] Denying the validity of his bond. See sat. xiii. 137, note.

42. The year, &c.] There were judges, or commissioners, chosento hear certain civil causes among the people, of whom every tribe had three: there being thirty-five tribes in Rome, there were, of course, one hundred and five judges, though named centumviri, from the greater number.

By the year (annus,) here, we are to understand a certain time of the year, when these judges sat to try causes; what we should call term-time. Annus properly signifies a circle, whence annulus, a ring. Being applied to time, it denotes the annual progress of the sun through the twelve signs of the Zodiac, which we call a year; but it may also denote the revolution of any certain time.

—— Of the whole people.] Totius populi—i. e. when the courts were open to the people at large, that they might get their causes heard and decided.

--- Begin suits.] The time of year when the centumviri will open their commission, and begin to try causes, must be waited for

-this may occasion much delay.

43—4. Fatigues—delays.] When the term is begun, and the cause is ready for hearing, there is no end of the delays, and of the uncasiness which these occasion. Tædium signifies irksomeness, weariness.

44. So often the benches, &c.] It so often happens that the seats are prepared for the judges, and they don't attend. Stemuntur may here signify the spreading of the benches for the judges with cushions, or the like. See August Subsellium, No 2.

cushions, or the like. See Arnsw. Subsellium, No 2.

45. Laying by his garments. Lacerna signifies a cloak, a riding coat, and various other species of garments—but here, the robes or dress of the judges. One judge, says the poet, lays by his Cæditio, et Fusco jam micturiente, parati Digredimur, lentâque fori pugnamus arenâ. Ast illis, quos arma tegunt, et balteus ambit, Quod placitum est, illis præstatur tempus agendi, Nec res atteritur longo sufflamine litis.

50

Solis præterea testandi militibus jus
Vivo patre datur: nam quæ sunt parta labore
Militiæ, placuit non esse in corpore censûs, Omne tenet cujus regimen pater. Ergo Coranum
Signorum comitem, castrorumque æra merentem,
Quamvis jam tremulus captat pater. Hunc labor æquus
Provehit, et pulchro reddit sua dona labori.
Ipsius certe ducis hoc referre videtur,
Ut qui fortis erit, sit felicissimus idem;
Ut læti phaleris omnes, et torquibus omnes.

19

60

55

garments; meaning perhaps that he goes out of court to do this, complaining that he can't bear the heat.—Of Cæditius, see sat. xiii. 197, note.

46. Fuscus, &c.] Aurelius Fuscus, noted by Martial as a very drunken fellow.—He is always going out of court to get rid of his liquor.

--- Prepared.] That is, for the hearing.

47. We depart.] By the strange avocations of the judges for different purposes, the day passes without the cause being tried, and the parties are forced to go away as they came.

— The slow sand, &c.] A metaphor, taken from gladiators. See sat. ii. 143, note 2, ad fin.—lenta arena fori.—for arena lenti fori. Hypall.—q. d. We, the litigating parties, carry on our contention in a slow dilatory manner, seeing no end of the vexation and delay of the court.

48. Whom arms cover, &c] q. d. But as for the soldiery, they meet with none of these disappointments—they may bring on their cause when they please.

50. Nor is the affair worn, &c.] Their cause is not delayed from time to time, till the matter grows stale, and wears away by length of procrastination. Or res here may signify estate, goods, fortune; and we may explain the poet to mean, that they are not ruined in their fortunes, as others are, by the expenses of dilatory proceedings, by long and vexatious delays.

- Long impediment.] Sufflamine. Metaph. See sat. viii. 1. 148,

note.

51. A will, Sc.] By the laws of Rome, a son, during the life of his father, could not dispose of his effects by will.—Soldiers were excepted, so that their last wills were valid, though made during the father's life, and though they even excluded the father from any share of their effects which they bequeathed: but this related only to what they got by their military services. This was called peculium castrense.

60

And Fuscus now making water, prepared We depart, and fight in the slow sand of the forum. But to them, whom arms cover, and a belt goes round, What time of trial they please, to them is afforded:

Nor is the affair worn out by a long impediment of the cause.

50 Moreover, a right of making a will is given to soldiers alone, The father living. For what things are gotten by the labour

Of warfare, it was thought good should not be in the body of the

The whole government of which the father possesses. Therefore, An attendant of banners, and earning the money of camps,

His father, tho' trembling, besets. Just labour

Promotes this man, and renders its rewards to his glorious toil.

This certainly seems to be a concern of the general himself,

That he who shall be brave, the same may be most happy, That all should be glad with trappings, and all with collars.

53. Was thought good, &c.] Placuit—it pleased the legislature to ordain, that what was gotten by the toils of war, should not be looked on as a part of, or incorporated with, their private fortune, over the whole of which the father had a power, so that they could not dispose of it by will in his life-time. 54 Coranus.] Some valiant soldier, who had made a large fortune in the wars.

55. An attendant of banners.] Who had followed and fought under the Roman banners.

-- Earning the money of camps.] Receiving his pay, and sharing the booty when enemies were defeated and plundered.

56. His father, tho' trembling. An old man trembling with age, and not long for this world.

--- Besets. Captat—wheedles him, in hopes of being his heir. See sat. x. 1. 202, and note.

- Just labour, &c.] A diligent and faithful discharge of his duty as a soldier, has advanced this man to affluence and rank.

57. And renders, &c.] And has amply rewarded all the glorious pains which he has taken in the service of his country.

58. This certainly, &c.] q. d. It should certainly be the principal study of a general to promote and reward the brave; and that they who render the greatest services to their country, by their valour, should be most happy. See Ainsw. Refero, No. 5.

Referre ipsius ducis is of difficult construction, but seems equivalent to referre ad ipsum ducem.

For 'tis a noble general's prudent part, To cherish valour and reward desert.

60. Should be glad, &c.] Should rejoice in being distinguished by military honours.

Trappings.] Phalaræ-arum—some ornaments worn by men of arms, who had distinguished themselves.

--- Collars.] Or chains of gold, worn about the necks of those whose valour and services in the army had rendered them worthy of military honours.

VOL. II.

q. d. It should be the peculiar care of the general, that all who have distinguished themselves by their services under him should be made happy, by bearing those military honours about them, which are the rewards of military valour, and which tend to its encouragement.—Quis enim virtutem amplectitur ipsam, præmia si tollas?——See sat. x. l. 141, 2:

Having now finished my task, as far as JUVENAL is concerned, I have to lament, that it has not been in my power to represent this great poet in all the beauty and excellence of his composition; these can only be known to men of letters, who can read and understand him in the original. If the homely dress, in which he must necessarily appear in a literal translation, shall be found to have its use in leading my readers to a correct interpretation of the Latin, I may venture to suppose that I have done all that can be expected from it; taste and genius must do the rest; these alone can assimilate the imagination to that of the poet, so as to enable the reader to enter fully into the propriety, elegance, and beauty of his language; as a real inclination to what is right and commendable, can alone dispose us to embrace that system of virtuous conduct, which is so highly commended, and to shun, with indignation and abhorrence, that system of vice and profligacy, so strongly delineated, and so severely reprobated in the preceding Satires.

END OF THE SIXTEENTH SATIRE.

and the second second second the second of the second of the second of

NEW AND LITERAL

TRANSLATION

OF THE

SATIRES

0.F

AULUS PERSIUS FLACCUS.

BY THE REV. M. MADAN.

Mordaci radere vero.

Sat. i. 1. 107.

in the state of th

VOITALIFAIT

14 6 00

SAPIRES

40

ARTHUR PERIODS OF ACCURA

Maria M. Man e c. M.

1 1 1 1 1 1 1 25 2 15 1 15

11 1 1 1 1 1 2

PREFACE.

AULUS PERSIUS FLACCUS was born at Volaterræ, in Etruria (now Tuscany,) about the twentieth year of the emperor Tiberius, that is to say, about two years after the death of Christ. Flaccus, his father, was a Roman knight, whom he lost when he was but six years of age. His mother, Fulvia Sisennia, afterward married one Fusius, a Roman knight, and within a few years buried him also. Our poet studied, till the age of twelve years, at Volaterræ; he then came to Rome, where he put himself under the instruction of Remmius Palæmon, a grammarían, and Virginius Flaccus a rhetorician; to each of which he paid the highest attention. At sixteen he made a friendship with Annæus Cornutus, (by country an African, by profession a Stoic philosopher,) from whom he got an insight into the Stoic philosophy. By means of Cornutus he became acquainted with Annæus Lucanus, who so admired the writings of Persius, that on hearing him read his verses, he could scarcely refrain from crying out publicly, that "they were absolute poems."

He was a young man of gentle manners, of great modesty, and of remarkable sobriety and frugality: dutiful and affectionate towards his mother, loving and kind to his sisters; a most strenuous friend and defender of virtue—an irreconcileable enemy to vice in all its shapes, as may appear from his Satires, which came from his masterly pen in an early time of life, when dissipation, lewdness, and extravagance were cultivated and followed by so many of his age, and when, instead of making them his associates, he made them the objects of his severest animadversion.

He died of a disorder in his stomach about the thirtieth year of his age, and left behind him a large fortune; the bulk of which he bequeathed to his mother and sisters; leaving an handsome legacy to his friend and instructor Cornutus, together with his study of books: Cornutus only accepted the books, and gave the money, which Persius had left him, to the surviving sisters of Persius.

Some have supposed, that Persius studied obscurity in his Satires, and that to this we owe the difficulty of unravelling his meaning; that he did this, that he might with the greater safety attack and expose the vicious of his day, and particularly the emperor Nero, at whom some of his keenest shafts were aimed: however this may be, I have endeavoured to avail myself of the explanations which the learned have given, in order to facilitate the forming of my own judgment, which, whether coincident with theirs or not, I have freely set down in the following notes, in order that my readers may the more easily form theirs.

As to the comparisons which have been made, between Horace, Persius, and Juvenal, (the former of which is so often imitated by Persius,) I would refer the reader to Mr. Dryden's Dedication to the Earl of Dorset, which is prefixed to the translation of Juvenal and Persius, by himself and others, and where this matter is very fully considered. For my own part, I think it best to allow each his particular merit, and to avoid the invidious and disagreeable task of making comparisons where each is so excellent, and wherein prejudice and fancy too often supersede true taste and sound judgment.

However the comparative merit of Persius may be determined, his positive excellence can hardly escape the readers of his Satires, or incline them to differ from Quintilian, who says of him—Inst. Orator. lib. x. cap. i.

—" Multum et veræ gloriæ, quamvis uno libro Persius meruit."

Martial seems of this opinion, lib. iv. epig. xxviii. l. 7, 8.

- " Sæpius in libro memoratur Persius uno,
- · Quam levis in tota Marsus Amazonide."

On which the Scholiast observes, by way of note—
"Gratior est parvus liber Satirarum Persii, quam ingens
"volumen Marsi, quo bellum Herculis scripsit contra "Amazonas."

Nor were the Satires of Persius in small esteem, even among some of the most learned of the early Christian writers—such as Cassiodore, Lactantius, Eusebius, St. Jerom, and St. Austin. This is observed by Holyday, who concludes his preface to his translation with these remarkable words—" Reader, be courteous to thyself, and let not the example of an heathen con- demn thee, but improve thee."

The distriction of the best of the same of the best of

Martin soung et this epitalica IVIII I 1912 artis. Ti di

- Some to the fortest to place of the first to the first to the second of the believe the color colors to be a second to the seco

AULI

PERSII FLACCI SATIRÆ.

THE

SATIRES

OF

AULUS FLACCUS PERSIUS.

PROLOGUS

AD

SATIRAM I.

ARGUMENT.

"The design of the author was to conceal his name and quality.—
He lived in the dangerous times of Nero, and aims particularly at him in most of his Satires: for which reason, though he was of equestrian dignity, and of a plentiful fortune, he would appear,

Nec in bicipiti somniasse Parnasso Memini; ut repente sic poeta prodirem. Heliconidasque, pallidamque Pirenen Illis remitto, quorum imagines lambunt

5

Line 1. Caballine fountain.] A fountain near Helicon, a hill in Beetia, sacred to the Muses and Apollo, which the horse Pegasus is said to have opened with his hoof: therefore sometimes called Hippocrene, from the Gr. 12705, an horse, and 22111, a fountain.

The poet in derision calls it caballinus, from caballus, which is a name for a sorry horse, a jade, a pack horse, and the like.

The poets feigned, that drinking of this sacred fountain inspired, as it were, poetic fancy, imagination, and abilities.—Thus VIRG. Æn. vii. 641; and Æn. x. 163.

Pandite nunc Helicona, Dez, cantusque movete.

Persius means to ridicule this notion.

2. Have dreamed, &c.] Parnassus is a mountain of Phocis, in Achaia, in which is the Castalian spring, and temple of Apollo. It was a notion, that whosoever ascended this hill, and staid there for any time, immediately became a poet. It hath two tops, Cyrrha and Nisa, or, as others, Helicon and Cytheron, the former sacred to Apollo and the Muses, the latter to Bacchus. Hence our poet says—bicipiti Parnasso.

. He is supposed to allude to the poet Ennius, who is said to have dreamed that he was on mount Parnassus, and that the soul of Homer entered into him.,

PROLOGUE

TO SATIRE I.

ARGUMENT.

in this Prologue, but a beggarly poet, who writes for bread. After this he breaks into the business of the first Satire, which is chiefly to decry the poetry then in fashion, and the impudence of those who were endeavouring to pass their stuff upon the world."

DRYDEN.

HAVE neither moistened my lips with the Caballine fountain, Nor to have dreamed in two-headed Parnassus,
Do I remember, that thus I should suddenly come forth a poet.
Both the Heliconides, and pale Pirene,
I leave to those, whose images the pliant ivy-boughs

3. Suddenly.] i. e. All on a sudden—without anypains or study—by immediate inspiration, as it were.

4. Heliconides.] The Muses, so called from Helicon. See I. 1,

note.

— Pirene.] Pirene was another fountain near Corinth, sacred to the Muses; so called from Pirene, the daughter of Achelous, who is fabled to have wept forth from her eyes the fountain called by her name. The epithet pale, may refer to the complexion of Pirene pale with grief; or, as some think, is to be understood figuratively, to denote the paleness of those poets who studied and laboured hard to make their verses. See sat. i. l. 124, and note.

5. Those, whose images, &c.] The poet feigns himself to be an

5. Those, whose images, &c.] The poet feigns himself to be an untutored rustic, and to write merely from his own rude genius, without those assistances which others have derived from the Muses and the sacred fountains: these, says he, I leave to such great men as have their images set up in the temple of the Muses, and crowned with ivy in token of honour.

Me doctarum hederæ præmia frontium Diis miscent superis.

Hor. ode i. lib. i. l. 29, 30.

5

The pliant ivy.] The ivy bends, and intwines whatever it is planted against, and may be said to follow the form and bent there-

Hederæ sequaces. Ipse semipaganus Ad sacra vatum carmen affero nostrum.

Quis expedivit psittaco suum xaige? Picasque docuit verba nostra conari? Magister artis, ingenique largitor Venter, negatas artifex sequi voces.

10

Quod si dolosi spes refulserit nummi, Corvos poetas, et poetrias picas, Cantare credas Pegaseium melos.

of: hence the epithet sequaces. So, when gathered and made into chaplets, it follows exactly the circular form of the head on which it is placed, easily bending and intwining it. Some think that sequaces here intimates its following distinguished poets as their reward

6 Touch softly.] Lambo properly signifies to lick with the tongue

-hence, to touch gently or softly.

___ I, half a clown.] See above, note on 1. 5.

7. Consecrated repositories, &c.] i. c. The temple of Apollo and the Muses built by Augustus on mount Palatine, where the works of the poets were kept and recited. See Juv. sat. i. l. 1, note.

S. Who has expedited, &c.] Expedivit—lit. hastened.—q. d. Who has made a parrot so ready at speaking the word xaigs. This, like salve, ave, or the like, was a salutation among the ancients at meeting or parting: this they taught their parrots, or magpies, who used to utter them, as ours are frequently taught to speak some similar common word. See MART. lib. xiv. ep. 73—6.

9. Taught maghies, &c.] The magpie, as we daily see, is another bird which is often taught to speak.

11. The belly.] i. e. Hunger, which is the teacher of this, as of many other arts—the giver of genius and capacity—skilful and cunning to follow after the most difficult attaiuments from which it can hope for relief to its cravings.

___ Cunning.] Artifex-icis, adj. See AINSW.

—— Denied words.] This hunger is a great attist in this way, of teaching birds to utter human language, which naturally is denied them.

The birds are, in a manner, starved into this kind of erudition, the masters of them keeping them very sharp, and rewarding them with a bit of food, when they shew a compliance with their endeavours, from time to time. On this principle we have, in our day, seen wonderful things, quite foreign to the nature of the animals, taught to horses, dogs, and even to swine.

The poet means, that as parrots and magpies are starved into learning to speak, which by nature is denied them, so the scribblers, which he here intends to satirize, are driven into writing verses, by their poverty and necessity, without any natural genius or talents whatsoever.

12. If the hope, &c.] These poor poets, who are without all natural genius, and would therefore never think of writing; yet, such

10

Touch softly. I, half a clown,

Bring my verse to the consecrated repositories of the poets.

Who has expedited to a parrot his xaigs? And taught magpies to attempt our words? A master of art, and a liberal bestower of genius,

The belly, cunning to follow denied words.

But if the hope of deceitful money should glitter, Raven-poets, and magpic-poetesses, You may imagine to sing Pegaseian melody.

is their poverty, that if they can once encourage themselves to hope for a little money by writing, they will instantly set about it.

12. Deceitful money.] Money may, on many accounts, deserve the epithet here given it. But here, in particular, it is so called, from its deceiving these scribblers into doing what they are not fit for, and by doing of which they expose themselves to the utmost contempt and decision.

13. Raven-poets, &c.] Once let the gilded bait come is view, you will hear such a recital of poetry, as would make you think that ravens and magpies were turned poets and poetesses, and had been taught to recite their performances.

and grown and tall

the sale of the sa

14. Pegaseian melody.] They would do this with so much effrontery, that instead of the wretched stuff which they produced, you would think they were reciting something really poetical and sublime, as if they had drunk of Hippocrene itself, (see above, note on 1.1.) or had mounted and soared aloft on the winged Pegasus.

The state of the s

SATIRA I.

1777)

ARGUMENT.

This Sxire opens in form of a dialogue between Persius and a friend.—We may suppose Persius to be just seated in his study, and beginning to went his indignation in satire. An acquaintance comes in, and, on hearing the first line, dissuades the poet from an undertaking so dangerous; advising him, if he must write, to accommodate his wein to the taste of the times, and to write like other people.

Persius acknowledges, that this would be the means of gaining applause; but adds, that the approbation of such patrons as this compliance would recommend him to, was a thing not to be desired.

PERSIUS. MONITOR.

P. O Curas hominum! o quantum est in rebus inane!

M. Quis leget hæc? P. Min' tu istud ais? M. Nemo, Hercule. P. Nemo?

M. Vel duo, vel nemo; turpe et miserabile. P. Quare? Ne mihi Polydamas et Troiades Labeonem Prætulerint? nugæ!--Non, si quid turbida Roma

Line 1. O the cares, &c.] Persius is supposed to be reading this line, the first of the Satire which he had composed, when his friend is entering and overhears it. Comp. Eccl. i. 2-14.

5

2. Who will read these? Says his friend to him—i. e. Who, as the present taste at Rome is, will trouble themselves to read a work which begins with such serious reflections? Your very first line will disgust them—they like nothing but trifles.

-- Do you say that, &c.] Do you say that to me and my writings?

--- Nobody. J Yes I do, and aver that you will not have a single reader; nay, I will swear it by Hercules--an usual oath among the Romans.

--- Nobody?] Says Persius-Do you literally mean what you say?

3. Perhaps two, &c.] It may be, replies the friend, that here and there, a few readers may be found; but I rather think that even this will not be the case: I grant this to be very hard, after the pains which you have bestowed, and very shameful.

--- Wherefore?] Wherefore do you call it a miserable, or a

SATIRE L

ARGUMENT.

After this, he exposes the wretched taste which then prevailed in Rome, both in verse and prose, and shows what sad stuff the nobles wrote themselves, and encouraged in others. He laments that he dares not speak out, as Lucilius and Horace did—but it is no very difficult matter to perceive that he frequently aims at the emperor Nero.

He concludes, with a contempt of all blockheads, and says, that the only readers, whose applause he courts, must be men of virtue and sense.

PERSIUS. MONITOR.

P. O The cares of men! O how much vanity is there in things!—

M. Who will read these? P. Do you say that to me? M. Nobody, truly. P. Nobody?

M. Perhaps two, perhaps nobody; it is a shameful and lamentable thing. P. Wherefore?

Lest Polydamus and the Trojads should prefer Labeo

To me !- trifles !- do not, if turbid Rome should disparage shameful thing, not to have my writings read? Are you afraid that I should be uneasy, at seeing my performances thrown aside, and those of a vile scribbler preferred?

5

4. Polydamus and the Troiads, &c.] The poet dares not speak out, therefore designs Nero and the Romans, under the feigned name of Polydamas and the Trojans, in allusion to Hector's fearing the reproaches of Polydamas (the son-in-law of Priam, and who is said to have betrayed Troy to the Greeks) and of the Trojan men and women, if he retired within the walls of Troy. See 11. 2. 1. 100-5.

--- Labeo.] A wretched poet, who made a miserable translation of Homer's Iliad. He was a court poet, and a minion of Nero.

5. Trifles.] So far from its being the miserable thing which you imagine, I look on it as ridiculous and trifling, nor do I trouble my head about it.

- If turbid Rome, &c.] Metaph. from waters, which, by being disturbed, are muddy, thick, turbid, as we say.

Elevet, accedas: examenve improbum in ista Castiges trutina: ne te quæsiveris extra.

Nam Romæ quis non—? Ah, si fas diccre! Sed fas Tunc, cum ad canitiem, et nostrum istud vivere triste, Aspexi, et nucibus facimus quæcunque relictis:

Cum sapimus patruos—tunc, tunc ignoscite. M. Nolo.

10

If the people of Rome, says the poet, turbid, i. e. muddy, not clear in their judgment, having their minds vexed and disturbed too with what is written against them, disparage any work, and speak lightly of it, through anger and prejudice, I desire you will not agree with them in what they say, or accede to their opinion. The word elevet is metaphorical, and alludes to scales, where that which is lightest is raised up, and signifies undervaluing, disparaging, or, as we say, making light of any thing.

6. Nor correct, &c.] Examen properly signifies the tongue, needle, or beam of a balance, which always inclines toward the side where the weight preponderates—where this does not act truly, and in due proportion, it shews that the balance is false: how false it is, and, of course, how it may be properly judged of and corrected, may be seen, by weighing the same thing in a true scale, or by a true balance; this will exactly discover the deficiency.

The poet, alluding to this, advises his friend not to attempt correcting one false balance by another: he means, that, if any thing should be amiss, which the people in general find fault with, yet it is not to be weighed or considered according to their opinion, which, like a false balance, is erroneous; much less to be corrected by their standard of judgment.

7. Seek not thyself, &c.] i. e. Judge for yourself, by your own conscience and opinion, not by what other people say. The more exact meaning of this Stoical maxim seems to be—You can judge of yourself better by what passes within you, than by the opinions of others; so, go not out of yourself, in order to draw just and true conclusions concerning yourself. The Stoics maintained, that a wise man should not make other people's opinions, but his own reason, his rule of action.

The conscience is the test of ev'ry mind; Seek not thyself, without thyself, to find.

DRYDEN.

The poet seems to urge this sentiment upon his friend, in order to guard him against such an attention to popular opinion, as might lead him to assent to it, contrary to his own opinion, judgment, and conscience. In this view it answers to what he has before said:

Non, si quid turbida Roma
Elevet, accedas.
L. 5,-6.

8: Who does not—?] i.e. Who does not leave his own judgment and conscience out of the question, and suffer himself to be led away by popular opinion? This is an aposiopesis: but I think the nam refers us to the preceding sentence to make out the sense.

Any thing, agree with it, nor correct a false balance

By that scale: seek not thyself out of thyself.

For at Rome who does not—? Ah, if I might say!—But I may Then, when I have beheld greyness, and that our grave way of life, And whatever we do after our playthings are left; 10 When we have the relish of uncles—then, then forgive.

M. I will not.

This view of it furnishes a farther argument against trusting the opinions of others, since even they don't judge for themselves.

8. Ah! if I might say!] i. e. Alas! if I were but at liberty to speak out plainly.

— But I may, &c.] Persins lived in the reign of Nero, a dangerous period for the writers of satire; he was therefore, as he hints in the preceding line, afraid to speak out: but yet he will not quite refrain; the objects of satire were too many, and too gross, for him to be silent, and therefore he determines to attack them.

9. When I have beheld greyness.] When I have turned my eyes on the grey hairs of old age.

—— Our grave way of life.] Vivere, here, for vita, a Gracism—these often occur in Persius.

When I behold, says the poet, the gravity and austerity with which we appear to live.

10. Whatever we do, &c.] The manner in which people employ themselves, as soon as they have left their playthings, and are become men.

Nuces, lit. nuts—and tali, little square stones, or bones with four sides—were the usual playthings of children. The nuces were little balls of ivory, or round stones. See Francis' Hor. lib. ii. sat. iii. 1. 172.—Hence nucibus relictis, signifies ceasing to be children. See

Hor. lib. ii. sat. iii. 1. 171, 2.

11. Relish of uncles, &c.] Patruus is a father's brother, on whom sometimes the care of children devolved on the loss of their father. The father's brother, thus having the authority of a father, without the tenderness and affection of a father, was apt to be very rigid and severe: this was so much the case, as almost to become proverbial; hence patruus signified a severe, rigid reprover, See Ainsw.—Hence Hor. lib. ii. sat. iii. 1. 87, 8.

- Sive ego prave,

Seu recte hoc volui, ne sis patruus mihi.

Comp. lib. iii. ode xii. l. 3, where we find:

Metuentes patruæ verbera linguæ.

See also the note there, in edit. Delph.

The poet's meaning seems to be as follows:

"When I consider the vanity and folly in which we Romans (he speaks in the first person, as if he meant to include himself, to avoid offence) are employed, from our first becoming men to our old age, and, at the same time, that pretended and assumed gravity and sever-

P. Quid faciam? nam sum petulanti splene cachinno.
M. Scribimus inclusi, numeros ille, hic pede liber,
Grande aliquid—P. Quod pulmo animæ prælargus anhelet.
Scilicet hæc populo, pexusque togâque recenti.

15

rity which we put on, insomuch that we have the relish or savour of morose uncle-guardians in our reproofs of others, and in our carriage towards them, though we are in truth as vain and foolish as those whom we reprove, then, then I think I may be forgiven if I write and publish my Satires, when the times so evidently stand in need of reproof."

11. I will not.] Says the friend—All you say does not convince me that you should publish your Satires.

12. What shall I do?] Says Persius—How can I contain myself? how can I control my natural temper and disposition?

A great laugher.] Cachinno-onis, from cachinnus, a loud laughing, a laughter in derision or scorn. Arnsw.

- A petulant spleen.] The spleen, or milt, was looked upon by the ancients to be the organ of laughter. See Chambers, tit. Spleen. Also the receptacle of the atrabilious, or melancholic humour. Hence when people are low-spirited or melancholy, they are said to be splenetic; so when they are disgusted and out of humour. Thus Swift, in his City Shower:
 - " Saunt'ring in coffee-house is Dulman seen,
 - "Rails on the climate and complains of spleen."

Our poet gives his friend to understand, that he can't take his advice to suppress his Satires; for that his spleen, which is of the petulant kind, and his natural disposition to laugh at the follies of men, make it impossible for him to resist the temptation of publishing.

13. We write shut up. 7 Persius having expressed his turn for satire, from his natural disposition, and having asked his friend what he should do, were he to be silent, and lay by his intention of writing-the friend gives him to understand, that he may indulge his desire for writing, without writing satires-" Do as others do, who " indulge their genius for writing on popular and inoffensive sub-" jects, some in verse, others in prose, shut up in their studies, for " their greater quiet and privacy, where they compose something in " a grand and lofty style."-" Aye,"-says Persius, interrupting him, " so grand, as to require a very large portion of breath to last of through their periods and sentences, which are too bombast and " long-winded to be read by ordinary lungs." The speaker uses the first person plural-scribimus inclusi-we-nous autres (as the French say). By this mode of speech, the pointedness and personality of what is said are much lessened; consequently the prejudice and offence with which a more direct charge on the persons. meant would have been received.

Hor. lib. ii. epist. i. l. 117.

Scribimus indocti, doctique poemata passim-

P. What shall I do? for I am a great laugher with a petulant spleen.

M. We write shut up. One numbers, another prose,

Something grand—P. Which lungs, large of air, may breathe.

Doubtless these to the people, comb'd, and with a new gown, 15

"But ev'ry desperate blockhead dares to write, "Verse is the trade of ev'ry living wight."

FRANCIS.

13. One numbers. i. e. One pens verses.

——Another firese.] Pede liber—a periphrasis for prose-writing, which is free from the shackles of feet and numbers, by which writers in verse are confined.

14. Something grand—] The speaker is going on with his advice, and in his enforcing it from the examples of the writers of his day; but at the words grande aliquid, Persius interrupts him, as though not able to bear such an epithet as grande, when applied to the bombast and fustian which were daily coming forth in order to catch the applause of the vulgar. In this Persius has, no doubt, a stroke at Nero's writings, some samples of which we met with in a subsequent part of this Satire, 1.93—5, and 1.99—102.

——Which lungs, &c.] See note on 1.14. The word anhelet is —Which lungs, &c.] See note on l. 14. The word anhelet is well applied here.—Anhelo signifies to breathe short and with difficulty—to pant, as if out of breath—also to labour in doing a thing—and well denotes the situation of one who has to read aloud the poems and performances in question.

-- Large of air.] Capable of containing a very large portion of air, and greatly inflated.

15. Doubtless these to the people, &c.] Persius, as we shall find, by using the second person singular, i. 17, leges, and collueris, i. 18, is not to be understood as confining what he says to the person with whom he is discoursing, but means covertly to attack and expose all the poetasters at Rome, who shut themselves up to compose turgid and bombast poems and declamations, to recite in public, in order to get the applause of their ignorant and tasteless hearers.

The Monitor had said—scribimus, l. 13: hence the poet addresses him particularly; but, no doubt, means to carry his satire to all the vain scribblers of the time, and especially to those who exposed themselves in the ridiculous manner after described; not without a view to the emperor Nero, who was vain of his poetry, and used to recite his poems in public. See my note on l. 134, ad fin. and comp. Juv. viii. 220—30, and notes there.

I would observe, that in the arrangement of the dialogue, v. 13, 14, I have followed Mr. Brewster, whose ingenious version of Persius is well worthy the reader's attention.

According to the usual arrangement, whereby scribimus indocti, &c. is given to Persius, he receives no answer to his question, quid faciam, l. 12, but abruptly introduces a new subject; whereas, according to the above method, the Monitor very naturally begins an Et natalitiâ tandem cum sardonyche albus, Sede leges celsâ, liquido cum plasmate guttur Mobile collueris, patranti fractus ocello. Hic, neque more probo videas, neque voce serenâ, Ingentes trepidare Titos; cum carmina lumbum Intrant, et tremulo scalpuntur ubi intima versu.

20

Tun,' vetule, auriculis alienis colligis escas? Auriculis! quibus et dicas cute perditus, Ohe.

answer, which introduces the chief subject of this Satire, and the poet as naturally interrupts, at the words grande aliquid, l. 14, in order to pursue it; which he does by describing the vanity and folly of these scribblers, some of whom, at an advanced time of life, when they ought to be wiser, are writing truffing and lascivious poems, and reading them to the people in public; this, with every disgraceful circumstance of dress and manner.

115. Comb'd] Or crisped, curled, and set in an effeminate style.

-A new gown. Made, and put on, on the occasion.

16. White.] Albus.—This can't agree with toga, therefore some refer it to the man himself, as supposing him to look white, or pale, with fear and anxiety, for the success of his poem, and make it equivalent to pallidus.—Hor. epod. vii. l. 15, says—albus pallor; and albus, in one sense of it, signifies pale or wan. Ainsw.

But I do not see why we may not read albus toga recenti, to denote the person's being clad in a new white garment—lit. white with a new gown,

His hair being first kemb'd and smooth, and then bedight In a fair comely garment fresh and white. HOLYDAY.

The Romans wore white garments, as a piece of finery, on certain festival occasions, as on a birth-day, and the like. So. Ovid:

Scilicet expectas solitum tibi moris honorem, Pendeat ex humeris vestis ut alba meis.

——A birth-day sardonyx] This species of precious stone, set in a ring, and worn on the finger, was reckoned a piece of finery, which the Romans were very ambitious of displaying. See Juv. sat. vii. 1. 142, 3.

By a birth-day sardonyx, the poet probably means a present that had been made to the man, on his birth-day, of this ring, which ho wore on this occasion. It was usual to send presents to a person on his birth-day. See Juv. sat. xi. 1. 84, note.

17. You will read. 7 i e. Rehearse aloud.

——In a high seat.] When authors read their works publicly, they had a sort of desk, or pulpit, raised above the auditory, by which means they could be better seen and heard.

-- Liquid gargle, &c.] Plasma-a gargle, or medicine to prevent or take away hoarseness, and to clear the voice.

18. Moveable throat.] Mobilis—i. e. pliant, tractable, easily contracting or dilating, according to the sounds which are to be formed.

White, and lastly with a birth-day sardonyx,

You will read, in a high seat, when with a liquid gargle you have wash'd Your moveable throat, and effeminate with a lascivious eye:

Here, neither in a modest manner, nor with a serene voice,

You may see the great Titi tremble, when the verses enter the loins.

And when the inwards are scratch'd with the tremulous verse.

Dost thou, O old man, collect food for the ears of others?

For ears, to which even thou, in skin destroy'd, may'st say-

18. A lascivious eye.] Suiting the lewdness of his look to the obscenity of his subject. See Ainsw. Fractus, No. 4, and Patrans, ib.

19. Here. I In such a place, and on such an occasion. The poet having described the reader's dress, preparation, and manner, now describes the effect which he had on his auditory.

--- Neither in a modest manner.] But quite the contrary, betraying very indecent emotions.

— Nor with a serene voice.] Nor giving their applause with a calm decency of expression, but with a confused and broken kind of voice, like people agitated with disorderly passions.

20. The great Titi, &c.] The poet in derision calls the Roman nobles Titi, from Titus Tatius, a king of the Sabines: a peace being made between the Sabines and Romans, at the instance of the Sabine women, he became a partner with Romulus in a joint government for five years. Persius means to exhibit a contrast between what the great Romans were in the days of Titus Tatius, and what they were now—hence calls them, ironically, ingentes Titi, the great descendents of Titus Tatius. See Juv. sat. iii. 1. 60, note.

Tremble.] Are agitated with lust, at hearing the recital of the obscene performance, which enters their very loins, as it were,

and irritates their most inward parts.

21. Scratch'd.] i. e. Titillated, irritated.

—— Tremulous verse.] With the lascivious verses, which are read with an effeminate, soft, and trembling accent, suited to the nature of the subject.

22. Dost thou, O old man, &c.] Persius, in this apostrophe, in, veighs against these lascivious old fellows, who wrote such poems as are before mentioned.

Dost thou, who art old enough to be wiser, put together such obscene and filthy stuff, in order to become food for the ears of your libidinous hearers?

23. For ears, &c.] He repeats the word auriculis, in order to make his reproof the more striking.

To which even thou, &c.] The poet's imitations of Horace, in all his satires, are very evident; in none more than in this line. There can be little doubt that Persius had in his eye that passage of Horace, lib. ii. sat. v. l. 96—8.

25

"Quo didicisse, nisi hoc fermentum, et quæ semel intus
"Innata est, rupto jecore exierit caprificus?"
En pallor, seniumque! O mores, usque adeone Scire tuum nihil est, nisi te scire hoc sciat alter!

" At pulchrum est, digito monstrari, et dicier, Hic est.

Importunus amat laudari? donec ohe jam! Ad cœlum manibus sublatis dixerit, urge, et Crescentem tumidis infla sermonibus utrem.

FRANCIS.

Thus Persius represents the reciter of the obscene verses to be so flattered, as to be ready to burst with the vanity created within him; so that he is forced to stop the fulsome applause and compliments of his hearers, with crying—" Enough! forbear! I can endure no "more!"

Jam satis est! Hor. sat. v. lib. i. l. 12, 13.

Cute perditus has perhaps a reference to the fable of the proud frog, who swelled till she burst. See Hor. sat. iii. lib. ii. 1. 314—19.

24. "Unless this ferment."] The old man answers—To what purpose, then, is all my study and pains to excel in this kind of writing, unless they appear thus, and shew themselves in their effects on myself and hearers? In vain would you mix leaven with the dough of which bread is made, unless it ferments and lightens the mass; so all my science would be vain, if it lay dormant and quiet within me, and did not shew itself visibly to others, by being productive of such compositions which raise such a ferment in the minds of my hearers. Fermentum here is metaphorical.

--- "And what once, &c.] In order to understand this line, we are to observe, that the caprificus was a sort of wild fig-tree, which grew about walls and other buildings; and by shooting its branches into the joints of them, burst a passage through them, and, in time, weakened and destroyed them. See Juv. sat. x. l. 145, note.

The apologist farther illustrates his meaning, by comparing his natural, as well as acquired talents, to the caprificus—these, having once taken root within, will burst forth, through the inmost recesses of the mind, to the observation of all, as the caprificus does through the clefts of rocks, or stone quarries, or stone walls: and, "unless "this were the case, what good would these inbred talents do me?"—The ancients reckoned the liver as the seat of the concupiscible and irascible passions. See Juv. sat. i. l. 45, note. Here Persius uses the word jecore, for the inward mental part, which contained the genius and talents of the poet, and was to be broken through by the energy of their exertions.

"For what purpose to have learnt, unless this ferment, and what "Is within innate, the wild fig-tree, should come forth from the bursten liver?" 25

Lo, paleness and old-age! O manners! is your knowing, then, Altogether nothing, unless another should know that you know it?

"But it is pleasant to be shewn with the finger, and to be said
"—This is he."

26. Lo, fialeness and old age!] These words are by some supposed to be the end of the apologist's speech, as if he had said—See how pale I am with study and application, and that in my old-age, a time of life when others retire from labour – and shall I meet with no reward for all this?

Others suppose the words to be the reply of Persius, and a continuation of his reproof.—" Lo, paleness of countenance and old"age!—and yet thou dost not cease from such vain toils!" See Juv. vii. 96, 7.

—— O manners!] Like that of Tully—O tempora! O mores!
q. d. What are we come to!—what can we say of the manners of the times, when an old fellow can write such obscenity, and can find hearers to approve his repetition of it!

27. Altogether nothing, unless, &c.] Persins here imitates a passage of Lucilius.

Nolo scire mihi cujus sum consciu' solus, Ne damnum faciam. Scire est nescire, nisi id me Scire alius sciret.

What, says Persus, is all your science, then, nothing worth, unless you tell all the world of it? have you no pleasure or satisfaction in what you know, without you exert a principle of vain glory, by cultivating the applause of others? Is this the end of your study and application? Scire tuum—i. e. scientia tua. Græcism. Compistud vivere, l. 9.

28. Shewn with the finger."] Here is an ironical prolepsis—the poet anticipates some of the pleas of these writers for their proceedings.—It is a pleasant thing, perhaps, you may say, to be so famous for one's writings, as to be pointed at as one goes along, by the passers by, and to hear them say,—"That's he'—"that's the fam-"ous poet."

Horace disgraces one of his finest odes, by mentioning, with pleasure, such a piece of vanity--

Quod monstror digito prætereuntium Romanæ fidicen lyræ.

Ode iii. lib. iv. i. 22, 3.

CICERO, Tusc. v. 36. mentions it as an instance of great weakness in Demosthenes, in that he professed himself much pleased with hearing a poor girl, who was carrying water say to another, as he passed by—"There, that's the famous Demosthenes."—"Quid hoc 'levius?" says Tully—"At quantus orator?—Sed apud alios loqui 'videlicet didicerat, non multum ipse secum."

"Ten' cirratorum centum dictata fuisse,

Assensêre viri-Nunc non cinis ille poetæ

"Pro nihilo pendas?"—Ecce, inter pocula, quærunt
Romulidæ saturi, quid dia poemata narrent!
Hic aliquis, cui circum humeros hyacinthina læna est,
(Rancidulum quiddam balbâ de nare locutus,) Phyllidas, Hypsipylas, vatum et plorabile si quid
Eliquat; et tenero supplantat verba palato,

29. The exercises, &c.] Dictata —Precepts or instructions of any kind—particularly, and most frequently, lessons which the master pronounceth to his scholars; school-boys' exercises. Ainsw. The poet continues his banter—

Is it nothing, think you, to have your verses taught to the children of the nobles at school; to have an hundred such boys getting them by heart, and repeating them as their lessons, or writing themes on passages of your works?—The poet, here, has a fling at the emperor Nero, who ordered his poems to be taught in the schools for youth.

- Curl frates.] i. e. The young nobility, so called, from having their hair dressed and curled in a particular manner.

30—31. Satisted Romans, &c.] He calls the Roman nobility, Romulidæ, dim. from Romulus their great progenitor; and he means hereby to insinuate, sarcastically, their declension and defection from the sober and virtuous manners of their ancestors. Comp. Juv. sat. i. l. 100, note.

Here we see them at table, gormandizing, and filled with eating and drinking; then calling for somebody to repeat passages from the writings of poets for their entertainment, or perhaps that they might inquire into the merit of them.

31. Divine picems.] Dia, from Gr. dios, divinus. The science of poetry was reckoned divine; but the poet's use of the epithet, in this place, is ironical, meaning to satirize those productions which these Romulidæ saturi were so pleased with.—Quid narrent—i.e. what they may contain and set forth.

32. Here.] i. e. Upon this occasion.

—— Some one, &c.] Some noble and delicate person, dressed in a violet coloured garment, which was a sign of effeminacy, and greatly in fashion among such of the Roman nobility who were the beaux of the time.

33. Something rankish, &c.] i. e. Repeated something of the obscene or filthy kind, though with a bad voice, uttered through his nose, by way of preface to what follows.

34. Phyllises.] Phyllis, the daughter of Lycurgus, who feil in love with Demophoon, the son of Theseus, on his return from Troy, and entertained him at bed and board. He, after some time, going from her, promised to return again; but not performing his promise, she hanged herself upon an almond-tree.

-- Hypsipyle.] Hypsipyle was the daughter of Thoas, and " For thee to have been the exercises of an hundred curlpates,

"Dost thou esteem as nothing?" Lo, among their cups, the satiated

Romans inquire, what divine poems may relate.

Here, some one, who has round his shoulders a hyacinthine cloak, (Having spoken something rankish from a snuffling nostril,)

If he hath gently sung Phyllises, Hypsipylæ, and some lamentable

Of the poets, and supplants words with a tender palate, The men have assented: now are not the ashes of that poet 35 queen of Lemnos, who, when all the women in the island slew their male kindred, preserved her father, for which pious deed she was banished. She entertained Jason in his way to Colchos, and had twins by him,

The poet mentions the names of these women in the plural number; by which we may understand, that he means any women of such sort of character, who have suffered by their amours in some disastrous way or other, and have been made subjects of verse. Eliquo signifies to melt down, or make liquid. Hence, to sing, or speak softly and effeninately. Ainsw.

34. Some lamentable matter, &c.] Some mournful love-tale, either invented or related by the poets.

35. Supplants words, &c.] He does not utter the words in a plain, manly manner, but minces and trips them up, as it were, in their way through his palate, to make them sound the more apposite to the tender subject.

A metaphor, from wrestlers, who, when they trip up their antago-nists, are said—supplantare.

His dainty palate tripping forth his words.

His dainty palate tripping forth his words.

36. The men have assented.] The poet uses the word viri, here, as a mark of censure—that those who were called men, should be delighted with such verses, so repeated.

They all assented to the approbation given by some of the company.

Ashes of that poet, &c.] Cinis ille poeta—i. e. cinis illius poetæ. Hypallage.—It was the custom to burn the bodies of the dead, and to gather up their ashes, and put them into urns, in order to preserve them.

To be sure, the very ashes of a poet, thus approved by a set of drunken people, must be happy! Iron.

37. Lighter hillock.] Cippus is a grave-stone, or monument; also a little hill of earth, such as are raised over graves.

This line alludes to the usual superstitious wish which the Romans expressed for a deceased friend—Sit tibi terra levis—may the earth be light upon thee!—The cippus marked the grave.

Felix? nunc levior cippus non imprimit ossa? Laudant convivæ-Nunc non e manibus illis. Nunc non e tumulo, fortunatâque favillâ, 40 Nascentur violæ? Rides, ait, et nimis uneis Naribus indulges: an erit qui velle recuset Os populi meruisse? et cedro digna locutus, Linguere nec scombros metuentia carmina, nec thus? Quisque es, ô modo quem ex adverso dicere feci, Non ego, cum scribo, si forte quid aptius exit, 45 (Quando hæc rara avis est,) si quid tamen aptius exit, 38. The guests praise.] Now they all break forth into the highest commendation.

- Manes. Signifies the spirit, or ghost, of one departed-sometimes what we call the remains, or dead body.

Laudari metuam: neque enim mihi cornea fibra est,

Sepulchra diruta, nudati manes, Liv. and this seems the sense of it here.

39. From the tomb. Tumulus signifies an hillock, or heap of earth; also a tomb, grave, or sepulchre. AINSW.

- For:unate ember.] Favilla (from $\phi \alpha \pu_{\omega}$, to shine) a hot ember; the white ashes wherein the fire is raked up.

Here it means the embers of the funeral pile, some of which were mixed with the bones in the urn.

40. Violets spring up. It was usual among the Greeks and Romans, when they would extol a living person, to speak of flowers springing up under his footsteps; and of the favoured dead, to speak of sweet-smelling flowers growing over their graves. Perhaps this idea was first derived from the custom of strewing flowers in the way of eminent persons as they walked along, and of strewing flowers over the graves of the departed.

It is easy to see that Persius is jeering the person to whom he is speaking, when he mentions the above circumstances of honour and happiness, attending the writers of such verses, as are repeated to, and approved by, a set of drunken libertines at a feast.

Juvenal, on another occasion, has collected all the above ideas, as the gifts of the gods to the good and worthy. Sat, vii. l. 207, 208.

- You laugh says he, &c.] The defender of such writings is not a little hurt with the iromcal sneer of Persius .-- O, says the galled poet, you are laughing all this while; you are too severe upon.
- 41. Hooked nostrils.] Uncis narious indulges-a phrase for indulging scorn and sneering; taken from the wrinkled and distorted shape assumed by the nose on such occasions. Thus Hor. lib. i. sat. vi. l. 5, where he is observing, that "Mæcenas does not, as too " many are apt to do, look with scorn and contempt on people of " obscure birth," expresses himself in this manner :

Happy? now does not a lighter hillock mark his bones?
The guests praise: now will there not from those manes.
Now will there not from the tomb, and the fortunate ember,
Violets spring up?—You laugh, says he, and too much indulge 40
Your hooked nostrils. Will there be, who can refuse to be willing To have deserved the countenance of the people? and having spoken things worthy of cedar,

To leave verses fearing neither little fishes, nor frankincense?

Whoever thou art, O thou, whom I just now made to speak on the adverse part,

I, when I write, if haply something more apt comes forth, (Since this is a rare bird,) yet if something more apt comes forth, Would not fear to be praised; nor indeed are my inwards so horny.

Ut plerique solent, naso suspendis adunco Ignotos.

The ideas of scorn and contempt are often expressed among us by turning up the nose.

41. Will there be, &c.] i. e. Is such a person to be found, who is so lost to all desire of praise, continues the apologist, as to have no concern at all to merit the approbation and countenance of the public?

42. Worthy of cedar, &c.] i.e. Worthy to be preserved. Cedar was looked upon as an incorruptible wood, which never decayed. From the cedar they extracted a juice, which being put on books, and other things, kept them from moths, worms, and even decay itself.

43. To leave verses, &c.] i. e. In no danger of being used as waste paper, either by fishmongers, to wrap or pack their fish in when they sell it, or by perfumers, for their frankincense or other perfumes. See Hog. lib. ii. epist. i. 1. 266, &c. here imitated by Persius.

44. Whoever thou art, &c.] The poet here, after having severely satirized a desire of false praise, and empty commendation of what really deserves no praise at all, now allows, that praise, where properly bestowed, is not to be despised.

— Made to speak, &c.] i. e. Whom I have been setting up as a supposed adversary, or opponent, in this dispute. Whosoever thou art, that findest what I have been saying applicable to thyself, let me confess to thee, that--

45. I, when I write, &c.] i. e. When I compose verses—if by chance any thing well adapted to the subject, and well expressed, flows from my pen, (since I confess this happens but seldom, and therefore gives me the greater satisfaction,) I should not fear commendation. Comp. Juv. vi. l. 164.

47. Inwards so horny.] Fibra, the inwards or entrails-here, by met, the inward man, the moral sense.

Horny-hard-insensible like horn. See eat. i. 1. 31.

Sed reeti finemque extremumque esse recuso

Euge tuum et Belle. Nam Belle hoe excute totum:

Quid non intus habet? Non hie est Ilias Acci,

Ebria veratro? Non si qua elegidia crudi

Dictarunt proceres? Non quicquid denique lectis

Scribitur in eitreis?—Calidum seis ponere sumen;

Seis comitem horridulum tritâ donare lacernâ;

Et verum, inquis, amo; verum mihi dicite de me.

Qui pote? Vis dicam?—Nugaris, cum tibi, calve, Pingaris aqualiculus propenso sesquipede extet.

O Jane, a tergo quem nulla ciconia pinsit,

q. d. I am not so callous, so insensible, or unfeeling, as not to be pleased, as well as touched, with deserved praise.

48. But to be the end, &c.] But that the eulogies of fools and zots should be the end and aim of writing, I deny; or, indeed, that, merely to gain applause, should be the view and end of even doing right, I cannot allow.

49. Your "Well done! O fine!" Euge!—belle! like our Well done! fine! bravo! which were acclamations of applause. See Juv.

sat. vii. l. 44, note.

- Examine this whole " O fine !"] Sift, canvass well this mark of applause which you are so fond of.

50. What has it not within? &c.] What is there so absurd, that you will not find it applied to as the object of it? in short, what is not contained within it?

——The Iliad of Accius. J Accius Labeo, who made a wretched franslation of Homer's Iliad. See note above, l. 4. Is not even this contained within the compass of your favourite terms of applause?

51. Drunk with hellebore.] The ancients made use of hellebore, not only when they were disordered in the head, but also when in health, in order to quicken the apprehension. This the poet humourously supposes Accius to have done, but in such a quantity as to stupify his senses.

____ Is there not, if crude nobles, &c.] Are not the flimsy and silly little elegies and sonnets, which our raw and unexperienced nobles write and repeat, all subjects of your favourite Belle? Is not this constantly bestowed upon them?

52. Is there not lastly, &c.] The citron wood was reckoned very valuable and precious; of this the nobles had their beds and couches made, on which they used to lie, or sit, when they wrote. Lastly, says Persius, all the trash which issues forth from the citron couches of the great is contained within the compass of this mark of applause; therefore your making it your end and aim is but very little worth your while: it is so unworthily bestowed, as to be no sort of criterion of excellence and desert.

53. How to place, &e.] The poet still continues to satirize empty applause, by shewing that it may be gained by the lowest and most abject means.

But to be the end and extreme of right I deny

Your "Well done!" and your "O fine!" for examine this whole "O fine."

What has it not within? Is not the Iliad of Accius here, Drunk with hellebore? Is there not, if crude nobles have dictated Any little elegies? Is there not, lastly, whatever is written In citron beds?—You know how to place a hot sow's-udder;
You know to present a shabby client with a worn garment;

And "I love truth (say you); tell me the truth concerning me." 55

How is it possible?—Would you have me say it? you trifle, when,

O bald head,

Your fat paunch stands forth with a hanging-down foot and an half.
O Janus! whom no stork pecks behind your back,

He therefore attacks those who bribe for it. You know how, says he, to place on your table a dainty dish. See Juv. sat. xi. 81, note.

54. You know to present, &c.] You know the effect of giving an old shabby coat to one of your poor dependents. Comp. Hor.

epist. xix. lib. ii. l. 37, 8.

55. "I love truth, &c.] Then, when you have given a good dinner to some, and still meaner presents to others, in order to purchase their applause, you ask them their opinion, desiring them to speak the truth.

56. How is it possible, i. e. That they should speak the truth, when they are afraid of offending you if they did? You have obliged them, and they fear to disoblige you, which, if they spake their real thoughts, they would most probably do.

— Would you have me say it? Says Persius, who am no dependent of yours, or under any obligation to disguise my sentiments.

— You trifle, &c.] I tell you plainly, and without disguise, that you are an old trifler, to pretend to wit or poetry, with that great belly of yours, that hangs down at least a foot and an half below your middle, and bespeaks a genius for gluttony, but for nothing clse. Perhaps the poet hints at the Greek proverb.

Παχειμε γαςης λεπτον 8 τικτει νουν.

" A fat belly produceth not a subtle mind."

58. O Janus !] Janus was the first king of Italy, who gave refuge to Saturn, when he fled from his son Jupiter from Crete. From his name the first month of the year is called January. He was pictured with two faces, one before and one behind, as regarding the time past and future.

q. d. Thou art happy, O Janus, inasmuch as, being able to see both before and behind, thou art in no danger of being ignorant of what passeth behind thy back, and, therefore, of enduring the flouts and

Nec manus auriculas imitata est mobilis albas : Nec linguæ, quantum sitiat canis Appula, tantum! 60 Vos, O patricius sanguis, quos vivere fas est Occipiti cœco, posticæ occurrite sannæ! " Quis populi sermo est ?- Quis enim, nisi carmina molli Nunc demum numero fluere, ut per læve severos Effundat junctura ungues? Scit tendere versum, 65 Non secus ac si oculo rubricam dirigat uno. Sive opus in mores, in luxum, in prandia regum, Dicere res grandes nostro dat Musa poetæ.

Ecce, modo, heroas sensus afferre videmus jeers, which our nobles receive behind their backs, from those who flatter them to their faces.

58. Whom no stork pecks, &c.] There were three methods of scoff and ridicule: one was holding out the finger, and crooking it a little to imitate the bill of storks; they held it towards him who was the object of derision, moving it backwards and forwards, like the pecking of the stork. See AINSW.

59. The moveable hand, &c.] Another mode of derision was, putting the thumbs up to the temples, and moving them in such manner as to imitate asses' ears, which, in the inside, are usually white.

60. Nor so much of the tongue, &c.] A third method was to loll out the tongue, like a dog when thirsty.

Apulia was the hottest part of Italy, of course the dogs most thirsty, and most apt to loll out their tongues the farthest.

None of all this could happen to Janus without his seeing it. 61. O patrician blood, &c.] Ye sons of senators, ye nobles of Rome, whose fortune it is to be born without eyes at the back of your heads, and who therefore can't be apprized of what passes behind your backs.

62. Prevent flouts, &c.] By avoiding all occasions of them; by not writing verses, for which your flatterers will commend you to your face, and laugh at you behind your backs.

63. What is the speech, &c.] Persius here seems to go back to the de me, l. 55; all between which, and this l. 63, is to be understood as a parenthesis, very properly introduced in the course of the subject.

Now, says the great man to his flatterer, after having treated him with a good dinner (1. 53.), what does the world say of me and my writings?

--- What forsooth.] i. e. What should they say, what can they say, unless to commend?

64. Now at last, &c.] That after all the pains you have taken, you have at last produced a charming work—the verses flow in soft and gentle numbers.

Across the polish, &c.] Your verses are so highly finished, that they will stand the test of the severest and nicest critics.

Metaph. taken from polishers of marble, who run their nail over

Nor has the moveable hand imitated white ears,

Nor so much of the tougue, as an Apulian bitch when athirst. 60

Ye, O patrician blood, whose condition it is to live with

The hinder part of the head blind, prevent flouts behind your backs! What is the speech of the people?—What forsooth, unless that the verses [joining

Now at last flow with soft measure, so that, across the polish, the May pour forth severe nails. He knows how to extend a verse, 65 Not otherwise than if he should direct the rubric with one eye;

Whether the work is on manners, on luxury, or the dinners of kings, The Muse gives our poet to say great things.

Behold now we see those bring heroic thoughts, the surface, in order to try if there be any unevenness; and if the nail passes freely, without any stop or hindrance whatsoever, even over where there are joinings, then the work is completely finished. (Comp. Hor. de Art. Poet. l. 294.) The surface being perfectly smooth, was said effundere unguem, it passing as smoothly as water poured forth over it.

and alludes to the practise of carpenters and others, who work by line and rule, and who, when they would draw a strait line, shut one eye, the better to confine the visual rays to a single point. So, says the flatterer, this poet of ours draws forth his verses to their proper length, and makes them as exact as if he worked by line and rule.

66. The rubric.] Rubrica, a sort of ruddle, or red chalk, with which carpenters draw their lines on their work.

67. On manners.] Whatever the subject may be—whether he writes comedy, and ridicules the humours of the times.

On luxury.] Or if he write satire, and lash the luxury of the — Or the dinners of kings.] Or writes tragedy, and chooses for his subject the sad feasts of tyrants. Perhaps Persius here alludes to the story of Thyestes, the son of Pelops, and brother of Atreus, with whose wife he had committed adultery; to revenge which, Atreus dressed the child born of her, and served him up to his brother at his own table. On this Seneca wrote a tragedy.

68. The Muse gives our fuet, &c.] In short, be what may the subject, a Muse is ever at hand, to inspire our poet with the most sublime and lofty poetry.

Such is the account which the great man receives of himself from his flatterer, as an answer to his question, l. 63, "What does the " world say of me?"

69. Behold now are see, &c.] Our poet proceeds to satirize other writers of his time, who allured with the hopes of being flattered, attempted the sublime heights of epic writing, though utterly unfit for the undertaking.

--- Heroic thoughts, &c.] Heroas sensus.-- Sensus signifies, not only sense, meaning, understanding, but also thought.

Nugari solitos Græce; nec ponere lucum Artifices; nec rus saturum laudare, ubi corbes, Et focus, et porci, et fumosa Palilia fæno: Unde Remus, sulcoque terens dentalia, Quinti, Quem trepida ante boves dictatorem induit uxor; Et tua aratra domum lictor tulit.—Euge, poeta!

Est nunc, Briszi quem venosus liber Accî, Sunt quos Pacuviusque, et verrucosa moretur Antiopa, "zerumnis cor luctificabile fulta." 7,5 Heroas, from herous-a-um, heroic, stands here for heroos, mase.

i. c. heroicos. Heroi sensus is to be understood of sublime matters for poetry, such as heroic or epic subjects.

Now-a-days, saith Persius, we see certain writers attempting and bringing out heroic poems, who used to be writing trifles in Greek, such as little epigrams, or the like. Some copies, instead of videmus, read docemus, as if the poet attacked schoolmasters, and other instructors of children, for teaching boys to write in heroics, at a time when they are not fit for it: but as it is not the purpose of these papers to enter into controversy with editors and commentators, I take videmus, as it stands in the Delphin edition, Farnaby, and Marshall.

70, Nor to describe a grove, &c.] They are so unskilled, and such bad artists even in the lighter style of composition, that they know not how to describe, as they ought, the most true and common subjects, such as a grove, fields, &c. Pono-ere, literally signifies to put or place: but it also signifies to paint, draw, or portray, and so to describe. See Hor, lib. iv. ode viii. 1. 8.

Hic saxo, liquidis ille coloribus Soleres nunc hominem ponere, nunc deum.

71. Nor to praise a fertile country.] So as to set forth its beauties.

— Where are baskets, &c.] Instead of describing the great and leading features of a fine plentiful country, they dwell upon the most trivial circumstances:

Recounts its chimnies, panniers, hogs, and hay.

Brewster.

72. Feasts of Pales, &c.] Pales was the goddess of shepherds, who kept feasts in honour of her, in order to procure the safe parturition of their cattle. The reason of the epithet fumosa is, that during the feast of Pales the rustics lighted fires with hay, straw, or stubble, over which they leaped, by way of purifying themselves. These feasts of Pales were sure to be introduced by these jejune poets.

73. From whence Remus.] Another circumstance which they introduce, is a description of the birth-place of Remus and Romulus.

—— Thou, O Quintius, &c.] Cincinnatus, who was called from the plough to be made dictator of Rome—he too is introduced on the occasion.

Who used to trifle in Greek, nor to describe a grove 70 Skilful; nor to praise a fertile country, where are baskets, And a fire-hearth, and swine, and the feasts of Pales smoky with

From whence Remus, and thou, O Quintius, wearing coulters in a furrow.

Whom thy trembling wife clothed dictator before the oxen, And thy ploughs the lictor carried home. Well done, O poet! There is now, whom the veiny book of Brisæan Accius; There are those whom both Pacuvius, and rugged Antiopa Might detain, having propp'd her mournful heart with sorrows.

74. Thy trembling wife, &c.] They tell us, how his wife Racilia was frightened at the sight of the messengers from Rome, and how she helped him on with his dictator's robe, as he stood by the oxen which were in the plough-and how one of the Roman officers, who had attended the embassy to call him to the dictatorship, carried his plough home upon his shoulders.

75. Well done, O poet !] Iron. Finely done, to be sure, to introduce such weighty matters as these into thy poem! thou art in a fair way to gain the highest applause!

Persius, in this passage, glances at some poetaster of his time, who, in a poem on the pleasures of a country life, had been very particular and tedious upon the circumstances here recited. See Casaubon.

76. There is now, &c.] The poet now proceeds to censure those who affected antiquated and obsolete words and phrases, and who professed to admire the style of antiquated authors.

- The veiny book.] Venosus-metaph. from old men, whose veins stand out and look turgid, owing to the shrinking of the flesh, through old age. Venosus liber hence signifies a book of some old and antiquated author -- a very old book.

Brisaan Accius.] Brisas was a town in Thrace, where Bacchus was worshipped with all the mad rites used at his feasts; hence he was called Brisæus. Persius gives this name to Accius, on account of the wild and strange bombast which was in his writings.

77. Pacupius.] An ancient tragic poet of Brundusium, who wrote the tragedy of Antiopa, the wife of Lycus, king of Thebes, who was repudiated by her husband, on account of her intrigue with Jupiter. The poet says, verrucosa Antiopa, to express the roughness and ruggedness of the style in which this tragedy was written.-Verrucosus, full of warts, tumps, or hillocks-so uneven, rugged.

78. Might detain.] Moretur-i. e. might detain their attention.

Having propp'd, &c.] This strange fustian expression is probably to be found in the tragedy. The poet appears to cite it as a sample of the style in which the play is written.

There are those says Persius, who, now-a-days can spend their time in reading these authors.

Hos pueris monitus, patres infundere lippos Cum videas, quærisne unde hæc sartago loquendi 80 Venerit in linguas? unde istud dedecus, in quo Trossulus exultat tibi per subsellia lævis? Nilne pudet, capiti non posse pericula cano Pellere, quin tepidum hoc optes audire. Decenter? Fur es, ait Pedio: Pedius quid? crimina rasis 85 Librat in antithetis: doctas posuisse figuras Laudatur: bellum hoc-hoc bellum? An, Romule, ceves?

79. Blear-ey'd fathers, &c.] In old men the eyes are apt to be weak, moist, and to distil corrosive matter. When you see such advising their children to study the old barbarous Latin poets, and to be fond of obsolete words-

80. Do you seek, &c.] Are you at a loss to know whence this jargon, of obsolete and modern words, is heard in our common speech?

Sartago literally signifies a frying-pan; and the poet, perhaps, calls the mixture or jargon of old words and new, sartago loquendi, in allusion to the mixture of ingredients, of which they made their fried cakes, as bran, fat, honey, seeds, cheese, and the like.

Some think that he alludes to the crackling, bouncing, and hissing noise of the frying-pan, with these ingredients in it, over the fire; this seems to relate to the manner of utterance, more than to what was uttered. See AISNW. Sartago, No. 2.

81. Whence that disgrace.] That style of writing, and of speaking, so disgraceful to the purity and smoothness of the Latin lan-

82. Smooth Trossulus, &c.] The Roman knights were called Trossuli, from Trossulus, a city of Tuscany, which they took without the assistance of any infantry. Here the poet joins it with the epithet læyis, soft, effeminate; therefore Trossulus, here, appears to signify a beau, a coxcomb, a petit-maitre. See Ainsw. Trossulus; and Casaubon in loc.

- Thro' the benches.] Subsellia-the seats at the theatre, or at the public recitals of poetry, and other compositions. These fine gentlemen were so pleased with the introduction of obsolete words and phrases, that they could hardly keep their places; they spread a general applause through all the benches where they sat, and leaped up with ecstacy in their seats, charmed with such a poet.

83. Does it nothing shame you, &c.] Persius now proceeds to censure the vanity of the orators, who paid more regard to the commendations of their auditories, than to the issue of the most important causes, even where life or fame was at stake.

Are you not ashamed, says Persius, ought you not to blush at your vanity and folly, that, if accused of some capital crime, instead of using plain arguments to defend your life from the danger which awaits it, and to make that your end and aim, you are endeavouring so to speak, as to catch the applause of your judges, and of the auditory,

When you see blear-ey'd fathers pour these admonitions into Their children, do you seek whence this bombast manner of speaking 80

Came on their tongues? Whence that disgrace, in which The smooth Trossulus exults to thee thro' the benches?

Does it nothing shame you, not to be able to drive away dangers from Your grey head, but you must wish to hear this lukewarm—Decently?

[85]

Thou art a thief (says one to Pedius)—What Pedius? his crimes He weighs in polished antitheses: to have laid down learned figures He is praised: this is fine!—this is fine? O Romulus, do you wag the tail?

and make it your chief wish to hear them say-" Well, the man speaks

"decently:"-a poor lukewarm expression at best.

85. Pedius.] Pedius Blesus was accused, in the time of Nero, by the Cyrenians, of having robbed and plundered the temple of Æsculapius. He was condemned and put out of the senate.

Hence the poet uses the name of Pedius, here, as denoting any supposed person accused of theft.

"Thou art a thief," says some accuser, laying a robbery to his charge.

- What Pedius?] i. e. What says Pedius, or what doth he,

on such an accusation?

86. He weighs in polished antitheses.] He opposes to his accusation curious figures of speech, affected phrases, sentences, and periods, in order to catch applause, instead of producing weighty, pertinent and plain arguments for his defence. He puts, as it were, his accusation in one scale, and his affected periods in the other, and thus weighs one against the other. Antithesis (from arti, contra, and tidnus, pono) is a rhetorical flourish, when contraries are opposed to each other. Here, by synec. it stands for all the affected flowers of speech.

87. He is praised.] The judges and auditory are highly delighted with the learned figures of speech, which he has laid before them in his oration.

— This is fine!] Say his hearers—finely spoken! finely said!
— This is fine?] Answers Persius, with indignation at the absurdity of such ill-timed applause, of such affected and ill-timed flourishes.

— O Romulus, &c.] Can any Roman shew himself thus degenerate from his great and virtuous ancestor Romulus, as to fawn and flatter on such an occasion, and be like a dog that wags his tail when he would curry favour? Ceveo signifies to wag, or move the tail, as dogs do when they fawn upon one. Hence, metaph, it is used to express fawning and flattery.

Persius uses the word Romule, as Juv. sat. iii. l. 67, uses Quirine.

-See the note there.

Men' moveat quippe, et, cantet si naufragus, assem Protulerim? cantas, cum fractâ te in trabe pictum Ex humero portes? Verum, nec nocte paratum Plorabit, qui me volet incurvasse querelâ.

M. Sed numeris decor est, et junctura addita crudis.

P. Claudere sic versum didicit: Berecynthius Attin.

Et qui cœruleum dirimebat Nerea delphin. Sic costam longo subduximus Apennino.

95

90

88. If a shipwreck'd mariner sings, &c.] If a poor sailor, that had been cast away, should meet me in the street, and ask an alms, at the same time appearing very jolly and merry, would this be the way to move my compassion; to make me pull some money out of my pocket and give it him?

89. Do you sing, &c.] It was the custom for persons that had been shipwrecked, and had escaped with their lives, to have themselves, together with the scene of their misfortune and danger; painted on a board, which they hung by a string from their shoulders upon their breasts, that the passers-by might be moved with compassion at the sight, and relieve them with alms. These tables were afterwards hung up in the temples, and dedicated to some god, as Neptune, Juno, &c.—hence they were called votivæ tabulæ. See Hor. lib. i. ode v. ad sin. Juv. sat. xii. l. 27.

The poet here allegorizes the case of Pedius.—Do you sing, when you are carrying your miserable self painted on a board, and represented as suffering the calamity of shipwreck, in order to move compassion.—i. e. Are you studying and making fine flourishing speeches, filled with affected tropes and figures, at a time when you are accused of such a crime as theft, and are standing in the dangerous situation of an arraigned robber? Is this the way to move compassion towards you?

90. A true, &c.] There wants ploratum, dolorem, or some ch word, after verum—plorare verum dolorem, like vivere vitam, for instance.

- Not prepared by night.] Not conned, studied, or invented beforehand; over night, as we say.

91. Bend me by his complaint.] i. e. Make me bow or yield to the feelings of commiseration for his sufferings.

The poet means, that the complainant who would move his pity must speak the true and native language of real grief from the heart, not accost him with an artful studied speech, as if he had conned it over beforehand.

Si vis me flere, dolendum est
Primum ipsi tibi,
Hon. de Art Poet. 1. 102, 3.

So Pedius, however he might get the applause of his hearers, by his figurative eloquence and flowery language, when on his trial, could never excite pity for his situation.

92. But there is beauty, &c.] Well, but however the flights which you have been mentioning, says the portastee, and the studied

For if a shipwreck'd mariner sings, could he move me, and a penny Should I bring forth? do you sing, when yourself painted on a broken plank

You carry from your shoulder? A true (misfortune). not prepared by

He shall deplore, who would bend me by his complaint.

M. But there is beauty and composition added to crude numbers. P. Thus hath he learnt to conclude a verse: "Berecynthian Attin,

" And the dolphin which divided cærulean Nereus-

"Thus we removed a rib from the long Apennine." 95 and flowery style, may be suitable in declamation, especially on such occasions, yet surely they have a peculiar beauty in our verses, which would be quite raw, and appear crude and undigested without them.

92. And composition added, &c.] Junctura is literally a coupling, or joining together; hence a composition, or joining words in a particular form, as in verse.

Notum si callida verbum

Reddiderit junctura novum. Hor. de Art. Poet. l. 47, 8.

The poetaster would fain contend for the great improvement made in writing verses by the modern studied composition, and the introduction of figurative writing.

93. Thus hath he learnt to conclude a verse. The didicit here, without a nominative case, is rather abrupt and obscure, but the poet affects to be so; he does not venture to name the person meant, though his quoting some verses of Nero, as instances of the great improvements which had been made in the composition of verse, plainly shews his design, which was to ridicule the emperor, whose affected, jingling, and turgid style, was highly applauded by his

- "Berecynthian Attin." This and the next verse rhyme in the original.

94. " And the dolphin," &c.] Alluding to the story of Arion, who was carried safe to land, when thrown overboard, on the back of a dolphin.

Nereus, a sea god, is here affectedly put for the sea itself.

95. "Thus we removed," &c.] There is a jingle in this verse between the longo in the middle, and Apennino at the end. The writer of these three quoted lines changes Atys or Attis into Attin, to make it rhyme with Delphin.

Atys, or Attis, the subject of this poem, was a handsome youth of Phrygia, beloved by Cybele, who from Berecynthus, a mountain of Asia Minor, where she was worshipped, was called Berecynthia; hence the writer of the poem affects to call Atys Berecynthius.

"Thus we removed a rib," &c.] The end of this verse is spondaic, which Nero much affected in his heroics .- He calls Hannibal's M. Arma virum, nonne hoc spumosum, et cortice pingui ?

P. Ut ramale vetus prægrandi subere coctum.

M. Quidnam igitur tenerum, et laxâ cervice legendum?

P. " Torva Mimalloneis implerunt cornua bombis;

"Et raptum vitulo caput ablatura superbo

" Bassaris; et lyncem Mænas flexura corymbis,

"Evion ingeminat: reparabilis adsonat echo."

Hæc fierent, si testiculi vena ulla paterni

Viveret in nobis? Summâ delumbe salivâ

Hoc natat in labris; et in udo est Mænas et Attin;

105

100 opening a way for his army over the Alps, removing a rib from the Apennine mountains—a strange, affected phrase!

96. "Arms and the man," Sc. Arma virunque—Æn. i. l. 1. Well, replies the poetaster, if you find fault with what you have quoted, I suppose you will find fault with Virgil's arma virunque cano, and perhaps with his whole Æneid, as frothy, turgid, and, like a tree with a thick bark, appearing great, but having little of value within.

97. As an old bough, &c.] Ramale is a dead bough cut from a tree. Persius answers—Yes, Virgil is like an old bough with a thick bark; but then we must understand, such a bough as has been cut from the tree, and whose bark has been dried for many years by the sun, so that all its gross particles are exhaled and gone, and nothing but what is solid remains. Suber signifies the cork-tree, which is remarkable for its thick bark—therefore put here for the bark; syn.—thus cortex, the bark, is sometimes put for the tree, which is remarkably light. Hor. ode ix. lib. iii. 1. 22.

which is remarkably light. Hor. ode ix. lib. iii. 1. 22.

98. What then is tender, &c.] Well, says the opponent to Persius, let us have done with heroics, and tell me what you allow to be good of the tender kind of writing.

— With a loose neck.] With a head reclined, in a languishing, soft, and tender manner. This is humourously put in opposition to the attitudes made use of in reading the bombast and fustian heroics of these poetasters, who stood with the neck stretched as high as they could, and straining their throats, to give force and loudness to their utterance.

99. "They fill'd their fierce horns," &c.] Giving a fierce and war-like sound. Some render torva here writhed, twisted, or crooked, quasi torta.

Persius deriding the querist, quotes four more lines, which are supposed to have been written by Nero, and which exhibit a specimen of one of the most absurd rhapsodies that ever was penned.

——" Mimallonean blasts."] The Mimallones were priestesses of Bacchus; they were so called from Mimas, a mountain of Ionia, sacred to Bacchus.

Bombus signifies a hoarse sound or blast, as of a trumpet or horn.

M. "Arms and the man"-is not this frothy, and with a fat bark? P. As an old bough dried with a very large bark.

M. What then is tender, and to be read with a loose neck?

P. " They fill'd their fierce horns with Mimallonean blasts,

" And Bassaris, about to take away the head snatched from the " proud 100

"Calf, and Mænas, about to guide a lynx with ivy,

"Redoubles Evion: the reparable echo sounds to x."

Would these be made, if any vein of our paternal manliness Lived in us? This feeble stuff, on the topmost spittle, Swims in the lips, and in the wet is Mænas and Attys.

105

100. " Bassaris."] Agave, or any other of the priestesses; called

Bassaris, from Bassarus, a name of Bacchus.

Having given the alarm, Agave and the rest of the Mimallones cut off the head of Pentheus (the son of Agave and Echion), and tore him to pieces, because he would drink no wine, and slighted the feasts of Bacchus. Pentheus is thought to be meant here by the superbo vitulo.

101. " Manas."] These priestesses of Bacchus were also called Mænades (from Gr. μαινεσθαι, insanire). See Juv. sat. vi. l. 316.

"To guide a lynx." These were beasts of the leopard or tyger kind, and represented as drawing the chariot of Bacchus. The word flexura, here, like flectere, VIRG. G. ii. 357, means to guide. -So again, Æn. i. 156. flectit equos-" he guides or manages his "horses." Thus the priestesses of Bacchus might be said flectere, to guide or manage lynxes with bands or rods of ivy. This was sacred to Bacchus, because, returning conquerer from India, he was crowned with ivy.

102. " Redoubles Evion."] Ingemino signifies to redouble-to repeat often. Evios, or Evius, a name of Bacchus, on which the Bacchantes used to call (Evol, Gr.) till they wrought themselves into a fury like madness. See Juv. sat. vii. l. 62, and note.

"The reparable echo," &c.] So called from repeating, and so repairing the sounds, which would otherwise be lost.

103. Would these be made.] i. e. Would such verses as these be made, but more especially would they be commended.

- If any vein, &c.] If there were the least trace of the manly wisdom of our ancestors among us?

104. This feeble stuff. Delumbis-weak, feeble, broken-backed, as it were.

105. Swims in the lips.] The poet, by this phrase, seems to mean, that the flatterers of Nero had these lines always at their tongue's end, (as we say), and were spitting them out, i.e. repeating and quoting them continually.

And in the wet. In udo esse, and in summa saliva natare, seem to imply the same thing; viz, that these poems of Atys and Nec pluteum cædit, nec demorsos sapit ungues.

M. Sed quid opus teneras mordaci radere vero Auriculas? Vide sîs, ne majorum tibi forte
Limina frigescant. Sonat hic de nare canina Litera—P. Per me, equidem, sint omnia protinus alba;
Nil moror. Euge, omnes, omnes bene miræ eritis res.
Hoc juvat; hic, inquis, veto quisquam faxit oletum;
Pinge duos angues: Pueri, sacer est locus, extra Meite: discedo. Secuit Lucilius urbem, 110

Mænas were always in people's mouths, mixed with their spittle, as it were.

106. Nor does he beat his desk, &c.] The penman of such verses as these is at very little pains about them. He knows nothing of those difficulties, which, at times, pains-taking poets are under, so as to make them smite the desk which they write upon, and gnaw their nails to the quick, with vexation.

See Hor. lib. ii. sat. iii. 1. 7, 8.

Culpantur frustra calami, frustraque laborat Iratis natus paries Dîs atque poetis.

And again, lib. i. sat. x. 1. 70, 1,

In versu faciendo
Sæpe caput scaberet, vivos et roderet ungues.

107. Where's the need, &c.] We are to recollect, that this Satire opens with a dialogue between Persius and his friend: that the latter persuades Persius against publishing; that Persius says, he is naturally of a satirical turn of mind, and does not know how to refrain (1 12.) and then launches forth into the severest censure on the writers of his day. His friend perceiving that what he first said against publishing would not have its effect, still farther dissuades him, by hinting at the danger he ran of getting the ill-will of the great.

"Where is the necessity, (says his friend,) supposing all you say "to be true, yet where is the necessity to hurt the ears of those "who have been used to hear nothing but flattery, and therefore "must be very tender and susceptible of the acutest feelings of un"easiness and displeasure, on hearing such bitter and stinging truths

" as you deliver?"

108. See to it.] Vide sîs (i. e. si vis)—take care if you please.

Lest haply the thresholds, &c.] Lest it fall out, that you should so offend some of the great folks, as to meet with a cool reception at their houses.

So Hor, sat. i. lib. ii. l. 60---3

Vitalis metuo, et majorum ne quis amicus Frigore te feriat.

109. Here.] i.e. In these Satires of yours, there is a disagree-able sound, like the snarling of a dog, very unpleasant to the ears of such people.

Nor does he beat his desk, nor taste his gnawn nails.

M. But where's the need to grate tender ears with biting truth? See to it, lest haply the thresholds of the great

Should grow cold to you: here from the nostril sounds the canine letter-

P. For my part, truly, let every thing be henceforward white. 110 I hinder not. O brave! all things, ye shall all be very wonderful. This pleases.—Here, say you, I forbid that any should make a pissing place:

Paint two snakes: boys, the place is sacred: without Make water—I depart.—Lucilius cut the city, 109—10. From the nostril sounds the canine letter.] R is called the dog's letter, because the vibration of the tongue in pronouncing it resembles the snarling of a dog. See Alchymist, act ii. sc. vi.

110. For my part, truly, &c. Well, answers Persius, if this be the case, I'll have nothing to do with them; all they do and say shall be perfectly right, for me, from henceforward. The ancients put black for what was bad, and white for what was good, according to that of Pythagoras:

Το μεν λευκον της Αγαθε Φυσεως, το δε μελαν κακε. White is of the nature of good—black of evil.

111. I hinder not.] I shall say nothing to prevent its being thought so. Or nil moror may be rendered—I don't care about it. Comp. Hor. sat. iv. lib. i. l. 13.

— O brave! &c.] Well done! every thing, good people, that ye say and do shall be admirable. Iron.—This wretched verse is supposed to be written as a banter on the bad poets.

112. This pleases.] Surely this concession pleases you, my friend.

Here say you, I forbid, &c.] Metaph. It was unlawful to do their occasions, or to make water, in any sacred place; and it was customary to paint two snakes on the walls or doors of such places, in order to mark them out to the people. The poet is ironically comparing the persons and writings of the great (glancing, no doubt, at Nero) to such sacred places; and as these were forbidden to be defiled with urine and excrement, so he understands his friend to stay, that neither the persons or writings of the emperor and of the nobles were to be defiled with the abuse and reproofs of satirists. See Juv. sat. i. 131.

113. Paint two snakes.] These were representatives of the deity or genius of the sacred place, and painted there as signals to deter people, children especially, who were most apt to make free with such places, from the forbidden defilement. Mark out, says Persius, these sacred characters to me, that I may avoid defiling them.

Iron.

114. I depart.] Says Persius, I am gone—I shall not tarry a moment on forbidden ground, nor drop my Satires there.

VOL. 11. M M

Te, Lupe, te, Muti; et genuinum fregit in illis.

Omne vafer vitium ridenti Flaccus amico

Tangit; et admissus circum præcordia ludit, Callidus excusso populum suspendere naso.

Men' mutire nefas? Nec clam, nec cum scrobe? M. Nusquam.

P. Hic tamen infodiam : "Vidi, vidi ipse, libelle :

120

"Auriculas asini quis non habet?"—Hoc ego opertum,

Hoc ridere meum, tam nil, nulla tibi vendo Iliade.—Audaci quicunque afflate Cratino, down to us, was almost the father of the Roman satire. He was a very severe writer—hence our poet's saying, secuit urbem, he cut up, slashed as with a sword, the city, i. e. the people of Rome, from the highest to the lowest. So Juv. sat. i. l. 156.

Ense velut stricto quoties Lucilius ardent Infremuit, &c.

Comp. Hor. sat. iv. lib. i. l. 1-12.

Persius seems to bethink himself—He has just said, I depart—
i. e. I shall not meddle with the great people—"But why should I "depart? Lucilius could lash all sorts of people, and why should "not I?"

115. Thee, Lupus, thee, Mutius.] Pub. Rutilius Lupus, the consul, and Titus Mutius Albutius, a very powerful man.

q. d. Lucilius not only satirized the great, but did it by name.

Brake his jaw-tooth, &c. Metaph, from grinding food between the jaw-teeth, to express the severity with which he treated them, grinding them to pieces as it were—brake his very teeth upon them.

116. Sly Horace touches, &c.] Horace, though he spared not vice, even in his friends, yet he was shrewd enough to touch it in such a manner as to please even while he chastised.

117. And admitted, &c.] He insinuated himself into the affections, and seemed in sport, having the happy art of improving, without the least appearance of severity or sneering.

118. Cunning to hang up, &c.] Suspendere-to hang them or hold them up to view, as the subjects of his satires.

Excusso naso, here, stands in opposition to narribus uncis, supr. l. 41.—see note there, and to the naso adunco of Horace; and means the unwrinkled and smooth appearance of the nose when in good-humour—and so, good-humour itself: Quasi—rugis excusso.

119. To mutter, &c. I If others, in their different ways, could openly satirize, may not I have the liberty of even muttering, secretly with myself, or among a few select friends privately?

—Nor with a ditch.] Alluding to the story of Midas's barber, who, when he saw the ass's ears which Apollo had placed on the head of Midas, not daring to tell it to others, he dug a ditch or furrow in the earth, and there vented his wish to speak of it, by whispering what he had seen.

Thee, Lupus, thee, Mutius; and he brake his jaw tooth upon them.

Sly Horace touches every vice, his friend laughing:

[115]

And admitted round the heart, plays

Cunning to hang up the people with an unwrinkled nose.

Is it unlawful for me to mutter? neither secretly, nor with a ditch?

M. No where.

P. Nevertheless I will dig here. "I have seen, I myself have seen "O little book:—

"Who has not the ears of an ass?" I this hidden thing, This laugh of mine, such a nothing, I sell to thee for no Iliad. O thou whosoever art inspired by bold Cratinus, 120. Nevertheless I will dig here, &c.] Though I can't speak out, yet I will use my book as the barber did the ditch; I will secretly commit to it what I have seen. Infodiam relates to the manner of writing with the point of an iron bodkin, which was called a style, on tablets of wood smeared with wax, so that the writer might be said to dig or plough the wax as he made the letters.

"O little book.'] Here, with indignation, the poet relates, as it were, to his book (as the barber did to his ditch) what he had seen; namely, the absurdity and folly of the modern taste for poetry.

in Nero, in the nobles, and in all their flatterers.

121. 'The ears of an ass.'] Alluding still to the story of Midas, who, finding fault with the judgment of the country deities, when they adjudged the prize to Apollo, in his contention with Pan, had asses' ears fixed on him by Apollo.

Who, says the poet, does not judge of poetry as ill as Midas, judged of music? One would think they had all asses' ears given them for their folly. Suer. in Vit. Persii, says, that this line originally stood for Mida rex habet, which Cornutus, his friend and intructor, advised him to change to quis non habet? lest it should be thought to point too plainly at Nero.

___ I this hidden thing.] This secret joke of mine.

122. This laugh of mine.] Hoc ridere, for hunc risum, a Gracism meaning his Satires, in which he derides the objects of them. See l. 9, and note.

—— Such a nothing.] So insignificant and worthless in thine opinion, my friend, (comp. l. 2, 3.) and perhaps in the eyes of others, that they would not think them worth reading, as you told me.

—— I sell to thee, &c.] Nero, as well as Labeo, had written a poem on the destruction of Troy; to these the poet may be supposed to allude, when he says he would not sell his Satires—his nothing, as others esteemed them—for my Iliad: perhaps the word nulla may be understood as extending to Homer himself.

123. Othou whosoever, &c.] Afflate—hast read so much of Cratinus, as to be influenced and inspired with his spirit. Cratinus was a Greek comic poet, who, with a peculiar boldness and energy, satirized the evil manners of his time. The poet is about to describe

Iratum Eupolidem prægrandi cum sene palles, Aspice et hæc. Si forte aliquid decoctius audis,
Inde vaporatâ lector mihi ferveat aure.
Non hic, qui in crepidas Graiorum ludere gestit
Sordidus, et lusco qui possit dicere, Lusce:
Sese aliquem credens, Italo quod honore supinus,
Fregerit heminas Aretî ædilis iniquas.
Nec, qui abaco numeros, et secto in pulvere metas.
Scit risisse vafer; multum gaudere paratus, what sort of readers he chooses for his Satires, and those whom he does not choose.

124. Art pale.] With reading and studying hast contracted that paleness of countenance, which is incident to studious people. Sce Juv. sat. vii. 1. 97; and Pers. sat. v. 1. 62.

Angry Eupolis.] This was another comic poet, who, incensed at the vices of the Athenians, lashed them in the severest manner. He is said to have been thrown into the sea by Alcibiades, for some verses written against him.

--- With the very great old man.] The poet here meant is A-ristophanes, who lived to a very great age. He was of a vehement spirit, had a genius turned to raillery, wit free and elevated, and courage not to fear the person when vice was to be reproved. He wrote thirty-four comedies, whereof eleven only remain.

Hor. lib. i. sat. iv. l. 1, mentions all these three poets together.

Persius gives him the epithet of prægrandi, either on account of his age, for he lived till he was fourscore, or on account of the great eminence of his writings, for he was the prince of the old comedy, as Menander was of the new; but so as we must join, says Ainsworth, Eupolis and Cratinus with the former, Diphilus and Polemon with the latter.

125. These too behold.] Look also on these Satires of mine.

—— If haply any thing more refined, &c.] The poet speaks modestly of his own writings, si forte, (see before, l. 44, 5.) if it should so happen, that thou shouldest meet with any thing more clear, well digested, pure, refined than ordinary. Metaph taken from liquors, which, by being often boiled, lose much of their quantity, but gain more strength and clearness.—It is said of Virgil, that he would make fifty verses in a morning, or more, and in the evening correct and purge them till they were reduced to about ten.

126. Let the reader glow, &c.] If, says Persius, there be any thing in my writings better than ordinary, let the reader, who has formed his taste on the writings of the poets above mentioned, glow with a fervour of delight towards the author. This I take to be the meaning of the line, which literally is-

Let the reader glow towards me with an ear evaporated (i. e. purified from the false taste of the present times) from thence (i. e. from, or by, reading and studying the writings of Cratinus, &c.)—such I wish to be my readers. Vaporo signifies to send out va-

Art pale over angry Eupolis, with the very great old man, These too behold: if haply any thing more refined you hear, 125 Let the reader glow towards me with an ear evaporated from thence. Not he, who delights to sport on the slippers of the Grecians, Sordid, and who can say to the blinkard, thou blinkard: Thinking himself somebody; because lifted up with Italian honour, An ædile he may have broken false measures at Aretium. Nor who, arch, knows to laugh at the the numbers of an accountable. And bounds in divided dust; prepared to rejoice much, pours, to evaporate: thus the metaphor is continued through both the lines.

127. Not he, who delights, &c.] Persius now marks out those who were not to be chosen for his readers.

The first class of men which he objects to, are those who can laugh at the persons and habits of philosophers; this bespeaks a despicable, mean, and sordid mind.

- Slippers of the Grecians.] Crepidas Graiorum, a peculiar sort of slippers, or shoes, worn by philosophers-here put by synec. for the whole dress: but it is most likely, that Persius here means the 'philosophers themselves, and all their wise sayings and institutes; these were originally derived from Greece.

128. Sordid. See note, No. 1, above, at l. 127, ad fin.

- Say to the blinkard, &c. Luscus is he that has lost an eye, a one-eyed man.

Persius means those who can upbraid and deride the natural infirmities or misfortunes of others, by way of wit:

Can mock the blind: and has the wit to cry-(Prodigious wit!)-" Why, friend, you want an eye!"

129. Thinking himself somebody. A person of great consequence.

- Lifted up &c.] Puffed up with self-importance, because bearing an office in some country-district of Italy; and therefore flippant of his abuse, by way of being witty, l. 127, 8.

130. An adile, &c.] An inferior kind of country-magistrate, who had jurisdiction over weights and measures, and had authority to break and destroy those which were false. Juv. sat. x. l. 102.

--- Aretium.] A city of Tuscany, famous for making earthen ware, but, perhaps, put here for any country town.

So heminas, half sextaries, little measures holding about three quarters of a pint, are put for measures in general. Comp. Juv. Sat. x. 101, 2.

131. Nor who, arch, &c.] Another class of people, which Persius would exclude from the number of his readers, are those who laugh at and despise all science whatsoever.

Abacus signifies a bench, slate, or table, used for accounts by arithmeticians, and for figures by mathematicians-here put for arithmetic and mathematics.

132. Bounds in divided dust.] The geometricians made their demonstrations upon dust, or sanded floors, to the end that their lines might easily be changed and struck out again—here geometry is meant.

Si Cynico barbam petulaps Nonaria vellat. His, mane, edictum; post prandia, Callirhoên, do.

133. Petulant Nonaria, &c.] Who think it an high joke, If they see an impudent strumpet meet a grave Cynic in the street, and pull him by the beard; which was the greatest affront that could be offered. Comp. Hor. sat, iii. lib, i. l. 133, 4.

The ninth hour, or our three o'clock in the afternoon, was the time when the harlots first made their appearance, hence they were called Nonariæ. Perhaps our poet may allude, in this line, to the story of Diogenes, (mentioned by Athen lib. xiii.) who was in love with Lais, the famous courtezan, and had his beard plucked by her.

134. In the morning, an edict.] To such people as these I assign employments suitable to their talents and characters. It has been usually thought, that edictum here means the pretor's edict, and that by Callirhoe is meant some harlot of that name; and therefore this line is to be understood, as if Persius meant that these illiterate fellows should attend the forum in the morning, and the brothel in the evening; but the former seems too serious an employ for men such as he is speaking of.

If petulant Nonaria should pluck a Cynic's beard. I give to these, in the morning, an edict; after dinner, Callirhoë, Marcilius, therefore, more reasonably, takes edictum (consonant to the phrases edictum ludorum, edictum muneris gladiatorii, &c.) to signify a programma, a kind of play-bill, which was stuck up, as ours are, in a morning; and Callirhoe to be the title of some wretched play, written on the story of that famous parricide (who slew her father because he would not consent to her marriage) by some of the writers at which this Satire is levelled, and which was announced to be performed in the evening.

q. d. Instead of wishing such to read my Satires, I consign these pretty gentlemen to the study of the play-bills in the morning, and to an attendance on the play in the evening. Thus this Satire concludes, in conformity with the preceding part of it, with lashing bad writers and their admirers.

Marcilius contends, that this line is to be referred to Nero, against whom, as a poet, this Satire is principally, though covertly, levelled—who, by ordering bills to be distributed, called the people together, in order to hear him sing over his poems on Callirhoe.

END OF THE FIRST SATIRE.

SATIRA II.

ARGUMENT.

It being customary among the Romans, for one friend to send a present to another on his birth-day—Persius, on the birth-day of his friend Macrinus, presents him with this Satire, which seems (like Juv. Sat. x.) to be founded on Plato's dialogue on prayer, called The Second Alcibiades.

The Poet takes occasion to expose the folly and impiety of those, who, thinking the gods to be like themselves, imagined that they were to be bribed into compliance with their prayers by sumptuous presents; whereas, in truth, the gods regard not these, but regard only the pure intention of an honest heart.

AD PLOTIUM MACRINUM.

HUNC, Macrine, diem numera meliore lapillo, Qui tibi labentes apponit candidus annos. Funde merum genio: non tu prece poscis emaci, Quæ, nisi seductis, nequeas committere divis: At bona pars procerum tacitâ libabit acerrâ.

5

Line 1. Macrinus.] Who this Macrinus was does not sufficiently appear; he was a learned man, and a friend of Persius, who here salutes him on his birth-day.

— Better stone.] The ancients reckoned happy days with white pebbles, and unhappy days with black ones, and at the end of the year cast up the reckoning, by which they could see how many happy, and how many unhappy days had past.

The poet here bids his friend distinguish his birth-day among the happiest of his days, with a better, a whiter stone than ordinary.

See Juv. sat xii. 1.

2. Which.] i. e. Which day-

— White.] i. e. Happy, good, propitious.

— Adds to thee sliding years. Sets one more complete year to the score, and begins another.

- Sliding years.]

Eheu fugaces, Posthume, Posthume, Labuntur anui. Hor. ode xiv. lib. ii.

Years that glide swiftly, and almost imperceptibly away.

3. Pour out wine to your genius.] The genius was a tutelar god, which they believed to preside at their birth, whom they worshipped every year on their birth-day, by making a libation of wine. They did not slay any beast in sacrifice to their genius on that day, be-

Jouthorn: Indian falilecciamaria, Idumoa & Shirioa -I hider Roman Roeuralord_ Jelin-lived Porth Dru Silla daughts of Paul proachod defore him - (32) restred - Loard Paul in prosones of Ashipa 11- (62). a Pebenind - Cruel Vavaterious - (63) Topains Horas Continued until Rostruction of Servicularion by Thes in $. D. 70 -Tog there - Braa - Agrippa 11 Upon death of Kerod of Pria loid While the Pivil hower comained oux Forman Rollinstar. Witha hied weetword with his hill Harnise thort came & Cosaler to such thether ; whow there please lifor thein -Elig unfe of Linkey ushering laster vil Rio Leghtyine hi of Peter Light of time

L'étrairchies: 3_ Southern - Suchea, Jamaria Vidam First held by Archaland-B.C.3-A The given over & Roman Procure to Partied Pilate most important Contral-Galilee Heraa ford to ad Lout, at a Naharene, by "Late. Mernel was dendento Seit I his letrarchy energed into the Northern - Three , Trachonstis be Bilip . letrarch until I.D. 33 - fr. that time & By it annanced & reflig Herod Agrippa - King by her. To jo con of Calignela of the whole Thuntry Killed Sames Elder Died (44) his Sather died, the Kingdon was Mesod King of Chaleis, was ones the Nous (9. Dp) ocenies another

SATIRE II.

ARGUMENT.

In the course of this Satire, which seems to have given occasion to the Tenth Satire of Juvenal, Persius mentions the impious and hurtful requests which men make, as well as the bad means which they employ to have their wishes fulfilled.

The whole of this Satire is very grave, weighty, and instructive; and, like that of Juvenal, contains sentiments, more like a Christian than an heathen.

Bishop Burnet says, that "this Satire may well pass for one of the best lectures in divinity."

TO PLOTIUS MACRINUS.

THIS day, Macrinus, number with a better stone,
Which, white, adds to thee sliding years.
Pour out wine to your genius. You do not ask with mercenary prayer,
Which you cannot commit unless to remote gods:
But a good part of our nobles will offer with tacit censer.

cause they would not take away life on the day on which they received it. They supposed a genius not only to preside at their birth, but to attend and protect them constantly through their life; therefore, on other days, they sacrificed beasts to their genii.—Hence Hor. lib. iii. ode xvii. l. 14—16

Curabis, et porco bimestri, Cum famulis operum solutis.

The libation of wine on their birth-day was attended also with strewing flowers. The former was an emblem of cheerfulness and festivity: the latter, from their soon fading, of the frailty and shortness of human life.

Hor. epist. i. lib. ii. l. 143, 4.

Tellurem porco, Sylvanum lacte piabant. Floribus et vino genium, memorem brevis ævi.

3. Mercenary prayer.] Emaci, from emo, to buy—i.e. with a prayer, with which, as with a bribe, or reward, you were to purchase what you pray for.

4. Which you cannot commit, &c.] Which you must offer to the gods in secret, and as if the gods were taken aside, that nobody but themselves should hear what you say to them.

Committere, here, has the sense of—to intrust, to impart.

5. A good part.] A great many, a large portion.

Haud cuivis promptum est, murmurque humilesque susurros Tollere de templis, et aperto vivere voto.

· Mens bona, fama, fides;' hæc clare, et ut audiat hospes.

Illa sibi introrsum, et sub linguâ immurmurat, 'O si

· Ebullit patrui præclarum, funus !-et, O si

10

· Sub rastro crepet argenti mihi seria, dextro

. Hercule !- Pupillumve utinam, quem proximus hæres

· Impello, expungam! namque est scabiosus, et acri

6 Bile tumet-Nerio jam tertia ducitur uxor.'

Hæc sancte ut poscas, Tiberino in gurgite mergis Manc caput, bis, terque; et noctem flumine purgas. 15

So Hor. lib. i. sat. i. l. 61. Bona pars hominum; a good many, as we say.

5. Tacit censer. Acerra properly signifies the vessel, or pan, in which the incense is burnt in sacrifice; they said their prayers as the smoke of the incense ascended; but these nobles spake so low, as not to be heard by others, so that the incense seemed silently to ascend, unaccompanied with any words of prayer. This seems to be the meaning of tacita libabit acerra. In short, their petitions were of such a nature, that they cared not to utter them loud enough for other people to hear them; they themselves were ashamed of them.

6. It is not easy, &c.] As times go, people are not very ready to utter their wishes and prayers publicly, and to remove from the temples of the gods those inward murmurs and low whispers in which their impious petitions are delivered.

7. And to live, &c.] i. e. To make it their practice to utter their vows and prayers openly, in the sight and hearing of all.

8. A good mind, reputation, &c.] These things, which are laudable and commendable, and to be desired by virtuous people, these they will ask for with a clear and audible voice, so that any stander-by may hear them perfectly.

9. Those, &c.] i. e. Those things that follow (which are impious and scandalous) and which he does not care should be heard by others, he mutters inwardly.

- Under his tongue. Keeps them within his mouth, fearing to let them pass his lips.

10. 'The pompous funeral.'] One prays for the death of a rich

Bubble up.'] i. e. Appear in all its pomp. Ebullit, for ebullierit—metaph. from water when boiling up, which swells, as it were, and runs over.

11. A pot of silver, &c.] Another prays that he may find a vessel of hidden treasure, as he is raking his field. See Hor. lib. ii. sat. vi. l. 10.

— 'Hercules,' &c.] He was supposed to preside over hidden treasures.

12. Or my ward, &c.] If it were not to be his lot to have his avarice gratified by finding hidden treasure, yet, says this covetous sup-

It is not easy to every one, their murmur, and low whispers To remove from the temples, and to live with open prayer.

A good mind, reputation, fidelity; these clearly, that a strangermay hear.

Those inwardly to himself and under his tongue he mutters—' O if The pompous funeral of my uncle might bubble up! O if 10

- Under my rake a pot of silver might chink, Hercules being propi-
- "To me! or my ward, whom I the next heir
- "Impel, I wish I could expunge! for he is scabby, and with sharp

'Bile he swells, A third wife is already married by Nerius.'

That you may ask these things holily, in the river Tiber you dip 15 Your head in the morning two or three times, and purge the night with the stream.

pliant, "I have a rich orphan under my care, to whom I am heir at "law, O that I could but put him out of the way!" Expungam—blot him out.

13. ' Impel.' A metaph. taken from one wave driving on another, and succeeding in its place.

--- 'He is scabby,' &c.] Here is an instance of the petitioner's hypocrisy—he pretends not to wish his pupil's death, that he might inherit his estate, but out of compassion to an unhealthy young man; pretends to wish him dead, that he may be released from his sufferings, from his scrophulous disorders.

14. 'Athird wife,' &c.] Another prays for the death of his wife, that he may be possessed of all she has, and that he may get a fresh fortune by marrying again. He thinks it very hard that he can't get rid of one, when Nerius, the usurer, has been so lucky as to bury two, and is now possessed of a third. On the death of the wife, her fortune went to the husband; even what the father had settled out of his estate, if his daughter survived him.

15. hat you may ask, &c.] That the gods may be propitious, and give a favourable answer to your prayers, you leave no rite or ceremony unobserved, to sanctify your person, and render yourself acceptable.

——In the river Tiber, &c.] It was a custom among the ancients, when they had vows, or prayers to make, or to go about any thing of the religious or sacred kind, to purify themselves by washing in running water.

Attrectare nefas, donec me flumine vivo

See Æn. ii. l. 719, 20.

Hence the Romans washed in the river Tiber—sometimes the head, sometimes the hands, sometimes the whole body.

Tou dip.] Or put under water. Those who were to sacrifice to the infernal gods only sprinkled themselves with water; but the sacrificers to the heavenly deities plunged themselves into the river, and put their heads under water. See Juv. sat. vi. 1. 522.

16. In the morning.] At the rising of the sun; the time when Heus age, responde; minimum est quod scire laboro: De Jove quid sentis ?-- Estne ut præponere cures Hunc Cuiquam !-- Cuinam ? vis Staio ? an, scilicet, hæres ? Quis potior judex? puerisve quis aptior orbis? 20 Hoc igitur, quo tu Jovis aurem impellere tentas, Dic agedum Staio. Proh Jupiter! O bone, clamet, Jupiter! -- At sese non clamet Jupiter ipse? Ignovisse putas, quia, cum tonat, ocyus ilex Sulfure discutitur sacro, quam tuque domusque? An, quia non fibris ovium, Ergennâque jubente, Triste jaces lucis, evitandumque bidental, Idcirco stolidam præbet tibi vellere barbam they observed this solemnity in honour of the coelestial gods: their ablutions in honour of the Dii Manes, and infernal gods, were performed at the setting of the sun. Juv. ubi supra.

16. Two or three times.] The number three was looked upon as sacred in religious matters. Juv. ubi supra.

Terna tibi hæc primum triplici diversa colore Licia circumdo, terque hæc altaria circum Effigiem duco: numero Deus impare gaudet.

Virg. ecl. viii. 1. 73-5; and note there, 75. Delph. See G. i. 345.

- Purge the night, &c.] After nocturnal pollution they washed. Comp. Deut. xxiii. 10, 11.—The ancients thought themselves polluted by the night itself, as well as by bad dreams in the night, and therefore purified themselves by washing their hands and heads every morning; which custom the Turks observe to this day.

17. Consider, mind, &c.] The poet, having stated the impiety of these worshippers, now remonstrates with them on their insult offered to the gods. See Ainsw. Heus, No. 3.

"Come," says he, "let me ask you a short question."

18. What think you of Jove?] What are your notions, what your conceptions of the god which you pray to, and profess to honour?

Is he, that you would care, &c.] Do you think him preferable to any mortal man ?

19. To auhom—] Do you prefer him?

— Will you to Staius?] Will you prefer him to Staius?

— Do you doubt, &c.] Do you hesitate in determining? which is the best judge, or the best guardian of orphans, Jupiter or Staius ?- From this it appears, that this Staius was some notorious wretch, who had behaved ill in both these capacities.

22. Say it to Staius. As you must allow Staius not comparable to Jupiter, but, on the contrary, a very vile and wicked man, I would have you, that you may judge the better of the nature of your petitions, propose to Staius what you have proposed to Jupiter-how would Staius receive it?

O Jupiter! &c. would he cry.] Even Staius, bad as he is Consider, mind, answer, (it is a small thing which I labour to know,)

What think you of Jove? is he, that you would care to prefer Him to any one? to whom? will you to Staius? what!—do you doubt?

Who is the better judge? who the fittest for orphan children? 20 This, therefore, with which you try to persuade the ear of Jove, Come, say it to Staius: O Jupiter! O good Jupiter! would he cry: And may not Jupiter cry out upon himself?

Do you think him to have forgiven, because, when he thunders, the oak sooner

Is thrown down, by the sacred sulphur, than both you, and your house?

Or because, with the bowels of sheep, Ergenna commanding, You do not lie a sad, and to-be-avoided bidental, in the groves, Therefore does Jupiter offer you his foolish beard to pluck?

would be shocked and astonished, and call on Jupiter for vengeance on your head.

23. And may not Jupiter, &c.] Think you that Jupiter, then, may not, with the highest justice, as well as indignation, call on himself for vengeance on you?

24. To have forgiven.] Do you suppose that Jupiter is reconciled to your treatment of him, because you and yours are visited with no marks of Divine vengeance?

26. Bowels of sheep. Offered in sacrifice by way of expiation.

Ergenna. Ergennas was the name of some famous soothsayer, whose office it was to divine, by inspecting the entrails of the sacrifices.

27. A rad bidental.] When any person was struck dead by lightning, immediately the priest (aliquis senior qui publica fulgura condit, Juv. sat. vi. l. 586.) came and buried the body, enclosed the place, and erecting there an altar, sacrificed two two year-old sheep (bidentes)—hence the word bidental is applied by authors, indifferently, to the sacrifice, to the place, or (as here) to the person.

In the groves.] Or woods, where the oak was rent with lightning, and where you remained unhurt. Comp. 1. 24, 5.

28. Jupiter offer you, &c.] Pecause you have hitherto escaped, do you imagine that you are at full liberty to insult Jupiter as you please, and this with impunity, and even with the Divine permission and approbation?

Plucking or pulling a person by the beard was one of the highest marks of contempt and insult that could be offered—see sat. i. I. 133, note; for the beard was cherished and respected as a mark of gravity and wisdom—see Juv. 3at. xiv. 12, note; and Juv. vi. I. 15, 16.

Jupiter? Aut quidnam est, quâ tu mercede deorum Emeris auriculas? pulmone, et lactibus unctis?

30

Ecce avia, aut metuens divûm matertera, cunis Exemit puerum, frontemque, atque uda labella, Infami digito, et lustralibus ante salivis Expiat; urentes oculos inhibere perita. Tunc manibus quatit, et spem macram, supplice voto, oto, 35

Nunc Licinî in campos, nunc Crassi mittit in ædes.

Hunc optent generum rex et regina! puellæ

" Hunc rapiant! quicquid calcaverit hic, rosa fiat!"

29. Or what is it?] i. e. What hast thou done, that thou art in such high favour with the gods?

- With what reward, &c.] With what bribe hast thou purchased the Divine attention?

30. With lungs.] Contemptuously put here, per meton. for any of the larger intestines of beasts offered in sacrifice.

—— And with greasy entrails.] Lactes signifies the small guts, through which the meat passeth first out of the stomach: perhaps so called from the lacteals, or small vessels, the mouths of which open into them to receive the chyle, which is of a white or milky colour. The poet says, unctis lactibus, because they are surrounded with fat.

The poet mentions these too in a sneering way, as if he had said—
"What! do you think that you have corrupted the gods with lungs
"and guts?"

31. Lo! a grandmother, &c.] The poet now proceeds to expose the folly of those prayers which old women make for children.

An aunt.] Matertera—quasi mater altera—the mother's sister, the aunt on the mother's side, as amita is on the father's side.

— Fearing the Gods.] Metuens divûm—superstitious; for all superstition proceeds from fear and terror; it is therefore that superstitious people are called in Greek δεισιδαιμονες, from δειδω, to fear, and δαιμων, a dæmon, a god. See Acts xvii. 22.

32. His forehead, &c.] Persius here ridicules the foolish and superstitious rites which women observed on these occasions.

First, after having taken the infant out of the cradle, they, before they began their prayers, wetted the middle finger with spittle, with which they anointed the forehead and lips of the child, by way of expiation, and preservative against magic.

. - Wet life.] i. e. Of the child, which are usually wet with drivel from the mouth.

33. Infamous finger.] The middle finger, called infamis, from its being made use of in a way of scorn to point at infamous people. See sat. x. l. 53, and note.

Purifying spittle.] They thought fasting spittle to contain great virtue against fascination, or an evil eye; therefore with that, mixed with dust, they rubbed the forehead and lips by way of pre-

Or what is it? with what reward hast thou bought the ears

Of the gods? with lungs, and with greasy entrails?

30

Lo! a grandmother, or an aunt fearing the gods, from the cradle Takes a boy, and his forehead and his wet lips,

With infamous finger, and with purifying spittle, she before-hand

Expiates, skilled to inhibit destructive eyes.

Then shakes him in her hands, and her slender hope, with suppliant

She now sends into the fields of Licinius, now into the houses of 6 May a king and queen wish this boy their son-in-law; may the girls

Seize him; whatever he shall have trodden upon, may it become a servative. Thus in Petronius-" Mox turbatum sputo pulverem, " anus medio sustulit digito, frontemque repugnantis signat."

33. She before-hand. \ i. e. Before she begins her prayers for the child.

34. Expiates. See above, note on l. 32, ad fin.

- Skilled to inhibit, &c.] Skilful to hinder the fascination of bewitching eyes. Uro signifies, lit. to burn; also to injure or destroy. Virg. G. ii. l. 196.—One sort of witcheraft was supposed to operate by the influence of the eye. VIRG. ecl. iii. 103.

35. Then shakes him, &c. Lifts him up, and dandles him to and fro, as if to present him to the gods.

---- Her slender hope.] The little tender infant.

- With suppliant wish.] Or prayer. Having finished her superstitious rites of lustration, she now offers her wishes and prayers for the infant.

36. She now sends, &c.] Mittit is a law term, and taken from the pretor's putting a person in possession of an estate which was recovered at law .-- Here it denotes the old woman's wishing, and, in desire, putting the child in possession of great riches, having her eye on the possessions of Crassus and Licinius, the former of which (says Plutarch) purchased so many houses, that, at one time or other, the greatest part of Rome came into his hands. Licinius was a young slave of so saving a temper, that he let out the offals of his meat for interest, and kept a register of debtors. Afterwards he was made a collector in Gaul, where he acquired (as Persius expresses it, sat. iv. l. 56, quantum non milvus oberret) "more lands "than a kite could fly over."

37. 'King and queen wish,' &c.] May he be so opulent as that even crowned heads may covet an alliance with him as a son-in-law.

37-8. 'Girls seize him.'] May he be so beautiful and comely, that the girls may all fall in love with him, and contend who shall first seize him for her own.

38. ' Shall have trodden upon,' &c.] This foolish, extravagant hyperbole well represents the vanity and folly of these old women, in their wishes for the children.

40

45

Ast ego nutrici non mando vota : negato, Jupiter, hæc illi, quamvis te albata rogarit.

Poscis, opem nervis, corpusque fidele senectæ: Esto, age: sed grandes patinæ, tucetaque crassa Annuere his superos vetuere, Jovemque morantur.

Rem struere exoptas, cæso bove; Mercuriumque Arcessis fibrà: ' da fortunare penates!

· Da pecus, et gregibus fœtum !'-Quo, pessime, pacto, Tot tibi cum in flammis junicum omenta liquescant? Et tamen hic extis, et opimo vincere farto Intendit: ' jam crescit ager, jam crescit ovile;

39. But to a nurse, &c.] For my part, says Persius, I shall never leave it to my nurse to pray for my child.

39—40. Deny, O Jupiter, &c.] If she should ever pray thus for a child of mine, I beseech thee, O Jupiter, to deny such petitions as these, however solemnly she may offer them.

40. Tho' cloth'd in white. Though arrayed in sacrificial garments. The ancients, when they sacrificed and offered to the gods, were clothed with white garments, as emblems of innocence and purity.

41. You ask strength, &c.] Another prays for strength of nerves, and that his body may not fail him when he comes to be old.

42. Be it so-go on.] I see no harm in this, says Persius; you ask nothing but what may be reasonably desired, therefore I don't find fault with your praying for these things-go on with your pe-

- Great dishes.] But while you are praying for strength of body, and for an healthy old age, you are destroying your health, and laying in for a diseased old age, by your gluttony and luxury.

Sausages.] Tuceta—a kind of meat made of pork or beef chopped, or other stuff, mingled with suct.

43. Have forbidden, Sc.] While you are praying one way, and living another, you yourself hinder the gods from granting your wishes.

--- Hinder Jove. Prevent his giving you health and strength, by your own destroying both.

The poet here ridicules those inconsistent people, who pray for health and strength of body, and yet live in such a manner as to impair both. Nothing but a youth of temperance is likely to ensure an old age of health.-This is finely touched by the masterly pen of our Shakespeare:

> Tho' I look old, yet I am strong and lusty: For in my youth I never did apply Hot and rebellious liquors in my blood; Nor did not with unbashful forehead woo The means of weakness and debility; Therefore my age is as a lusty winter, As you like it, act ii. sc. iii: Frosty, but kindly ----

But to a nurse I do not commit prayers: deny,

O Jupiter, these to her, tho' cloth'd in white she should ask. 40
You ask strength for your nerves, and a body faithful to old age:

Be it so-go on: but great dishes, and fat sausages,

Have forbidden the gods to assent to these, and hinder Jove.

You wish heartily to raise a fortune, an ox being slain, and Mercury You invite with inwards—" grant the household gods to make me prosperous!

"Give cattle, and offspring to my flocks!"—Wretch, by what means,

When the cawls of so many young heifers can melt for you in flames? And yet this man to prevail with bowels, and with a rich pudding Intends: "Now the field increases, now the sheep-fold—

44. You wish, &c.] Another is endeavouring to advance his fortune by offering costly sacrifices, little thinking that these are d minishing what he wants to augment.

--- Ox being slain.] i. e. In sacrifice—in order to render the god propitious; but you don't recollect that by this you have an ox the less.

- Mercury. The god of gain.

45. You invite. Arcessis—send for, as it were—invite to favour you.

--- With inwards.] Extis-the entrails of beasts offered in sacri-

--- "The household gods," &c.] "Grant, O Mercury," say you, that my domestic affairs may prosper!" See Ainsw. Penates.

46. "Give cattle," &c.] Grant me a number of cattle, and let all my flocks be fruitful, and increase!

— Wretch, by what means?] How, thou silliest of men, can this be?

47. When the caruls of so many, &c.] When you are every day preventing all this, by sacrificing your female beasts before they are old enough to breed, and thus, in a two-fold manner, destroying your stock?

--- The cawls.] Omentum is the cawl or fat that covers the inwards.

— Melt in flames.] Being put on the fire on the altar.
— For you.] In hopes to obtain what you want.

48. Tet this man, &c.] Thinks he shall overcome the gods with the multitude of sacrifices which he offers—this is his intention.

— With bowels.] The inwards of beasts offered in sacrifice.

— A rich pudding.] They offered a sort of pudding, or cake, made of bran, wine, and honey.

49. " Now the field increases.] Says he-fancying his land is better for what he has been doing.

"Now the sheep-fold."] "Now methinks my sheep breed better."

' Jam dabitur, jam jam:' donec deceptus, et exspes,
Nequicquam fundo suspiret nummus in imo.

Si tibi crateras argenti, incusaque pingui Auro dona feram, sudes; et pectore lævo Excutias guttas: lætari prætrepidum cor. Hinc illud subiit, auro sacras quod ovato Perducis facies. Nam, fratres inter ahenos, Somnia pituitâ qui purgatissima mittunt, Præcipui sunto; sitque illis aurea barba.

Aurum vasa Numæ, Saturniaque impulit æra: Vestalesque urnas, et Tuscum fictile mutat.

60

50. "Now it shall be given," Sc.] "Methinks I alread ysee my wishes fulfilled—every thing will be given me that I asked for."

"Now presently."] "I shall not be able to wait much lon" ger."

Till deceived, and hopeless.] Till, at length, he finds his error, and that, by hoping to increase his fortune by the multitude of his sacrifices, he has only just so far diminished it—he has nothing left but one poor solitary sesterce at the bottom of his purse, or chest: which, finding itself deceived, and hopeless of any accession to it, sighs, as it were, in vain, for the loss of its companions, which have been so foolishly spent and thrown away.

The Roman nummus, when mentioned as a piece of money, was the same with the sestertius, about one penny three farthings. The prosopopeia here is very humourous.

52. If to thee cups, &c.] Men are apt to think the gods like themselves, pleased with rich and costly gifts—to such the poet now speaks.

If, saith Persius, I should make you a present of a fine piece of silver plate, or of some costly vessel of the finest gold-

53. Tou would sweat. You would be so pleased and overjoyed, that you would break into a sweat with agitation.

- Left breast.] They supposed the heart to lie on the left side.

54. Shake out drops.] i. e. You would weep, or shed tears. Lachrymas excutere, to force tears. Ter. Heaut. act i. sc. i. l. 115.

Tears of joy would drop, as it were, from your very heart. Lachrymor præ gaudio. Ter.—Some understand lævo here in the sense of foolish, silly; as in Virg. ecl. i. 16. Casaub.

Tour over-trembling heart, &c.] Palpitating with unusual motion, from the suddenness and emotion of your surprise and joy, would be delighted.

55. That takes place.] The notion or sentiment takes place in your mind, that, because you are so overjoyed at receiving a rich and sumptuous present of silver or gold, therefore the gods must be so too—judging of them by yourself.

--- Gold carried in triumph, &c.] Hence, with the gold taken as a spoil from an enemy, and adorning the triumph of the con-

"Now it shall be given, now presently:" till deceived, and hopeless, 50

In vain the nummus will sigh in the lowest bottom.

If to thee cups of silver, and gifts wrought with rich gold
I should bring, you would sweat, and from your left breast
Shake out drops—your over-trembling heart would rejoice.
Hence that takes place, that with gold carried in triumph you Overlay the sacred faces. For, among the brazen brothers,
Let those who send dreams most purged from phlegm,
Be the chief, and let them have a golden beard.

Gold has driven away the vessels of Numa, and the Saturnian brass, And changes the vestal urns, and the Tuscan earthen-ware.

queror, by being carried with him in his ovation, you overlay the images of the gods—thus complimenting the gods with what has been taken from your fellow mortals by rapine and plunder.

56. The brazen brothers.] There stood in the porch of the Palatine Apollo fifty brazen statues of the fifty sons of Ægyptus, the brother of Danaus, who, having fifty sons, married them to the fifty daughters of Danaus, and, by their father's order, they all slew their husbands in the night of their marriage, except Hypermnestra, who saved Lynceus. See Hor. lib. iii. ode xi. 1. 30, &c.

These were believed to have great power of giving answers to their inquirers, in dreams of the night, relative to cures of disorders.

57. Most purged, &c.] Most clear and true, as most defecated and uninfluenced by the gross humours of the body.

58. Be the chief. Let these be had in honour above the rest—

q. d. Bestow most on those from whom you expect most.

— A golden beard.] This alludes to the image of Æsculapius, in the temple of Epidaurum, which was supposed to reveal remedies for disorders in dreams. This image had a golden beard, which Dionysius the tyrant of Syracuse took away, saying jestingly, that, as the father of Æsculapius, Apollo, had no beard, it was not right for the son to have one."

This communicating, through dreams, such remedies as were adapted to the cure of the several disorders of the inquirers, was at first accounted the province of Apollo and Æsculapius only; but, on the breaking out of Ægyptian superstition, Isis and Osiris were allowed to have the same power, as were also the fifty sons of Ægyptus, here called the brazen brothers, from their statues of brass.

59. Driven away, &c.] Has quite expelled from the temples the plain and simple vessels made use of in the days of Numa, the first founder of our religious rites. See Juv. sat. xi. l. 115, 16.

-- The Saturnian brass.] The brazen vessels which were in use when Saturn reigned in Italy.

60. Changes the vestal urns.] The pitchers, pots, and other veseels, which the vestal virgins used in celebrating the rites of Vesta, O curvæ in terras animæ, et cælestium inanes!
Quid juvat hoc, templis nostros immittere mores,
Et bona diis ex hac scelerat â ducere pulpâ?
Hæc sibi corrupto Casiam dissolvit olivo;
Et Calabrum coxit, vitiato murice, vellus.
Hæc baccam conchæ rasisse; et stringere venas
Ferventis massæ, crudo de pulvere, jussit.
Peccat et hæc, peccat: vitio tamen utitur. At vos Dicite, pontifices, in sacris quid facit aurum?
Nempe hoc, quod Veneri donatæ a virgine pupæ.
Quin damus id superis, de magnâ quod dare lance and which were anciently of earthen-ware, are now changed into gold.

65

70

Comp. Juv. sat. vi. l. 342, 3.

60. The Tuscan earthen-ware.] Aretium, a city of Tuscany, was famous for earthen-ware, from whence it was carried to Rome, and to other parts of Italy. This was now grown quite out of use. Comp.

Juv. sat. xi. 1. 109, 10; and Juv. sat. iii. 1. 168.

The poet means to say, that people, now a-days, had banished all the simple vessels of the ancient and primitive worship, and now, imagining the gods were as fond of gold as they were, thought to succeed in their petitions, by lavishing gold on their images. Comp. Is. xlvi. 6.

61. O souls bowed, &c.] This apostrophe, and what follows to the end, contain sentiments worthy the pen of a Christian.

62. What doth this avail.] What profiteth it.

—— To place our manners, &c.] Immittere—to admit, or suffer to enter. Our manners—i. e. our ways of thinking, our principles of action—who, because we so highly value, and are so easily influenced by rich gifts, think the gods will be so too. See Ainsw. Immitto, No. 3 and 7.

- 63. And to esteem, &c. 7 To prescribe, infer, or reckon what is good in their sight, and acceptable to them.

— Out of this wicked pulp.] From the dictates of this corrupted and depraved flesh of ours. Flesh here, as often in S. S. means the fleshly, carnal mind, influenced by, and under the dominion of, the bodily appetites—των σαρκικών επιθυμιών. 1 Pet. ii. 11.

That which is born of the flesh is flesh." John iii. 6.

Pulpa literally means the pulp, the fleshy part of any meat—a piece of flesh without bone. Ainsw.

64. This.] This same flesh-

—— Dissolves for itself Cassia, &c.] Cassia, a sweet shrub, bearing spice like cinnamon, here put for the spice; of this and other aromatics mingled with oil, which was hereby corrupted from its simplicity, they made perfumes, with which they anointed themselves.

65. Hath boiled, &c.] To give the wool a purple dye, in order to make it into splendid and sumptuous garments. See Juv. sat. xii.

38, 9.

70

O souls bowed to the earth—and void of heavenly things!
What doth this avail, to place our manners in the temples,
And to esteem things good to the gods out of this wicked pulp?
This dissolves for itself Cassia in corrupted oil,
And hath boiled the Calabrian fleece in vitiated purple.

And hath boiled the Calabrian fleece in vitiated purple.

65
This has commanded to scrape the pearl of a shell, and to draw the veins

Of the fervent mass from the crude dust.

This also sins, it sins: yet uses vice. But ye,

O ye priests, say what gold does in sacred things? Truly this, which dolls given by a virgin to Venus.

But let us give that to the gods, which, to give from a great dish.

The best and finest wool came from Calabria. The murex was a shell-fish, of the blood of which the purple dye was made. The best were found about Tyre. See Virg. Æn. iv. 262. Hor. epod. xii. 21.—Vitiated—i. e. corrupted to the purposes of luxury.

66. To scrape, &c.] This same pulp, or carnal mind, first taught men to extract pearls from the shell of the pearl-oyster, in order to adorn themselves.

And to draw, &c.] Stringere—to bring into a body or lump (AISNW.) the veins of gold and silver, by melting down the crude ore. Ferventis massæ—the mass of gold or silver ore heated to fusion in a furnace, and thus separating them from the dross and earthy particles.

The poet is shewing, that the same depraved and corrupt principle, which leads men to imagine the gods to be like themselves, and to be pleased with gold and silver because men are, is the inventor and contriver of all manner of luxury and sensual gratifications.

68. This also sins, &c.] This evil corrupted flesh is the parent of all sin, both in principle and practice. Comp. Rom. vii. 18—24.

—— Yet uses vice.] Makes some use of vice, by way of getting some emolument from it, some profit or pleasure.

69. O ye priests, &c.] But tell me, ye ministers of the gods, who may be presumed to know better than others, what pleasure, profit, or emolument, is there to the gods, from all the gold with which the temples are furnished and decorated?

70. Truly this, &c.] The poet answers for them—"Just as "much as there is to Venus, when girls offer dolls to her." Pupa, a puppet, a baby, or doll, such as girls played with while little, and, being grown big, and going to be married, offered to Venus, hoping, by this, to obtain her favour, and to be made mothers of real children. The boys offered their bullæ to their household gods. Juv. sat. xiii 33, note.

71. But let us give, &c.] The poet now is about to shew with what sacrifices the gods will be pleased, and consequently what should be offered.

- A great dish.] The lanx-lit. a deep dish-signified a large Non possit magni Messalæ lippa propago: Compositum jus, fasque animi; sanctosque recessus Mentis, et incoctum generoso pectus honesto.

Hæc cedo, ut admoveam templis, et farre litabo.

censer, appropriated to the rich; but sometimes they made use of the acerra (v 5.), a small censer appropriated to the poor.

72 The blear-eyed race, &c. Val. Corv. Messala took his name from Messana, a city of Sicily, which was besieged and taken by him; he was the head of the illustrious family of the Messalæ. The poet here aims at a descendant of his, who degenerated from the family, and so devoted himself to gluttony, drunkenness, and luxury of all kinds, that, in his old age, his eyelids turned inside

Let us offer to the gods, says Persius, that which such as the Messalæ have not to offer, however large their censers may be, or however great the quantities of the incense put within them.

73. What is just and right.] Jus is properly that which is agreeable to the laws of man-fas, that which is agreeable to the divine

Disposed.] Settled, fashioned, set in order or composed, fitted, set together, within the soul .- It is very difficult to give the full idea of compositum in this place by any single word in our language.

The blear-eyed race of great Messala could not—
What is just and right disposed within the soul, and the sacred recesses

Of the mind, and a breast imbrued with generous honesty-

These give me, that I may bring to the temples, and I will sacrifice with meal.

75

73—4. The sacred recesses of the mind.] The inward thoughts and affections—what St. Paul calls τα κευπτα των ανθέωπω. Rom. ii. 16. Prov. xxiii. 26.

74. A breast imbrued, &c.] Incoctum—metaph. taken from wool, which is boiled, and so thoroughly tinged with the dye. It signifies that which is infused; not barely dipped, as it were, so as to be lightly tinged, but thoroughly soaked, so as to imbibe the colour. See Virg. G. iii 307.

75. That I may bring to the temples.] Let me be possessed of these, that I may with these approach the gods, and then a little cake of meal will be a sufficient offering. Comp. VIRG. Æn. v. l. 745; and Hor. lib. iii. ode xxiii l. 17, &c.

Lito not only signifies to sacrifice, but, by that sacrifice, to obtain what is sought for.

-V4 (p 0 0

10 2000 0

10 yest 10

of a substitution of the s

- 1.43 3/11 - 114 ,

-U = (A) 1000 000 1

Tum Jupiter faciat ut semper

1 10

PLAUT. in Persa.

END OF THE SECOND SATIRE.

SATIRA III.

ARGUMENT

Persius, in this Satire, in the person of a Stoic preceptor, upbraids the young men with sloth, and with neglect of the study of philosophy. He shews the sad consequences which will attend them throughout life, if they do not apply themselves early to the knowledge of virtue.

EMPE hæc assidue! Jam clarum mane fenestras Intrat, et angustas extendit lumine rimas. Stertimus, indomitum quod despumare Falernum Sufficiat, quintâ dum linea tangitur umbrâ.

11.7 0 1 1 12 45

Line 1. "What—these things constantly?" The poet here introduces a philosopher, rousing the pupils under his care from their sloth, and chiding them for lying so late in bed. "What," says he, "is "this to be every day's practice?"

--- "Already the clear morning," &c.] q. d. You ought to be up and at your studies by break of day; but here you are lounging in bed at full day-light, which is now shining in at the windows of your bed-room.

2. "Extends with light," &c.] Makes them appear wider, say some. But Casaubon treats this as a foolish interpretation. He says, that this is an "Hypallage. Not that the chinks are extended, or dilated, quod quidem inepte scribunt, but the light is extended, the sun transmitting its rays through the chinks of the lattices."

Dr. Sheridan says—'' this image (angustas extendit lumine rimas) "very beautifully expresses the widening of a chink by the admission "of light.'' But I do not understand how the light can be said to widen a chink, if we take the word widen in its usual sense, of making any thing wider than it was. Perhaps we may understand the verb extendit, here, as extending to view—i. e. making visible the interstices of the lattices, which, in the dark, are imperceptible to the sight, but when the morning enters, become apparent. It should seem, from this passage, that the fenestræ of the Romans were lattice windows.

But the best way is to abide by experience, which is in favour of the first explanation; for when the bright sun shines through any chink or crack, there is a dazzling which makes the chink or crack appear wider than it really is. Of the first glass windows, see Jortin, Rem. vol. iv. p. 196.

SATIRE III.

ARGUMENT.

The title of this Satire, in some ancient manuscripts, was, "The Re" proach of Idleness;" though in others it is inscribed—" Against the Luxury and Vices of the Rich:"—in both of which the poet pursues his intention, but principally in the former.

" WHAT-these things constantly? Already the clear morn-

" The windows, and extends with light the narrow chinks.

" We snore, what to digest untamed Falernan

" Might suffice: the line is already touched with the fifth shadow.

3. "We snore."] Stertimus—i. e. stertitis.—The poet represents the philosopher speaking in the first person, but it is to be understood in the second—"We students," says he, as if he included himself, but meaning, no doubt, those to whom he spake. Comp. sat. i. l. 13.

——To digest untamed," &c.] Instead of rising to study, we (i. e. ye young men) are sleeping, as long as would suffice to get rid of the fumes of wine, and make a man sober, though he went to bed ever so drunk.

"To digest."] Despumare—metaph. taken from new wine, or any other fermenting liquor, which rises in froth or scum: the taking off this scum or froth was the way to make the liquor clear, and to quiet its working. Thus the Falernan, which was apt, when too much was drunk of it, to ferment in the stomach, was quieted and digested by sleep. The epithet indomitum refers to this fermenting quality of the wine.

Perhaps the master here alludes to the irregularities of these students, who, instead of going to bed at a reasonable hour and sober, sat up late drinking, and went to bed with their stomachs full of Falernan wine.

4. "The line is already touched," &c.] Hypallage; for quinta linea jam tangitur umbra, i. c. the fifth line, the line or stroke which marks the fifth hour, is touched with the shadow of the gnomon on the sun-dial.

The ancient Romans divided the natural day into twelve parts.

Sun-rising was called the first hour; the third after sun-rising an-

En, quid agis? siccas insana canicula messes

Jamdudum coquit, et patulâ pecus omne sub ulmo est.

Unus ait comitum, 'Verumne?' Itane? Ocius adsit

· Huc aliquis. Nemon?" Turgescit vitrea bilis: Finditur, Arcadiæ pecuaria rudere credas.

Inditur, Arcadiæ pecuaria rudere credas.

Jam liber, et bicolor positis membrana capillis, Inque manus chartæ, nodosaque venit arundo. Tum queritur, crassus calamo quod pendeat humor;

Nigra quod infusa vanescat sepia lympha:

10

5

swers to our nine o'clock; the sixth hour was noon; the ninth answers to our three o'clock P. M. and the twelfth was the setting of the sun, which we call six o'clock P. M. The fifth hour, then, among the Romans, answers to our eleven o'clock A. M. The students slept till eleven—near half the day.

5. " Lo! what do you?" What are you at-why don't you get up?

——" The mad dog-star."] Canicula— a constellation, which was supposed to arise in the midst of summer, when the sun entered Leo, with us the dog-days—This is reckoned the hottest time in the year; and the ancients had a notion, that the influence of the dog-star occasioned many disorders among the human species, but especially madness in dogs.

Jam Procyon furit, Et stella vesani Leonis, Sole dies referente siccos. Kabiosi tempora signi. The dog-star rages.

Hor. ode xxiv. lib. iii. l. 18.—20. Hor. sat, vi. lib. i. l. 126. Popr.

6. "Long since is ripening." They supposed that the intense heat, at that time of the year, was occasioned by the dog-star, which rose with the sun, and forwarded the ripening of the corn. The poets followed this vulgar error, which sprang from the rising of the dog-star when the sun entered into Leo; but this star is not the cause of greater heat, which is, in truth, only the effect of the particular situation of the sun at that season.

-- "All the flock," &c.]

7. Fellow-students.] This seems to be the meaning of comites in this place.

-_ " Quick," &c.] Let some of the servants come immediately, and bring my clothes, that I may get up.

8. " Is there nobody, &c.] Does nobody hear me call?

- Vitreous bile swells. He falls into a violent passion at no-body's answering.

Horace speaks of splendida bilis, clear bile-i. e. furious-in op-

- 46 Lo! what do you? the mad dog-star the dry harvests
- "Long since is ripening, and all the flock is under the spreading elm."
 Says one of the fellow-students—"Is it true? Is it so? Quick let "somebody
- "Come hither—Is there nobody?"—vitreous bile swells.
- "I am split;"--" that you'd believe the cattle of Arcadia to bray."

 Now a book, and two-coloured parchment, the hairs being laid aside,

 10

And there comes into his hand paper, and a knotty reed.
Then he complains that a thick moisture hangs from the pen:
That the black cuttle-fish vanishes with water infused:

position to the atra bilis, black bile, which produces melancholy. This is probably the meaning of vitrea, glassy, in this place.

9. " I am split.] Says the youth, with calling so loud for somebody to come to me-

"That you'd believe," &c.] You may well say you are ready to split, for you make such a noise, that one would think that all the assess in Arcadia were braying together, answers the philosopher. Eclipsis.—Arcadia, a midland country of Peloponnesus, very good for pasture, and famous for a large breed of asses. See Juv. sat. vii. 1.160, note.

10. Now a book. At last he gets out of bed, dresses himself, and takes up a book.

Two-coloured parchment.] The students used to write their notes on parchment: the inside, on which they wrote, was white; the other side, being the outer side of the skin, on which the wool or hair grew, was of a yellow cast. See Juv. sat. vii. 1. 23, note.

-- The hairs, Sc. The hairs, or wool, which grew on the skin, were scraped off, and the parchment smoothed, by rubbing it with a pumice-stone.

11. Paper.] Charta signifies any material to write upon. The ancients made it of various things, as leaves, bark of trees, &c. and the Ægyptians of the flag of the river Nile, which was called papyrus—hence the word paper. Charta Pergamena, i. e. apud pergamum inventa (Plin. Ep. xñi. 12.), signifies the parchment or vellum which they wrote upon, and which was sometimes indifferently called charta, or membrana. Comp. Her. sat. x. lib. i. l. 4; and sat. iii. lib. ii. l. 2.

But chartæ here seems to mean paper of some sort, different from the membrana, l. 10.

The lazy student now takes pen, ink, and paper, in order to write.

--- A knotty reed.] A pen made of a reed, which was hollow, like a pipe, and grew full of knots, at intervals, on the stalk.

12. He complains, &c.] That his ink is so thick that it hangs to the nib of his pen.

13. Cuttle fish, &c.] This fish discharges a black liquor, which the ancients used as ink.

Dilutas, queritur, geminet quod fistula guttas.

O miser, inque dies ultra miser! huccine rerum Venimus? at cur non potius, teneroque columbo Et similis regum pueris, pappare minutum Poscis; et iratus mammæ, lallare recusas?

15

An tali studeam calamo?' Cui verba? Quid istas Succinis ambages? Tibi luditur: effluis amens. Contemnêre. Sonat vitium percussa, maligne

20

Respondet, viridi non cocta fidelia limo.

Udum et molle lutum es; nunc, nunc properandus, et acri

13. Vanishes with water, &c.] He first complained that his ink was too thick: on pouring water into it, to make it thinner, he now complains that it is too thin, and the water has caused all the blackness to vanish away.

14. " The pipe.] i. e. The pen made of the reed, —— Doubles the diluted drops.] Now the ink is so diluted, that it comes too fast from the pen, and blots his paper. All these are so many excuses for his unwillingness to write,

25. "O wretch!" &c.] The philosopher, hearing his lazy pupil contrive so many trivial excuses for idleness, exclaims—"O wretch, O wretched young man, who art likely to be more wretched every day you live!"

16. " Are we come, &c.] Are all my hopes of you, as well as those of your parents, who put you under my care, come to this!

--- " Why do you not rather." Than occasion all this expense and trouble about your education.

The tender dove.] These birds were remarkably tender when young—the old ones feed them with the half-digested food of their own stomachs.

17. " Children of nobles."] And of other great men, which are delicately nursed.

"Require to eat pap."] Pappare is to eat pap as children. Minutus-a-um, signifies any thing lessened, or made smaller. Here it denotes meat put into a mother's, or nurse's mouth, there chewed small, and then given to the child—as the dove to her young. Comp. the last note on 1. 16.

18. " Angry at the nurse." The word mamma here refers to the mother or nurse, which the children call mamma, as they called the father tata.

This well describes the fractiousness of an humoured and spoiled child, which, because it has not immediately what it wants, flies into a passion with its nurse when she attempts to sing it to sleep, and will not suffer her to do it. See Ainsw. Lallo.

The philosopher sharply reproves his idle pupil. Rather, says he, than come to school, you should have staid in the nursery, and have shewn your childish perverseness there rather than here.

19. " Can I study with such a pen?" The youth still persists in his frivolous excuses, totally unimpressed by all that his master has

He complains that the pipe doubles the diluted drops.

"O wretch! and every day more a wretch! to this pass 15 "Are we come? but why do you not rather, like the tender dove,

"And like the children of nobles, require to eat pap,

"And angry at the nurse, refuse her to sing lullaby."-

"Can I study with such a pen?" "Whom dost thou deceive? "Why those "Shifts do you repeat? Tis you are beguiled: thoughtless you run

"You'll be despised. A p ot, the clay being green, not baked, an-" swers

"Badly; being struck, it sounds its fault.

"You are wet and soft clay; now, now you are to be hasten'd, said .- "Blame the pen, don't blame me-can any mortal write

" with such a pen?"

19. "Whom dest thou deceive?"] I should suppose, that cui verba is here ecliptical, and that das, or existimas dare, is to be understood. Verba dare is to cheat or deceive; and here the philosopher is representing his pupil, who is framing trivial excuses for his unwillingness to study, as a self-deceiver---tibi luditur, saith he, in the next line.

19-20, "Those shifts."] Ambages -- shifts, prevaricating, shuf-fling excuses.

20. " Repeat."] Succinis.—The verb succino signifies to sing after another, to follow one another in singing or saying-here properly used, as expressing the repetition of his foolish excuses, which followed one another, or which he might be said to repeat one after the other.

"'Tis you are beguiled." Luditur here is used impersonally; as concurritur, Hor. sat i. lib. i. l. 7.

of one's wits (from a priv. and mens)—so, unthinking, without thought. You run out --- effluis --- metapli. from a bad vessel, out of which the liquor leaks. You, foolish and unthinking as you are, are wasting your time and opportunity of improvement, little thinking, that, like the liquor from a leaky vessel, they are insensibly passing away from you-your very life is gliding away, and you heed it not.

21. " You'll be despised."] By all sober, thinking people.

- "A pot," Ec.] Any vessel, made of clay that is not well tempered-viridi limo, which is apt to chap and crack in the fire---non cocta, not baked as it ought to be---will answer badly, when sounded by the finger, and will proclaim, by its cracked and imperfect sound, its defects.

Thus will it be with you, none will ever converse with you, or put you to the proof, but you will soon make them sensible of your deficiency in wisdom and learning, and be the object of their contempt.

23. " Wet and soft clay " The poet still continues the metaphor.

Fingendus sine fine rotâ. Sed rure paterno
Est tibi far modicum; purum, et sine labe, salinum.
Quid metuas? cultrixque foci secura patella est.
Hoc satis? An deceat pulmonem rumpere ventis,
Stemmate quod Tusco ramum millesime ducis;
Censoremve tuum vel quod trabeate salutas?
Ad populum phaleras: ego te intus, et in cute, novi.
Non pudet ad morem discincti vivere Nattæ?

As wet and soft clay will take any impression, or be moulded into any shape, so may you; you are young, your understanding flexible, and impressible by instruction---

Cuilibet: argillâ quidvis imitaberis udâ. Hon. epist. ii. lib. ii. l. 7, 8.

23. "Hasten'd."] Now, now you are young, you are to lose no time, but immediately to be begun with.

24. "Formed incessantly," &c.] The metaphor still continues. As the wheel of the potter turns, without stopping, till the piece of work is finished, so ought it to be with you; you ought to be taught incessantly, till your mind is formed to what it is intended, and this with strict discipline, here meant by acri rota.

"Paternal estate," &c.] But perhaps you will say, "Where is the occasion for all this?—I am a man of fortune, and have a sufficient income to live in independency; therefore why all this "trouble about learning?"

25. "Moderate quantity," &c.] Far signifies all manner of corn which the land produces; here, by metonym. the land itself—far modicum, a moderate estate, a competency.

"A salt-cellar without spot." The ancients had a superstition about salt, and always placed the salt-cellar first on the table, which was thought to consecrate it: if the salt was forgotten, it was looked on as a bad omen. The salt-cellar was of silver, and descended from father to son—see Hor. ode xvi. lib. ii. l. 13, 14.—But here the salinum, per synec. seems to stand for all the plate which this young man is supposed to have inherited from his father, which he calls purum and sine labe, either from the pureness of the silver, or from the care and neatness with which it was kept, or from the honest and fair means by which the father had obtained that and all the rest of his possessions.

26. "What can you fear?"]---- Say you, who are possessed of so much property?

"You have a dish," &c.] Patella—a sort of deep dish, with broad brims, used to put portions of meat in that were given as sacrifice.

Before eating, they cut off some part of the meat, which was first put into a pan, then into the fire, as an offering to the Lares, which stood on the hearth, and were supposed the guardians of both house and land, and to secure both from harm: hence the poet says---cultrix secura.

- "And to be formed incessantly with a brisk wheel. But in your pa-"ternal estate
- "You have a moderate quantity of corn, and a salt-cellar pure and " without spot.

"What can you fear? and you have a dish a secure worshipper of the "hearth."-

"Is this enough? Or may it become you to break your lungs " with wind.

"Because you, a thousandth, derive a branch from a Tuscan "stock:

"Or because robed you salute the censor (as) yours ?-

66 Trappings to the people--- I know you intimately and thoroughly.

"Does it not shame you to live after the manner of dissolute Natta?

q. d. You have not only a competent estate in lands and goods. but daily worship the guardian gods, who will therefore protect both -what need you fear?

27. "Is this enough?"] To make you happy.

"May it become you."] Having reason, as you may think, to boast of your pedigree, can you think it meet-

- "To break your lungs," &c.] To swell up with pride, till you are ready to burst, like a man that draws too much air at once into his lungs.

28. " A thousandth, derive," &c.] Millesime, for tu millesimus, antiptosis; like trabeate, for tu trabeatus, in the next line-because you can prove yourself a branch of some Tuscan family, a thousand off from the common stock --- The Tuscans were accounted of most ancient nobility. Horace observes this in most of his compliments to Mæcenas, who was derived from the old kings of Tuscany. See ode i. lib. i. l. 1, et al. freq.

29. "Censor," &c.] The Roman knights, attired in the robe called trabea, were summoned to appear before the censor (see AINSW. Censor,) and to salute him in passing by, as their names were called over. They led their horses in their hand.

Are you to boast, says the philosopher to his pupil, because the censor is your relation (tuum), and that when you pass in procession before him, with your knight's robe on, you may claim kindred with him?

30. "Trappings to the people-"] q. d. These are for the ignorant vulgar to admire. The ornaments of your dress you may exhibit to the mob; they will be pleased with such gewgaws, and respect you accordingly.

The word phaleræ-arum, signifies trappings, or ornaments, for horses; also a sort of ornament worn by the knights: but these no more ennobled the man, than those did the horse.

- "I know you intimately," &c.] Inside and out, as we say;

therefore you can't deceive me.

31. "Does it not shame you," &c.] Do you feel no shame at your way of life, you that are boasting of your birth, fortune, and quality, and yet leading the life of a low profligate mechanic?

Sed stupet hic vitio; et fibris increvit opimum Pingue: caret culpà: nescit quid perdat: et alto Demersus, summa rursus non bullit in unda.

Magne pater diviûm, sævos punire tyrannos Haud aliâ ratione velis, cum dira libido Moverit ingenium, ferventi tincta veneno: Virtutem videant, intabescantque relictâ.' Anne magis Siculi gemucrunt æra juvenci; Et magis, auratis pendens laquearibus, ensis Purpureas subter cervices terruit, 'imus,

35

40

Natta signifies one of a sorry, mean occupation, a dirty mechanic. But here the poet means somebody of this name, or at least who deserves it by his profligate and worthless character. See Hor. sat. vi. lib. i. l. 124; and Juv. sat. viii. l. 95.

32. "He is stupefied with vice." He has not all his faculties elear, and capable of discernment, as you have, therefore is more excusable than you are. By long contracted habits of vice he has stupefied himself.

"Fat hath increased," &c.] Pingue, for pinguedo. These words are, I conceive, to be taken in a moral sense; and by sibris, the inwards or entrails, is to be understood the mind and understanding. the judgment and conscience, the inward man, which, like a body overwhelmed with fat, are rendered torpid, dull, and stupid, so as to have no sense and feeling of the nature of evil remaining. See Ps. cxix. 70, former part.

33. "He is not to blame." i. e. Comparatively. See Juv.

sat. ii. l. 15---9.

"He knows not," &c.] He is insensible of the sad consequences of vice, such as the loss of reputation, and of the comforts of a virtuous life. He has neither judgment to guide him, nor conscience to reprove him.

34. "Overwhelmed."] Sunk into the very depths of vice, like one sunk to the bottom of the sea.

"Bubble again," &c.] i. e. He does not emerge, rise up again. Metaph. from divers, who plunge to the bottom of the water, and, when they rise again, make a bubbling of the surface as they approach the top.

Therefore, O young man, beware of imitating, by thine idleness and mispending of time, this wretched man, lest thou shouldst bring thyself into the same deplorable state.

36. By any other way.] Than by giving them a sight of the charms of that virtue, which they have forsaken, and to which they cannot attain. Haud velis-i. e. noli.

When dire lust, &c.] When they find their evil passions exciting them to acts of tyranny. See Ainsw. Libido, No 1, 3.

37. Imbued with fervent poison.] Tincta---imbued, full of, abounding (met.) with the inflaming venom of cruelty, which may

40

66 But he is stupefied with vice, rich fat hath increased in his

"Inwards: he is not to blame: he knows not what he may lose, and " with the deep

" Overwhelmed, he does not bubble again at the top of the water." Great father of gods! will not to punish cruel

Tyrants by any other way, when fell desire

Shall stir their disposition, imbued with fervent poison; Let them see virtue, and let them pine away, it being left.

Did the brass of the Sicilian bullock groan more,

Or the sword hanging from the golden ceiling, did it More affright the purple neck underneath; "I go, be called the poison of the mind, baleful and fatal as poison in its destructive influence.

38. Let them see virtue.] Si virtus humanis oculis conspiceretur, miros amores excitaret sui. SENEC. This would be the case with the good and virtuous; but it would have a contrary effect towards such as are here mentioned; it would fill them with horror and dismay, and inflict such remorse and stings of conscience, as to prove the greatest torment which they could endure.

Let them fine away.] For the loss of that which they have forsaken and despised, as well as from the despair of ever retrieving it.

-- It being left.] i. e. Virtute relicta. Abl. absol.

39. The Sicilian bullock, &c. Alluding to the story of Phalaris's brazen bull. Perillus, an Athenian artificer, made a figure of a bull in brass, and gave it to Phalaris, tyrant of Syracuse, as an engine of torment: the bull was hollow; a man put into it, and set over a large fire, would, as the brass heated and tormented him, make a noise which might be supposed to imitate the roaring of a bull. The tyrant accepted the present, and ordered the experiment to be first tried on the inventor himself. Comp. Juv. sat. xv. 122, note.

40. The sword hanging, &c.] Damocles, the flatterer of Dionysins, the Sicilian tyrant, having greatly extolled the happiness of monarchs, was ordered, that he might be convinced of his mistake, to be attired, as a king, in royal apparel; to be seated at a table spread with the choicest viands, but withal, to have a naked sword hung over his head, suspended by a single hair, with the point downwards; which so terrified Damocles, that he could neither taste of the dainties, nor take any pleasure in his magnificent attendance.

41. Purple neck, &c.] i. e. Damocles, who was placed under the point of the suspended sword, and magnificently arrayed in royal purple garments. Meton .-- Purpureas cervices, for purpuream cer-vicem-synec.

41-2. " I go, I go, &c.] A person within the bull of Phalaris would not utter more dreadful groans; nor would one seated like Damocles, under the sharp point of a sword, suspended over his head by a single horse-hair, feel more uneasy, than the man who is

VOL. 11.

' Imus præcipites,' quam si sibi dicat; et intus' Palleat infelix, quod proxima nesciat uxor?

Sæpe oculos, memini, tangebam parvus olivo Grandia si nollem morituri verba Catonis Dicere, non sano multum laudanda magistro; Quæ pater adductis sudans audiret amicis; Jure; etenim id summum, quid dexter senio ferret, Scire erat in voto; damnosa canicula quantum Raderet; angustæ collo non fallier orcæ; Neu quis callidior buxum torquere flagello.

45

50

desperate with guilt, so as to give himself over for lost, and to have nothing else to say, than, "I am going, I am plunging headlong into destruction, nothing can save me."

42-3. Within unhappy.] Having an hell, as it were, in his conscience

43. Turn pale.] Palleo literally signifies to be pale—as this often arises from fear and dread, palleo is used to denote fearing, to stand in fear of, per meton. So Hor. lib. iii. ode xxvii. 1. 27, 8.

————Mediasque fraudes.

In the above passage of Horace, palleo, though a verb neuter, is used actively, as here by Persius; likewise before, sat. i. l. 124. where palles is used metonymically for hard studying, which occasions paleness of countenance.

--- Nearest wife, &c.] His conscience tormented with the guilt of crimes, which he dares not reveal to the nearest friend that he has, not even to the wife of his bosom, who is nearest of all.

44. Besmear'd my eyes, &c.] The philosopher here relates some of his boyish pranks. I used, says he, when I was a little boy, and had not a mind to learn my lesson, to put oil into my eyes, to make them look bleary, that my master might suppose they really were so,

and excuse me my task.

45—6. Great words of dying Cato. Cato of Utica is here meant, who killed himself, that he might not fall into the hands of Julius Cæsar, after the defeat of Pompey. His supposed last deliberation with himself before his death, whether he should stab himself, or fall into the hands of Cæsar, was given as a theme for the boys to write on; then they were to get the declamation, which they composed, by heart, and repeat it by way of exercising them in eloquence.

46. Much to be praised.] It was the custom for the parents and their friends to attend on these exercises of their children, which the master was sure to commend very highly, by way of flattering the parents with a notion of the progress and abilities of their children, not without some view, that the parents should compliment the master on the pains which he had taken with his scholars.

____Insane.] This does not mean that the master was mad, but that, in commending and praising such puerile performances, and the

"I go headlong," (than if any one should say to himself,) and with-

Unhappy, should turn pale at what his nearest wife must be ignorant

I remember, that I, a little boy, often besmear'd my eyes with oil, If I was unwilling to learn the great words of dying

Cato, much to be praised by my insane master;

Which my father would hear sweating, with the friends he brought; With reason; for it was the height of my wish to know what

The lucky sice would bring, how much the mischievous ace

Would scrape off-not to be deceived by the neck of the narrow

Nor that any one should whirl more skilfully the top with a scourge.

vehemence with which he did it, he did not act like one that was quite in his right senses.

47. Sweating-] i.e. With the eagerness and agitation of his mind, that I might acquit myself well before him and the friends which he might bring to hear me declaim. See above, note on 1. 46, No. 1.

48. With reason, &c.] Jurc-not without cause .- q. d. My father might well sweat with anxiety, for instead of studying how to acquit myself with credit on these occasions, it was the height of my ambition to know the chances of the dice, play at chuck, and whip a top better than any other boy.

49. Lucky sice, &c.] Dexter, lucky, fortunate-from dexter, the right hand, which was supposed the lucky side, as sinister, 'the left, was accounted unlucky.

The sice—the six—the highest number on the dice, which won.

Mischievous ace, &c. The ace was the unluckiest throw on the dice, and lost all. See AINSW. Canicula, No. 5.

'It was the summit of his wish to be able to calculate the chances of the dice; as, what he should win by throwing a six, and what he should lose if he threw an ace. How much a sice, ferret, might bring, i. e. add, contribute to his winnings-how much the ace, raderet, might scrape off, i. e. diminish, or take away from them. Metaph. from diminishing a thing, or lessening its bulk by scraping it.

50. Neck of the narrow jar.] Orca signifies a jar, or like carthen vessel, which had a long narrow neck: the boys used to fix the bottom in the ground, and try to chuck, from a little distance, nuts, or almonds, into the mouth; those which they chucked in were their own, and those which missed the mouth, and fell on the ground, they lost.

I made it my study, says he, to understand the game of the orca, and to chuck so dextrously as not to miss the mouth, however narrow the neck might be.

51. The top.] Buxus -lit. the box-tree, box wood -As the

Haud tibi inexpertum, curvos deprendere mores;
Quaque docet sapiens, braccatis illita Medis,
Porticus: insomnis quibus et detonsa juventus
Invigilat, siliquis et grandi pasta polentâ.

Et tibi, quæ Samios deduxit litera ramos,
Surgentem dextro monstravit limite callem.
Stertis adhuc? laxumque caput, compage solutâ,
Oscitat hesternum, dissutis undique malis?
Est aliquid quo tendis, et in quod dirigis arcum?

Au passim sequeris corvos testâque lutoque, children's tops were made of this, therefore, per meton it is used to denote a top, as well as any thing else made of box-wood. Consistently with his plan, he was determined to excel, even in whipping a top.

52. Unexperienced, &c.] The philosopher makes use of what he has been saying, by way of remonstrance with his pupil.—You, says he, are not a child as I was then, therefore it does not become you to invent excuses to avoid your studies, in order to follow childish amusements—you know better, you have been taught the precepts of wisdom and moral philosophy, and know by experience the difference between right and wrong.

- Crooked morals.] Morals which deviate from the strait rule of right. Metaph, from things that are bent, bowed, crooked, and out of a strait line. .

53. Wise portice] Meton the place where wisdom is taught, put for the teachers. The Stoics were so called, from 50%, a portico, in Athens, spacious, and finely embellished, where they used to meet and dispute.

Daub'd over, &c. On the walls of the portico were painted the battles of the Medes and Persians with the Athenians, who, with their kings Xerxes and Darius, were defeated by Miltiades, Leonidas, and Themistocles, Athenian generals, at Marathon, Thermopylæ, and on the coast of Salamis.

——Trouser'd Medes.] The bracca was a peculiar dress of the Medes, which, like trousers, reached from the loins to the ancles.

See Juv. sat. ii. l. 169, note.

54. Which.] i. e. The things taught by the Stoics.

—— Sleepless youth.] The young men who follow the strict discipline of the Stoics, and allow themselves but little sleep, watching over their studies night and day.

___ Shorn. After the manner of the Stoics, who did not suffer their hair to grow long. See Juv. sat. ii. l. 14, 15.

55. Bean-fiods.] Siliqua is the husk, pod, or shell of a bean, pea, or the like; also the pulse therein: put here to denote the most simple and frugal diet. Juv. sat. xi. l. 58.

A great pudding.] Polenta—barley-flour, dried at the fire and fried, after soaking in water all night. Alnsw. This made a sort of fried pudding, or cake, and was a kind of coarse food.

It is not a thing unexperienced to you, to discover crooked morals. And the things which the wise portico, daub'd over with the tronser'd Medes,

Teaches, which the sleepless and shorn youth

Watch over, fed with bean-pods and a great pudding:

55

And to thee, the letter, which hath sever'd the Samian branches,

Hath shewn the path rising with the right-hand limit.

Do you still snore? and does your lax head, with loosen'd joining, Yawn from what happen'd yesterday, with cheeks unsew'd in all parts? Is there any thing whither you tend? and to what do you direct your bow?

Or do you follow crows up and down with a potsherd and mud,

56. And to thee, the letter, &c.] The two horns, or branches, as Persius 'calls them, of the letter r, were chosen, by Pythagoras, to demonstrate the two different paths of virtue and vice, the right branch leading to the former, the left to the latter; it was therefore called his letter; and Persius calls the two branches, into which the r divides itself, Samios, from Samos, an island in the Ionian sea, where Pythagoras was born, who hence was called the Samian philosopher, and the r the Samian letter.

57. Shown the path rising, &c.] i.e. He had been well instructed in the doctrine of Pythagoras, concerning the way to virtue.

Litera Pythagoræ discrimine secta bicorni, Humanæ vitæ speciem præferre videtur.

MART.

58. Do you still snore?] Thou, who hast been taught better things, from the principles and practices of the Stoics and Pythagoreans, art thou sleeping till almost noon? See I. 4.

—— Your lax head, &c.] In sleep, the muscles which raise the head; and keep it upright, are all relaxed, so that the head will nod, and drop, as if it had nothing to confine it in its place: this is often seen in people who sleep as they sit.

59. Yawn, &c.] From the eleepiness and fatigue occasioned by yesterday's debauch are you yawning as if your jaws were ripped asunder? Dissutis—metaph. from the parting, or gaping, of things sewed together, when unstitched, or ripped asunder. Mala signifies either the check, or the jaw-bone.

Oscitat hesternum. Græcism .- q. d. Yawn forth yesterday's debauch.

Oscitando evaporat, et edormit hesternam crapulam. MART.

60. Is there any thing, &c.] Have you any pursuit, end, or point in view?

--- Direct your bow.] What do you aim at? Metaph. taken from an archer's aiming at a mark.

61. Follow crows, &c.] Or do you ramble about, you know not why, re r whither, like idle boys, that follow crows to pelt them with potsherds and mud, in order to take them?—(as we should Securus quo pes ferat, atque ex tempore vivis?

Helleborum frustra, cum jam cutis ægra tumebit,' Poscentes videas. Venienti occurrite morbo;
Et quid opus Cratero magnos promittere montes?
Discite, ô miseri! et causas cognoscite rerum:
Quid sumus; et quidnam victuri gignimur: ordo
Quis datus; et metæ qua mollis flexus, et undæ.
Quis modus argento: quid fas optare; quid asper

Utile nummus habet : patriæ, carisque propinquis,

Quantum elargiri deceat: quem te Deus case say, to lay salt upon their tails.) A proverbial expression to denote vain, unprofitable, and foolish pursuits.

65

70

62. Live from the time. Tex tempore—without any fixed or pre-meditated plan, and looking no farther than just the present moment.

63. In vain hellebore, &c.] The herb hellebore was accounted a great cleanser of noxious humours, therefore administered in dropsies. When the skin is swoln with a dropsy, it is too late to begin with remedies, in very many cases.

64. Prevent, &c.] The wisest way is to prevent the disorder by avoiding the causes of it, or by checking its first approaches. Occurrite—meet it in its way to attack you.

Principiis obsta: sero medicina paratur, Cum mala per longas invaluêre moras.

Ovid.

65. What need is there, &c.] What need have you to let the distemper get such an head, as that you may be offering mountains of gold for a cure. Craterus was the physician of Augustus—put here for any famous and skilful practitioner.

The poet, here, is speaking figuratively, and means that what he says of the distempers of the body should be applied to those of the mind; of which all he says is equally true. . .

The first approaches of vice are to be watched against, and their progress prevented; otherwise, if disregarded till advanced into habits, they may be too obstinate for cure. Comp. 1. 32-4.

66. Learn, &c.] Here the philosopher applies what he has been saying, by way of reproof and remonstrance, in a way of inference—Learn then, says he, ye miserable youths, who are giving way to sloth, idleness, and neglect of your studies—learn, before it be too late, the causes, the final causes of things, which are the great objects of moral philosophy, which teacheth us the causes and purposes for which all things were made.

67. What we are.] Both as to body and soul; how frail and transitory as to the one, how noble and exalted as to the other.

What we are engender'd, &c.] To what end and purpose we are begotten, in order to live in this world, and what life we are to lead.

67-8. What order is given.] In what rank or degree of life we are placed.

Careless whither your foot may carry you; and do you live from the time?

In vain hellebore, when now the sickly skin shall swell,
You may see people asking for. Prevent the coming disease;
And what need is there to promise great mountains to Craterus? 65
Learn, O miserable creatures, and know the causes of things,
What we are, and what we are engender'd to live: what order
Is given, and by what way the turning of the goal, and of the water, may be easy:

What measure to money—what it is right to wish—what rough
Money has that is useful. To our country, and to dear relations, 70
How much it may become to give; whom the Deity commanded

68. By what way the turning, &c.] Metaph. to denote the wise, well-ordered, and well-directed management, and right conduct of our affairs; as charioteers in the circus used all their care and management in turning the meta, or goal, so as to avoid touching it too nearly. To touch it with the inward wheel of the chariot, yet so as but to touch it, was the choice art of the charioteer: this they called stringere metam; as to escape the danger in the performance of it they called evitare metam.

Metaque fervidis Evitata rotis

Hor. ode i.

If they performed not this very dextrously, they were in danger of having the chariot and themselves dashed to pieces.

And of the water.] Another metaphor to the same purpose, alluding to the naumachia, or ship-races, wherein there were likewise placed metæ; and the chief art was, when they came to the meta, to tack their ship so dextrously, as to sail as near as possible round it, yet so as to avoid running against it. See Æn..v. 129—31.

It was one part of moral philosophy, to teach the attainment of the best end, by the safest, easiest, and best means, avoiding all difficulties and dangers as much as possible.

69. What measure to money.] What limits or bounds to put to our desires after it, so as to avoid covetousness.

— What it is right to wish.] Or pray for. See sat. ii. per tot. 69.—70. Rough money, &c.] The true use of money, for this alone can make it useful. Asper nummus is coined gold or silver; so called from the roughness which is raised on the surface by the figures or letters stamped on it.

Not only money, but all wrought or chased silver or gold, is signified by the epithet asper.

Vasa aspera. Juv. sat. xiv. l. 62. Cymbiaque argento perfecta atque aspera signis Æn. v. l. 267.

70. Our country, &c.] What we owe, and, consequently, what it becomes us to pay, to our country, our relations, and friends, &c.

71. Whom the deity commanded, &c.] Quem—what manner of person it is the will of heaven you should be in your station.

Jussit; et humanâ quâ parte locatus es in re-Disce: nec invideas, quod multa fidelia putet In locuplete penu, defensis pinguibus Umbris; Et piper, et pernæ, Marsi monumenta clientis: Mænaque quod prima nondum defecerit orca.

Hic aliquis de gente hircosa centurionum . Dicat; " Quod sapio, satis est mihi: non ego curo

" Esse quod Arcesilas, ærumnosique Solones, "Obstipo capite, et figentes lumine terram;

72. In what part placed, &c.] Locatus. Metaph. from the placing people according to their rank on the benches at the theatres: or from soldiers, who are placed in particular stations as centinels, &c. which they must not forsake, but by leave, or order, of the commander. Thus the stoics taught that every man was placed, or stationed, in some destined part of the human system. (humana re), which he must not quit at his own will and pleasure, but solely by the permission or command of the Deity.

73. Learn.] Get a thorough, practical knowledge of the abovementioned important particulars, and then you need not envy any

A jar stinks, &c.] Nor envy any great lawyer the presents which are made him, of such quantities of provisions, that they grow stale and putrid before he can consume them. Penus-i, or -us, signifies a store of provisions. Ainsw.

74. Fat Umbrians.] The Umbrian and the Marsian were the most plentiful of all the provinces in Italy.

- Being defended-] Ahly and strenuously, in some great cause, in which they were defendants—they sent presents of provisions to their counsel, and this in such quantities, that they could not use them while they were good.

75. And pepper, &c.] And that there is pepper, &c. in the lawyer's store. - The poet means to ridicule such vile presents, as after him Juvenal did. See Juv. sat. vii. 119-21.

Monuments, &c.] Monumentum, or monimentum (from moneo) a memorial of any person or thing. The poet calls these presents of the Marsians, monuments, or memorials of them, because they were the produce of their country, and bespake from whence they came as presents, to refresh their counsel's memory concerning his Marsian clients, who were, perhaps, plaintiffs in the cause against

76. Because the Pilchard, &c.] Because a second jar of pickled herrings, or pilchards, was sent, before the first that had been sent

What fish the mæna was is not certain, but something, we may suppose, of the herring, pilchard, or anchovy kind, which was pickled, and put up in jars.

The Stoics were no friends to the lawyers; not that they condemned the profession itself, but because it induced men to sell their voices, in order to gratify their covetous desire of gain, which, by

80

Thee to be, and in what part thou art placed in the human system— Learn: -- nor be envious, that many a jar stinks

In a rich store, the fat Umbrians being defended,

And pepper, and gammous of bacon, the monuments of a Marsian client, 75

And because the pilchard has not yet failed from the first jar.

Here some one, of the stinking race of centurions,

May say; "What I know is enough for me. I don't care

"To be what Arcesilas was, and the wretched Solons, "With the head awry, and fixing the eyes on the ground, the way, could not be very considerable, if it consisted only in such fees as are above mentioned. Comp. Juv. sat. vii. 106-21.

However, Persius makes his philosopher, in his discourse to his pupils, take an opportunity of ridiculing the lawyers, with no little contempt and severity, by telling the young men, that, if possessed of all the valuable principles of moral philosophy, they need not envy the fees of the lawyers, which, by the way, he represents in the most ridiculous and contemptible light.

77. Here some one, &c. The poet here represents the philosopher as anticipating some objections which might be made to his doctrines, on the subject of studying philosophy, which he does, by way of answering them; and thus he satirizes the neglect and contempt of philosophy by the Roman people, and shews the fallacy and absurdity of their arguments against it.

--- Stinking centurions. Hircosus, from hircus, a goat, signifies stinking, rammish, smelling like a goat.

The centurions, and the lower part of the Roman soldiery, were very slovenly, seldom pulled off their clothes, and wore their beards, which they neglected, so that, by the nastiness of their persons, they smelt rank like goats.

Persius makes one of these the spokesman, by which he means, doubtless, to reflect on the opponents, as if none could be of their party but such a low, dirty, ignorant fellow as this.

78. "What I know," Sc. The foundation of all contempt of knowledge is self-sufficiency.

I know enough to answer my purpose, says the centurion; I don't want to be wiser.

79. " Arcesilas." An Æolian by birth, and scholar to Polemon; afterward he came to Athens, and joined himself to Crantor, and became the founder of an academy. He opposed Zeno's opinions, and held, that nothing could be certainly known.

Persius, probably, who was a Stoic, means here to give him a rub, by supposing this ignorant centurion to mention him as a great man.

"Wretched Solons."] Solon was one of the wise men of Greece, and the great lawgiver at Athens.

I would not give a farthing, says the centurion, to be such a philosopher as Arcesilas, or as wise as Solon, who was always making himself miserable with labour and study, or indeed as any such people as Solon was -- (Solones.)

80. "Head awry."] An action which the philosophers much used,

85

- Murmura cum secum, et rabiosa silentia rodunt,
 - "Atque exporrecto trutinantur verba labello,
 - " Ægroti veteris meditantes somnia: gigni
 - " De nihilo nihilum, in nihilum nil posse reverti.
- "Hoc est, quod palles! cur quis non prandeat, hoc est !"

His populus ridet; multumque torosa juventus Ingeminat tremulos, naso crispante, cachinnos.

Inspice; nescio quid trepidat mihi pectus, et ægris-Faucibus exsuperat gravis halitus; inspice sodes, as having the appearance of modesty and subjection. See Horeat. v. lib. ii. l. 92.

80. " Fixing the eyes on the ground."] As in deep thought.

Figentes lumine terram. Hypallage—for sigentes lumina in terram.

81. " Murmurs with themselves."] Persons in deep meditation are apt sometimes to be muttering to themselves.

"Mad silence," &c.] They observed a silence, which, being attended with reclining the head, fixing their eyes on the ground, and only now and then interrupted by a muttering between the teeth, as if they were gnawing or eating their words, made those who saw them take them for madmen, for they appeared like melancholy mad. Perhaps rabiosa silentia may allude to the notion of mad-dogs, who are supposed never to bark.

82. "Words are weighed," &c.I. Trutinantur—metaph. from weighing in scales: so these philosophers appear to be balancing, i.e. deeply considering, their words, with the lip pouted out; an action frequently seen in deep thought.

83. "Meditating the dreams," &c.] Sick men's dreams are proverbial for thoughts which are rambling and incoherent; as such the centurion represents the thoughts and researches of these philosophers: of this he gives an instance-

83—4. "Nothing can be produced," Sc. J. q. d. Ex nihilo nil fit.— This was looked on as an axiom among many of the ancient philosophers, and so taken for granted, that the centurion is here supposed to deride those, who took the pains to get at it by study, as much as we should do a man who should labour hard to find out that two and two make four.

But we are taught, that God made the world out of matter, which had no existence till he created it, contrary to the blind and atheistical notion of the eternity of the world, or of the world's being

God, as the Stoics and others taught.

85. "Is this what you study?" Palles—lit. art pale. See note on sat. i. l. 124.

"Should not dine."] Is it for this that you philosophers half-starve yourselves with fasting, that your heads may be clear.

Mente uti recte non possumus multo cibo et potione completi.

Cic. Tusc. Quæst. 5. Quis for aliquis-lit. some one.

86. The people laugh at this.] At these words the people, who

46 When murmurs with themselves, and mad silence they are gnawing,

" And words are weighed with a stretch'd-out lip,

"Meditating the dreams of an old sick man—that nothing can be produced from nothing, nothing can be return'd into nothing,

"Is this what you study? Is it this why one should not dine?" 85

The people laugh at this, and much the brawny youth

Redoubles the tremulous loud laugh with wrinkling nose.

"Inspect: I know not why my breast trembles, and from my sick "Jaws heavy breath abounds: inspect, I pray you"— are the supposed hearers of this centurion, burst into a horse-laugh

86. The bravony youth, Sc.] The stout, brawny young fellows, the soldiers who stood around, were highly delighted with the centurion's jokes upon the philosophers, and with repeated loud laughter proclaimed their highest approbation.

87. Tremulous loud laughs. Cachinnus signifies a loud laugh, particularly in derision or scern—tremulous denotes the trembling or shaking of the voice in laughter, as ha! ha! ha!

- Wrinkling nose.] In laughter the nose is drawn up in wrinkles. See sat. i. l. 41, note.

88. "Inspect," &c.] The philosopher having ended the supposed speech of the centurion against the study of philosophy, now relates a story, by way of answer; in order to shew, that a man who rejects and ridicules the principles of philosophy, which are to heal the disorders of the mind, acts as fatal a part, as he who, with a fatal distemper in his body, should reject and ridicule the advice of a physician, even act against it, and thus at last destroy himself. The qui, 1.90, is a relative without an antecedent, but may be supplied thus.

Let us suppose a man, who finding himself ill, says to a physician, "Pray, doctor, feel my pulse, observe my case, examine what is the " matter with me."-Inspice.

- "I know not why," &c.] I don't know how or what it is,

but I find an unusual fluttering of my heart.

89. "Heavy breath abounds."] I feel an heaviness and oppression of breath, a difficulty of breathing; which seems here meant, as quickness of pulse and difficulty of breathing are usual symptoms of feverish complaints, especially of the inflammatory kind; also a fetid smell of the breath, which gravis also denotes.

-- "Inspect, I fray you."] Feeling himself ill, and not knowing how it may end, he is very earnest for the physician's advice, and again urges his request.

So it would be with regard to philosophy; if men felt, as they ought, the disorders of their mind, and dreaded the consequences, they would not despise philosophy, which is the great healer of the distempered mind, but apply to it as earnestly as this sick man to the physician.

Qui dicit medico; jussus requiescere, postquam

Tertia compositas vidit nox currere venas,

De majore domo, modice sitiente lagenâ,

Lenia loturo sibi Surrentina rogavit.

"Heus, bone, tu palles." Nihil est. "Videas tamen istud,
"Quicquid id est: surgit tacite tibi lutea pellis."

At tu deterius palles; ne sis mihi tutor;

Jampridem hunc sepeli: tu restas? "Perge, tacebo."
Turgidus hic epulis, atque albo ventre lavatur;
Gutture sulphureas lente exhalante mephites.
Sed tremor inter vina subit, calidumque triental

100

90. Order'd to rest.] Being ordered by the physician to go to bed, and keep himself quiet."

90—1. After a third night. The patient, after about three days observance of the doctor's prescription, finds his fever gone, the symptoms vanished, and his pulse quite composed and calm. As soon as he finds this, he forgets his physician, and his danger, and falls to eating and drinking again as usual.

92. Greater house.] He sends to some rich friend, or neighbour, for some Surrentine wine; which was a small wine, not apt to affect the head, as Pliny observes.

Surrentina vina caput non tenent.

PLIN. xxiii. c. 1.
therefore, drunk in a small quantity, might not have been hurtful; especially as this kind of wine was very old, and therefore very soft and mild, before it was drunk.

A flagon moderately thirsting.] Persons who thirst but little, drink but little: this idea seems to be used here, metaphorically, to denote a flagon that did not require much to fill it—i.e. a moderate sized flagon, but yet holding enough to hurt a man recovering from sickness, if drunk all at one meal, and particularly before bathing, as seems to be the case here.

"93. About to bathe.] Intending to bathe, which, after much eating and drinking, was reckoned very unwholesome. Comp. Juv.

sat. i. 1. 142-4.

94. "Ho! good man," &c.] Away, after an hearty meal, with his belly-full of wine and victuals (1.98) he goes to the baths, where his physician, happening to meet him, accosts him with a friendly concern, and mentions to him some symptoms, which appeared as if he had a dropsy.

"You are pale." Says the physician; you look ill.

-- "It is nothing."] O, says the spark, I am very well-nothing alls me.

"Hône an eye," &c.] Says the physician—be it what it may that may occasion such a paleness, I'd have you take care of it in time.

95. " Yellow skin," &c.] Lutea pellis—the skin of a yellow cast like the yellow-jaundice, which often precedes a dropsy.

90

Who says to a physician; - being order'd to rest-after

A third night hath seen his veins to run composed,

From a greater house, in a flagon moderately thirsting,

He has asked for himself, about to bathe, mild Surrentine.

"Ho! good man, you are pale." "It is nothing." "But have an "eye to it,

"Whatever it is: your yellow skin silently rises."-

95 "But you are pale-worse than I-don't be a tutor to me,

"I have long since buried him, do you remain?"-" Go on -" I'll be silent."

He, turged with dainties, and with a white belly is bathed,

His throat slowly exhaling sulphureous stenches:

But a trembling comes on whilst at his wine, and the warm triental 100

95. " Silently rises."] Tacite-insensibly, by little and little, though you may not perceive it-quasi sensim, rises, swells.

96. "You are pale," &c.] Says the spark, in a huff, to the physician, you are paler than I am—pray look to yourself.

"Don't be a tutor."] "Don't give yourself airs, as if you " were my guardian, and had authority over me."

97. "I have long since," Sc. " It is a great while since I buried

"my tutor."

"Do you remain?"] "Do you presume to take his " place ?"

"Go on-I'll be silent."] "O pray," replies the physician,

"go on your own way-- I shall say no more."

98. Turgid with dainties. Having his stomach and bowels full of meat and drink.

A white belly. When the liver or spleen is distempered, as in the dropsy, and the chyle is not turned into blood, it circulates in the veins and small vessels of the skin, and gives the whole body a white or pallid appearance. Thus Hor. lib. ii. ode ii.

Crescit indulgens sibi dirus hydrops, Nec sitim pellit, nisi causa morbi Fugerit venis, et aquosus albo Corpore languor.

- Is bathed.] i. e. He persists in going into the bath in this manner, nótwithstanding the warning which had been given him.

99. His throat slowly exhaling, &c.] The fumes of the meat and drink ascend out of the stomach into the throat, from whence they leisurely discharge themselves in filthy steams. Mephitis signifies a stink, particularly a damp, or strong sulphureous smell arising from corrupted water. See Æn. vii. l. 84. Mephitis was a name of Juno, because she was supposed to preside over stinking exhalations.

100. A trembling comes on, &c.] The riotous and gluttonous used to bathe after supper, and in the going in, and in the bath itself, they drank large draughts of hot wine, to produce sweat. Hence Juy. sat. viii. l. 168. thermarum calices. As also after bathing they sometimes drank very hard. See my note on Juv. ubi supr.

Excutit e manibus: dentes crepuere retecti; Uncta cadunt laxis tunc pulmentaria labris: 'Hinc tuba, candelæ. Tandemque beatulus alto Compositus lecto, crassisque lutatus amomis, In portam rigidos calces extendit. At illum Hesterni capite induto subiere Quirites.

105

Tange, miser, venas: et pone in pectore dextram;
Nil calet hic. Summosque pedes attinge, manusque;
Non frigent——visa est si forte pecunia, sive
Candida vicini subrisit molle puella;
Cor tibi rite salit? Positum est algente catino

110

100. Triental.] A little vessel, which was a third part of a larger, and held about a gill; this he has in his hand full of warm wine, but it is shook out of his hand by the trembling with which he is seized.

101. His uncovered teeth, &c.] His face being convulsed, the lips are drawn asunder, and discover his teeth, which grind or gnash—this is frequent in convulsion fits.

102. Greasy soups, &c.] Pulmentarium—chopped meat, with pottage or broth—Ainsw. which undigested meat, vomited up, resembles. He was seized with a violent vomiting, and brought up all the dainties which he had filled his stomach with before he went into the bath.

—— From his loose lips.] Hippocrat, in Prognostic, says, that when the lips appear loose and hanging down, it is a deadly sign.

103. Hence the trumpet.] Of this intemperance he dies. The funerals of the rich were attended with trumpets and lights—the poor had only tibiæ, small pipes which played on the occasion.

--- This happy fellow.] Beatulus-dim, from beatus, happy.

Iron.

103-1. On an high bed.] Laid on an high bier .- Compositus liere seems to express what we mean by laying out a corpse.

104. Daubed over, &c.] After washing the corpse with water, they anointed it with perfumed ointment, of which the amonum, an aromatic shrub, which grew in Armenia, furnished the chief ingredient.—The amonum was used in embalming. Hence momy or mummy. See Answ.

105. His rigid heels, &c.] The Romans always carried the dead heels foremost, noting thereby their last and final departure from their house. Rigid-i. e. stiff with death.

106. Hestequal Romans.] See Juv. sat. iii. 60, note.—When a person of consequence died, all the slaves which he had made free in his life-time attended the funeral; some bore the corpse (subiere—put themselves under the bier,) others walked in procession. These, being freedmen, were reckoned among the Roman citizens; but they were looked on in a mean light, and were contemptuously called hesterni, Romans of yesterday—i. e. citizens whose dignity was of very short standing. Thus the first gentleman or nobleman of his

He shakes out of his hands: his uncover'd teeth crashed,
Then the greasy soups fall from his loose lips:
Hence the trumpet, the candles: and, at last, this happy fellow on Bed laid, and daubed over with thick ointments,

Extends his rigid heels towards the door: but him

105

The hesternal Romans, with cover'd head, sustained.

"Touch, wretch, my veins, and put your right hand on my breast:
"Nothing is hot here: and touch the extremes of my feet and "hands:

"They are not cold."-" If haply money be seen or

"The fair girl of your neighbour smile gently,

110

"Does your heart leap aright ?- there is placed in a cold dish family was called novus homo.—So we, in contradistinction to families which are old, and have been long dignified, say, of some family lately ennobled, that it is a family of yesterday.

106. Cover'd head.] Wearing the pileus, or cap, which was the signal of liberty. Servum ad pileum vocare, signified to give a slave his liberty, which they did, among the Romans, by first shaving his head, and then putting a cap upon it. AINSW.

107. "Touch, wretch, my veins." It is very evident, from the four last lines, that the case, which the philosopher has put, is to be taken in an allegorical sense; and that, by the conduct of the wretched libertine, who rejected his physician's advice, and proceeded in his absurd courses, till he fixed a disorder upon him which brought him to the grave, he meant to represent the conduct of those who despised the philosophers, those physicians of the mind, and set at nought the precepts which they taught, till, by a continuance in their vices, their case became desperate, and ended in their destruction.

However, the opponent is supposed to understand what the philosopher said, in his story of the libertine, in a mere literal and gross sense, and is therefore represented as saying—"What's all this to the purpose? What is this to me? I am not sick—I don't want a physician—try, feel my pulse."

"On my breast." To feel the regular pulsation of my heart.

108. "Nothing is hot here." There's no sign of any feverish heat.

"Touch the extremes," &c.] You'll find there the natural heat; no coldness as in the feet and hands of a dying man.

109. "If haply money be seen."] Here the philosopher explains himself, and seems to say, "I grant that your bodily health is good, but how is your mind? does not this labour under the diseases of covetousness, fleshly lust, intemperance, fear, and anger? As a proof of this, let me ask you, if a large sum of money comes in view, or your neighbour's handsome daughter should smile upon you—does your heart move calmly as it ought, do you feel no desire of possessing either?

111. "There is placed," Se.] What think you of a vile dish of Durum olus; et populi cribro decussa farina: Tentemus fauces. Tenero latet ulcus in ore Putre, quod haud deceat plebeià radere betà.

Alges, cum excussit membris timor albus aristas: Nunc, face suppositâ, fervescit sanguis, et irà Scintillant oculi: dicisque, facisque, quod ipse Non sani esse hominis, non sanus juret Orestes 115 hard, half-boiled cabbage, or coleworts, and coarse bread, such as the common people eat. Farina is lit. meal or flour; here, by meton. the bread itself which is made of it.—Shaken through the sieve of the people—i. e. of the poorer sort, who used coarse sieves, which let more of the bran and husks through, and therefore their bread was coarser than that of the gentry.

113. Try your jaws.] Whether they can devour such coarse fare, or whether you would not find yourself as unable to chew, or swallow it, as if you had a sore and putrid ulcer lurking in your mouth, too tender for such coarse food, and which it would not be at all fitting to injure, by scratching or rubbing against it with vulgar food.

114. Beet.] Beta—some sort of hard, coarse, and unsavoury herb. Ainsw. Put here by meton, for any kind of ordinary harsh food.

If you found this to be the case, you may be certain that you have a luxurious appetite.

115. When white fear, &c.] You said that you had no cold in the extremes of your feet and hands—but how is it with you when you shudder with fear?—The Stoics were great advocates for apathy, or freedom from all passions, fear among the rest. White fear, so called from the paleness of countenance that attends it.

115. Rous'd the bristles.] Arista signifies an ear of corn, or the beard of corn. Sometimes, by catachresis, an hair or bristle, which is often said to stand an end when people are in a fright.

116. Now with a torch, &c.] He now charges him with the disease of violent anger, the blood set on fire, as if a burning torch were applied, and eyes sparkling and flashing fire as it were .-- In this situation, says he, you say and do things, that even Orestes himself, mad as he was, would swear were 'the words' and actions of a person out of his senses. So that, though you may think you are well, because you find no feverish heat in your body, yet you are troubled with a fever of the mind every time you are angry. this, as well as with regard to the diseases of covetousness, lust, luxury, and fear, which are all within you, you as much stand in need of a physician for your mind, as the poor wretch whom I have been speaking of, stood in need of a physician for his body; nor did he act more oppositely to the dictates of sound reason by despising his physician, and rejecting his remedies for his bodily complaints, than you do, by despising the philosophers, and rejecting their precepts, which are the only remedies for the disorders of the mind.

- "An hard cabbage, and flour shaken thro' the sieve of the people:
- " Let us try your jaws: a putrid ulcer lies hid in your tender mouth,
- "Which it would be hardly becoming to scratch with a plebeian beet.
 - "You are cold, when white fear has rous'd the bristles on your limbs:
- " Now, with a torch put under, your blood grows hot, and with anger
- "Your eyes sparkle, and you do and say, what, Orestes himself
- "Not in his sound mind, would swear was not the part of a man in his right senses."

Thus the philosopher is supposed to conclude his discourse with his opponent, leaving an useful lesson on the minds of his idle and lazy pupils; who neglected their studies to indulge in sloth and luxury, not considering the fatal distempers of their minds, which, if neglected, must end in their destruction.

117. Orestes.] Was the son of Agamemnon and Clytemnestra. He slew his own mother, and Ægysthus, her adulterer, who had murdered his father. He killed Pyrrhus, the son of Achilles, in the temple of Apollo, for marrying Hermione, who had been promised to him by her father Menelaus. Apollo sent furies to haunt him for the profanation of his temple, and forced him to expiate his crimes at the altar of Diana Taurica. See Juv. sat. xv. l. 116—19.

See Hor. sat. iii. lib. ii. l. 133, et seq. in which satire Horace, with a degree of humour and raillery peculiar to himself, exposes the doctrine of the Stoic philosophers, which was, that all mankind were madmen and fools, except those of their own sect—this he, with infinite humour and address, turns upon themselves, and naturally concludes, upon their own premises, that they were greater fools than the rest of the world.

The Stoics were a proud, harsh, severe, and sour sect, in many particulars not very different from the Cynics. The reader may find an instructive account of their principles, doctrines, and practices, as well as an edifying use made of them, in that masterly performance of Dr. Leland, intitled—" The Advantage and Necessity of the "Christian Revelation," vol. ii. p. 140—223.

END OF THE THIRD SATIRE.

Called the street of the stree

SATIRA IV.

ARGUMENT.

The sting of this Satire is particularly aimed at Nero; but the Poet has been cautious, and therefore has written it under the notion of Socrates admonishing his pupil, young Alcibiades: under this fiction he attacks Nero's unfitness to manage the reins of government, his lust, his cruelty, his drunkenness, his luxury and effeminacy. He also reprehends the flattery of Nero's courtiers, who endeavoured to

REM populi tractas? (barbatum hæc crede magistrum Dicere, sorbitio tollit quem dira circutæ.)
Quo fretus? dic hoc, magni pupille Pericli.
Scilicet ingenium, et rerum prudentia velox,
Ante pilos venit; dicenda, tacendaque, calles!
Ergo, ubi commotâ fervet plebecula bile,
Fert animus calidæ fecisse silentia turbæ.

Line 1. Do you manage, &c. J Do you take upon yourself the management of public affairs—the government of the state?

--- Think.] i. e. Let us suppose-imagine.

— The bearded master. I Socrates, who, like other philosophers, wore a beard, as a mark of wisdom and gravity—let us suppose him thus to discourse to his pupil Alcibiades.

2. Dire potion, &c. J. Socrates was put to death at Athens, on the accusation of Anitus and Melitus. He was condemned to drink the juice of hemlock. See Juv. sat. xiii. l. 185, 6, note-

3. Upon what relying?] What are your qualifications for this, that you rely upon as sufficient for so arduous an undertaking?—

orw wisever, says Socrates to Alcibiades.

—— O pupil, Sc.] The father of young Alcibiades left him under the care and guardianship of Pericles, who was a wise and great statesman, and who administered the affairs of Athens for forty years. Alcibiades was prone to luxury and other vices, but giving himself to be instructed by Socrates, he was somewhat reclaimed. See Ainsw. Alcibiades.

4. To be sure.] Scilicet is here ironical, and is put to introduce the following lines, which are all, to l. 13, ironical, and lash Nero, under the person of young Alcibiades.

Genius.] Ingenium—capacity, judgment.

4. Quick foresight, &c.] Prudentia—a natural quickness and foresight of things, and an habitual acting accordingly.

SATIRE IV.

ARGUMENT.

make his vices pass for virtues. It may be supposed, that our Poet might mean to represent Seneca, Nero's tutor, under the character of Socrates, the tutor of young Alcibiades; and Nero, Seneca's pupil, under the character of Alcibiades. Persius has, in this Satire, almost transcribed Plato's first Alcibiades. See Spectator, No. 207.

Do you manage the bus'ness of the people? (think the bearded

To say these things, whom the dire potion of hemlock took off.)
Upon what relying? tell this, O pupil of great Pericles.

To be sure, genius, and quick foresight of things,

Come before hairs: you know well what is to be spoken, and what kept in silence.

5

Therefore when the lower sort of people grow warm with stirr'd bile, Your mind carries you to have made silence to the warm crowd,

5. Before hairs.] i. e. The hairs of the beard.—According to Suet. Nero began to reign before his seventeenth year.

— You know well, Sc.] This is a most important qualification in the chief governour of a state, to know when to speak, and when to be silent—what to impart to the people, and what conceal from them—what to take public notice of, and what to pass over in silence: therefore when—

6. The lower sort of people.] Plebecula (dim. from plebs), the mob, as we say; who, in all states, are, at times, apt to be troublesome if displeased.

With stirr'd bile. Wax warm with anger, their choler stirred, put into commotion-

7. Your mind carries you.] Your mind is so persuaded of your dignity and authority, that it carries you into a notion, that you have but to wave your hand, and the people, though in ever so great a ferment, would be instantly appeared.

--- To have made silence, &c.] The thought has but to come into your mind, and the thing seems to have been already done. See

Æn. i. 152-7

10

Majestate manûs. Quid deinde loquere?—' Quirites, 'Hoc, puto, non justum est; illud male; rectius istud.' Scis etenim justum geminâ suspendere lance Ancipitis libræ: rectum discernis, ubi inter Curva subit; vel cum fallit pede regula varo: Et potis es nigrum vitio præfigere theta.

Quin tu, igitur, summâ nequicquam pelle decorus,

8. What then, &c.] q. d. Now let us suppose you to have succeeded, and to have made silence, fecisse silentia—what would be your speech to them, in order to their dispersion?

"Romans." Quirites.—The poet supposes him to address the mob by the ancient and honourable title of Quirites, in order to gain their attention; and by this, too, he marks out who is meant by Alcibiades; for the Romans, not the Athenians, were called Quirites, from Quirinus. i. c. Romulus, their first founder.

9. " I think." Puto—i. e. in my opinion. He speaks with the diffidence and fear of a young and inexperienced man, instead of the boldness and authority of an old experienced governor.

"Is not just," Sc.] He represents Alcibiades (i. e. young Nero) as a miserable and puerile orator, and making a speech consisting of very few words, (and those ill calculated to allay the turbulence of an enraged mob,) and therefore not fit for the government of such a place as Rome, where seditions and risings of the people were very frequent, and which required all the gravity and force of popular eloquence to appease them.

"That is badly," &c.] He represents Alcibiades, as if he were saying over his lesson about the to director, to reador, to director, to his master Socrates; in order to ridicule the supposed speech of Nero to the people, which is more like a school-boy's repeating his lesson in moral philosophy, than like a manly authoritative oration, calculated for the arduous occasion of appeasing an incensed and seditious mob.

10. You know how to suspend, &c.] i. e. To weigh and balance between right and wrong; and to resolve all difficult and doubtful questions concerning them. Metaph. taken from weighing in scales, to ascertain the truth of the weight of any thing.

11. The doubtful balance.] Not knowing which way it will incline, till the experiment be made. So there may be questions which may be very doubtful concerning right, and not to be decided, till very nicely weighed in the mind.

What is strait, &c.] Metaph: from measuring things by a strait rule, by which is discovered every deviation and inclination from it. This was applied to morals; what was right was called rectum—what was not right, curvum. So sat. iii. 52.

Haud tibi inexpertum curvos deprendere mores.

11-12. When between crooked things, &c.] Virtue may sometimes be found, so situated between two vices, as to make the decision

With the majesty of your hand: what then will you speak? Ro"mans,

"This, I think, is not just; that is badly-that more right."

For you know how to suspend what is just, in the double scale 10 Of the doubtful balance: you discern what is strait when between Crooked things it comes, or when a rule deceives with a wry foot; And you are able to fix the black theta to vice.

But do you therefore (in vain beautiful in your outward skin) of what is right very difficult; its extremes may seem to border on vice, either on one side or the other.

For instance, when Junius Brutus put his two sons to death, for siding with Tarquin after his expulsion from Rome, this action of Brutus, however virtuous it might be, certainly bordered on cruelty and want of natural affection on one hand, and want of justice and public spirit on the other. See Juv. sat. viii. 1. 261, note.

12. When a rule deceives, &c.] Metaph. from legs which bend inward: bandy legs, which are misshapen and uneven. You also know, when on account of some necessary exceptions, the rule itself would be uneven and wrong, and would deceive, if observed according to the letter of it.

For instance, it is a rule of justice to return a deposit, when demanded by the owner.—A man, in his right mind, leaves his sword in his friend's hands—afterwards he runs mad, and, with an apparent intent of doing mischief, comes and demands his sword:—the law, in the letter of it, says, "return it;" but this, in such a case, would be a distortion of right, which, if obeyed, would deceive him that complied with it into a wrong action.

13. To fix the black theta.] You are perfectly skilled in the proper distribution of punishments. The letter ⊕ was put to the names of those who were capitally condemned among the Greeks, it being the first letter of the word Savaros, death.

q. d. You perfectly understand criminal as well as civil justice.

In all these four last lines Persius is to be understood directly contrary to what he says, and to speak ironically of Nero's abilities for the distribution of civil and criminal justice. In short, he means that Nero had not any sort of knowledge or experience which could fit him for the government on which he was entered.

14. But, &c.] The poet having, in the four preceding lines, represented Socrates as insinuating, by a severe irony, that his pupil was destitute of all the requisites which form a chief magistrate, (which we are to understand as applied by Persius to young Nero,) now represents him as throwing off the disguise of irony, and, in plain terms, arraigning his affecting the government, young and inexperienced as he was, and, to that end, his exhibiting his handsome person, clad in a triumphal robe, in order to captivate the minds of the silly rabble—see Tacit. Ann. lib. xiii. and Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. xvi. p. 356.—when he, instead of governing others, stood in need of that wisdom which could enable him to govern himself.

Ante diem blando caudam jactare popello
Desinis, Anticyras melior sorbere meracas?
Quæ tibi summa boni est?—' unctâ vixisse patellâ

Semper, et assiduo curata cuticula sole.'

14. Therefore.] As you are destitute of the preceding qualifications of a chief magistrate.—(See l. 10-14.)

-— In vain beautiful, &c.] Alcibiades was a beautiful youth—so, all agree, Nero was—but, alas! how vain and empty was this outward embellishment of a fine person, if his mind were replete with ignorance and vice, so that he was utterly unfit for the high station to which he aspired!

15. Before the day. Before the time comes, when a maturer age, and an acquired knowledge in the affairs of government, shall have qualified you properly.—Nero, though not fourteen years old, after his adoption by the emperor Claudius in preference to his own son Britannicus, was presented with the manly robe, which qualified him for honours and employments. At the same time, the senate decreed, that, in his twentieth year, he should discharge the consulship, and, in the mean time, as consul designed, be invested with proconsular authority out of Rome, and be styled prince of the Roman youth.

— Boast your tail.] Metaph. alluding to the peacock's tail, which, when expanded, is very beautiful, and highly admired, by children particularly; (comp. Juv. sat. vii. 32, note.)—So young Nero, in order to draw the eyes and affections of the common people upon him, appeared at the Circensian games in a triumphal robe, the mark and ornament of the imperial state. Ant. Hist.

ubi supra.

Caudam jactare, in this line, is by some interpreted by wagging the tail—metaph. alluding to dogs wagging the tail, when they seem to fawn and flatter, in order to ingratiate themselves with those whom they approach. Comp. sat. i. 87, and note. This undoubtedly gives a very good sense to the passage, as descriptive of Nero's flatteries and blandishments towards the populace at Rome, in order to gain their favour. But I rather think that the interpretation which I have preferred (for both are to be found in commentators) is most agreeable to the preceding line:

Quin tu, igitur, summa nequicquam pelle decoruswhich seems to allude to the appearance which Nero made, when to draw the eyes and affections of the people upon him, he exhibited himself in a triumphal robe at the Circensian games. See l. 14, n. 1.

Casaubon concludes his note on l. 15, as giving a preference to the allusion which I have adopted—"Hoc autem venuste dictum 2 "Persio—jactare se populo—Ut apud Juvenalem,

" Ipse lacernatæ cum se jactaret amicæ."

Juv. sat. i. 1. 62.

"Translatum a pavonibus, quando

"---pictâ pandunt spectacula caudâ." Hor, sat. ii. lib. ii. l. 26,

"Tunc enim creduntur jactare se fæminis," &c.

Before the day, to boast your tail to the fawning rabble Leave off, more fit to drink up the pure Anticyræ?

"What is your sum of good?"—"To have always lived with a de-

"Dish, and the skin taken care of in the continual sun."--

15. The favoring rabble.] Blando—flattering, fawning, easily captivated with outward shew, and as easily prevailed on to make court to it. Popellus, dim. of populus—small, silly, or poor people—the rabble or mob. Ainsw.

16. Leave off.] Desinis.—q. d. Do you desist from engaging the admiration and flatteries of the people by your fine outward appearance, as though you aspired at governing them-

--- More fit.] Melior-i. e. aptior-i. e. when you are fitter to be drinking hellebore to purge out your madness of vice and folly.

The pure Antycyre.] Anticyre merace—whole isles of pure hellebore. Arnsw. Anticyre were two islands in the Ægean sea, famous for producing large quantities of hellebore, much in repute for purging the head, not only in madness, but to clear it, and quicken the apprehension. Anticyre stands here for the hellebore which grew there. Meton. See sat. i. l. 51, note; and Hor. lib. ii. sat. iii. 1. 83.

All this is, in substance, what Plato represents Socrates saying to Alcibiades; but Persius is to be understood as applying it to Nero, who, having taken the reins of government, without being qualified for the management of them, flattered, and paid court to the senate and people, in order to gain their favour; when all he did, that appeared right, did not proceed from inward virtue and real knowledge, but from counterfeiting and dissembling both.—Leave off this, says Persius, till being properly instructed and informed in the principles of real wisdom and virtue, you may be that really which now you only pretend—in the mean time, as you are at present, you are more fit to be put under a regimen of hellebore than for any thing else. As a proof of this, let me ask you—

17. " Your sum of good."] Your summum bonum, or chief good.

If you answer truly, you must own it to be-— To have always lived," &c.] To fare sumptuously, and to live in all the delicacies of gluttony.—This is what Persius supposes to be Nero's answer.

18. "Skin taken care of," &c.] They used to anoint their bodies, and then bask in the sun, to make their skin imbibe the oil, that it might be smooth and delicate. See MART. Epigr. lib. x. epigr. xii.

Here Persius attacks the luxury and effeminacy of Nero, who Here Persius attacks the luxury and effeminacy of Nero, who had not yet thrown off the mask; but whatever vices and debaucheries he might practise privately, to the public he still continued to personate a character of some remaining virtues.

- "Continual sun."] Hypallage-for continually in the sun.

See Juv. sat. xi. 1. 203.

Expecta; haud aliud respondeat hæc anus. I inunc, Dinomaches ego sum, suffla, sum candidus. Esto,
Dum ne deterius sapiat pannucia Baucis,
Cum bene discincto cantaverit ocima vernæ,
Ut nemo in sese tentat descendere! Nemo:
Sed præcedenti spectatur mantica tergo.
Quæsieris, 'nostin' Vectidî prædia?', 'Cujus?'
Dives arat Curibus quantum non milvus oberret.'

19. "Stay."] Stop a little—there's an old woman crying her herbs—ask her what she thinks the chief good, and you'll hear from her as wise an answer as you have given me, says the poet, as in the person of Socrates to Alcibiades.

"Go now," "Ec.] i. e. Go now where you please, if such be your ideas of the chief good, and boast that you are nobly born, the son of the noble Dinomache, that great and illustrious woman—but how will this fit you for government, while your ideas are so ignoble and base? Alcibiades was the son of a noble woman of that name—Nero of Agrippina.

name—Nero of Agrippina.

20. "Puff up."] Suffla—" be proud of this—puff yourself up "with this conceit—but alas! of what avail is this, when the first "wrinkled old woman you meet is as well informed, touching the "chief and highest good of man, as you are."

21. "Baucis."] The name of an old woman. See Ov. Met. lib. viii. fab. viii, ix.—here put for any of that character. Pannuceus significs ragged, or clothed in rags; also wrinkled.

22. "Cried herbs," & c.] Ocimum is an herb called basil, but put here in the plural number for all sorts of herbs, which, as well as this, were cried and sold by old women about the streets of Rome.

Discinctus signifies, lit. ungirt, the clothes hanging loose—hence slovenly—and perhaps it may therefore be a proper epithet for one of the common slaves, who might be usually slovenly in their appearance; one of these hearing the woman cry her herbs, goes out into the street and buys some.

Some are for making cantaverit ocima a figurative expression for the old woman's quarrelling, and abusing the slave; but I see no reason for departing from the above literal explication, which, to me, seems to contain a very natural description of an old herb-woman, crying her herbs in a sort of singing or chant, such as is heard every day in London, and one of the lower servants in the family hearing her, and going into the street to her to buy some.

The poet's meaning, here, is to mortify Nero's vanity, with regard to his person and appearance. "You boast of your youth, birth, and fortune—of your beauty and elegance of ap"pearance"—all which may be understood by candidus—

Candidus, et talos a vertice pulcher ad imos. Hon. epist.ii. lib. ii. 1. 4.

q. d. "I grant all that you can say on these subjects; but how ilittle are all these, in comparison of the beauty and ornaments of the mind, in which you don't exceed a poor old, ragged, and

- "Stay; this old woman would hardly answer otherwise.—Go now—" I am of Dinomache:"—" puff up:"—" I am handsome:"—be it so:
- "Since ragged Baucis is not less wise than you,
- "When she has well cried herbs to a slovenly slave."

How nobody tries to descend into himself! nobody:

But the wallet on the preceding back is looked at.—

You may be asked—"Do you know the farms of Vectidius?"
"Whose?"

"Rich he ploughs at Cures as much as a kite can not fly over."

"" wrinkled hag, that cries herbs about the street! She is not worse of off (deterius) than you, in point of wisdom and knowledge; nay she may be said to exceed you, since she is endowed with wisdom concerning to fulfil, and will to perform, what her station of life requires: she cries her herbs well, and knows how to recommend them to the best advantage to the buyers; but you are destitute of all those qualities which are requisite to perform the duties of that station, in which you are placed as the chief governor of a great people."

23. Nobody tries, &c.] However profitable self knowledge may be, yet how backward are men to endeavour to search and know themselves !- in short nobody does this.

24. The wallet, &c.] Alluding to that fable of Æsop, which we find in Phædrus as follows:

Peras imposuit Jupiter nobis duas:
Propriis repletam vitiis post tergum dedit,
Alienis ante pectus suspendit gravem.
Hac re videre nostra mala non possumus,
Alii simul delinquunt, censores sumus.

Hence, though we do not see our own faults, which are thrown (as it were) behind our backs, yet those who follow us can see them, and will look at them sharply enough; thus we also look at the faults of those whom we follow.

Dixerit insanum qui me, totidem audiet, atque Respicere ignoto discet pendentia tergo. Hor. lib. ii. sat. iii. l. 298, 9.

25. You may be asked, &c.] i. e. Suppose you are inquired of by somebody, and are asked, "Whether you know the farms on "the estate of Vectidius?"

"Whose?"] i. e. Whose say you?—as if not knowing whom he means to inquire about.

26. Rich he ploughs," &c.] I mean, says he, that rich fellow, that has more arable land than a kite can skim over in a day. Oberro signifies to wander about in an irregular manner, and well describes the flight of a kite, which does not proceed strait forward, but keeps wheeling about, in an irregular manner, in search of prey. This seems to be proverbial for a large and extensive landed estate. See Juv. sat. ix. l. 55. tot milvos intra tua pascua lassos.—Cures was a city of the Sabines, or rather the country about it.

VOL. II.

Hunc ais? hunc, dîs iratis genioque sinistro, Qui quandoque jugum pertusa ad compita figit, Seriolæ veterem metuens deradere limum, Ingemit, hoc bene sit; tunicatum cum sale mordens Cæpe, et farratam pueris plaudentibus ollam, Pannosam fæcem morientis sorbet aceti.

30

At si unctus cesses, et figas in cute solem, Est prope te ignotus, cubito qui tangat, et acre

27. "Him do you say?"] Do you mean that Vectidius, who has so much land at Cures?—say you—

- "Him."] Hunc-novi understood-q. d. O yes, I know him of whom you speak.

"Angry gods." It was a notion among the ancient heathen, that the gods were displeased and angry with those with whom they themselves were displeased, even at the time they were born, and that, therefore, through life they were under an adverse fate. See Juv. sat. i.l. 49, 50; and Juv. sat. x. 129.

Dis ille adversis genitus, satoque sinistro.

"An unlucky genius."] See sat. ii. 1. 3, note.

"With angry gods, and adverse genius born." BREWSTER.

Sinister, as has been already observed, (see Juv. xiv. 1, note,) means unfortunate, unlucky, untoward; also unfavourable.

28. "Fixes a yoke," &c.] This alludes to a festival time, when, after ploughing and sowing were over, the husbandmen hung up the yokes of their oxen on stakes, or posts, in some public highway, most frequented; therefore they chose the compita, or places where four ways met, where the country people came together to keep their wakes, and to perform their sacrifices to the Lares, or rural gods; hence called Compitalitii. This was a season of great festivity, (something like harvest-home among us,) when the farmers ate and drank with great jollity.

29. "Fearing to scrape," &c.] The ancients, when they put wine into vessels, stopped up the mouth with clay or pitch daubed over it. When it was brought out for use, the mouth was unstopped, by scraping off the covering, that the wine might be poured out. Hor.

lib. i. ode xx. 1. 2, 3.

This poor niggardly wretch, even at a time of festivity, grudged to open a vessel; and, if he did it, seemed as if it threatened his ruin. O, says he, with a groan, may this end well! hoc bene sit—a sort of solemn deprecation, frequently used by the Romans on their undertaking something very weighty and important.

30-1. " A coated onion." Tunicatum-because an onion consists of several coats.

31. "Mess of pottage."] Farratam signifies made of corn: ollam, a pot in which the pottage (which was made of corn, meal, or flour, with water and herbs) was boiled; here, by metonymy, put for its contents—i. e. the pottage. Comp. Juv. sat. xiv. 171, note.

- "Him do you say ?-him with angry gods, and an unlucky genius,
- "Who, whensoever he fixes a yoke at the beaten cross-ways,

"Fearing to scrape off the old clay of a vessel,

"Groans"-" May this be well!" "champing, with salt, a coated 30

66 Onion, and the servants applauding a mess of pottage,

"Sups up the mothery dregs of dying vinegar."-

- "But if anointed you can loiter, and fix the sun in your skin,
- "There is nigh you one unknown, who may touch with the elbow, and sharply
- 31. "Servants applauding."] Even this mean fare, being more than they usually had on other days, therefore they rejoiced at the sight of it, and applauded their master's liberality. Comp Juv. sat. xiv. 1. 126—34.

32. "Sups up the mothery dregs," &c.] Acetum-wine turned sour.

Potet acetum.

Hor, sat. iii. lib. ii. 1. 116. 17.

When wine ferments and turns sour, there is a scum or mouldiness on the top, which bears the appearance of white rags—hence mothery wine was called pannosus. Every word in this line has an emphasis, to describe the covetous miserable wretch who is the subject of it. Sorbet, he sups or drinks up, leaves none—wine turned sour, mothery, the dregs of it, dying, losing even the little spirit it had. So we speak of vapid, flat highers, that have lost all their spirit—we say they are dead, as dead small-beer, &c. All this he is supposed to do, even at a time of feasting, rather than afford himself good liquor.

33. "You can loiter," &c.] Comp. l. 18. If you indulge in laziness, luxury and effeminacy.—The poet here cautions the relator of the faults of Vectidius, and lets him know that some other may make as free with his.

34. "One unknown." Don't think that your faults will be concealed any more than you conceal the faults of other people. Somebody or other, whom perhaps you little think of, and whom you know not—

- "May touch," &c.] May remind you of your vices by a gentle jog of the elbow, and say, " Pray look at home."

34—5. "Sharply spit down," &c.] Acre, a Gracism; for acriter, sharply, with acrimony.—Despuo, literally, is to spit down or upon: hence to spit out in abhorence, to express contempt, abhorrence, detestation: "therefore don't flatter yourself that you will "escape the censure of others, any more than Vectidius, or others, "escape yours—your manners are such, as to call for the utmost "abhorvence, and the sharpest censure." Metaph. from those who spit, on smelling or tasting any that is filthy.

From this place to 1. 42, the thoughts and expressions are by no means proper for literal translation—I have therefore paraphrased them, and shall only observe, that their tendency is indirectly to

35

Desputat in mores; penemque arcanaque lumbi Runcantem, populo marcentes pandere vulvas. Tu cum maxillis balanatum gausape pectas, Inquinibus quare detonsus gurgulio extat? Quinque palæstritæ licet hæc plantaria vellant, Elixasque nates labefactent forcipe aduncâ, 40 Non tamen ista filix ullo mansuescit aratro. Cædimus, inque vicem præbemus crura sagittis: Vivitur hoc pacto: sic novimus. Ilia subter Cæcum vulnus habes; sed lato balteus auro 45

Prætegit: ut mavis, da verba, et decipe nervos, Si potes. 'Egregium cum me vicinia dicat, "Non credam?" viso si palles, improbe, nummo; Si facis, in penem quicquid tibi venit amarum; Si puteal multà cautus vibice flagellas; Nequicquam populo bibulas donaveris aures.

50

charge the young emperor Nero with certain lewd and unnatural actions, which, however hitherto he might keep from the public eye, were yet practised by him in secret.

42. We lash.] Or we strike others, in censuring and publishing their faults.

--- We expose our legs to arrows.] Metaph. from the gladiators, who, while they strike at the adversary, expose their own persons to be wounded where most easily vulnerable. So while we lash or strike others with our tongues, we expose ourselves to be lashed by them in our turn, and to receive the arrows of detraction and defamation into whatever part of our character is most vulnerable. The gladiators could guard the body, but the legs and lower parts were much exposed to the stroke of the adversary.

43. Thus we live.] Vivitur, impers -q. d. This is the manner of common life, censuring and being censured. See sat. iii. 1. 20, luditur, note.

--- Thus we know. Thus we become acquainted with men's characters, by hearing their faults published by their revilers.

44. A blind wound.] i. e. You practise wickedness, which is concealed from the eyes of the world, but yet wounds your conscience; guilt lurks within, and wounds you inwardly,

44-5. A belt-covers it-] Metaph. from the practice of the gladiators, who, when they received a wound, covered it with the broad belt which they wore, in order to keep it from the eyes of the spectators. Thus Nero, by the greatness of his power, and by the splendor of his appearance and situation, (here meant by the figure of a broad belt of gold,) covered his iniquities from the animadversion of the laws, and from the observation of the people.

45. Cheat-and deceive, &c.] Impose upon others, and deceive your own feelings, as much as you please, that is, if you find it possible so to do.

- Cheat.] Da verba. See before, note, sat. iii. l. 19.

- "Spit down on your manners: who by vile arts 35
- " Are making your body smooth and delicate.
- "When you can comb a long anointed beard
- "On your cheeks, why are you shorn elsewhere?
- "When, after all the pains that can be taken,
- "Tho' assisted, in the depilation of your person, by
- "Five strong wrestlers, you can never succeed.
 - "We lash, and in our turn we expose our legs to arrows.
- "Thus we live-thus we know-under your bowels
- "You have a blind wound: but a belt with broad gold
- "Covers it: as you please, cheat—and deceive your nerves, 45
- "If you can."-" When the neighbourhood says I am excellent,
- "Shall I not believe it?"—"If money being seen, O wicked man, your are pale—
- "If you do whatever your lust prompts you to-
- " If cautious, you scourge the puteal with many a wale,
- " In vain shall you give your soaking ears to the rabble.

50

45. "Nerves."] Nervos.—The nerves are the organs of sensation. 46. "If you can".] i. e. But this you cannot do.

"When the neighbourhood says," &c.] These are the words of Alcibiades (i.e. Nero)—in answer to what has been said.

"All the world," says he, "speak of my excellence as a man,
"and as a prince, and would you not have me believe what they " say ?" 47. "If money," &c.] Socrates (i. e. Persius) answers-" Instead " of taking the idea of your own character from the flatteries of the " populace, examine yourself; and if you find that you grow pale, " as it were, at the very sight of money, from an envious and covetous desire after it-if you give the reins to your abominable lusts-if you are committing robberies, murders, and other acts " of cruelty in the streets, cautious to secure yourself by taking "guards with you-in vain," &c .- Puteal (from puteus, a well.) When lightning fell in any place, the old Romans covered the place over, like a public well; and such a place they properly called puteal. There was one in the Roman forum, and near it was the tribunal of the pretor. This was the scene of many of Nero's nightly frolicks, who was a kind of Mohock in his diversions and committed numberless enormities, even murders and robberies, disguised in the habit of a slave: but at last, having been soundly beaten, he grew cautious, and went attended by gladiators. It is to this Persins here alludes. And Nero might well be called the scourge of every place where he transacted such enormities, and be said to leave many marks and wales behind him in those places which were the scenes of his flagitious practices.

50. "In vain," &c.] It will be of very little use to you to let your ears imbibe the applause and flattery of the mob (see before, l. 15.) which ears of yours are as prone to this as a sponge to soak in water.

If your own conscience accuses you of what I have above spoken of, the applauses, which you know yourself to be utterly undeserving of, can give you but little comfort—nor can they make you better than you are.

Respue quod non es: tollat sua munera cerdo: Tecum habita, et nôris quam sit tibi curta supellex.

51. " Reject what you are not."] Persius concludes this Satire with two lines of salutary advice to Nero-

Reject, put away from you, what does not belong to you-lay aside the feigned character under which you appear.

"Let the Cobbler," &c.] Cerdo—put here for the lower people in general. See Juv. sat. iv. l. 153.—q. d. "Give them back" the presents which they make you of adulation and applause; "let them carry them away, and keep them to themselves, or bestow them elsewhere—have nothing to do with them."

- "Reject what you are not-Let the cobbler take away his gifts:
- " Dwell with yourself, and you will know how short your household " stuff is."

52. " Dwell with yourself."] i. e. Retire into thyself; let thine own breast be the abode of thy constant thoughts.

"Your household stuff," &c, You will then find out how poorly furnished you are within, how short your abilities, and how little fitted for the arduous task of government, or indeed for the purposes of civil society.

Metaph. from the furniture of an house-here applied to those qualities of the mind which are necessary to furnish and adorn it, for the purposes of civil and social life.

END OF THE FOURTH SATIRE.

SATIRA V.

ARGUMENT.

This Satire is justly esteemed the best of the six .- It consists of three. parts : in the first of which the Poet highly praises Annaus Cornutus, who had been his preceptor, and recommends other young men to his care .- in the second part, he blames the idleness and sloth of young men, and exhorts them to follow after the liberty and enfranchisement of the mind.—Thirdly, he shews wherein true liberty consists, and

V ATIBUS hic mos est, centum sibi poscere voces, Centum ora, et linguas optare in carmina centum : Fabula seu mœsto ponatur hianda tragœdo, Vulnera seu Parthi ducentis ab inguine ferrum.

CORNUTUS. Quorsum hæc? aut quantas robusti carminis offas 5 Ingeris, ut par sit centeno gutture niti? Grande locuturi, nebulas Helicone legunto: Si quibus aut Prognes, aut si quibus olla Thyestæ Line 1. A custom, &c.] Of epic poets, and sometimes of orators, to adopt this idea.

Hom. Il. ii. for instance:

εδ ει μοι δεκα μεν γλωσσαι, δεκα δε τοματα ειεν.

So VIRG. Geor. ii. l. 43; and Æn. vi. l. 625.

Non mihi si centum linguæ sint, oraque centum.

And, Quint. ad fin. Decl. vi.-Universorum vatum, scriptorumque ora consentiant, vincet tamen res ista mille linguas, &c.

- An hundred voices.] Alluding perhaps to the responses of the Sibyl-VIRG. Æn. vi. l. 43, 4.

> -----Aditus centum, ostia centum Unde ruunt totidem voces responsa Sibyllæ.

2. For verses,] i. e. That, when they compose their verses, their style and language might be amplified and extended, adequately to the greatness and variety of their subjects.

3. Whether a fable.] The subject or story on which they write is called the fable.

- Bawled out, &c.] i. e. Whether they write tragedy, to be acted on the stage. Comp. Juv. sat. vi. l. 635.

Grande Sophocleo carmen bacchamur hiatu.

SATIRE V.

ARGUMENT.

asserts that doctrine of the Stoics, that "a wise man only is free;" and that a slavery to vice is the most miserable of all.

The Satire begins in the form of a dialogue between Persius and Cornutus.

HIS is a custom with poets, to ask for themselves an hundred voices,

And to wish for an hundred mouths, and an hundred tongues for their verses:

Whether a fable be proposed to be bawled out by the sad tragedian: Or the wounds of a Parthian drawing the sword from his groin.

CORNUTUS. Wherefore these things? or how great pieces of robust verse.

Dost thou thrust in, that it should be meet to strive with an hundred throats?

Let those who are about to speak something great, gather clouds in Helicon.

If to any either the pot of Progne, or if to any that of Thyestes.

4. Or the wounds of a Parthian, &c.] Or write an epic poem on the wars of the Romans with the Parthians, in which the latter were overcome.

Aut labentis equo describere vulnera Parthi. Hor. sat. i. lib. ii, 1. 15

5. CORNUTUS. Wherefore these things?] Quorsum—to what end, purpose, or intent, do you mention these things, as if you were wishing them for yourself?

. - How great pieces, &c.] Metaph. from a person who puts large lumps or pieces of meat into his mouth, big enough to require a number of throats to swallow them.

q. d. What great and huge heroics art thou setting about, which thou canst think equal to such a wish, in order to enable thee to do them justice?

7. Gather clouds in Helicon. Let them go to mount Helicon, (see ante, the Prologue, l. 1, note,) and there gather up the mists which hang over the sacred top, and which teem, no doubt, with poetical rapture.

8. The pot of Progne, &c.] i. e. If any shall have his imagina-

VOL. II.

Fervebit, sæpe insulso cænanda Glyconi.
Tu neque anhelanti, coquitur dum massa camino,
Folle premis ventos: nec clauso murmure raucus,
Nescio quid tecum grave cornicaris inepte:
Nec scloppo tumidas intendis rumpere buccas.
Verba togæ sequeris, juncturâ callidus acri,
Ore teres modico, pallentes radere mores
Doctus, et ingenuo culpam defigere ludo.

15

10

tion warmed with the feasts of Progne and Thyestes, so as to write upon them.

Progne was the wife of Tereus, king of Thrace: Tereus fell in love with Philomela, sister to Progne, ravished her, and cut out her tongue. In revenge Progne killed Itys, her own son by Tereus, and served him up at a feast to be eaten by his father.

8. Thyestes.] Atreus, king of Mycenæ, banished his brother Thyestes, for defiling his wife Ærope. afterwards, recalling him, invited him to a banquet, ordered the children he had by her to be dressed and set before him on a table.

9. Often to be supped on by foolish Glycon.] He was some wretched tragedian of those times, who acted the parts of Tereus and Thyestes, and, accordingly, represented both of them as eating their children.

10. Thou neither, while the mass, Sc.] Metaph. from smiths heating iron in furnaces, where the fire is kept up to a great heat by the blowing with bellows, in order to render the iron ductile, and easily formed into what shape they please.

g. d. You, says Cornutus, are not forging in your brain hard and difficult subjects, and blowing up your imagination, to form them into sublime poems. See Hor. lib. i. sat. iv. l. 19-21.

11. Nor hoarse, &c.] Nor do you foolishly prate, like the hoarse croaking of a crow, with an inward kind of murmur to yourself, as if you were muttering something you think very grand and noble. See sat. iii. l. 81, and note.

13. Tunid cheeks, &c.] Scloppus is a sound made with puffing the cheeks, and then forcing the air out suddenly by striking them together with the hands.

q. d. Nor do you, when you repeat your verses, appear as if you were making a noise like that of cheeks puffed up almost to bursting, and then suddenly stricken together, like the swelling and bombast method of elocution used by the fustian poets of our day.

Cornutus praises Persius in a threefold view. 1st. As not heating his imagination with high and difficult subjects. 2ndly. As not affecting to be meditating and murmuring within himself, as if he would be thought to be producing some great performance. 3rdly. As in the repetition of his verses avoiding all bombastic utterance.

14. Words of the gown.] Toga is often used to signify peace—Cedant arma togæ. Cic.—for, in time of peace, the Romans wore only the toga, or gown; in time of war, the toga was thrown aside for the sagum, or soldier's cloak.

Shall be hot, often to be supped on by foolish Glycon. Thou neither, while the mass is heated in the furnace, 10 Pressest the wind with breathing bellows; nor hoarse, with close mur-

Foolishly croakest I know not what weighty matter with thyself; Nor intendest to break thy tumid cheeks with a puff.

You follow the words of the gown, cuuning in sharp composition, Smooth with moderate language, to lash vicious manners Skilled, and to mark a crime with ingenuous sport.

Cornutus here means to say, that Persius did not write of wars and bloodshed, but confined himself to subjects of common life, such as passed daily among the people, and made use of plain words suited to his matter.

14. Cunning in sharp composition.] Acute and ingenious in a neat composition of verse. Metaph, from those who work in marble, who so exactly join their pieces together, and polish them so neatly, that the joints can't be perceived. See sat. i. l. 64, note.

15. Smooth with moderate language. Teres signifies smooth, even; also accurate, exact. Modico ore-with a moderate, modest language, or style of writing, neither rising above, nor sinking below the subject, nor flying out into that extravagance of expression, so much then in vogue. See sat. i. l. 98-102.

To lash.] Radere, lit. signifies to scratch, or scrape up, or rub against; here, by meton. to lash or chastise. When a satirist does this effectually, the guilty turn pale at his reproof: for paleness is the effect of fear; and fear, of conscious guilt. Hence Hor. epist. i. lib. i. l. 60. 1.

> ---- Hic murus aheneus esto, Nil conscire sibi, nulla pallescere culpa.

— Vicious manners.] Pallentes mores—lit. manners turning pale—the effect for the cause. Meton. See the last note.

16. Mark a crime with ingenuous sport. Defigere-metaph. from fixing a dagger, or critical mark, against any word or sentence, either to be corrected as faulty, or struck out as superfluous. This the Greeks called zerriv, siger, compungere, confodere, or the like.

So Persius is said to stigmatize, or mark down, a crime with ingennous sport-i. e. with well-bred raillery, in order to its correction; to fix a mark against it.

Qu.—If this be not going rather too far with regard to Persius, who seems not much inclined to politeness, with respect to those whom he satirizes, but rather treats them with severity and roughness?

Horace indeed deserved such an account to be given of him.

Comp. sat. i, l. 116-18.

John Hanvil, a monk of St. Alban's, about the year 1190, thus writes on the different merits of Horace and Persius:

> Persius in pelago Flacci decurrit, et audet Mendicasse stylum Sagiræ, serraque cruentus Rodit, et ignorat polientem pectora limam.

Hinc trahe quæ dicas: mensasque relinque Mycenis Cum capite et pedibus; plebeiaque prandia nôris.

Pers. Non equidem hoc studeo, bullatis ut mihi nugis
Pagina turgescat, dare pondus idonea fumo.
Secreti loquimur: tibi nunc, hortante camœnâ,
Excutienda damus præcordia; quantaque nostræ
Pars tua sit, Cornute, animæ, tibi, dulcis amice, Ostendisse juvat. Pulsa, dignoscere cautus
Ouid solidum crepet, et pictæ tectoria linguæ.

25

His ego centenas ausim deposcere voces, Ut, quantum mihi te sinuoso in pectore fixi, Voce traham pura: totumque hoc verba resignent, Quod latet arcana non enarrabile fibra.

Cum primum pavido custos mihi purpura cessit,

30

17. Hence draw, &c.] From hence, i. e. from the vices of man-kind, select the subjects of your writings.

- Leave the tables, &c.] Leave the tragical banquet of Thyestes at Mycenæ for others to write on-trouble not yourself about such subjects.

18. With the head and feet.] Atreus reserved the heads, feet, and hands of the children; which after supper he shewed to his brother Thyestes, that he might know whose flesh he had been feasting upon.

- Know plebeian dinners.] Acquaint yourself only with the enormities that pass in common life-nôris-quasi, fac noscas-let these be your food for satire.

19. I do not indeed desire this.] Persius here answers his preceptor Cornutus, and tells him, that he does not want an hundred tongues and voices, in order to be writing vain and highflown poems; but that he might duly express Cornutus's worth, and his sense of it.

Studeo signifies, literally, to study, but also to apply the mind to,

to care for a thing, to mind, to desire it.

--- Empty trifles.] Bullatis, (from bulla, a bubble of water) nugis-by met. swelling lines, lofty words, without sense, empty expressions. AINSW.

20. Fit to give weight to smoke.] i. e. Fit for nothing else but to give an air of consequence and importance to trifles, which, in reality, have no more substance in them than smoke.—Nugis addere pondus. Hor. Epist. lib. i. epist. xix. l. 42.

21. Secret we speak.] You and I, Cornutus, are not now speaking to the multitude, but to each other in private, and therefore I will disclose the sentiments of my heart.

The Muse exhorting.] My Muse prompting and leading me to an ample disclosure of my thoughts, and to reveal how great a share you have in my affections—to do this, is a pleasure to myself.

25. What may sound solid.] Try and examine me, knock at my breast: if you wish to know whether I am sincere or not, hear how that sounds.—Metaphor, from striking earthen vessels with the knuckle,

30

Hence draw what you may say: and leave the tables at Mycenæ, With the head and feet, and know plebeian dinners.

PERS. I do not indeed desire this, that with empty trifles my Page should swell, fit to give weight to smoke. 20 Secret we speak: to you now, the Muse exhorting, I give my heart to be searched, and how great a part Of my soul, Cornutus, is yours, to you, my gentle friend, It pleases me to have shewn; knock, careful to discern What may sound solid, and the coverings of a painted tongue. 25 For these things I would dare to require an hundred voices, That, how much I have fixed you in my inmost breast, I may draw forth with pure voice: and all this, words may unscal, Which lies hid, not to be told, in my secret inwards. When first to fearful me the guardian purple yielded, in order to try, by the sound, whether they were solid or cracked.

See sat. iii. 1. 21, 2, and note. .25. The coverings, &c.] Tectorium—the plaster, parget, or roughcast of a wall, which conceals it: hence dissimulation, flattery, which cover the real sentiments of the heart. See Matt. xxiii. 27.

--- Painted tongue.] Pictæ linguæ-i. e. a tongue adorned and garnished with dissimulation-varnished over with falsehood.

.26. For these things.] i. e. Properly to disclose my friendship and gratitude to you, by drawing forth and uttering what I feel for you. whom I have fixed within the most intimate recesses of my breast. See AINSW. Sinuosus, No. 4. This sense of the word seems metaphorical, and to be taken from what hath many turnings and windings. and so difficult to find or trace out.

28. With pure voice. With the utmost sincerity, pure from all guile.

--- Words may unseal.] Resigno is to open what is sealed, to unseal: hence, met. to discover and declare.

29. Not to be told.] Not fully to be expressed.

—— In my secret inwards.] In the secret recesses of my heart and mind. Comp. sat. i. l. 47.

30. The guardian purple. The habit worn by younger noblemen was edged about with a border of purple; an ornament which had the repute of being sacred, and was therefore assigned to children as a sort of preservative. Hence Persius calls it custos purpura.

--- Fearful.] Which protected me when a child, and when I was under the fear and awe of a severe master. Pavidum tyronem.

Juv. xvi. 1. 3.

--- Tielded. Resigned its charge, and gave place to the toga virilis, or manly gown. About the age of sixteen or seventeen they laid aside the prætexta, and put on the toga virilis, and were ranked with men.

Bullaque succinctis Laribus donata pependit; Cum blandi comites; totâque impune Suhurrâ Permisit sparsisse oculos jam candidus umbo; Cumque iter ambiguum est, et, vitæ nescius, error Diducit trepidas ramosa in comita mentes; Me tibi supposui: teneros tu suscipis annos, Socratico, Cornute, sinu. Tunc fallere solers, Apposita intortos extendit regula mores; Et premitur ratione animus, vincique laborat,

35

31. And the bulla.] This was another ornament worn by children; it was worn hanging from the neck, or about the breast, and was made in the shape of an heart, and hollow within. This they left off with the prætexta, and consecrated to the household gods, and hung up in honour to them. See ANT. Univ. Hist. vol. xi. p. 289, note s.

— The girt Lares.] The images of the Lares, or household gods, were described in a sort of military habit, which hung on the left shoulder, with a lappet fetched under the other arm, brought over the breast, and tied in a knot. The idea of this dress was first taken from the Gabini, and called Cinctus Gabinus. See AINSW. Gabinus; and VIRG Æn. vii. 612, and Servius's note there.

32. Kind companions.] A set of young fellows, who were my companions, and ready to join in any scheme of debauchery with me. I cannot think that comites here is to be understood of "his school-" masters, or pedagogues, who now no longer treated him with se-" verity." He was now a man, and had done with these.—Of such a.one Horace says:

Imberbis juvenis, tandem custode remoto, &c. De Art. Poet. l. 161-5.

And see Kennet. Antiq. p. 311, edit. 5. 1713.

In the whole Suburra.] This was a famous and populous street in Rome, where were numbers of brothels, the harlots from which walked out by night, to the great mischief of young men. Here, says Persius, I could ramble as I pleased, and fix my eyes where I pleased, and had nobody to call me to account, or punish me for it. Juy, sate iii. 1. 5.

33. The white shield, &c.] When the young men put on the toga virilis, they were presented with a white shield; that is to say, a shield with no engraving, device, or writing upon it, but quite blank. This shield was a token that they were now grown up, and fit for war. Its being blank, signified their not having yet achieved any warlike action worthy to be described, or recorded, upon it by a device.

So VIRG, Æn. ix. 1. 548.

Ense levis nudo, parmâque inglorius albâ.

When this shield was a passport to me, says Persius, to go where

I pleased, without being molested by my old masters.

34. When the journey is doubtful.] When the mind of a young man is doubting what road of life to take, like a traveller who

And the bulla presented to the girt Lares hung up; When kind companions, and, with impunity, in the whole Suburra Now the white shield permitted me to have thrown about my eyes, And when the journey is doubtful, and error, ignorant of life. Parts asunder trembling minds into the branching cross-ways, 35 I put myself under you: you undertake my tender years, Cornutus, with Socratic bosom. Then, dextrous to deceive, The applied rule rectifies my depraved morals, And my mind is pressed by reason, and labours to be overcome.

comes to where two ways meet, and can hardly determine which to

34. And error.] So apt to beset young minds, and so easily to mislead them.

- Ignorant of life. Of the best purposes and ends of life.

and wholly unknowing and ignorant of the world.

35. Parts asunder trembling minds.] Divides the young and inexperienced minds of young men, fearing and trembling between the choice of good and evil, now on this side, now on that.

--- Branching cross-ways.] Compitum is a place where two or more ways meet .-- The poet here alludes to the Pythagorean letter

Y. See sat. iii. 1. 56, note.

36. I put myself under you.] Under your care and instruction.

You undertake, &c.] You admitted me under your discipline, in order to season my mind with the moral philosophy of the Stoics: you not only received me as a pupil, but took me to your bosom with the affection of a parent.

Antisthenes, the master of Diogenes, was a disciple of Socrates: Diogenes taught Crates the Theban, who taught Zeao the founder of the Stoic school; so that the Stoic dogmas might be said to be derived, originally, from Socrates, as from the fountain-head.

37. Dextrous to deceive, &c.] The application of your doctrine to my morals, which were depraved, and warped from the strict rule of right, first discovered this to me, and then corrected it; but this you did with so much skill and address, that I grew almost insensibly reformed: so gradually were the severities of your discipline discovered to me, that I was happily cheated, as it were, into reformation; whereas, had you at first acquainted me with the whole at once, I probably had rejected it, not only as displeasing, but as unattainable by one who thought as I then did.

38. Applied rule.] Metaph. from mechanics, who, by a rule applied to the side of any thing, discover its being warped from a strait line, and set it right.

- Rectifies.] Lit. extends. Metaph. from straitening a twisted or entangled cord, by extending or stretching it out: Intortos, lit. twisted, entangled.

39. My mind is pressed by reason, &c.] My mind and all its faculties were so overpowered by the conviction of reason, that is 40

50

Artificemque tuo ducit sub pollice vultum.

Tecum etenim longos memini consumere soles;

Et tecum primas epulis decerpere noctes.

Unum opus, et requiem pariter disponimus ambo;

Atque verecundâ laxamus seria mensâ.

Non equidem hoc dubites, amborum fædere certo

Consentire dies, et ab uno sidere duci.

Nostra vel æquali suspendit tempora Librâ

Parca tenax veri : seu nata fidelibus hora Dividit in Geminos concordia fata duorum :

Saturnumque gravem nostro Jove frangimus una.

strove to coincide with what I heard from you, and to be conquered by your wisdom.

39. Labours, &c.] The word laborat denotes the difficulties which lie in the way of young minds to yield to instruction, and to subdue and correct their vicious habits and inclinations.

40. And draws, &c.] Metaph. from an artist who draws forth, or forms, figures with his fingers, out of wax or clay.—Ducere is a word peculiar to the making of statues in marble also.

Vivos ducent de marmore vultus.

Æn. vi. 848.

An artificial countenance.] Artificem—hypallage, for artifici pollice. The sense is—My mind, by thee gently and wisely wrought upon, put on that form and appearance which you wished it should. The like thought occurs, Juy. sat. vii. l. 237.

Exigite ut mores teneros ceu pollice ducat, Ut si quis cera vultum facit—

41. Consume long suns.] To have passed many long days—soles, for dies. Meton.

Cantando puerum memini me condere soles. Virc. ecl. ix. l. 51, 2.

42. To pluck the first nights, &c.] Decerpere—metaph. from plucking fruit. The first nights—the first part or beginning of nights; we plucked, i. e. we took away from the hours of feasting.—q. d. Instead of supping at an early hour, and being long at table, we spent the first part of the evening in philosophical converse, thus abridging the time of feasting for the sake of improvement.

Have borrow'd the first hours, feasting with thee
On the choice dainties of philosophy.

HOLYDAY.

43. One work and rest, &c.] We, both of us, disposed and divided our hours of study, and our hours of rest and refreshment, in a like manner together.

44. And relax serious things.] Relaxed our minds from study.

—— A modest table.] With innocent mirth, as we sat at table, and with frugal meals.

45. Do not doubt this, &c.] Beyond a doubt, this strict union of

And relax serious things with a modest table. Do not indeed doubt this, that, in a certain agreement, 45 The days of both consent, and are derived from one star. Fate, tenacious of truth, either suspended our times With equal Libra; or the hour, framed for the faithful, Divides to the twins the concordant fates of both: And we together break grievous Saturn with our Jupiter. 50 our minds must be derived from an agreement in the time of our nativity, being born both under the same star.

So Hor. lib. ii. ode xvii. l. 21, 2.

Utrumque nostrum incredibili modo Consentit astrum.

The ancients thought that the minds of men were greatly influenced by the planet which presided at their birth; and that those who were born under the same planet, had the same dispositions and inclinations.

47. Fate, tenacious of truth.] Unerring fate, as we say.

- Suspended our times.] Metaph, from hanging things on the beam of a balance, in order to weigh them.

Fate weighed, with equal balance, our times, when Libra had the ascendency.

SAT. V.

48. With equal Libra. A constellation into which the sun enters about the twentieth of September, described by a pair of scales, the emblem of equity and justice.

Felix æquatæ genitus sub pondere Libræ.

MANIL. lib. v.

Seu Libra, seu me Scorpius aspicit Formidolosus, pars violentior Natalis horæ, &c.

Hor. lib. ii. ode xvii. l. 17-22.

- Framed for the faithful. The particular hour which presides over the faithfulness of friendship.

49. Divides to the twins, &c.] The Gemini, another constellation represented by two twin-children, under which whosoever were born, were supposed by the astrologers to consent, very exactly, in their affections and pursuits.

Magnus erit Geminis amor et concordia duplex. MANIL. lib. ii.

50. Break, &c.] Frangere and temperare were used by the astrologers, when the malignant aspect of one star was corrected, and its influence prevented, by the power of some other propitious and benign planet.

Hence that astrological axiom-Quicquid ligat Saturnus, solvit

Jupiter. The planet Saturn was reckoned to have a malign aspect; the XX YOL. 11.

Nescio quod certe est, quod me tibi temperat, astrum.

Mille hominum species, et rerum discolor usus:

Velle suum, cuique est; nec voto vivitur uno.

Mercibus hic Italis mutat, sub sole recenti,
Rugosum piper, et pallentis grana cumini:

Hic, satur, irriguo mavult turgescere somno;
Hic campo indulget: hunc alea decoquit: ille
In Venerem putret. Sed cum lapidosa chiragra
Fregerit articulos, veteris ramalia fagi;
Tunc crassos transisse dies, lucemque palustrem,
Et sibi jam seri vitam ingemuêre relictam.

planet Jupiter a mild and favourable one, and to counteract the former.

Tutela Saturno, refulgens Eripuit.

Hon. ode xvii. lib. ii. 1. 22-4.

51. I know not, &c.] I won't take upon me to be certain what star it was; but that it proceeds from the influence of some friendly star or other, which presided at our natal hour; that we are one in heart and sentiment, I am very clear.

Tempero literally signifies to temper, mix or mingle together. 52. There are a thousand species, &c.] i. e. Different kinds of men, as to their dispositions and pursuits.

—— Different use, &c.] Discolor—literally, of a different colour. Their use of what they possess differs as much as one colour from another: some, (as it follows in the next lines,) from avarice, trade to increase their store; others, through luxury and extravagance, squander it away.

53. Has his will.] Velle, i. e. voluntas. Vivitur, impers. See sat. iii. 20, note.

54. The recent sun.] In the east, where the sun first appears.

55. Changes, &c. Sails to the East Indies, where he barters the produce of Italy for the produce of the East.

--- Wrinkled pepper.] When the pepper is gathered, and dried in the sun, the coat or outside shrivels up into wrinkles.

—Pale cumin.] The seed of an herb, which being infused in wine, or other liquor, causes a paleness in those who drink it: it comes from Æthiopia. Probably it stands here for any Oriental aromatics.

Hor. epist. xix. lib. i. l. 17, 18, speaks of his imitators:

Quod si

Pallerem casu, biberent exsangue cuminum.

56. Sated.] Satur—that has his belly full—glutted with eating and drinking.

- Swell up.] With fat.

Moist sleep.] Irriguus signifies wet, moist, watered; also that watereth. Here, metaph. from watering plants, by which they

I know not what star it is certainly which tempers me with you.

There are a thousand species of men, and a different use of things: Every one has his will, nor do they live with one wish.

This man, for Italian merchandizes under the recent sun,

Changes the wrinkled pepper, and grains of pale cumin:

55

Another, sated, had rather swell up with moist sleep:

Another, indulges in the field; another the die consumes; another Is rotten for Venus: but when the stony gout

Has broken his joints, the branches of the old beech,

Then, that their gross days have passed away, and the gloomy light, 60 And they have late bewailed the life now left to them.

increase and grow. So sleep is to those who eat much, and sleep much; it makes them grow, and increase in bulk.

57. Indulges in the field. In the sports and exercises of the Campus Martius. Or perhaps field-sports may be understood. Comp. Hor. ode i. l. 3-6, and l. 25-8.

-- The die consumes.] Is ruined by gaming. Decoquit-metaph. from boiling away liquors over a fire. - So the gamester, by continual play, consumes his substance.

58. For Venus.] i. e. Ruins his health-is in a manner rotten-by continual acts of lewdness and debauchery. Putris means also wanton, lascivious.

Omnes in Damalian putres deponent oculos. Hor. lib. i. ode xxxvi. l. 17, 18.

The stony gout.] So called from its breeding chalk-stones in the joints, when long afflicted with it.

59. Broken his joints.] Destroyed the use of them as much as if they had been broken, and are so to all appearance.

The branches, &c.] Ramalia -- seared or dead boughs cut from a tree, which may be looked upon, from their withered and useless appearance, as very strong emblems of a gouty man's limbs, the joints of which are useless, and the flesh withered away-(see sat. i. 97.) -so that they appear like the dead branches of an old decayed beech-tree.

60. Gross days.] Crassos-the days which they have spent in gross sensuality, as well as in thick mental darkness and error.

- Gloomy light.] Palustrem-metaph. from the fogs which arise in marshes and fenny places, which obscure the light, and involve those who live in it, or near them, in unwholesome mists. - Such is the situation of those whose way of life is not only attended with ignorance and error, but with injury to their health, and with ruin of their comfort.

- 61. Late berwailed. Too late for remedy.

The life now left, &c.] They not only bemoan themselves, at the recollection of their past mispent life, but the portion of life which now remains, being imbittered by remorse, pain, and disease, becomes a grief and burthen.

At te nocturnis juvat impallescere chartis, Cultor enim juvenum, purgatas inseris aures Fruge Cleanthea. Petite hinc, juvenesque senesque, Finem animo certum, miserisque viatica canis.

65

" Cras hoc fiet." Idem cras fiet. "Quid! quasi magnum Nempe diem donas?' Sed cum lux altera venit. Jam cras hesternun consumpsimus: ecce aliud cras Egerit hos annos, et semper paulum erit ultra: Nam quamvis prope te, quamvis temone sub uno,

70

Vertentem sese frustra sectabere canthum. Cum rota posterior curras, et in axe secundo.

62. Grow pale, &c.] Your delight, O Cornutus, is to pass the time, when others sleep, in hard study, which brings a paleness on your countenance. See sat. i. l. 124; and sat. iii. l. 85.

63. A cultivator of youths.] Cultor--metaph. from colo, to till or cultivate the ground.

a. d. As the husbandman tills or cultivates the ground, and prepares it to receive seed, and to bring forth fruit-so do you, Cornutus, prepare youthful minds to receive and bring forth wisdom.

- You sow their purged ears. The metaphor is still carried on; as the husbandman casts the seed into the ground which he has prepared and cleaned, by tillage, from weeds-so do you sow the doctrines of moral philosophy, which were taught by Cleanthes, the disciple and successor of Zeno, in the ears of your pupils, after having purged away those errors, falsehoods, and prejudices, with which they were at first possessed, by your wise and well-applied instruction. You first teach them to avoid vice and error, and then to embrace and follow truth and virtue.

Virtus est vitium fugere, et sapientia prima Stultitia caruisse. Hor. lib. i. epist. i. l. 41, 2.

64. Hence seek, &c.] Persius here invites both young and old to seek for wisdom from the Stoic philosophy, as taught by his friend and preceptor Cornutus; that, thereby, they might find some certain and fixed end, to which their views might be directed, and no longer fluctuate in the uncertainty of error.

Certum voto pete finem.

Hor. Epist. lib. i. ep. ii. l. 56.

65. Stores, &c.] Viatica, literally, are stores, provisions, things necessary for a journey; as money, victuals, &c.

The poet here advises their learning philosophy, that their minds might be furnished with what would suffice to support them through the journey of life, and more particularly through the latter part of it, when under the miseries and infirmities of old age.

1 66. " To morrow," Sc.] Persius here introduces some idle young man, as if saying-" To be sure you advise very rightly, but give " me a little time-to-morrow (q. d. some time hence) I will apply " myself to the studies which you recommend."

"The same will be done to-morrow."] When to-morrow

65

70

But it delights you to grow pale with nightly papers,
For, a cultivator of youths, you sow their purged ears
With Cleanthean corn Hence seek, ye young and old,
A certain end to the mind, and stores for miserable grey hairs.

"To-morrow this shall be done"—"the same will be done
"to-morrow"—" what!

"As a great thing truly do you give a day?"--"but when another day comes,

"We have already spent yesterday's to-morrow. Behold another

"Has spent these years, and will always be a little beyond;

"For altho' near you, altho' under one beam,

"You will in vain follow the felly turning itself,

"When you, the hinder wheel, do run, and on the second axle."

comes, answers Persius, the same thing will be done; that is, you will want to defer it for a day more.

66, "What!" &c.] What! replies the procrastinator, won't you allow me another day before I begin?—what! do you make such a mighty matter of giving me a day, as if that were of so great consequence?

68. "Testerday's to-morrow."] But, rejoins Persius, when another day comes, remember that yesterday, which was the morrow of the day before it, and which you wished to be allowed you, is passed and gone.

——"Behold another to-morrow."] This day, which is the morrow of yesterday, is now arrived, and is, with all the past morrows, exhausting and consuming these years of ours; and thus the time you ask for will always be put off, and stand a little beyond the morrow you fix upon.

70. "Altho' near you," & c.] The poet, in allusion to the hind-wheel of a carriage, which is near to, and follows the fore-wheel, but never can overtake it, gives the young man to understand, that, though to day is nearly connected with to-morrow, in point of time, yet it can't overtake it; the morrow will always keep on from day to day, and it can never be overtaken—thus shewing, that procrastinated time will always fly on, and keep out of his reach; however near he may be to it, all his resolutions to overtake it will be in vain.

or the draught-tree, whercon the yoke hangeth. Sometimes, by synec, the whole carriage,—q. d. Our days may be considered as the wheels by which our lives roll on; each day, as well as another, is joined to the space allotted us, like wheels to the same chariot.

71. "The felly." Canthus properly signifies the iron wherewith the wheel is bound, or shod, on the outward circle, called the felly

-here, by synec .- the wheel itself.

72. "The second axle." Axis—the axle-tree on which the wheel is fixed, and about which it turns—the second, i. c. the hinder.—q. d. You will, like the hinder wheel of a carriage, which can never Libertate opus est: non hâc, quâ, ut quisque Velina Publius emeruit, scabiosum tesserulâ far Possidet. Heu steriles veri, quibus una Quiritem Vertigo facit!—Hic Dama est, non tressis agaso; Vappa, et lippus, et in tenui farragine mendax; Verterit hunc dominus, momento turbiuis exit overtake the fore-wheel, be still following the time before you, but will never overtake it; therefore defer not till to-morrow, what you should do to day. The whole of the metaphor, l. 70—2, is very fine, and well expressed. See Hox. lib. ii. ode xviii. I 15, 16.

75

I must confess that I cannot dismiss this part of my task, without mentioning that beautiful description of the slipping away of time, unperceived and unimproved, which we find in Shakespeare:

"To-morrow, and to-morrow, and to-morrow,
"Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
"To the last syllable of recorded time;
"And all our yesterdays have lighted fools

"The way to dusty death. Mach. act y. sc. v. edit, STOCKDALE,

73. There is need of liberty.] The poet now advances to a discussion of that paradox of the Stoics—that "only the wise are free;"—and that those, who would follow after, and attain to true liberty, must be released from the mental shackles of vice and error.—his treatment of the subject is exquisitely fine, and worthy our serious attention.

-- Not this.] Not merely outward liberty, or liberty of the body, such as is conferred on slaves at their manumission.

-- By which. See. 1. 74, note 2.

Livery Publius.] The slaves had no prænomen; but when they had their freedom given them, they assumed one—so, for instance, a slave that was called Licinius, would add the name of his master to his own, and call himself, if his master's name were Publius, Publius Licinius—they also added the name of the tribe into which they were received and enrolled; suppose the Velinan, then the freed man would style himself Publius Licinius Velina—thus he was distinguished from slaves.

74. Been discharged.] i. e. From slavery—made free. Emeruit—metaph. from soldiers, who for some meritorious service were sent home, and discharged from going to war. Also from gladiators, who for their valour and dexterity at the theatre obtained their dismission from their perilous occupation, and were donati rude, presented with a rod, or wand, in token of their discharge and release. How epist. i. lib. i. l. 2. Juv. sat. vi. 113. These were styled Emeriti.

So slaves were often made free, on account of their past services, as having deserved this favour—this is signified by emeruit here.

— Mouldy corn, &c.] Those who are thus admitted to freedom, and enrolled in one of the tribes, were entitled to all public doles and donations, on producing a little ticket or tally, which There is need of liberty: not this, by which every Publius in the Velinan tribe,

As soon as he has been discharged, mouldy corn with his tally Possesses. Alas! ye barren of truth—among whom one turn 75
Makes a Roman! here is Dama, a groom not worth three farthings;
A scoundrel, and blear-eyed, and a liar in a little corn:
If his master turn him—in the movement of a top, he comes forth was given them on their manumission. The corn laid up in the public magazines was not of the best sort, and was frequently damaged with keeping.

The name of the person, and of the tribe which he belonged to, was inscribed on the ticket, by which he was known to be a citizen.

See Juv. sat. vii. l. 174, note.

75. Alas! ye barren, &c.] The poet speaks with commiseration, of their ignorance, and total barrenness, with respect to truth and real wisdom, who could imagine that a man should be called free, because he was emancipated from bodily slavery.

One turn.] Vertigo, (from vertere, to turn). This was one of the ceremonies of making a slave free: he was carried before the pretor, who turned him round upon his heel, and said—Hunc esse liberum volo.

So Plautus, Menæchm. Liber esto, ito quo voles. Thus he became Quiris, a Roman citizen. See Juv. sat. iii. l. 60, note.

76. Here is Dama. For instance, says the poet, here is the slave

Dama.

—— A groom not worth, &c.] Agaso, an horse-keeper, a groom that looks after his master's horses. Non tressis (qu. tres asses) a poor, paltry fellow, worth hardly three farthings if one were to purchase him. They bought their slaves.

77. Ascoundrel.] Vappa signifies wine that is palled, that has lost its strength, therefore called vapid.—Hence a stupid, senseless fellow; or a scoundrel, a good-for-nothing fellow.

--- Blear-eyed.] Perhaps from debauchery and drunkenness. See sat. ii. 1. 72, note.

—— A liar in a little corn.] That will cheat his master, and defraud his horses of their slender allowance, and then lye to conceal his petty knavery. Farrago is a mixture of several grains—Mesceline.

78. If his master, &c.] Let his master but turn him upon his heel.

See note above, 1. 75.

Movement of a top. In one turn of a top, which is very swift when it is spinning—i. e. as we say, in the twinkling of an eye. This allusion to the turning of a top, very humourously agrees with the verterit.

--- He comes forth, &c.] He that went before the pretor plain

Marcus Dama.—Papæ! Marco spondente, recusas Credere tu nummos?—Marco sub judice palles?

—Marcus dixit: ita est.—Assigna, Marce, tabellas.—
Hæc mera libertas! Hoc nobis pilea donant!

An quisquam est alius liber, nisi ducere vitam
Cui licet, ut voluit? licet, ut volo, vivere: non sum Liberior Bruto! Mendose colligis, inquit

Stoicus hic, aurem mordaci lotus aceto:

Hoc reliquum accipio; licet illud, et, ut volo, tolle.

'Vindictà postquam meus a prætore recessi,

Dama, now comes out from him with a noble prænomen, and calls himself Marcus Dama.

79. Wonderful!] What a surprising change! or papæ may introduce the following irony, where a person is supposed to hesitate about lending money, for which Marcus offers to become surety. Papæ—How strange! that you should scruple it, when so respectable a person as Marcus offers his bond, and engages for the payment!

80. Are you hale?] Do you fear lest you should not have justice done you, where so worthy a person is advanced to the magistracy?

81. Marcus said it, &c.] Marcus gives his testimony, and who can contradict so just and upright a witness—what he says must be true.

Marcus, the tablets.] The poet here repeats the word Marcus, and drops the word Dama, as if he would ludicrously insinuate, that however great a rogue Dama was, yet to be sure Marcus was a very different kind of person. He supposes him called upon to sign his name, as witness to somebody's will, which he could not do when a slave, for their testimony was not received.

--- The tablets.] Thin planks of wood, smeared over with wax, on which they wrote wills, deeds, &c. See Juv. sat. ii. 1. 58, note.

Here the will or deed itself.

The poet, in the preceding irony, carries on his grand point, which was to deride the common notion of liberty, or of a change being wrought, with regard to the respectability of those who were still, however emancipated from bodily slavery, slaves under ignorance, vice, and error.

82. Mere liberty.] Mera—bare, naked liberty (says the Stoic)
—i. e. in the bare, outward, literal sense of the word; but it is to be understood no farther.

This caps give us.] The slaves went bare-headed, with their hair growing long, and hanging down: but when they were manumitted, their heads were shaved, and a cap, the ensign of liberty, put on their heads in the temple of Feronia, the goddess of liberty. See sat. iii. 1. 106.

83. " Any other free," &c.] Here the poet introduces Dama as re-

Marcus Dama. Wonderful! Marcus being security, refuse you To lend money? Are you pale under judge Marcus? 80 Marcus said it - it is so .- Sign, Marcus, the tablets. This is mere liberty—this caps give us.

"Is there any other free, unless he who may live "As he likes?-I may live as I like; am not I

"More free than Brutus?"-" You conclude falsely," says 85 A Stoic here, having washed his ear with sharp vinegar:

"I accept this which is left, take away that-"I may," and "as " I will."

"After I withdrew from the pretor, my own by the wand, plying-" Aye, you may deride my notions of liberty; but pray who is free if I am not? Is there any other freedom but to be "able to live as one pleases? But I may live as I please-therefore "am I not free?"-by this syllogism thinking to prove his point.

85. " More free than Brutus.'] M. Junius Brutus, the great asserter and restorer of liberty, by the expulsion of the Tarquins, &c. who sacrificed his own sons in the cause of freedom, and changed the form of the government into a commonwealth.

"You conclude falsely." Your argument is bad; the assumption which you make, that "you live as you please," is not true, therefore the conclusion which you gather or collect from it is false, namely, "that you are free." See AISNW. Colligo, No. 6.

85--6. Says a Stoic.] i. e. Methinks I hear some Stoic say.

86. Washed his ear, &c. At 1. 63. we find purgatas aures, where see the note; here, lotus aurem, meaning also the same as before, only under a different image, differently expressed. By vinegar, here, we are to understand the sharp and severe doctrines of the Stoic philosophy, which has cleansed his mind from all such false ideas of liberty, and made his ear quick in the discernment of truth and falsehood.

87. "I accept," &c.] Your definition of liberty in your first proposition is true; I grant that "all who may live as they please "are free;"—but I deny your minor, or second proposition, viz. "that you live as you please;" therefore your conclusion, viz. "that "you are free," is also wrong.

- "That-" I may," and " as I will."] i. e. Take away your minor proposition, and I admit what remains-hoc reliquum accipio -viz. all that is contained in the first proposition-that "all who "may live as they please are free:"-this is certainly a good definition of liberty; but this is not your case.

88. " From the pretor." Before whom I was carried, in order to receive my freedom.

- "My own." Meus-i. e. my own master; being made free, and emancipated from the commands of another, replies Dama, not at all understanding what the Stoic meant by liberty.

- "By the wand."] Vindicta. The pretor laid a wand upon the slave's head, and said-" I will that this man become free," and VOL. II.

- · Cur mihi non liceat, jussit quodcunque voluntas ;
- Excepto, si quid Masuri rubrica notavit?'
 Disce; sed ira cadat naso, rugosaque sanna,
 Dum veteres avias tibi de pulmone revello.

90

Non prætoris erat, stultis dare tenuia rerum Officia; atque usum rapidæ permittere vitæ—Sambucam citius caloni aptaveris alto. Stat contra ratio, et secretam garrit in aurem, Ne liceat facere id, quod quis vitiabit agendo.

95

then delivered the wand out of his own hand into the lictor's; (see post, l. 175). This wand was called vindicta, as vindicating, or maintaining liberty. See Hor. lib. ii. sat. vii. l. 76.

90. "Rubric." The text of the Roman laws was written in red letters, which was called the Rubric. DRYDEN.—According to others, the titles and beginnings of the different statutes were only written in red, and therefore to be understood by rubrica. See Ainsw. See Juv. sat. xiv. 1. 192, 3, note.

... Masurius." An eminent and learned lawyer, in the reign of Tiberius, who made a digest of the Roman laws.

q. d. When I received my freedom from the pretor, surely I was at liberty to do as I would, except, indeed, breaking the law; I don't say that I might do this.

91. "Learn." The Stoic here begins his argument, in order to refute what Dama was supposed to say in support of his notion of liberty.

Now listen to me, says the Stoic, that you may learn what true liberty is, and in what it consists.

"Let anger fall," Sc. Cease from your anger at me, for ridiculing your notion of liberty.

It is to be remarked, that the ancients represented the nose as denoting laughter, sat. i. 118. Contempt, sat. i. 40, 1, Anger, as here.—So we find the nose, or nostrils, denoting anger frequently in the Hebrew Bible. See the learned and accurate Mr. PARKHURST, Heb. and Eng. Lex. 78, No. 5.

"Wrinkling sneer." Comp. sat. i. 40, 1, and note.

92. "From your breast," &c. I Pulmo, literally, signifies the lungs; but here denotes the whole contents of the breast in a moral sense.—"Put away anger and sneering at what I say, while I pluck up those foolish notions of liberty, which are implanted and rooted within your mind, and with which you are as pleased and satisfied, as a child is with an old woman's tale." Avia is literally a grandame, or grandmother: hence old women's tales. Ainsw.—Fabellæ aniles. Hor. lib. ii. sat. vi. l. 77, 8. Teawling pushes. 1 Tim. iv. 7.

93. "It was not of," &c.] It was not in the power of the

"The delicate management of things," &c.] Though the pretor might confer civil liberty upon you at your manumission, and though you may know how to direct yourself, so as to avoid offend-

- 46 Why might I not do whatever my will commanded,
- " Except if the rubric of Masurius forbad any thing?"
 - 46 Learn: but let anger fall from your nose, and the wrinkling
- "While I pluck from your breast your old wives tales.
- " It was not of the pretor to give the delicate management of things
- " To fools, and to permit the use of rapid life-
- "You would sooner fit a dulcimer to a tall footman. 95
- "Reason stands against it, and whispers into the secret ear,"
- "Let it not be lawful to do that, which one will spoil in doing:"- ing against the letter of the law-yet you could receive from the pretor none of that wisdom and discernment, by which alone you can distinguish aright, as touching those more minute and delicate actions which concern you in the more nice duties of life, and which are to be attained by philosophy alone .- I take this to be meant by tenuia officia rerum-lst. small offices, or duties of things or affairs.

94. "To fools." The Stoics held, that "all fools were slaves," -and that "nobody was free except the wise." A man must therefore be wise before he is free; but the pretor could not make you wise, therefore he could not make you free.

"To permit the use."] It was not in the pretor's power to commit to such that prudence and wisdom, by which they can alone be enabled to make a right use of this fleeting life, and of all things belonging to it.

95. "Sooner ft," &c.] Sambuca was some musical instrument, as an harp, dulcimer, or the like; but what it exactly was we cannot

"A tall footman."] Alto caloni — Calo, a soldier's boy, or any meaner sort of servant. Allosw.—Horace seems to use it in the latter sense, lib. i. sat. vi. l. 103; and perhaps it is so to be understood here.

You might sooner think of putting a harp, or some delicate musical instrument, into the hands of a great overgrown booby of a servant, and expect him to play on it, than to commit the nice and refined duties of life to fools, and expect them either to understand or practise them .- Asinus ad Lyram. Prov.

96. " Reason stands against it.'] Reason itself opposes such an idea. "Whispers into the secret ear."] Secretly whispers into the ear. Hypallage—Comp. supr. 1. 40, and note.

97. "Let it not be lawful."] Ne, before the potential, has the sense of the imperative mood. So Hor. ode xxxiii. lib. i. l. Ne doleas; and ode xi. 1. Ne quæsieris. Here, ne liceat is likewise imperative, and signifies that the voice of reason secretly whispers in the ear this admonition-" Let it not be permitted, that any should Publica lex hominum, naturaque continet hoc fas,

Ut teneat vetitos inscitia debilis actus.

Diluis helleborum, certo compescere puncto

Nescius examen? vetat hoc natura medendi.

Navem si poscat sibi peronatus arator,

Luciferi rudis; exclamet Melicerta, perisse

Frontem de rebus.—Tibi recto vivere talo

Ars dedit? et veri speciem dignoscere calles,

Ne qua subærato mendosum tinniat auro?

Quæque sequenda forent, quæque evitanda vicissim;

Illa prius cretâ, mox hæc carbone notasti?

Es modicus voti? presso lare? dulcis amicis?

Jam nunc astringas, jam nunc granaria laxes?

"undertake what they are not fit for, but would spoil in doing it." Or ne liceat may be understood, here, as non licet.

98. "The public law of men." The common rule among mankind, as well as nature, may be said to contain thus much of what is right and just.

99. "That weak ignorance," Ec.] That an ignorance of what we undertake, which must render us inadequate to the right performance of it, should restrain us from attempting acts, which, by the voice of human, as well as of natural law, are so clearly forbidden to us. Comp. 1. 96, 7.

100. Do you dilute hellebore."] He here illustrates his argument by examples.

Suppose, says he, you were to attempt to mix a dose of hellebore, not knowing how to apportion exactly the quantity.

100-1. "To a certain point."] Metaph.—Examen signifies the tongue, or beam of a balance, by the inclination of which we judge of proportional weights.

101. "The nature of healing forbids this." All medical skill, in the very nature of it, must place this among the vetitos actus, which weak ignorance is not to attempt. See l. 99.

102. "High-shoed ploughman."] Peronatus.—'The pero was an high shoe worn by rustics, as a defence against snow and cold. See Juv. sat. xiv. 1. 186.

103. "Ignorant of Lucifer." Knowing nothing of the stars.—Lucifer, or the day-star, is here put (by synec.) for all the stars, from which mariners take their observations to steer by.

—— "Meliesta exclaims," &c.] Also called Portunus, or Portunus, because supposed to preside over ports. See his story, Ov. Met lib. iv. fab. xiii.—Melicerta, the sea-god, would exclaim, that all modesty was banished from among those who undertook the management and direction of human affairs, when he saw so impudent an attempt.

-- "Shame."] Frontem, lit. the forehead, or countenance, the seat of shame-here, by met. shame or modesty itself.

- "The public law of men, and nature, contains this right,
- "That weak ignorance should forbear forbidden acts.
- "Do you dilute hellebore, not knowing how to confine, to a 100
- "Certain point, the balance? the nature of healing forbids this.
- "If the high-shoed ploughman should require a ship for
- "Himself, ignorant of Lucifer, Melicerta exclaims, that shame
- " Has perish'd from things .- To live with an upright ankle
- "Has art given you !—Are you skilful to distinguish the appearance of truth,
- "Lest any should tinkle false with gold having brass under it?
- "And what things are to be followed, and, in like manner, what "avoided?
- "Have you first mark'd those with chalk, then these with a coal?
- "Are you moderate of wish—with a confined household—kind to your friends?—
- "Can you sometimes fasten, and sometimes open your granaries?

104. "Upright ankle."] Metaph. from persons having their legs and ankles strait, and walking uprightly; which is often used, to denote going on through life with an honest and virtuous conduct. This occurs frequently in S. S. as Ps. xv. 2. lxxxiv. 11. Prov. x. 9. et al.

105. "Has art," &c. That is philosophy, which is the art of living well-has this enabled you to do this?

106. "Lest any," &c.] Ne qua—i. e. ne aliqua species veri.—Have you learnt to distinguish between the appearance and reality of truth and virtue, lest you should be deceived, as people are who take bad money for good, when, instead of answering to the appearance of the outside, which is fair, they find, upon sounding it, that it is brass underneath, instead of being all gold.

108. "Mark'd those with chalk," &c.] The ancients used to note things good and prosperous with a white mark, and things bad and unlucky with a black one. In allusion to this, the Stoic is supposed to ask the question in the preceding line, which is, not only whether his opponent has been taught to distinguish the appearances of good and evil, but whether he has particularly noted down what a wise man ought to follow, and what he ought to avoid. See Hor. lib. ii. sat. iii. l. 246.—Mendosum tinniat, for mendose: Græcism.

109. " Moderate of wish."] The desires confined within the bounds of moderation.

"A confined household."] Your household-establishment frugal, and not expensive—contracted within a little compass; or perhaps by presso lare, may be signified a small house.

--- "Kind to your friends."] Dulcis-obliging, sweet, agreeable. See Hor. lib. i. sat. iv. l. 135.

110 "Sometimes fasten," &c.] Judging rightly when it is a time to withhold, and when to give. Here perhaps is an allusion to the public granaries, or magazines of corn at Rome, which, at a Inque luto fixum, possis transcendere nummum, Nec glutto sorbere salivam mercurialem?

Hæc mea sunt, teneo, cum vere dixeris; esto Liberque ac sapiens, prætoribus ac Jove dextro.

Sin tu, cum fueris nostræ paulo ante farinæ, Pelliculam veterem retines; et, fronte politus, Astutam vapido servas sub pectore vulpem : Que dederam supra repeto, funemque reduco. Nil tibi concessit ratio: digitum exere, peccas: Et quid tam parvum est? sed nullo thure litabis, Hæreat in stultis brevis ut semuncia rectitime of dearth and want, was dealt out in doles to the citizens, on producing their tickets, but, at other seasons, locked up. Jam nunc-lit. just now-i. e. just at a proper time.

115

120

111. " Can you pass by money," &c.] Alluding to a practiceamong the boys at Rome, who used to fasten a piece of counterfeit money to the ground, or stick it in the mud, with a string tied to it; and if any miserly fellow coming by, and imagining it to be real, stooped to pick it up, they snatched it away, and laughed at him.

În triviis fixum qui se demittit ob assem. Hon. lib. i. epist. xvi. 1. 64,

112. " Mercurial spittle."] Mercury was the god of gaiu: hence a desire of gain is called saliva mercurialis. Metaph. from gluttons, who, at beholding some dainty dish, have their spittle increase in such a manner, as that, if they did not swallow it, it would run out of the mouth. This we call—the mouth watering. Can you see money without your mouth watering at it?—i. e. without being greatly delighted, and coveting it?

113. "These." All these good qualities, 114. "Pretors and Jupiter propitious." I then allow you to be free in the sight of God and man-i. e. not only with respect to the liberty of the body, which you received from the pretor, but with respect to freedom of the mind; of which Jupiter alone is the author.

115. " But if you."]. Now he comes to the other side of the question-

"Since you."] Since you, but a little before your manumiseion, were just like what we were till taught by philosophy-i. e. naturally full of ignorance and error.

"Of our meal."] Metaph. taken from loaves of bread, which are all alike, and taste alike, if made of the same flour-so mankind, having the same nature, are all corrupt.

116. " Retain your old skin.] Metaph. taken from snakes, which cast off their old skin, and have a new one every year .- q. d. If you retain your old depraved manners and conduct (see l. 76, 7.), and have not changed and cast them off.

"Polished in front."] Appearing with a countenance seemingly open and ingenuous. - Necquicquam pelle decorus. Sat. iv. l. 14.

- "And can you pass by money fixed in mud,
- "Nor swallow with your gullet mercurial spittle?
- "When you can truly say, these are mine, I possess them_be thou "Free and wise, the pretors and Jupiter propitious.
 - "But if you, since you were a little before of our meal, 115
- "Retain your old skin, and, polished in front,
- "Keep a cunning fox under your vapid breast:
- "What I had above given I demand again, and bring back the rope.
- "Reason has granted you nothing: put forth your finger, you sin:
- "And what is so small? but you will obtain, by no incense, 120
- "That a small, half ounce of right should be fix'd in fools.

117. "Keep a cunning fox," &c.] Entertain wily, cunning, and deceitful principles within.

"Your vapid breast."] Within your rotten heart. See 1.77.

note.

Nunquam te fallant animi sub vulpe latentes. Hor. Ars Poet. 437. 118. "What I had above given." i.e. What I just now granted; viz. that you are free and wise—

"I demand again."] I recall.

"And bring back the rope." Metaph. from leading beasts with a rope, which sometimes they lengthened, and gave the animal a good deal of liberty (see Juv. sat. xii. l. 5.); but, if restive and mischieyous, they shortened it to confine him. Thus the Stoic, who lengthened his allowance so far as to pronounce the man wise and free, supposing him to answer the description which he gives of those who are so, now, on finding the contrary, draws back what he had said, and reduces the man to his old narrow bounds of bodily freedom only.

119. "Reason has granted you nothing."] Whatever the pretor may have done, wisdom has done nothing for you.

— "Put forth your finger, you sin."] The Stoics held, that there was no medium between wisdom and tolly, that a man was either perfectly wise, or perfectly foolish; therefore, that the most trivial and indifferent thing, if done by the latter, could not be done aright, not even the putting forth of a finger.

120. "What is so small?" What can be so trivial as this?" -yet, trivial as it is, it can only be done by the wise and free, as it ought, any more than every other action, of what nature or kind soever.

- "Will obtain."] Rito signifies not only to sacrifice, but to obtain that for which the sacrifice is offered. See sat. ii. l. 75. and note.

121. "Half ounce of right," &c. In short, the Stoics held, that not a grain of what was right could reside within any but the wise and free, in their sense of the words; or, in truth, in any but their own sect—all the rest of the world they accounted fools and mad, and that though they were to offer incense, in ever so great a quantity,

Hæc miscere nefas: nec, cum sis cætera fossor, Tres tantum ad numeros satyri moveare Bathylli. Liber ego.' Unde datum hoc sumis, tot subdite rebus ? An dominum ignoras, nisi quem vindicta relaxat? 125 I, puer, et strigiles Crispini ad balnea defer, Si increpuit, cessas, nugator ?-- Servitium acre-Te nihil impellit; nec quicquam extrinsecus intrat, Ouod nervos agitet-Sed si intus, et in jecore ægro Nascantur domini, quî tu impunitior exis 130 Atque hic, quem ad strigiles scutica et metus egit herilis? Mane piger stertis. 'Surge,' inquit Avaritia: 'eja to the gods, yet they could never obtain a single fixed principle of what was right.

122. "To mix these," &c. 7i. e. Wisdom and folly; there must be either all one, or all the other. See above, note on 1. 119. It is impossible they should be mixed in the same person.

"A digger." Fossor-a ditcher, delver, and the like-

q. d. A mere clown.

q. d. When, in every thing else-cætera, i. e. quoad cætera, Græcism-you are as clumsy and awkward as a common lout or clown, it is impossible that you should dance, even three steps, like the famous dancer Bathyllus. Perhaps the poet, by fossor, alludes to the slaves, who were set to dig with fetters on their legs. See Juv.

123. "The satyr Bathyllus."] He was a famous dancer in the time of Nero, and, for his great agility and nimble movements, was surnamed the Satyr.—Saltantes Satyros. VIRG. ecl. v. 73.

The Stoic concludes this part of his argument with averring, that those who are not wise and free, as in every thing else they are unable to do what is right, so neither can they, in the most trivial or indifferent action; any more than an awkward clown could dance like Bathyllus for three steps together. See Juv. sat. vi. 1. 63.

124. " Iam free."] "Aye, it is all very well," says Dama: "but I do insist upon it, that I am free, notwithstanding all you

-" Whence take you this," &c.] Datum is a technical termwhen any thing is yielded, agreed, and granted as true, it is called a datum.-" Now," answers the Stoic, "whence had you that da-"tum, for so it appears to you, that you are free, because you have " had your freedom given you by the pretor's wand, you . who are "put under (subdite) the power and dominion of so much error " and folly ?"

Comp. sat. iii. l. 28, and note.

125. "Are you ignorant," &c.] Know you not any other master than he who exercised an outward authority over you till "he was released from it by the pretor's wand?" See before, 1. 88,

126. "Go, slave, and carry," &c.] I grant you that you have no-

- "To mix these is impossibility: nor, when as to other things you are "a digger,
- "Can you be moved to three measures only of the satyr Bathyllus."
- "I am free."—"Whence take you this for granted, subjected by
- " Are you ignorant of a master, unless he whom the wand relaxes?" 125
- "Go, slave, and carry the scrapers to the baths of Crispinus,"
- "If he has sounded forth-do you loiter, trifler?" "Sharp
- "Servitude impels thee nothing, nor does any thing enter from with-
- "Which may agitate your nerves. But if within, and in a sick liver
- "Masters are produced, how go you forth more unpunished, 130
 "Than he, whom the scourge, and fear of his master, has driven "to the scrapers?
 - "In the morning, slothful, you snore: "Rise," says Avarice, thing to fear from your late master. If he were, in a loud and surly matter, to baul out—" Here, slave, carry these scrapers," &c. and scold you for the least delay—

127-8. "Sharp servitude," Sc.] However sharp and severe bodily servitude may be, yet you have nothing to do with it, it can't enforce any such orders upon you.

128. "Nor does any thing enter," &c.] Nor can any thing, as threats, or menaces, of being punished for not obeying, enter into your mind, so as to make you uneasy; all this I grant—in this sense you are free.

129. "But if within." If vice and folly, generated within your disordered heart, are your masters, and rule over you, so as to compel your obedience to their commands.

Jecore ægro. See Juv. sat i. l. 45, and note.—The ancients looked on the liver as the seat of the concupiscible and irascible affections, and therefore jecore ægro may be understood, metonymically, to denote the diseased or disordered affections, for vice is the sickness or disease of the mind.

130. "How go you forth," &c.] How can you be said to be less liable to punishment, from the slavery and misery of your mind, than the poor slave is, in a bodily sense, when compelled to obey his master, from the terror of bodily punishment. The only difference between you is, he serves his master, you your vices.

131. "The scrapers."] Strigiles.—These were instruments which the Greeks and Romans made use of to scrape their bodies after bathing, and were carried to the baths by their slaves. Driven to the scrapers—i. e. has forced to carry the scrapers to the baths, when ordered.

132. "Slothful, you snore."] The poet proceeds to illustrate and confirm his argument (in which he has been contending for the "slavery of all but the wise," according to the Stoic doctrine) by instancing the power of sloth, avarice, and luxury, over the human mind, in its corrupted state.

Surge.'-Negas: Instat, 'surge,' inquit. Non queo. 'Surge.'

Et quid agam? 'rogitas? Saperdas advehe Ponto,

Castoreum, stuppas, hebenum, thus, lubrica Coa. 135

'Tolle recens, primus, piper e sitiente camelo.

' Verte aliquid; jura.' Sed Jupiter andiet. ' Eheu,

Baro! regustatum digito terebrare salinum,

'Contentus perages, si vivere cum Jove tendis.'

Jam pueris pellem succinctus, et œnophorum aptas:

140

Ocius ad navem: nihil obstat quin trabe vastâ

He introduces a dialogue between Dama and Avarice. Avarice is supposed to find Dama snoring a-bed in the morning, in the luxurious ease of his so highly-prized freedom.

132. "Rise," says Avarice.] This word, "Rise," is repeated four times. Thus Vice ceases not from its importunity; and the answers of Dama, "I will not"—" I cannot"—" what shall I do if I rise!"—are a lively representation of the power of idleness and sloth, when indulged. This is finely described, Prov. vi. 9, 10. xxii. 13. xxvi. 13, 14.

134. " Fish from Pontus." | Saperdas-a sort of fish which came from Pontus, or the Black sea.

135. "Castor."] Castoreum.—This signifies either beavers' skins, or what we call castor—i. e. the medicinal part of the animal; both of which were articles of traffic. See Juv. sat. xii. l. 34—6.

"Flax." Stuppa, or stupa-the coarse part of flax, tow, hards, oakum to calk ships with. AINSW.

" Ebony."] A black wood, well known among us-the tree whereof bears neither leaves nor fruit. AINSW.

"Slippery Coan wines."] From the island Co, or Coos, in the Ægean sea.—They were soft, and of a laxative quality; hence called lubrica.

136. "Take first the recent pepper."] Be sure be at the market first, that you may not only have the first choice, but return to a better sale, by coming home before the other merchants.

Hor. lib. i. epist. vi. l. 32, 3.

Ne Cybiratica, ne Bithyna negotia perdas.

"Thirsting camel." The eastern people loaded their pepper and other spices on the backs of camels. These animals are said to endure thirst, in their journies over the deserts, for many days together; wherefore, in a part of the world where water is very scarce, they are peculiarly useful.

137. "Turn something."] Trade, barter-i. e. as we say, turn the penny.

"Swear."] Don't mind a little perjury upon occasion, either with respect to the goodness of your wares, or concerning the first cost, and what you can afford to sell them at.

"Jupiter will hear."] Dama is supposed to raise a scruple of conscience.

- "Rise."—You refuse—he urges—" Rise," says he.—" I cannot."— " Rise."
- "And what shall I do?" "do you ask?-bring fish from Pontus,
- " Castor, flax, ebony, frankincense, and slippery Coan wines:

"Take first the recent pepper from the thirsting camel:

- "Turn something; swear."-" But Jupiter will hear."-" Alas!
- "Simpleton, to bore with your finger the re-tasted salt-cellar,
- "Content you will pass your time, if you aim to live with Jove.
- "Now, ready, you fit the skin to the slaves, and a wine-vessel: 140

"Quick to the ship: nothing hinders, but in a large ship

137-8. " Alas! simpleton."] Baro, or varo—a servant that waited upon the common soldiers, who was usually very stupid and ignorant-hence a blockhead, a dolt, a foolish fellow.

138. "To bore with your finger, &c.] If you aim at living (i. e. living in amity) with Jupiter, you must not think of trading to increase your fortune, but must be content to live in a poor, mean way. The poorer sort of people lived upon bread, with a little salt. Persius supposes the Stoic to tell Dama, that if he would not perjure himself, in order to get money by trade, he must be content to put his finger, and endeavour to scrape up a little salt from the bottom of his own poor salt-cellar; where there were only a few grains left, from his having done this so often, in order to give a relish to his palate, by licking his fingers, after they had rubbed the bottom of the salt-cellar, as if he meant to bore it through. This is proverbial. to express very great poverty. Salem lingere signified to live in the utmost poverty—to fare poorly.—PLAUT. Curcull. act iv. sc. the last. Hic. hodie apud me nunquam delinges salem; that is as much as to say-" you shan't eat a morsel."

140. " Now ready."] Succinctus-literally, girt, trussed up. The ancients wore long, loose garments, which, when they prepared to travel, they girded, or trussed up, about their loins, that they might walk the more freely. See Hor. lib. ii sat. vi. 107. Hence, being ready, prepared; also nimble, expeditious. See Exod. xi. 11, former part. 1 Kings xviii. 46. Luke xii. 35.

-- "Fit the skin," &c.] They had wallets, or knapsacks, made of skins, in which they packed their clothes, and other necessaries, when they travelled either by land or sea.

You put your knapsack, and your cask of wine for the voyage, on the backs of your slaves, to carry on board.

141. "Quick to the ship."] You lose no time, you hurry to get on board.

"Nothing hinders." Nothing stands in your way to prevent the immediate execution of your plan, or to discourage you-unless-See l. 142, note 2.

- " A large ship."] Trabs is a beam, or any great piece of timber, of which ships are built: here, by meton, the ship itself. See Juv. sat. xiv. 1. 276. VIRG. Æn. iii. 191.

Ægæum rapias, nisi solers Luxuria ante

Seductum moneat; 'Quo deinde, insane, ruis? Quo?

· Quid tibi vis? calido sub pectore mascula bilis

Intumuit, quam non extinxerit urna cicutæ.

'Tun' mare transilias? Tiñi, torta cannabe fulto,

Cæna sit in transtro? Vejentanumque rubellum
Exhalet, vapidâ læsum pice, sessilis obba?

Quid petis? ut nummi, quos hic quincunce modesto

· Nutrieras, pergant avidos sudare deunces?

150

142. "The Ægean." A part of the Mediterranean sea, near Greece, dividing Europe from Asia. It is now called the Archipelago, and, by the Turks, the White sea. Its name is supposed to be derived from airgs, Dor fluctus, from its turbulent waves. From this dangerous sea are made two adages; viz. Ægeum scaphula transmittere—to cross the Ægean sea in a little boat.—i. e. to undertake a weighty business with small abilities; and Ægeum navigare—to undertake an hazardous enterprise. See Ainsw. Hence our Stoic mentions this sea in particular, to shew the power of avarice over the mind that is enslaved by it, and that no dangers will deter from its pursuits—Nihil obstat, says he.

- "Sly Luxury." | Solers-shrewd, wily, cunning.

We have seen the victory of Avarice over Sloth, now Luxury is introduced, as putting in its claim for the mastery.

Thus, says the Stoic, will Avarice lord it over you, and drag you in her chains over the dangerous Ægean for lucre's sake, unless, being beforehand seduced and enthralled by Luxury, you should listen to her admonitions. Ante—i. e. before you put in practice what Avarice has advised.

143. "Whither thence," &c.] Whither from that warm and comfortable bed of yours, on which you so delightfully repose yourself, are you running headlong (ruis), like a madman as you are? See l.

132.

144. "Manly bile," & c.] Masculus—male; hence manly, stout, hardy, than which nothing is more opposite to luxury.—Your warm breast—i.e. heated and enflamed with the ardent desire which now possesses you to face the danger of the seas; for this an hardy rage is risen up, (intumuit) swells within you, says Luxury, and stirs you up to this dangerous resolution.

145. "Urn of hemlock." An urn was a measure of about four gallons. Cicuta—an heib like our hemlock, the juice of which was of an extremely cold nature, so as to be a deadly poison, when taken in a certain quantity. See sat. iv. 2. Also a sort of hellebore, administered medicinally, in madness, or frienzies, to cool the brain. See Ainsw. Cicuta, No. 1, 2.

Quæ poterunt unquam satis expurgare cicutæ Hon, epist, ii. lib. ii. 53.

146. "Can you cross the sea?" Can you be so forgetful of the blandishments of ease and luxury, as to subject yourself to the dangers and inconveniencies of a sea-voyage?

- "You may hurry over the Ægean: unless sly Luxury should
- " Admonish you before seduced"—" Whither thence, madman, do
- "Whither? what would you have? under your warm breast manly bile
- " Has swelled up, which an urn of hemlock could not have extin" guished. 145
- 66 Can you cross the sea? to thee shall there be a supper on a bench,
- " Propp'd with twisted hemp? and red Veientane wine
- " Shall the broad-bottomed jug exhale, hurt with nasty pitch?
- "What seek you? that money, which here with modest five per cent. You had nourished, should go on to sweat greedy cent. per - " cent. ?
- 146. "A supper, &c."] Instead of an elegant and well-spread table, can you bear to eat your supper upon a rough plank; and instead of an easy couch, to be supported by a coil of cable, by way of a seat?
- 147. "Red Veientane wine." A coarse, bad wine, such as seamen carried with them among their sea-stores. See Hor. lib. ii. sat. iii. l. 143.
- 148. "The broad-bottomed jug." Obba—a bowl or jug with a great belly and broad bottom, that sitteth, as it were—sessilis.—This sort of jug, or bowl, was peculiarly useful at sea, because not easily thrown down by the motion of the ship.

- " Exhale."] Cast forth the fumes of.

"Hurt with nasty pitch." Smelling and tasting of the pitch, with which every thing on board a ship is daubed—this, perhaps, was the case with the obba: or the pitch may be meant, with which the vessel which held the wine was stopped, and which being of a coarse sort, might give a disagreeable taste to the liquor.

149. "What seek you?" What errand are you going upon? Is it to make better interest of your money, than you can make by staying at home?

- " Modest five per cent."] This, as among us, was not reckoned usurious, but modest-i. e. moderate, legal interest.

150. "Nourished." Metaph. from nourishing, nursing, fostering a child, making it thrive and grow: hence applied to money, as increasing it by care.

"To sweat." Metaph. from the effect of toil and labour—these must attend those who endeavour to make extraordinary interest of their money, by trading to foreign countries.

"Greedy."] Metaph. from an immoderate desire of food. Those who strive to make exorbitant interest of their money, may well be called greedy of gain; and hence the epithet greedy is applied to the gain itself.

"Cent. per cent."] Deunx—a pound lacking an ounce. A duodecim, una dempta uncia. Eleven ounces—eleven parts of another thing divided into twelve: so that deunces here signifies ele-

' Indulge genio: carpamus dulcia; nostrum est

· Quod vivis: cinis, et manes, et fabula fies.

· VIVE MEMOR LETHI: FUGIT HORA: hoc quod loquor, inde est." En quid agis? duplici in diversum scinderis hamo.

Hunccine, an hunc, sequeris? subeas alternus oportet, Ancipiti obsequio, dominos: alternus oberres.

155

Nec tu, cum obstiteris semel, instantique negaris ven pounds gained by every twelve, which is gaining very near cent. per cent. as we say.

151. " Indulge your genius."] Here genio means natural inclination. Indulgere genio, to make much of himself. AINSW.

- " Pluck sweets." Metaph. from plucking fruits or flowers. Hor. lib. i. ode xi. 1. 8.

Carpe diem.

q. d. Let us seize on and enjoy the sweets of life.

This sentiment is finely expressed in the apocryphal book of Wisdom, ch. ii. 6. et seq.

Luxury has been dissuading Dama from attempting his voyage, by representing the dangers and inconveniencies which must attend it: now she invites him to stay, that he may not lose the pleasures of ease and luxury, which the shortness of life affords him but a little time for the enjoyment of.

151-2. " Mine that you live."] i. e. It is owing to me, says. Luxury, that you enjoy the pleasures and sweets of life, without which, to live is not life. Biog Bis deomeros un esi Bios-says the Greek proverb. Among us-" May we live all the days of our life," is a common convivial expression.

Horace, on another occasion, says to the muse Melpomene,

Quod spiro et placeo, si placeo, tuum est. Lib. iv. ode iii. l. 24.

152. " Become askes." You will soon die, and be carried to the funeral pile, where you will be burnt to ashes.

" A ghost." Manes—a spirit separated from the body.

" A fable."] Fabula, (from for faris, to speak or talk,) a subject of discourse. Persius, here, some think to allude to Horace's fabulæque manes-i. e. manes de quibus multæ sunt fabulæthe manes who are much talked of. Lib. i. ode iv. 1. 16.

But as the Stoic is here speaking as an Epicurean, who believes body and soul to die together, I should rather think that fabula here means an invented story, a groundless tale-for such they looked upon the doctrine of a future state. See Wisd. ii. 1-9.

" A nothing but an old wife's tale,"

DRYDEN.

Soon wilt thou glide a ghost for gossips' chat. BREWSTER.

153. " Live mindful of death."] q. d. Memento mori.

Dum licet in rebus jucundis vive beatus:

Vive memor quam sis ævi brevis. Hor. lib. ii. sat. vi. l. 96, 7.

- " The hour flies."]. Currit enim ferox ætas.

Hox, lib. ii. ode v. l. 13, 14.

- "Indulge your genius-let us pluck sweets-It is mine
- "That you live: you will become ashes, and a ghost, and a fable.
- "LIVE MINDFUL OF DEATH; THE HOUR FLIES: this, which I speak, is from thence."
 - "Lo, what do you? you are divided different ways with a double
- "This do you follow, or this? By turns it behoves that you go under,
- "With doubtful obsequiousness, your masters: by turns, you may wander.
- "Nor can you, when once you have withstood, and have refused to obey

Sed fugit interea, fugit irreparabile tempus.

VIRG. Georg. iii. l. 284. Comp. Æn. x. 467, 8.

153. "This, which I speak, is from thence." The time in which I am now speaking is taken from thence—i. e. from the flying hour. See Hor. lib. i. ode xi. l. 7.

Dum loquimur fugerit invida Ætas.

The late Lord Hervey, in a poetical epistle to a friend, applies this very beautifully:

"Even now, while I write, time steals on our youth, "And a moment's cut off from thy friendship and truth."

The whole of Luxury's argument amounts to—"Let us eat and "drink, for to-morrow we die." Is. xxii. 13. 1 Cor. xv. 32.

154. "Lo, what do you?"] The Stoic now turns his discourse, immediately, as from himself, to Dama, whom he has represented as beset by Avarice and Luxury, and at a loss which to obey. Now, says he, what can you do, under these different solicitations?

"You are divided," &c.] Metaph. from angling, with two hooks fixed to the line, and differently baited, so that the fish are doubtful which to take.

155. "This do you follow," &c.] Hunc-dominum understood.

-Which master will you follow-Avarice or Luxury?

--- "By turns it behoves," &c.] The truth is, that you will sometimes go under, or yield to, the dominion of the one, sometimes of the other, alternately—ancipiti obsequio—doubting which you shall serve most. Alternus-a-um. See Ainsw.

156. "Wander."] Oberres—be like one that is at a loss, and wanders up and down; you will wander in your determinations which to serve, at times, their commands being contrary to each other.—Avarice bids you get more—Luxury bids you enjoy what you have.

157. "Withstood," &c.] Perhaps for once, or so, you may refuse to obey their most importunate solicitations and commands; but don't, from this, conclude that you are free from their service. It is not a single instance, but a whole tenor of resistance to vice, which constitutes freedom. Instanti—earnest, urgent.

Parere imperio, 'rupi jam vincula,' dicas. Nam et luctata canis nodum abripit : attamen illi, Cum fugit, a collo trahitur pars longa catenæ.

160

Dave, cito, hoc credas jubeo, finire dolores Præteritos meditor: (crudum Chærestratus unguem Abradens, ait hæc.) An siccis dedecus obstem Cognatis? An rem patriam, rumore sinistro, Limen ab obscænum, frangam, dum Chrysidis udas Ebrius ante fores, extinctâ cum face, canto?

165

Euge, puer, sapias: diis depellentibus agnam Percute. Sed censen' plorabit, Dave, relicta? Nugaris: soleâ, puer, objurgabere rubrâ,

159. "A dog," &c.] A dog may struggle till he breaks his chain, but then runs away with a long piece of it hanging to him at his neck, by which he is not only incommoded in his flight, but easily laid hold of, and brought back to his confinement. Canis—here feminine—lit. a bitch.

So will it be with you; you may break loose, for a while, from the bondage and service of vice, but those inbred principles of evil, which you will carry about you, will hinder your total escape, and make it easy for the solicitations of your old masters to reduce you again into bondage to them. Therefore, while there remains any vice and folly within you, you will be a slave, however you may call yourself free.

161. "Davus," & ct. The Stoic, in confirmation of his main argument, to prove that "all but the wise are slaves," having instanced sloth, avarice, and luxury, as lording it over the minds of men, now proceeds to shew that the passion of love is another of those chains by which the mind is bound.

He introduces a scene in the Eunuch of Menander, from which Terence took his Eunuch, where the lover is called Chærestratus (in Terence, Phædria) communicating to his servant Davus (in Terence, Parmeno) his intention of leaving his mistress Chrysis (in Terence, Thais).

"Davus," says Chærestratus, "(and I insist on your believing me to be in earnest), I am thinking to give up my mistress, and to do this shortly—cito—and thus to put an end to all the plague and "uneasiness which she has cost me.

162-3. "His raw nail gnawing," &c.] Biting his nail to the quick; a very common action with people in deep and anxious thought.

163. "Shall I, a disgrace."] q. d. Shall I, who have made myself a disgrace to my family by keeping this woman-.

--- "Oppose." Act contrary to the wishes and advice of my sober relations?

Siccus signifies sober, in opposition to uvidus, soaked, mellow with liquor. Hor. ode iv. 5. 38-40

- "An instant command, say "I now have broken my bonds."
- "For also a dog, having struggled, breaks the knot: but to him,
- When he flies, a long part of the chain is drawn by his neck. 160 "Davus, quickly (I command that this you believe) to finish griefs

"Past I meditate: Chærestratus, his raw nail

"Gnawing, says these words) shall I, a disgrace, oppose my sober

" Relations? Shall I my paternal estate, with an ill report,

Spend at an obscene threshold, while, before the wet doors

"Of Chrysis, drunken I sing with an extinguished torch ?-"Well done, boy, be wise: to the repelling gods a lamb

"Smite:"-" But think you, Davus, she will weep, being left?"

"You trifle-you will, boy, be chidden with a red slipper, Dicimus integro Sicci mane die, dicimus uvidi Cum Sol oceano subest.

Hence sicci means sober, orderly people in general, in contradistinction to rakes and libertines.

. 164. " Paternal estate," &c.] Spend and diminish my patrimony, at the expense of my reputation. Comp. Juv. sat. xiv. 1. 1.
165. "An obscene threshold."] At the house of an harlot.—

Synce. limen for domum.

-- "Wet doors," &c.] The doors wet with the dew of the night .- " Shall I serenade her at midnight, when I am drunken, and "have put out the torch with which my servant is lighting me home, "for fear of being seen and known by the passers by?"

167. "Well done," &c.] "Well done, my young master," says

Davus, "I hope you will come to your senses at last."

"Repelling gods," &c.] It was usual to offer a thankoffering to the gods, on a deliverance from any danger: hence Davus bids his master sacrifice a lamb—diis depellentibus—to the gods, whose office it was to repel and keep off evil. Perhaps Castor and Pollux are here meant, as they were reckoned peculiarly to avert mischief. See Delph. note.-Horace sacrificed a lamb to Faunus, the god of the fields and woods, for his escape from the falling tree. Lib. ii. ode xvii. ad fin.-Averruncus-Deus qui mala avertit AINSW.

168. "Think you, Davus," &c.] Here the young man wavers in his resolution, and shews that he is still a slave to his passion for Chrysis—he can't bear the thought of making her uneasy.

169. "You trifle-"] Answers Davus. Is this the way in which you are to put an end to all the plague and uneasiness of this amour, to be thus irresolute, and unable to bear the thought of her tears for the loss of you? Alas! how you trifle with yourself!

"You will be chidden," &c.] O foolish youth, when once Chrysis finds out that you are so fond of her, that you can't bear to grieve her by forsaking her, she will make her advantage of it; she will let you see her imperiousness, and will not only scold, but beat you.

Ne trepidare velis, atque arctos rodere casses. Nunc ferus, et violens: at si vocet, haud mora dicas,

· Quidnam igitur faciam? ne nunc, cum accersat, et ultro

Supplicet, accedam?' Si totus, et integer, illinc Exieras, nec nunc. Hic, hic, quem quarimus, hic est: Non in festuca, lictor quam jactat ineptus.

159. " Red slipper."] Solea-a kind of pantoffe, or slipper, covering only the sole of the foot, and fastened with laces. It was a fashion among the fine ladies to have these of a red or purple colour, as well as to make use of them for the chastisement of their humble admirers. See Juv. sat. vi. 1. 611.

Thraso is represented by Terence (Eun. act. v. sc. vii.) as intending, after his quarrel with the courtezan Thais, to surrender himself to her at discretion, and to do whatever she commanded. The pa-

Fasite GNATHO says-Quid est?

THRASO. Qu'i minus quam Hercules servivit Omphale? GN. Exemplum placet : Utinam tibi commitigari videam sandalio caput.

From this answer of Gnatho, it seems likely that there was represented, on the Athenian stage, some comedy on the loves of Hercules and Omphale, in which that here was seen spinning of wool, and his mistress sitting by, and beating him with her sandal, or slip-per, when he did wrong. To this our poet may probably allude. See the ingenious Mr. Colman's translation of this passage, and the 11. 1

170 "To struggle"] i. e. That you may not again attempt your liberty. Metaph. from the fluttering of birds when caught on lime-twigs, who flutter their wings to free themselves, by which they are the more limed, and rendered more unable to escape. MARSHALL:

Sic aves dum viscum trepidantes excutiunt, plumis omnibus illinunt. Seneca, de Ira.

Trepido does not always signify trembling through fear, but sometimes to hasten, to bustle, to keep a clutter.

Dum trepidant alæ. Vinc. Æn. iv. 121; and ix. 114.

So struggling to get free from a haughty mistress. Ac veluti primo Taurus detractat aratro, Mox venit assueto mollis ad arva jugo. Sic primo juvenes trepidant in amore feroces, Dehinc domiti posthac æqua et iniqua ferunt. PROPERT. lib. fi.

"And bite," &c.] Metaph, from wild beasts taken in nets, or toils, who endeavour to free themselves by biting them asunder.

In short, Chrysis will so use you, if you again put yourself in her power, that you will not dare to attempt a second time to escape

171. "Fierce and violent."] Now you are not with her you can bluster stoutly.

" Call."] i. e. Invite you to come to her

- "Lest you should have a mind to struggle, and bite the tight toils:
- " Now fierce and violent: but, if she should call, without delay you would say-
- "What therefore shall I do? now, when she can send for me, and willingly
- "Supplicate, shall I not go?"—" If whole and entire from thence
- You had come forth, not now."—" This, this is he whom we seek,
- " Not in the wand which the foolish lictor shakes.

175

171. "Without delay," &c.] You would instantly change your note, and say—

172. " What therefore," &c.] These are almost the words of Phædria, in Ter. Eun. act i. sc. i. l. 1, 2.

Quid igitur faciam? non eam, ne nunc quidem Cum accersor ultro?

173. "Whole and entire," &c.] "If when you left her, you had been entirely heart-whole, and had shaken off the yoke of lust and passion, you would not—nec nunc, not even now—return to her, even though she has sent to entreat you to it; but, from your thought of yielding to her entreaties, I see very plainly that, notive withstanding all your deliberations about leaving her, you are still a slave to her."

174. "Whom we seek." The man who can so far emancipate himself from his passion, as to free himself from its dominion, so as no longer to be a slave to it, which Chærestratus would have proved himself, if he could have kept his resolution against all solicitations to break it: this is the man I mean, says the Stoic, this is the man I allow to be free.

175. "Not in the wand," &c.] The better to explain this place, as well as 1. 88 of this Satire, it may not be amiss to mention, particularly, the ceremony of manumission.

"The slave was brought before the consul, and, in after-times, before the pretor, by his master, who, laying his hand upon his servant's head, said to the pretor—Hunc hominem liberum esse volo, and, with that, let him go out of his hand, which they termed—e manu emittere, whence manumission:—then the pretor laying a rod upon his head, called vindicta, said—Dico cum liberum esse more Quiritum; and turned him round on his heel. See l. 75, 6. After this, the lictor, taking the rod out of the pretor's hand, struck the servant several blows upon the head, face, and back, (which part of the ceremony Persius refers to in this line,) and nothing now remained but pileo donare, to present him with a cap in token of liberty, and to have his name entered in the common toll of freemen, with the reason of his obtaining that favour." See before, l. 88. See Kennett, Antiq. p. 100.

The foolish lictor."] Ineptus, here, is either used in contempt of the lictor, who was a sort of beadle, that carried the fasces before the pretor, and usually, perhaps, an ignorant, illiterate fellow; or it may be used in the sense of unapt, unfit, improper-i. e. to convey true liberty on the slave, whom he struck with the rod, in that part of the ceremony, which fell to his share.

Jus habet ille sui, palpo quem ducit hiautem Cretata Ambitio? Vigila, et cicer ingere large Rixanti populo, nostra ut Floralia possint Aprici meminisse senes! quid pulchrius?-At cum Herodis venêre dies, uncâtque fenestrâ Dispositæ, pinguem nebulam vomuêre lucernæ.

175. "Shakes." Jacto—is to shake or move; to move to and fro, as in the action of striking often; also to brag or boast.

176 "Right of himself." The poet now instances, in the vice of ambition, another chain which binds the enslaved mind, and which hinders that freedom for which our Stoic is contending.

Can he call himself his own master—meus, l. 88; or say that he is sui juris--i. e. that he can dispose of himself as he pleases, as having a sovereign propriety in his person.

"Whom gaping."] Hiantem—gaping after, coveting greatly, like a creature gaping for food.

-- "With its lure." Palpum -i, lit. a gentle, soft stroking with the hand; hence obtrudere palpum alicui-to wheedle, flatter, or coax. Ainsw.

176-7. " Chalked ambition." This expression alludes to the white garments worn by candidates for offices; in these they went about to ask the people's votes, and from these white garments, which to make still whiter they rubbed over with chalk, they were called candidati.

177. " Ambition."] Literally signifies a going about, from ambio: hence a suing or canvassing for favour-hence that desire of honour and promotion, which is called ambition.

___ " Watch_"] Says Ambition; always be upon the look out; lose no opportunity to make yourself popular.

"Heap vetches largely." Those who aspired to public offices, endeavoured to gain the votes of the people by donations and largesses. These kinds of public bribes consisted in pease, beans, lupines or vetches, given away among the people. The Romans ran to such extravagance on these occasions, that several of the richest entirely ruined themselves. J. Cæsar employed in such largesses near a million and an half more than his estate was worth.

In cicere atque faba bona tu perdasque lupinis, Latus tu in circo spatiere, aut aneus ut stes-. Hor. lib. ii. sat. iii. l. 181, 3.

178. " Quarrelling people."] Quarrelling about their shares in the largesses and donations; or, as we see at our elections, about the interests of the several candidates, whom they severally espoused.

-- " Our feasts," &c. That the feasts which he gave, marked by our great liberality, may never be forgotten, to the latest old age of those who attended them.

Feasts of Flora." Flora was a noted courtezan in Rome,

- "Has he the right of himself, whom gaping, with its lure, chalk-
- "Ambition leads? Watch: and heap vetches largely on the
- "Quarrelling people, that our feasts of Flora sunny old men

"May remember: what more glorious? but when "The days of Herod have come, and in the greasy window

"The candles disposed, have vomited a fat cloud, who having gotten a large sum of money by prostitution, made the Roman people her heir: but they, being ashaned of her profession, made her the goddess of flowers.

180

In honour of her, feasts were held, and games exhibited, which were provided by the ædile, who, on this occasion, was very liberal in his donations to the people, in hopes of gaining their votes for an higher place in the magistracy. The Floralia were held on the 28th of April.

178. "Sunny old men." Aprici senes—old men who loved to bask in the sun, the warmth of which was very acceptable to their cold habit of body, which old age brought on; their delight was to bask on a sunny bank, and talk over old times. Comp. Juv. sat. xi. 1. 203.

In the well-known, beautiful ballad of Darby and Joan, the poet has made use of this idea, as one description of the amusement of old age—

Together they totter about, Or sit in the sun at the door-&c.

179. "What more glorious?"] Than thus to reccommend ourselves to the people, gain their favour, and leave a lasting memory of our munificence? Iron.

180. "The days of Herod," & c.] Another chain in which the human mind is holden, is superstition; to this, all but the wise are slaves. He instances this in those Romans who had addicted themselves to many of the Jewish rites and superstitions, for such their whole religion appeared to the heathen. See Juv. sat. xiv. l. 96—106. We find, by Matt. xiv. 6. and Mark vi. 21. that the king's birth-day was an high festival, observed at Herod's court; and, by this passage of Persius, it appears to have been celebrated by the Jews at Rome also, particularly by the Herodians, who constituted a society in honour of Herod, after the mamner of the Sodalitia at Rome. See BROUGHTON, Bibliotheca—tit. Herodians.

"Greasy window."] They stuck up candles, or lamps, in their windows, in token of a rejoicing-day—they lighted them early in the day (comp. Juv. sat. xii. 92.) and by their flaring and gnttering they made the frames of the windows on which they stood all over grease.

181. "Fat cloud."] i. e. of smoke.—An exact description of the smoke of a candle, or lamp, which is impregnated with particles of the fat, or grease, from which it ascends; as may be seen on ceilings, or other places, on which this smoke has alighted, and

Portantes violas; rubrumqué amplexa catinum, Cauda natat thynni, tumet alba fidelia vino ; Labra moves tacitus, recutitaque sabbata palles : Tunc nigri lemures, ovoque pericula rupto: Hinc grandes Galli, et cum sistro lusca sacerdos, which when they are attempted to be cleaned, are found to be soiled with a mixture of soot and grease.

185

Vomuère is a word well adapted to express the discharge of the thick and filthy smoke from the wicks. So VIRG. Æn. v. 682.

Stupa vomens tardum fumum.

The tow disgorging tardy, languid smoke.

182. " Bearing violets."] They adorned their lamps with wreaths of violets, and other flowers, on these occasions.

"Embraced a red dish."] Hypallage, for the dish embracing the tail of the fish. Thynnus, a large coarse fish; the poet mentions only the tail of it, which was the worst part—this he does, probably, by way of derision of the Jews festal-dinner.-The dish, of red earthen-ware. Miles and pare

183. " Savims-"] In sauce.

"White pitcher." An earthen vessel, a white crock of earth.

"Swells."] Is filled up to the brim-or tumet may imply, that the wine was bad, and in a fermenting state, frothing up above the brim.--Every circumstance of the entertainment seems to be mentioned with a thorough air of contempt, and to denote the poverty of the Jews. - 1

184. "Silent you move your lifts."] You join in the solemnity, you attend at their proseuchæ, and, like them, mutter prayers inwardly, only moving your lips. See sat. ii. l. 6.

"And fear." Palles is used by our poet elsewhere to denote hard study, which occasions paleness. See sat. i. l. 124; and sat. iii. 85. Here it is used to denote that superstitious fear, which occasions, from yielding to it, a pale and wan appearance in the countenance.

-- "Circumcised sabbaths." Recutita sabbata. Hypall. for sabbata recutitorum—the sabbaths of the circumcised. Palles sabbata, here, is equivalent to metuentem sabbata. Juv. sat. xiv. l. 96. -q. d. By degrees you will enter into all the Jewish superstition.

The word sabbata, in the plural, may here denote, not only the sabbath-days, but all the Jewish holidays, which were days of rest from labour: among others, the festival which they had instituted in honour of Herod's birth-day.

185. "Then black hobgoblins."] The mind enslaved by super-stition, falls from one degree of it into another.

Lemures-ghosts, spirits that walk by night, hobgoblins. AINSW. -Nocturnos lemures. Hor. ep. ii. lib. ii. l. 209. They are only supposed to appear by night-hence called black.

"Dangers from a broken egg."] The ancients had a super-

- "Bearing violets; and, having embraced a red dish,
- "The tail of a tunny fish swims, the white pitcher swells with wine :

" Silent you move your lips, and fear circumcised sabbaths:

- "Then black hobgoblins, and dangers from a broken egg: 185
- "Hence huge priests of Cybele, and a one-eyed priestess with a sisstition about egg-shells: they thought, that if an egg-shell were cracked, or had an hole bored through at the bottom of it, they were subject to the power of sorcery.

This is contrary to the superstition of those, who, in the days when witches were believed in, always broke the bottom of an eggshell, and crossed it, after having eaten the egg, lest some witch should make use of it in bewitching them, or sailing over the sea in it, if it were whole. See Dryden's note.

it, if it were whole. See DRYDEN'S note.

For an instance of national superstition, as ridiculous as any that can be imagined, I would refer the reader to the solemn public statute of 1 Jac. I. c. 12. against witchcraft—now repealed by 9 Geo.

II. c. 5.

186. "Hence."] i.e. From this superstitious principle in the minds of men, they are led from one degree of credulity to another: of this advantage has been taken by the priests of Cybele, and of Isis, to fill them with groundless terrors.

--- "Huge priests of Cybele."] See these described at large, Juv. sat. vi. 510-20. They were called Galli, from Gallus, a river of Phrygia, the drinking of which made people furious. So Ovid, Fast. iv.

Inter, ait, viridem Cybelen altasque Celenas, Amnis it insana nomine Gallus aqua. Qui bibit inde furit, &c.

Persius calls them grandes—Juvenal says, ingens semiver, &c.—
They were usually of great stature, owing, as has been said, to their castration, which increased their bulk. Their strange, mad gestures, and their extraordinary appearance, as well as their loud and wild vociferation, had great effect upon weak and superstitious minds.
See Juv. sat. vi. 521—5.

The superstition of the Egyptian goddess Isis had been transferred to Rome, where she had a temple. She was represented with a sistrum, a sort of brazen or iron timbrel, with loose rings on the edges, in her hand. Σειςρον, from στισ, to shake—its noise proceeding from its being shaken violently, and struck with the hand, or with an iron rod.

The priestess of Isis, when celebrating the wild rites of Isis, carried a sistrum in her hand, in imitation of the goddess, and had great influence over the minds of the superstitious. See Juv. sat. vi. 525—

30.

The poet calls her one-eyed—perhaps this was her situation, and that she pretended to have lost an eye by a blow from the sistrum of Isis; for it seems that this was the way which the goddess took to avenge herself on those who offended her.

in group to an in the Incussère deos inflantes corpora, si non Prædictum, ter mane, caput gustaveris allî.

Dixeris hæc inter varicosos centuriones. Continuo crassum ridet Pulfenius ingens, Et centum Græcos curto centusse licebit.

Decernat quodcunque volet de corpore nostro Isis, et irato feriat mea lumina sistro. Juv. sat. xiii. l. 92, 3. See the note there, on l. 93.

187. " Have inculcated," &c.] These vile impostors, when once the mind is enslaved so far by superstition as to receive their impositions, will inculcate their absurd and wild notions as so many truthsthey will persuade you, that the gods which they serve will send dropsies, and other swellings of the body, unless you use some amulet or charm to prevent it; such as eating a head, or clove, of garlick, for three mornings successively.

188. "Appointed."] i. e. Ordered—prescribed—as a preservative.
189. "If you say these things," &c.] If you were to discourse, as I have done, in the hearing of one of our rough centurions (comp. sat. iii. l. 77.), in order to prove the slavery of all men to vice and folly, except the wise, he would set up a loud horse-laugh at you.

"Veiny.] Varicosus, having large veins-perhaps from the

A THE TOTAL TOTAL

10 1 4 1 1 MILL CONTROL TO THE TOTAL STATE OF THE STATE O t place at the first and the second

the state of the s

and the first and the particular transfer for the first and the second second man the second of the property of the second to be all the state of the stat

The age of Jones & Dear Hilliam Committee Secretary and the second wildstate of a solo or all robustness of his make. and the formation of a strong state of the s " Have inculcated gods inflating bodies, if you have not

" Tasted, three times in the morning, an appointed head of garlick.

" If you say these things among the veiny centurions,

" Immediately huge Pulfenius rudely laughs, 190

" And cheapens an hundred Greeks at a clipped centussis."

190. "Huge Pulfenius."] The name of some remarkably tall and lusty soldier of that day—put here for any such sort of person.

— "Rudely laughs."] Crassum ridet, for crasse ridet. Græcism.

191. "And cheapens."] Liceor -eri, dep. to cheapen a thing, to bid money for it, to offer the price.

"Greeks."] i. e. Philosophers, most of which first came from Greece.

--- "A clipped centussis." Centussis, a rate of Roman money, amounting to about six shillings and three-pence of our money.

"Clipped."] Curtailed, battered-short of its nominal value, like bad money among us.

q. d. If Pulfenius, the centurion, were to hear what I have said on the subject of liberty, he would not only laugh at it, but, if he were asked what he would give for an hundred philosophers, he would not offer a good six and three-penny piece for them all.—

However, though you may be of the same mind, Dama, yet what I have said is not the less true, nor are philosophers the less valuable in the eyes of all the wise and good.

END OF THE FIFTH SATIRE.

VOL. II.

SATIRA VI.

ARGUMENT.

Persius addresses this epistolary Satire to his friend Casius Bassus, a lyric poet. They both seem, as was usual with the studious among the Romans, in the beginning of winter, to have retired from Rome to their respective country houses; Persius to his, at the port of Luna, in Liguria; Bassus to his, in the territories of the Sabines.

The Poet first inquires after his friend's manner of life and studies, ADMOVIT jam bruma foco te, Basse, Sabino? Jamne lyra, et tetrico vivunt tibi pectine chordæ? Mire opifex, numeris veterum primordia rerum, Atque marem strepitum fidis intendisse Latinæ;

Line 1. Sabine fire-hearth.] The ancient Sabines were a people between the Umbrians and Latins, but, after the rape of the Sabine women, incorporated into one people with the Latins, by agreement between Tatius and Romulus. This part of Italy still retained its name; and here Bassus had a country-house, to which he retired at the beginning of winter, for the more quiet and convenient opportunity of study. This was not far from Rome.

—— Fire-hearth.] So focus literally signifies, quod foveat ignem——Annsw. but it is sometimes used for the whole house, by synec. and, perhaps, is so to be understood here. Sometimes by meton.

for the fire.

2. Does now the lyre.] The lyre was a stringed instrument, which gave a soft and gentle sound when touched with fingers; but when struck with a quill, which, when so used, was called pecten, gave a louder and harsher sound.

The language here is figurative—the lyre stands for lyric, or the softer and gentler kind of poetry; and the strings, or chords, being struck tetrico pectine, with the rough or barsh quill, denote the sharper and severer style of verse. The poet enquires whether Bassus, in his retirement, was writing lyric verses, and whether he was also employing himself in graver or severer kinds of composition.

on, it may be said to be dead, and when taken up and played on, the strings may be said to be alive, from their motion and sound.

3. Admirable artist!] Opifex-lit. a workman: it also means an inventor, deviser, and framer.

SATIRE VI.

ARGUMENT.

then informs him of his own, and where he now is. He describes himself in his retirement, as quite undisquieted with regard to care or passions; and, with respect to his expenses, neither profuse nor parsimonious. He then treats on the true use of riches; and shews the folly of those who live sordidly themselves, for the sake of leaving their riches to others.

TO CÆSIUS BASSUS.

HAS winter already moved thee, Bassus, to thy Sabine fire-hearth?

Does now the lyre, and do the strings, live to thee with a rough quill?

Admirable artist! in numbers the beginnings of things

To have displayed, and the manly sound of the Latin lute;

3. In numbers.] i. e. In verses-in metre.

The beginnings: Primordia—the first beginnings—the history of the earliest beginnings of things. So Ovid, Met. lib. i. l. 3, 4.

Ad mea perpetuum deducite tempora carmen.

Some understand the poet to mean, that Bassus had written a treatise in verse, concerning the original beginning or rise of old and antiquated words, reading, after many copies, veterum primordia vocum—and that Bassus was not only a good poet, but a learned antiquary. But rerum affords the easiest and most natural sense—Malim igitur cum Casaubono et aliis quidbusdam, Osoyonav et publication intelligere. See Delph. note.

4. Displayed.] Intendisse-lit. to have stretched .- The sound is given from instruments by the tension of the strings.

Manly round of the Latin lute.] l. e. To have written Latin lyric verses, in a noble manly strain.

Among the Greeks they reckon nine famous lyric poets: but two among the Romans; viz. Horace and Cæsius Bassus.

Horace calls himself-Romanæ fidicen lyræ. Ode iii. lib. iv

To be reckoned this was his great ambition, as appears, ode i. lib. i. ad fin. where he says to Mæcenas:

Quod si me lyricis vatibus inseres, Sublini feriam sidera vertice.

10

Mox juvenes agitare jocos; et, pollice honesto,
Egregios lusisse senes!—Mihi nunc Ligus ora
Intepet, hybernatque meum mara; qua latus ingens
Dant scopuli, et multâ littus se valle receptat,
Lunai portum est operæ cognoscere, cives:
Cor jubet hoc Ennî; postquam destertuit esse
Mæonides, quintus pavone ex Pythagoreo.

Hic ego securus vulgi, et quid præparet auster Infelix pecori : securus et angulus ille Vicini nostro quia pinguior : et si adeo omnes

5. Then to agitate young jokes.] Then, in light and lively strains, to describe the amours and frolicks of young men.

— Honest thumb.] Meton. with truth and faithfulness, representing the actions and worthy deeds of older men, who have distinguished themselves in a more advanced time of life.

6. Ligurian.] i. e. Being now removed from Rome into Liguria.

-Ligus ora, for Ligustica ora.

6-7. Coast grows warm.] Either from its situation near mountains, which kept off the cold blasts of wind, or from the circumstance next mentioned, the agitation of the sea, which causes a warmth in the water.

Tully, Nat. Deor. lib. ii. says—"Seas agitated by the winds grow so warm, as easily to make us understand, that in those large bodies of water there is heat included: for that heat which we perceive, is not to be accounted merely external and adventitious, but excited by the agitation which is in the innermost parts of the water; this also happens to our bodies, when by motion they grow warm."

7. My sea is rough.] That is, the sea near Volaterra, a city of Tuscany, where Persius was born, and near which he now was.

—— Large side, &c.] The rocks running out far into the sea, present an extensive side to the water, by which the waves are stopped and a quiet bay formed.

8. The shore draws itself in, &c.] The shore retires, and forms a large circular valley between the mountains; which is another reason of the warmth of my situation; my house, which is situated in that valley, being sheltered from the wintry storms.

9. "Port of Luna." So called from the shape of the bay in which it was situate, which, from the circular form of the shore, was like an half-moon-Lunaï, per diæresim, for Lunæ.

"It is worth while," &c.] This line is from Ennius, who began his annals of the Roman people with—

Est operæ pretium, O cives, cognoscere portum Lunæ.

10. The heart of Ennius, &c.] He was an ancient poet, born at Rudiæ, a town of Calabria: he wrote annals of the Roman people; also satires, comedies, and tragedies; but nothing of his is come to us entire. He died 169 years before Christ.

Then to agitate young jokes, and with an honest thumb

To have played remarkable old men. To me now the Ligurian coast
Grows warm, and my sea is rough, where a large side
The rocks give, and the shore draws itself in with much valley.

The port of Luna it is worth while to know, O citizens:

The heart of Ennius commands this, after he ceas'd dreaming that he was

Mæonides, the fifth from the Pythagorean peacock.

Here [am] I, careless of the vulgar, and what the south, Unfortunate to the cattle, may prepare: and unconcerned because that corner

Is more fruitful than mine that's next to it: and if all,

Cor means, literally, the heart; and, by meton, the mind, wisdom, judgment. Perhaps the poet means to say, that Ennius, when in his right mind and sober senses, recommended the port of Luna to his countrymen, after he came out of his vagaries after mentioned.

10. Dreaming, &c.] See Prologue to sat. i. l. 2, and note. Mæonides was a name given to Homer, on account of his supposed birth at Smyrna, in the country of Mæonia, i. e. Lydia.

Quintus, here, to be understood as a prænomen of Ennius:—but it should rather seem, as if Persius were here laughing at the extravagant idea of the Pythagorean doctrine of transmigration, which Ennius for a while had received, and who is said to have dreamt, that the soul of a peacock had transmigrated, first into Euphorbus, then into Homer, then into Pythagoras, and then into Ennius; so that he stood fifth from the peacock. See Dryp. Trans and note on this place.

This is an evident banter on the Pythagorean notion of the met-empsychosis.

12. Here am I, &c.] In this comfortable retreat of the port of Luna, I trouble not my head about what people say of me.

--- What the south, &c.] The south wind, when it blew with any long continuance, was reckoned very unwholesome, particularly to cattle. So Virg. Geor. i. l. 444.

Arboribusque, satisque, Notus, pecorique sinister.

The poet seems to say, that he was without care or anxiety in his retreat. The modern Italians call this wind Sirocco, or Scilocco, which blows from the south-east.

13. That corner, &c.] Horace, sat. vi. lib. ii. l. 8, 9.

O si angulus ille
Proximus accedat, qui nunc denormat agellum.

Persius took his angulus ille from this passage of Horace.

14. And if all, &c.] If ever so many of my inferiors, however

20

Ditescant orti pejoribus, usque recusem Curvus ob id minui senio, aut cœnare sine uncto:

Et signum in vapida naso tetigisse lagena

Discrepet his alius. Geminos, Horoscope, varo Producis genio. Solis natalibus, est qui Tingat olus siccum muria, vafer, in calice empta, Ipse sacrum irrorans patinæ piper. Hic bona dente Grandia magnanimus peragit puer — Utar ego, utar : Nec rhombos, ideo, libertis ponere lautus; Nec tenuem solers turdarum nosse salivamlowly and meanly born, should grow so rich, adeo ditescant, as to have their possessions exceed mine-

15. I should always refuse, &c. I should not make myself uneasy, so as to fret upon that account, and to bring on old age before my time, as if bowed under a weight of years.

16. Sup without a dainty. Unctus, literally, is anointed, greasy, and applied to describe a dainty rich meal, good cheer. Hence unctissimæ coefiæ. ' See Ainsw. Unctus.

I'll not live the worse; envy shall not spoil my appetite; I'll not abate a single dish at my table, in order to save up what would make me as rich as my neighbour.

17. And to have touched with my nose, Ge. I shall not bottle up dregs of musty wine, and then examine the seal, which I have put on the mouth of the vessel, as closely as if I meant to run my nose into the pitch which has received its impression, to try whether any of my servants have opened it.

q. d. I shall neither fret myself into old age before my time with envy, nor turn niggard, in order to save money, that I may equal my richer neighbours.

18. Another may differ, &c.] However such may be my way of thinking, yet as there are Mille hominum species et rerum discolor usus—See sat. v. 52.

it is certain that others may differ from me in sentiments, with regard to these matters.

O Horoscope. Horoscopus here signifies the star that had the ascendent, and presided at one's nativity.

q. d. Whatever astrologers may say, two persons, even twins, born under the same horoscope, are frequently seen to be produced with a different genius, or natural inclination.

19. There is, who, &c.] Of these twins, one of them shall be covetous and close, the other prodigal.

One of them will grudge himself almost the common comforts of

On his birth-day.] This was usually observed as a time of feasting, and making entertainments for their friends. See Juv. sat. xi. l. 83-5; and v. l. 36, 7.

20. Wily.] Vafer-cunning, crafty. - Dip his dry herbs.] Olus -eris-any garden herbs for food

-probably what we call a sailad.

Sprung from worse, should grow ever so rich, I should always refuse, On that account, to be diminish'd crooked with old age, or to sup without a dainty.

And to have touched with my nose the seal in the vapid cask.

Another may differ in these things: twins, O Horoscope, with a various Genius you produce. There is, who, only on his birth-day,

Wily can dip his dry herbs in a cup with bought pickle, Himself sprinkling on the dish sacred pepper. This a magnanimous boy

With his tooth dispatches a great estate.—I will use, I will use: Not therefore splendid to put turbots to my freedmen,

Nor wise to know the small state of thrushes.

Instead of pouring oil, or other good dressing, over the whole, he, in order to have no waste, craftily contrived to dress no more than he ate, by dipping the herbs, as he took them up to eat, into a small cup of pickle: of this he had no store by him, but bought a little for the occasion.

Muria was a kind of sauce, or pickle, made of the liquor of the tunny-fish-a very vile and cheap sauce.

21. Himself sprinkling, &c.] He would not trust this to a servant, for fear of his sprinkling too much, therefore did it himself.

Sacred pepper.] Which he sets as much store by as if it.

were sacred.

Hor. lib. i. sat. i. l. 71, 2.

Tanquam parcere sacris Cogeris.

And lib. ii. sat. iii. l. 110.

Metuensque velut contingere sacrum.

This.] i. c. The other twin, quite of a contrary disposi-

--- A magnanimous boy.] Yet not grown to manhood, but having early a noble disposition. Iron.

22. His tooth.] By the indulgence of his luxurious appetite-me-ton .- devours all he has.

-- Dispatcher a great estate.] i.e. Makes an end of a large estate, by spending it profusely upon his gluttony and luxury.

I will use, &c.] For my part, says Persius, I will use what I have; I say use, not abuse it, either by avarice on the one hand, or by prodigality on the other.

23. Not therefore splendid, &c.] Not so sumptuous and costly as to treat my freedmen, when they come to see me, with turbot for dinner-ideo, i.e. merely because I would appear splendid.

24. Nor wise to know, &c.] Nor yet indulge myself in gluttony, or cultivate a fine delicate palate, so as to be able to distinguish the small difference between one thrush and another.

These birds, which we commonly translate thrushes, were in great repute as dainties. Some pretended to so nice a taste, as to be able

30

- Messe tenus propriâ vive ; et granaria (fas est) 25 Emole; quid metuas? occa, et seges altera in herba est.
- At vocat officium. Trabe ruptâ, Bruttia saxa
- Prendit amicus inops: remque omnem, surdaque vota,
- · Condidit Ionio: jacet ipse in littore, et una
- · Ingentes de puppe dei ; jamque obvia mergis,

Costa ratis laceræ.'-Nunc, ed de cespite vivo, Frange aliquid: largire inopi; ne pictus oberret to distinguish whether the bird they were eating was of the male or female kind, the juices of the latter being reckoned most relishing.

I will use what I have, says Persius, but then it shall be in a rational moderate way; not running into needless extravagance, for fear of being reckoned covetous, or setting up for a connoisseur in eating, for fear of not being respected as a man of a delicate taste.

25. Your own harvest.] Equal your expenses to your income.

26. Grind out.] Don't hoard, but live on what you have—use it

. Fas est—q. d. You may do it, and ought to do it.

What can you fear? You have nothing to be afraid of; the next harvest will replace what you-spend. Comp. Matt. vi.

--- Harrow. Occo is to harrow, to break the clods in a ploughed field, that the ground may lie even, and cover the grain. Here, by synec. it stands for all the operations of husbandry .-- q. d. Plough, sow, harrow your land, and you may expect another crop. -Herba is the blade of any corn, which, when first it appears, is green and looks like grass. "First the blade, then the ear, then "the full corn in the ear." Mark iv. 28.

Persius was for Horace's auream mediocritatem (ode x. lib. ii. l. 5-8), neither for hoarding out of avarice, nor for exceeding out of profuseness.

27. "But duty calls."] Aye, says a miser, all this is very well; but I may be called upon to serve a friend, and how can I be prepared for this if I spend my whole annual income?

"With broken ship." Methinks, says the miser, who is supposing a case of a distressed friend-methinks I see him shipwrecked, and cast away on the Bruttian rocks, and seizing hold on a point of the rock to save himself. See Æneid vi. 360.

Prensantemque uncis manibus capita aspera montis.

Brutium, or Bruttium, was a promontory of Italy, near Rhegium, hod. Reggio, not far from Sicily, nigh to which there were dangerous rocks.

28. "His unheard vows." Surdus means, not only deaf, but also that which is not heard. It was usual for persons in distress at sea to make vows to some god, in order for their deliverance, that they would, if preserved, make such or such offerings on their arriving safe on shore. But, alas! the poor man's freight, and all the vows that he made, were all gone together to the bottom of the Ionian sea. The sea between Sicily and Crete was anciently so called.

Live up to your own harvest: and your granaries (it is right) 25 Grind out. What can you fear?—Harrow—and another crop is in the blade.

"But duty calls. With broken ship, the Bruttian rocks

- "A poor friend takes hold of, and all his substance, and his unheard vows
- "He has buried in the Ionian: himself lies on the shore, and toge-"ther [with him]
- "The great gods from the stern: and now obvious to the sea-gulls 30
- "Are the sides of the torn ship."-Now even from the live turf

Break something; bestow it on the poor man, lest he should wander about

30. "The great gods from the stern."] The ancients had large figures of deities, which were fixed at the stern of the ship, and were regarded as tutelar gods.—Aurato fulgebat Apolline puppis. Virg. Æn. x. 171.—The violence of the waves is supposed to have broken these off from the vessel, and thrown them on shore, whither also the man is supposed to have swum, and where he now lay.

- "Sea-gulls."] Mergus is the name of several sea birds, from their swimming and diving in the sea. Ainsworth says it particularly means the cormorant.

The ribs of the ship were now torn open, and exposed to the birds of prey which haunted the sea, who might devour the dead bodies, or any provisions which were left on board.

31. The live turf, &c.] q. d. Now, upon such an occasion as this (which, however, is not so likely to happen to an individual of your acquaintance, as in the prospect of it, to be a pretence for not freely and hospitably spending the whole annual produce of your land) you may relieve your ruined friend by a sale of part of your land, supposing that you have none of the fruits of it left to help him with. Sell a piece of your land already sown, on which the blade is now springing up, and give the money to your friend who has lost his all; that is, do not stay till you have reaped, but help him immediately as his wants require.

Cespes is a turf, a sod, or clod of earth, with the grass or other produce, as corn, &c. growing upon it: hence called vivus, living.

So Hor. lib. i. ode xix. l. 13.

Hîc vivum mihi ccspitem, &c.

And lib. iii. ode viii. l. 3, 4,

Positusque carbo in Cespite vivo.

Comp. Juv. sat. xii. l. 2.

Here cespite vivo is to be understood of the land itself, with the corn growing upon it. The image is taken from the idea of a man's taking up a sod, breaking off a piece of it, and giving it to another.

32-3. Lest painted, &c.] See sat. i. l. 89, note.

The table, or plank, on which the story of the distress was 35

Cærulea in tabula. 'Sed cænam funeris hæres

· Negliget, iratus quod rem curtaveris: urnæ

Ossa inodora dabit : seu spirent cinnama surdum,

· Seu ceraso peccent Casiæ, nescire paratus.

Tune bona incolumis minuas?—Sed Bestius urget

Doctores Graios: ita fit, postquam sapere urbi,

'Cum pipere et palmis, venit nostrum hoc, maris expers, painted, represented the sea, and therefore appeared of a sea-green colour. Hence Persius says-Carulea tabula.

33. "Your funeral supper," &c.] Prolepsis.—Persius, who well knew the workings of avarice within the human mind, and how many excuses it would be making, in order to avoid the force of what he has been saying, here anticipates an objection, which might be made to what he last said, about selling part of one's estate, in order to relieve a ship-wrecked friend.

But perhaps you will say, that if you sell part of your land, and thus diminish the inheritance, your heir will be offended, and resent his having less than he expected, by not affording you a decent funeral.

Horace says, epist ii. lib. ii. l. 191, 2.

---Nec metuam quid de me judicet hæres, Quod non plura datis invenerat

It was usual at the funerals of rich people to make sumptious entertainments, the splendour of which depended on the heir of the deceased, at whose expense they were given. These come ferales, or come funeris, were three-fold. Ist. A banquet was put on the funeral pile, and burnt with the corpse. See Æneid vi. 222—5. 2ndly. A grand supper was given to the friends and relations of the family. Cic. de Leg. lib. ii. 3rdly. A dish of provisions was deposited at the sepulchre.

Ponitur exigua feralis cœna patella. See Juv. sat. v. l. 85, and note-

This last was supposed to appease their manes.

35. "My unperfumed bones." After the bodies of the rich were burnt on the funeral pile, the ashes containing their bones were usually gathered together, and put into an urn with sweet spices.

— "Whether cinnamons," & c.] Persius here names cinnamon and Casia, the latter of which he supposes to be sophisticated, for the sake of cheapness, with cherry-gum or gum from the cherry-tree. The cinnamon, if true and genuine, is a fine aromatic; but the expression, spirent surdum, breathe insipidly—(surdum, Græcism, for surde—or perhaps, odorem may be understood)—looks as if the cinnamon, as well as the Casia, were supposed to be adulterated, and mixed with some ingredient which spoiled its odour. The heir is supposed to lay out as little as he well could on the deceased.

36. "Prepared to be ignorant." i. e. Determined beforehand not to trouble his head about the matter—the worse the spices, the less the cost,

Painted in a carulean table. "But your funeral supper your heir "Will neglect, angry that you have diminished your substance: To

44 He will give my unperfumed bones: whether cinnamons may breathe 44 insipidly, 35

" Or Casias offend with cherry-gum, prepared to be ignorant.

" Safe can you diminish your goods?" - But Bestius urges

The Grecian teachers; "So it is, after to the city,

46 With pepper and dates, came this our wisdom void of manliness,

37. " Safe diminish," &c.] Therefore can you, while alive and well, having no sickness or loss of your own-all which are meant by incolumis-subtract from your estate, and thus disoblige your heir? -Some suppose these to be the words of the heir, remonstrating against the old man's spending his money, and so diminishing the patrimony which he was to leave behind him: but I rather suppose the poet to be continuing the prolepsis which begins 1. 33; and it is a natural question, which may be imagined to arise out of what the miser has been supposed to offer against being kind and generous to a distressed friend.—The poet before supposes him to urge his fear of disobliging his heir, if he diminished his estate-Then continues Persius, tune bona incolumis minuas ?-q. d. Can you then, on pain and peril of having your heir neglect your funeral, and shew the utmost contempt to your remains, think (while alive and well-incolumishaving no sickness, or loss of your own) of subtracting from your estate for the sake of other people?-this you will urge as an unanswerable objection to what I propose you should do for the sake of an unfortunate friend-by this you plainly shew, that you are more concerned for what may happen to you after you are dead, than for your friends while you are alive, —— But Bestius, &c.] The name of some covetous fellow, a legacy-hunter, who is represented very angry that philosophers have taught generosity, by which the sums which they expect may be lessened during the testator's life, and that from Greece has also been derived the custom of expensive funerals, which affect the estate after the testator's death.

37—8. Urges the Grecian teachers.] i. e. Rails, inveighs against the philosophers, who brought philosophy first from Greece, and taught a liberal bestowing of our goods on the necessities of others.

39. "Pepper and dates," &c.] Pepper, dates, and philosophy, were all imported together from Asia. This is said in the same strain of contempt as Juvenal's Advectus Romam, quo pruna et coctona vento. Sat. iii. 1, 83.

"This our wisdom." Nostrum sapere, Gr. for nostra sapientia—like vivere triste, for tristis vita, sat. i. l. 9.

"Void of manliness."] A poor effeminate thing, void of that noble plainness and hardiness of our ancestors, who never thought of leading so lazy and indolent a life as the philosophers,

· Fænisecæ crasso vitiarunt unguine pultes.'

Hæc cinere ulterior metua; At tu, meus hæres Quisquis eris, paulum a turba seductior, audi:

O bone, num ignoras? missa est a Cæsare laurus, Insignem ob cladem Germanæ pubis; et aris Frigidus excutitur cinis: ac jam postibus arma,

4.5

40 or of laying out extravagant sums in spices, and burning aromatics on funeral piles, or putting costly spices into urns.

The poet uses marem strepitum for a strong manly sound, l. 4. of this Satire. This, among other senses given of this difficult phrase—maris expers—seems mostly adopted by commentators. But as Persius evidently applies the words—maris expers—from Hos. lib. ii. sat. viii. l. 15, it may perhaps be supposed that he meant they should be understood in a like sense.

Fundamius is giving Horace an account of a great entertainment which he had been at, and, among other particulars, mentions the wines:

Procedit fuscus Hydaspes Cacuba vina ferens; Alcon, Chium maris expers.

"Black Hydaspes stalks"
"With right Cæcubian, and the wine of Greece—
"Of foreign growth which never cross'd the seas."

FRANCIS.

To this Mr. Francis subjoins the following note:

"Chium maris expers."] "It was customary to mix sea-water with the strong wines of Greece; but Fundanius, when he says that the wine which Alcon carried had not a drop of water in it, would have us understand, that this wine had never crossed the seas, and that it was an Italian wine, which Nasidienus (the master of the " feast) recommended for Chian." LAMB.

This seems to be a good interpretation of Horace's maris expers, and, therefore, as analogous thereto, we may understand it, in this passage of Persius, in a like sense—to denote that the philosophy, which Bestius calls nostrum hoc sapere, "this same wisdom of ours," and which came from Greece originally, is now no longer to be looked upon as foreign, but as the growth of Italy, seeing that that, and the luxurious manners which came from the same quarter, have taken place of the ancient simplicity and frugality of our forefathers.—"And so it comes to pass (ita fit, I. 38.) that we are to give away our substance to others, and that a vast expense is to attend our funerals, and that even a common rustic can't eat his pudding without a rich sauce."—But see Casaubon in loc.

40. "The mowers," &c. The common rustics have been corrupted with Grecian luxury, and now

The ploughmen truly could no longer eat, Without rich oils to spoil their wholesome meat:

Bestius is very right in saying, that the philosophy which the Stoics taught at Rome came from Greece; but he would not have railed at the philosophers, if they had not taught principles entirely opposite to his selfishness and avarice; nor would he have found

- "The mowers have vitiated their puddings with thick oil." 40
 - "Do you fear these things beyond your ashes?--But thou, my heir,
- "Whoever thou shalt be, a little more retired from the crowd, hear-
 - "O good man, are you ignorant? A laurel is sent from Cæsar
- "On account of the famous slaughter of the German youth, and from the altars
- "The cold ashes are shaken off; and now, to the posts, arms, 45 fault with the introduction of what made funerals expensive, had he not carried his thoughts of parsimony beyond the grave, and dreaded the expense he must be put to in burying those whom he expected to be heir to; and even the luxury which had been imported from Greece would not liave troubled him, but as it cost money to gratify it.

40. "Their puddings." Puls -tis—a kind of meat which the ancients used, made of meal, water, honey, or cheese and eggs; a sort of hasty-pudding—here put for any rustic, homely fare. The word vitiarunt well intimates the meaning of the selfish Bestins, which was to express his enmity to every thing that looked like expense.

41. "Beyond your ashes."] Beyond the grave, as we say—Do you, miserable wretch, concern yourself about what your heir says of you, or in what manner your funeral is conducted?

"But thou, my heir," &c.] Persius here, coincident with the subject he is now entering upon, represents, in a supposed conversation in private with the person who might be his heir, the right a man has to spend his fortune as he pleases, without standing in awe of those who come after him: and first, to be liberal and numificent on all public occasions of rejoicing; next, to live handsomely and comfortably, and not starve himself that his successor may live in luxury.

42. "Retired from the crowd."] Secretam garrit in aurem. sat. v. I. 96.—Step aside a little, if you please, that I may deal the more freely with you, and listen to me.

43. "O good man."] q. d. Hark ye, my good friend, and heir that is to be-

" Are you ighorant?"] Have not you heard the news?

—— "A laurel is sent," & .] Caius Caligula affected to triumph over the Germans, whom he never conquered, as he did over the Britons; and sent letters to Rome, wrapt about with laurels, to the senate, and to the empress Cæsonia his wife.

45. "The cold ashes."] The ashes which were to be swept off the altars, were either those that were left there after the last sacrifice for victory, or might, perhaps, mean the ashes which were left on the altars since some former defeat of the Romans by the Germans'; after which overthrow the altars had been neglected. DRYDEN.

- " And now."] i. e. On the receipt of this good news.

Jam chlamydas regum, jam lutea gausapa captis, Essedaque ingentesque locat Cæsonia Rhenos. Diis igitur, genioque ducis, centum paria, ob res Egregie gestas, induco. Quis vetat? aude. Væ, nisi connives—Oleum artocreasque popello Largior: an prohibes? dic clare. Non adeo, inquis,

50

45. "To the posts, arms."] Persius here enumerates the pre-parations for a triumph; such as fixing to the doors or columns of the temple the arms taken from the enemy. Thus VIRG. Æu. vii. 183---6.

Multaque præteres sacris in postibus arma, Captivi pendent currus, curvæque secures, Et cristæ capitum, et portarum ingentia claustra, Spiculaque, clypeique, ereptaque rostra carinis.

And Hor. lib. iv. ode xv. l. 6-8.

Et signa postes restituit Jovi, Derepta Parthorum superbis

46. "Garments of kings." Chlamys signifies an habit worn by kings and other commanders in war.

--- Ipse agmine Pallas In medio, chlamyde, et pictis conspectus in armis . Æn. viii. l. 587, 8.

"Sorry mantles on the captives."] When captives were to be led in triumph, they put on them clothing of the coarsest sort, made of a dark frize, in token of their abject state.
47. "And charjots."] Essedum is a Gallic word—a sort of chaise or chariot used by the Gauls and Britons; also by the Germans.

Belgica vel molli melius feret esseda collo. VIRG. G. iii, l. 204.

The Belgæ were originally Germans, but, passing the Rhine, settled themselves in Gaul, of which they occupied what is now called the Netherlands.

--- "Huge Germans."] Rhenos, so called because they inhabited the banks of the Rhine; they were men of great stature,

-- "Casonia." Wife to Caius Caligula, who afterwards, in the reign of Claudius, was proposed to be married to him, after he had executed the empress Messalina for adultery, but he would not have her. See her character-Ant. Univ. Hist. vol. xiv. p. 297.

She was a most lewd and abandoned woman. See Juv. sat. vi,

1. 613-16.

48. " To the gods, therefore."] By way of thanksgiving.

"The genius of the general." Of the emperor Caligula—see sat. ii. 1. 3, note—who protected and prospered him.

--- " An hundred pair." i. e. Of gladiators. These were beyond the purse of any private man to give; therefore this must be looked upon as a threatening to his heir, that he would do as he pleased with his estate.

On public occasions of triumph, all manner of costly shows and games were exhibited, in honour of the gods, to whose auspices the

- " Now the garments of kings, now sorry mantles on the captives,
- " And chariots, and huge Germans, Cæsonia places.
- "To the gods, therefore, and to the genius of the general, an hun-"dred pair,
- "On account of things eminently achieved, I produce: Who for-
- "Woe! unless you connive-Oil and pasties to the people 50
- "I bestow: do you hinder?—speak plainly."—" Your field hard by, victory was supposed to be owing; also in honour of the conqueror; therefore Persius adds—ob res egregie gestas.

49. " I produce."] Induco signifies to introduce—to bring in—to bring forth or produce. Ainsw.

"Who forbids?" Who puts a negative on my intention?
"Dare" Will you, who are to be my heir, contradict this? do if you dare.

50. "We! unless you connive." Connive is to wink with the eyes. Met.—to wink at a matter, to take no notice, to make as if he did not see it.

Woe be to you, says Persius, if you offer to take notice, or to object to what I purpose doing on this occasion.

a dole upon the common people—popello (see sat. iv. 15.)—in order to enable them to celebrate the victory.—Oil was a favourite sauce for their victuals. See 1. 40, and note.

Artocrea (from agros, bread, and xgsas, flesh) a pie, or pasty of flesh. AINSW.

51. "Do you hinder?" Says he to his supposed heir; do you find fault with this bounty of mine, would you prevent it?

" Speak plainly." Come, speak out.

estate near Rome, though its vicinity to the city makes it the more valuable, yet is not fertile enough to afford all this.

Exossatus—cleared of the stones, called the bones of the earth, Ov. Met. i. 193. to which Persius perhaps alludes. Here it is supposed to mean cleared of the stones—i. e. cultivated to such a degree, as to be rich and fertile enough to produce what would be answerable to such an expense.

The above is the leading sense given by some of the best commentators to this difficult passage; but I cannot say that it satisfies me. I see no authority, from any thing that precedes or follows, to construe juxta—nigh the city, and hence make juxta equivalent to suburbanus: nor is the taking est from juxta, and transferring it to exossatus or ager, as done above, the natural method of the syntax.

I would therefore place the words in their natural order in which they are to be construed—Non adeo, inquis, juxta est exossatus ager. The Delph. interpret. says, Non ita, ais, prope est ager sine ossibus.

Exosso -are—is to take out the bones of an animal; to bone it, as we say.—Congrum istum maximum in aqua finito ludere paulis-

Exossatus ager juxta est. Age, si mihi nulla Jam reliqua ex amitis; patruelis nulla; proneptis Nulla manét; patrui sterilis matertera vixit; Deque avià nihilum superest: accedo Bovillas, Clivumque ad Virbî; præsto est mihi Manius hæres. · Progenies terræ'-Quære ex me, quis mihi quartus Sit pater; haud prompte, dicam tamen. Adde etiam unum, Unum etiam ; terræ est jam filius : et mihi ritu Manius hic generis, prope major avunculus exit. Qui prior es, cur me in decursu lampada poscas?

per, ubi ego venero, exossabitur. Ter. Adelph.—Ager is a field, land, ground—hence, a manor with the demesnes, an estate in land. Hence, by Metaph. exossatus ager may mean, here, an estate that has been weakened, diminished by extravagance or great expense, having what gave it its value and consequence taken out of it.

In this view I think we may suppose the poet as representing hisheir's answer to be-

An estate that has been exhausted and weakened-exossatus, 66 boned as it were, by such expense as you propose, is not so near -- non adeo juxta est-i. e. so near my heart, so much an object of " my concern, as to make it worth my while to interfere about it, " or attempt to hinder this last expense of your dole to the mob, when the first of the hundred pair of gladiators, l. 48, will bone "it—i. e. diminish its substance and value, sufficiently to render me very unconcerned as to being your heir." We often use the word near, to express what concerns us.

This appears to me to be the most eligible construction of the words, as well as most naturally to introduce what follows.

52. "Go to—"] Says Persius—very well, take your own way—think as you please, I am not in the least fear of finding an heir, though I should not have a relation left in the world.

53. " My aunts." Amita is the aunt by the father's side—the father's sister.

"Cousin-german." Patruelis—a father's brother's son or " Niece's daughter." So proneptis signifies.

54. "The aunt of my uncle." Matertera-matris soror-an aunt by the mother's side.

--- " Lived Barren."] Had no children.

55. "Grandmother." Avia, the wife of the avus, or grandfather. Persius means, that if he had no relation, either near or distant, he should find an heir who would be glad of his estate.

"I go to Bovilla."] A town in the Appian way, about eleven miles from Rome, so called from an ox which broke loose from an altar, and was there taken; it was near Aricia, a noted place for beggars, the highway being very public.

- " Say you, is not so fertile"-" Go to, if none to me
- 16 Now were left of my aunts, no cousin-german, no niece's daughter
- " Remains; the aunt of my uncle has lived barren,
- "And nothing remains from my grandmother: I go to Bovillæ, 55
- "And to the hill of Virbius; Manius is ready at hand to be my heir"—
- " An offspring of earth"-" Inquire of me, who my fourth father
- " May be, I should nevertheless not readily say. Add also one,
- "Again one; he is now a son of earth: and to me, by the course
- " Of kindred, this Manius comes forth almost my great uncle. 60
- "You who are before, why do you require from me the torch in the race?

Dignus Aricinos qui mendicaret ad axes. See Juv. sat. iv. l. 117.

56. "The hill of Virbius." An hill about four miles from Rome; so called from Hyppolytus, who was named Virbius, and worshipped there, on account of his living twice—interviros bis. See An. vii. 761—77. This hill, too, was always filled with beggars, who took their stands by the road-side.

and so put for any; the first which he met with would immediately be glad to be his heir. Præsto-ready at hand.

57. " An offspring of earth."] What, says the other, would you take such a low base-born fellow as that, whose family nobody knows any thing about, a mere son of earth, to be your heir?

"Inquire of me," &c.] As for that, replies Persius, if you were to ask me who was my great grandfather's father, who stood in the fourth degree from my father, I could not very readily inform you. But go a step higher, add one, and then add another, I could give you no account at all; I then must come to a son of earth, nobody knows who, but somebody that, like the rest of mankind, sprung from the earth.

Empedocles, and some other philosophers, held that mankind originally sprang from the earth.

59-60. "By the course of kindred," Sc.] Perhaps, in this way of reckoning, as the earth is our common mother, Manius may appear to be my relation, my great uncle for ought I know, or not very far from it; for as children of one common parent, we must be related.

61. "You who are before," &c.] This line is allegorical, and alludes to a festival at Athens, instituted in honour of Vulcan, or of Prometheus, where a race was run by young men with lighted torches in their hands, and they strove who could arrive first at the end of the race without extinguishing his torch. If the foremost in the race tired as he was running, he gave up the race, and delivered his torch to the second; the second, if he tired, delivered it to the third, and so on, till the race was over. The victory was his who carried the torch lighted to the end of the race.

Now, says Persius, to his presumptive heir, who appears to be 70

Sum tibi Mercurius: venio deus huc ego, ut ille Pingitur. An renuis? vin' tu gaudere relictis?

' Deest aliquid summæ.' Minui mihi: sed tihi totum est,

Quicquid id est. Ubi sit, fuge quærere, quod mihi quondam 65 Legârat Tadius, neu dicta repone paterna:

· Fœnoris accedat merces; hinc exime sumptus.'

'Quid reliquum est?' reliquum? Nunc, nunc impensius unge, Unge, puer, caules. Mihi, festa luce, coquatur

Urtica, et fissa fumosum sinciput aure;

Ut tuus iste nepos, olim, satur anseris extis, more advanced in life, why do you, who are before me in the race of life, i. e. are older than I am, want what I have before the course is over, i. e. before I die, since, in the course of nature, the oldest may die first? I ought therefore to expect your estate instead of your expecting mine. It is the first in the torch-race that, if he fails, gives the torch to the second, not the second to the first. See Ainsw. Lampas, ad fin.

62. "I am to thee Mercury." Do not look on me as thy nearest kinsman, on thyself as my certain heir, and on my estate as what ought to come to you by right; but rather look on me as the god Mercury, who is the bestower of unlooked-for and fortuitous gain.

62—3. "As he is painted."] Mercury, as the god of fortuitous gain, was painted with a bag of money in his hand. Hercules was the god of hidden treasures. See sat. ii. l. 11, and note. Mercury presided over open gain and traffic, and all unexpected advantages arising therefrom

63. "Do you refuse?"] Are not you willing to look upon me in this light, and to accept what I may leave, as merely adventitious.

----An magis excors

Rejecta præda, quam præsens Mercurius fert ? Hon. lib. ii. sat. iii. l. 67, 8.

and joyfully take what I leave?

64. "There is wanting something," &c.] But methinks you grum, ble, and find fault that a part of the estate has been spent.

"Diminished it for myself."] Well, suppose my estate to be less than it was, I, that had the right so to do, spent the part of it that is gone upon myself and my own concerns.

65, "But you have the whole," & c.] But you have all at my decease, whatever that all may be; you could have no right to any part while I was alive; so that you have no right to complain, when what I leave comes whole and entire to you.

done with the legacy which my friend Tadius left me, or to bring.

me to an account concerning that, or any thing else.

66. "Paternal sayings."] Nor think of laying down to me, as a rule, the lesson that old covetous fathers inculcate to their sons, whom they wish to make as sordid as themselves. Perhaps repone

- "I am to thee Mercury: I a god come hither, as he
- "Is painted. Do you refuse ?-Will you rejoice in what is left?
- "There is wanting something of the sum:" "I have diminished it for myself, ["is which 65

- But you have the whole, whatever that is: avoid to ask where that
- "Tadius formerly left me, nor lay down paternal sayings-
- "Let the gains of usury accede; hence take out your expense."
 "What is the residue?"—"the residue!—Now—now—more expen-
- "Sively anoint,
 "Anoint, boy, the pot-herbs. Shall there be for me on a festival-day
 "boiled
- A nettle, and a smokey hog's cheek with a cracked ear, 70
- "That that grandson of yours should hereafter be stuff'd with a "goose's bowels, may here be rightly translated retort (comp. Juv. sat. i. l. 1, and note) -. q. d. Don't cast this in my teeth.

67. "Let the gains of usury," &c.] q. d. "Put your money out "to usury, and live upon the interest which you make, reserving the principal entire:" let me hear none of this, says Persius, as if I were bound to live on the interest of what I have, that the principal may come to you.

68. "What is the residue?"] Well, but though I may not call you to an account about your expenses, yet let me ask you how much, after all, may be left for me to inherit.

"The residue!"] Says Persius, with indignation; since you can ask such a question, as if you meant to bind me down to leave you a certain sum, you shall have nothing, I'll spend away as fast as I can.

"Now, now more expensively," & c.] "Here," says Persius, "slave, bring me oil, pour it more profusely over my dish of pot-herbs. Now I see that your avarice leads you to be more "concerned about what I am to leave, than you are about my com"fort while I live, or for my friendship and regard, I'll e'en speud "away faster than ever."

70. "A nettle,"] Shall I, even upon feast-days, when even the poor live better, content myself with having a nettle cooked for my dinner ?- i. e. any vile worthless weed.

"And a smokey hog's check." An old rusty hog's check, with an hole made in the ear by the string which passed through it to hang it up the chimney.

Sinciput—the fore part, or perhaps one half of the head; also a hog's cheek. See Juv. sat. xiii: 1. 85, and note.

Here it is put for any vile and cheap entable.
71. "That that grandson of yours;" &c.] That some of your descendants may hereafter live in riot, however sparing and covetous you may be. "A goose's bowels."] The liver of a goose was esteemed by the Romans as a most delicious morsel. They crammed the animal with a certain food (of which figs were the main ingredient)

Cum morosa vago singultiet inguine vena, Patriciæ immeiat vulvæ? Mihi trama figuræ Sit reliqua? ast illi tremat omento popa venter?

Vende animam lucro; mercare; atque excute solers

Omne latus mundi : ne sit præstantior alter
 Cappadocas rigidâ pingues plausisse catastâ.

'Rem duplica.' 'Feci.-Jam triplex; jam mihi quarto,

'Jam decies redit in rugam. Depunge ubi sistam, that made the liver grow to an amazing size. See Hor. lib. ii. sat. viii. l. 88; and Juv. sat. v. l. 114.

72. "His forward humour," &c.] When at the same time he is absurdly keeping an expensive and high-bred mistress.

73. "A woof of a figure," &c.] Trama is the woof in weaving, which is composed of thin threads which lie parallel to each other, when shot through the warp. These do not appear while the cloth is fresh, and has the nap on; but when the cloth loses the nap, and becomes thread-bare, then the threads are seen, and have a poor, thin, and shabby appearance. Now, says Persius, shall I reduce myself to the appearance of the texture in an old, worn-out, thread-bare coat?—q. d. Shall I make myself a mere skeleton? mere skin and bone, as we say. Trama figuræ, for figura tramæ. Hypall.

74. "A gluttonous belly," &c.] That he may have his gluttonous belly shake like a quag, as he walks along, with the fatness of his eaul.

This is well opposed to the trama figuræ.

Popa is, properly, the priest who slew the sacrifices, and offered them up when slain: they had a portion of the sacrifices, on which they constantly feasted, and were usually fat and well-liking hence popa signifies also gluttonous, greedy, dainty. Metaph.

hence popa signifies also gluttonous, greedy, dainty. Metaph. 75. "Sell your life for gain."] Persius having pretty largely set forth how he should treat his supposed heir, who presumed to interfere with his manner of living, or with the disposal of his fortune while alive; and all this in answer to what the miser had said, on not daring to sell any part of his estate in order to relieve his shipwrecked friend, for fear his heir should resent it after his decease (see 1. 33—7.), now concludes the Satire with some ironical advice to the miser, in which he shews that the demands of avarice are insatiable.

If, after all I have said, you still persist in laying up riches, and hoarding for those who are to come after you, e'en take your course, and see what will be the end of it; or rather you will see no end of it, for neither you, nor your heir, will ever be satisfied. However, sell your life and all the comforts of it—i. e. expose it to every difficulty and danger: in short, take all occasions to make money, let the risk be what it may. See sat. v. 1. 133—6. Epitrope.

"Buy."] Purchase whatever will turn to profit.
"Cunning."] Shrewd, dextrous, in your dealings.

- "When his froward humour shall long to gratify itself
- "With some lady of quality? Shall a woof of a figure
- "Be left to me: but to him shall a gluttonous belly tremble with caul?—
 - "Sell your life for gain; buy, and, cunning, search 75
- " Every side of the world: let not another exceed you
- "In applauding fat Cappadocians in a rigid cage,
- "Double your estate:"--" I have done it:-Now threefold, now to me the fourth time,
- " Now ten times it returns into a fold; mark down where I shall stop, 75-6. "Search every side of the world." Sail to every part of the world, that you may find new articles of merchandize.

76. "Let not another exceed," &c.] Make yourself thorough master of the slave-trade, that you may know how to bring slaves to market, and to commend and set them off to the best advantage.—Plausisse—literally, to have clapped with the hand. It was customary for the mangones, or those who dealt in slaves, to put them into a sort of cage, called catasta, in the forum, or market-place, where the buyers might see them: to whom the owners commended them for their health, strength, and fitness for the business for which they wanted them; also they clapped or slapped their bodies with their hands, to shew the hardness and firmness of their flesh. The slaves had fetters on; therefore the poet says—rigida catasta. They had arts to pamper them, to make them look sleek and fat; they also painted them to set them off, as to their complexion and countenance: hence the slave-dealers were called mangones. See Ainsw. Mango; and Juv. xi. 1. 147.

77. "Fat Cappadocians."] Cappadocia was a large country in the Lesser Asia, famous for horses, mules, and slaves. It has been before observed, that the slaves, when imported for sale, were pampered to make them appear sleek and fat—or perhaps we may understand, by pingues, here, that the Cappadocians were naturally more plump and lusty than others.

78. " Double your estate."] i. e. By the interest which you make.

"I have done it."] That, says the miser, I have already done. 79. "Ten times it returns into a fold."] i. e. It is now tenfold. Metaph. from garments, which, the fuller they are, the more folds they make: hence duplex, from duo, two, and plico, to fold—triplex, from tres, and plico, &c. So the verbs, duplico, to double, to make twofold—triplico, &c. Ruga, Gr. puris a puw—i e. epuw, traho, quod ruga cutim aut vestem in plicas contrahat. See Ainsw.

--- "Mark down," &c.] Depunge-metaph. from marking points on a balance, at which the needle, or beam, stopping, gave the exact weight. See Juv. sat. v. l. 100, and note.

The miser, finding his desires increase, as his riches increase, knows not where to stop:

Inventus, Chrysippe, tui finitor acervi l' 80

Crescit amor nummi quantum ipsa pecunia crescit. Juv. sat. xiv. l. 189.

80. "O Chrysippus," & c.] A Stoic philosopher, a disciple of Zeno, or, according to others, of Cleanthes. He was the inventor of the argument, or vicious syllogism, called sorites, from Gr. σωζος, an heap, it consisting of a great number of propositions heaped one upon the other, so that there was hardly any end to be found—A proper emblem of covetous desire, which is continually increasing.

Persius calls Chrysippus, inventus finitor, the only finisher, that was found, of his own heap—because he investigated the method of putting an end to the propositions, or questions, in that mode of argument, and wrote four books on the subject.

This the poet may be supposed to be deriding in this place, as in truth an impossible thing, Chrysippus himself having devised no better expedient, than to state only a certain number of propositions, and then to be silent.]—But this would not do, he might be forced on, ad infinitum, by a question on what he said last. See C1c. Acad. Qu. lib. ii. 29.

Marshall reads this line:

" Inventor, Chrysippe, tui, et finitor acervi."

" Sic legas meo periculo," says he, " sensu multo concinniore."

O Chrysippus! thou that couldst invent, and set bounds to the increasing sorites, teach me to set bounds to my increasing avarice. Iron.—The miser is supposed to be wearied out with the insatiableness of his avaricious desires, and longs to see an end put to thembut in vain.

The state of the s

graduation and the state of the

"O Chrysippus, the found finisher of your own heap."

Having now finished my work, which, like the sorites of Chrysippus, has, from the variety and redundancy of the matter, been so long increasing under my hands, much beyond what I at first expected, I should hope that the Reader, so far from blaming the length of the performance, will approve the particularity, and even minuteness, of the observations, which I have made on the preceding Satires of Juvenal and Persius, as on all hands they are allowed to be the most difficult of the Latin writers: therefore mere cursory remarks, here and there scattered on particular passages, would assist the Reader but little, in giving him a complete and consistent view of the whole; to this end every separate part should be explained, that it may be well understood and properly arranged within the mind: this, I trust, will stand as an apology for the length of these papers, which, wherever they may find their way, will be attended with the Editor's best wishes, that they may carry those so-

However Persius may be deemed inferior to Juvenal as a poet, yet he is his equal as a moralist; and as to the honesty and sincerity with which he wrote—"There is a spirit of sincerity," says Mr. Dryden, "in all he says—in this he is equal to Juvenal, who was "as honest and serious as Persius, and more he could not be."

lid and weighty instructions to the mind, which it is the business of our two Satirists to recommend—Delectando pariterque monendo.

I have observed, in several parts of the foregoing notes on Persius, his imitations of Horace—The reader may see the whole of these accurately collected, and observed upon—Casaus. Persiana Horatii Imitatio, at the end of his Commentaries on the Satires.

END OF THE SIXTH SATIRE.

FINIS.

. - 1 The second secon the state of the s and the second of the second o and the second of the second s AS LONG TO THE REAL PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF me and a part of the state of t the property of the property o a medical for the first of the the property of the control of the c the state of the s The second secon

Number 1

our's

4.00

INDEX

то

JUVENAL.

| 0 . 7 * | |
|---------------------------|------------------------|
| Sat. Lin. | Sat. Lin. |
| ACCENITUS . vii. 218 | Afrorum vii 120 |
| Accius . vi. 70 | Afros v. 91 |
| Acestes . vii. 235 | viii. 120 |
| Achilles . i. 163 | Agamemnon xiv. 286 |
| vii. 210 | Agamemnonidæ viii. 215 |
| viii. 271 | Aganippes vii. 6 |
| xiv. 214 | Agave vii. 87 |
| Acilious Glabrio . iv. 94 | Agrippa . vi. 157 |
| Actiaca ii. 109 | Agrippina . vi. 619 |
| Actor ii, 100 | Ajax vii. 115 |
| Æacus . i. 10 | x. 84 |
| Ædiles iii. 162 | xiv. 213 |
| 179 | xv. 65 |
| . x. 102 | Alubandi |
| Ægean sea . xiii. 81 | 411 |
| 246 | . 11 |
| *** | |
| 771 | |
| 2.23110 | |
| Ælius Lamia . iv. 154 | Albanis . v. 33 |
| Æmilian bridge . vi. 32 | Albinam iii. 130 |
| Æmilii : viii. 3 | Alceste . vi. 652 |
| Æmus vi. 197 | Alcinoö xv. 15 |
| Æneas . i. 162 | Alcithoën vii. 12 |
| v. 139 | Alecto vii. 68, n. |
| . xv. 67 | Alexander xiv. 311 |
| Æolian rocks i. 8 | Aliptes iii. 76 |
| prison x. 181 | vi. 421 |
| Æson vij. 170, n. | Alledius v. 118 |
| Æthiopem . ii. 23 | Allobroges . vii. 214 |
| viii. 33 | vii. 13 |
| Æthiopis vi. 599 | Alpem x. 152 |
| Æthiopum . v. 150 | Alpes — 166 |
| Africa vii . 149 | Alpibus xiii. 162 |
| z. 148 | Ambrosius vi. 77 |
| Afræ xi. 142 | Amphion vi. 179 |
| Afris . v. 152 | Amydon , . iii. 69 |
| | EE |
| VOL. II. E | £ E |

INDEX TO JUVENAL:

| Ancon iv. 40 | Athenæ . x. 127 |
|--|------------------------------|
| Ancus . v. 57 | Athenas . xv. 110 |
| Ancilia . ii. 126 | Athenis iii. 80 |
| *** | |
| | ix, 101 |
| Andromache . vi. 502 | Athos x. 174 |
| Antæus iii. 89 | Atlanta . viii. 32 |
| Anticatones . vi. 337 | xiii. 48 |
| Anticyra xiii. 97 | Atlas . : xi. 24 |
| | |
| Antigones . viii. 229 | Atreus vii. 73 |
| Antilochus v. 253 | Atridem . iv. 65 |
| Antiochus iii. 98 | Atrides . vi. 659 |
| Antiphates xiv. 20 | Atellanæ vi. 71 |
| Antonius . viii. 105 | Atticus xi. 1 |
| | |
| x. 123 | Aventini . iii. 85 |
| Anubis . vi. 533 | Aufidius ix. 25 |
| Aonidum . vii. 59 | Augusta meretrix . vi. 118 |
| Apicius iv. 23 | Augusta rupe . x. 93 |
| xi. 3 | Augusto mense iii. 9 |
| | |
| Apollo . i. 128 | Augustum Sejanum . x. 77 |
| xiii203 | Aurelia v. '98 |
| Apollo's temple vii. 37 | Aurunca i. 20 |
| Appula præda . ix. 55 | Automedon . i. 61 |
| | |
| | |
| | Autos . ix. 37 |
| Aquinum . iii. 319 | Autumni xiv. 190 |
| Arabarches . i. 130 | Autumno occiderit, &c x. 221 |
| Aracline . ii. 56 | Autumnes vi. 229 |
| Arcadico . vii. 160 | |
| the second secon | Autumnum succum . zi. 76 |
| | Autumnus . v. 151 |
| Archigenes vi. 235 | В |
| xiii. 98- | D . |
| xiv. 252 | Bacchanalia ii. 3 |
| Archimagirus . ix. 109 | |
| | |
| | Baianæ xii. 80 |
| Arctalogus xv. 16 | Baiarum iii. 4 |
| Aricinos . iv. 117 | Baias xi. 49 |
| Aristotelem ii. 6 | Balæna x. 14 |
| Armeniæ viii. 169 | Baptæ . ii. 92 |
| Armenio . vi. 406 | |
| | Bardiacus judez . xvi. 18 |
| Armenius ii. 164 | Baream iii. 116 |
| vi. 549 | Barcas vii. 91 |
| Armillato iv. 53 | Bascaudas . xii. 46 |
| Arpinas viii. 237 | Basifo vii. 146 |
| 245 | |
| | Basilum . vii. 147 |
| | Basilus vii. 145 |
| Artopta . v. 72 | r. 222 |
| Arturius iii. 29 | Batavi . viii. 51 |
| Arviragus . iv. 127 | Bathyllus . vi. 63 |
| Arusper . See Haruspex | xiii. 119 |
| Arunci ii. 100 | |
| | Beccaficos xiv. 9 |
| Asiæ . v. 56 | Bedriacum . ii. 106 |
| Asiam: x. 266 | Belides vi. 654 |
| Asiani vii. 14 | Bellerophon x. 325 |
| Asparagi xi. 69 | |
| Asparagis v. 82 | |
| | Beneventane cobbier v. 46 |
| Assaracus . x. 259 | Berenice . vi. 155 |
| Assyrio . ii. 108 | Bibula . i. 141 |
| Astræa . vi. 19 | Bithyni equites vii. 15 |
| Astrologus vi. 553 | Bithynice . zv. 1 |
| Asturius iii. 212 | TV-1 |
| Asylli vi. 266 | |
| | Bocchare . v. 90 |
| Asylo viii. 273 | Bonæ Deæ vii. 313 |
| Athenz vii, 205 | Boötes v. 23 |
| | |

| Brigantum | xiv. 196 | Cardiaco . v. 32 |
|--|-------------------|-----------------------------|
| Britannica . | x. 14 | Carfinia ii. 69 |
| Britannice | vi. 124 | Carpathium xiv. 278 |
| Britanno | iv. 126 | Carpophoro . vi. 198 |
| Britannos | ii. 161 | Carrinatis vii. 205 |
| Causidicos | xv. 111 | Carthagine . vi. 170 |
| Brittones | xv. 124 | x, 277 |
| Bromium | vi. 377 | Carus . i. 36 |
| Brute | iv. 103 | Cassandra . x. 262 |
| Bruti . | xiv. 43 | Casii . v. 37 |
| Brutus . | ib. | |
| Brutidius . | | |
| f | | |
| Brutorum | v. 37 | Catienæ iii. 193 |
| Brutosque | viii. 182 | Catilina ii. 27 |
| Bulla | xiii. 3S | viii. 291 |
| Bullatus hæres | xiv. 5 | x. 288 |
| Busta | iii. 32 | Catilinam . xiv. 41 |
| C | | Catinensi viii. 16 |
| Cacoethes | vii. 52 | Cato ii. 40 |
| Cacus . | v. 125 | Catonem . , xi. 90 |
| Cadurco | vi. 536 | Cattis . iv. 147 |
| Cæditio | xvi. 46 | Catulis . ii. 146 |
| Cæditius . | xiii. 197 | Catulla . x. 322 |
| Cæsare . | vii. 1 | Catullam ii. 49 |
| Cæsaris : | iv. 51 | Catulli . viii. 186 |
| | v. 4 | xiii. 111 |
| | vi. 337 | Catullo . iv. 113 |
| | | xii. 29 |
| | | |
| | x. 330 | 444 |
| ×5 . | xii. 106 | |
| Cæsariem | xiii. 165 | Cecropiam ii. 92 |
| Cæsonia | vi. 615 | Cecropis . vi. 186 |
| Caietæ | xiv. 87 | Celæno viii. 130 |
| Calendis | ix. 53 | Celso . vi. 244 |
| Calliope | iv. 94 | Centone . vi. 121 |
| Calpe | xiv. 279 | Centronius . xiv. 86. 92 |
| Calvinæ | iii. 133 | Cercopitheci xv. 4 |
| Calvine | xiii. 5 | Cererem iii. 320 |
| Camerinos | vii. 90 | ix. 24 |
| Camerinus . | viii. 38 | Cereris . vi. 50 |
| Cammarus | v. 84 | x. 112 |
| Camenas . | vii. 2 | xiv. 219. 263 |
| Camœnis . | iii. 16 | xv. 141 |
| Campania | x. 283 | Ceroma . vi. 145 |
| Cannarum | x. 165 | Ceromatico . iii. 68 |
| Constitution of the consti | xi. 198 | Cervina Senectus . xiv. 251 |
| Cannis | ii. 155 | Cesennia . vi. 135 |
| Camins | | 211 |
| Canopi | vii. 163 i. 26 | |
| | | Cetaegan |
| Canopo | vi. 84 | |
| 0 . 1 | xv. 46 | Charipire |
| Cantaber | xv. 108 | Chaldais . vi. 552 |
| Cantabit vacuus | x. 22 | Chaldæo . x. 94 |
| Canusinam | vi. 149 | Charybdi . xv. 17 |
| Capella | v. 155 | Charybdim . v. 102 |
| Capenam | iii. 11 | Chironomon . vi. 63 |
| Capito | viii. 93 | Chironomenta . v. 121 |
| Capitolia | v. 65 | Chirographa . xiii. 137 |
| | xiv. 91 | xvi. 41 |
| Capitolinam | vi. 386 | Chionem iii. 136 |
| Capitolinis | ii. 145 | Charon . ii. 150, n. |
| Cappadoces | vii. 15 | Chiron · iii. 205 |
| Capreis , | ¥. 72 | vii. 212, n. |
| | 7 89 | |

| Chrysippi ii. 5 | Cossus . vii. 144 |
|--|---|
| Chrysogonum . vi. 74 | viii, 21 |
| Chrysogonus . vii. 176 | Cotta . v. 109 |
| | vii. 95 |
| | |
| Ciceroni vii, 139 | Cotytto . ii. 92 |
| Ciceronis . x. 114 | Crassos . x. 108 |
| Cilicis . 'iv. 121 | Cremeræ . ii. 155 |
| Cilicum . viii. 94 | Crepereius , . ix. 6 |
| Cimbri . xv. 124 | |
| | |
| Cimbros viii. 249. 251 | Cretæ . xiv. 270 |
| Circæis . iv. 140 | Cretice ii. 67. 78 |
| Circenses . x. 81 | Creticus . viii. 38 |
| Circensibus iii. 223 | Crispi . iv. 81 |
| Circes . xv. 21 | |
| | |
| xi. 53 | Crispinum iv. 14 |
| Cirrhæi . xiii. 79 | Crispinus . i. 27 |
| Claudius . v. 147 | iv. 1. 108 |
| vi. 115 | Crœsi . xiv. 328 |
| | |
| xiv. 330 | |
| Cleanthes . ii. 7 | Cumis iii. 2. 321 |
| Clelia . viii. 265, n. | Curios . ii. 3 |
| Cleopatra ii. 109 | viii. 4 |
| Clio vii. 7 | Curius . ii. 153 |
| | |
| Clitumni xii. 13 | xi. 78 |
| Clodius ii. 27 | Curruca · vi. 275 |
| vi. 344 | Curtius . xi 34 |
| Clotho . ix. 135 | Curules sellas . x. 91 |
| Cluviam ii. 49 | *** |
| | |
| Cluvienus . i. 80 | Cyanes IV. 20 |
| Clytemnestram . vi. 655 | Cybeles ii. 111 |
| Coa viii. 101 | xiv. 263 |
| Cocles viii. 264 | Cyclada . vi. 562 |
| Coctona iii. 83 | = 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 - 1 |
| Coctons In. oa | |
| | |
| Codri : i. 2 | Cylindros ii. 61 |
| | Cylindros ii. 61 Cynici . xiv. 309 |
| Codri . i. 2 Codro . iii. 203 | Cynici . ziv. 309 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Codrus iii. 208 | Cynici . xiv. 309 Cynicis . xiii. 122 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Codrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 | Cynici |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Codrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 | Cynici . xiv. 309 Cynicis . xiii. 122 Cynicos . xiii. 121 Cynthia . vi. 7 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Codrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 | Cynici |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Codrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Codrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 | Cynici . xiv. 309 Cynicis . xiii. 122 Cynicos . xiii. 121 Cynthia . vi. 7 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 | Cynici . xiv. 309 Cynicis . xiii. 122 Cynicos . xiii. 121 Cynthia . vi. 7 Cyrrhæ . vii. 64 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 | Cynici . xiv. 309 Cynicis . xiii. 122 Cynicos . xiii. 121 Cynthia . vi. 7 Cyrrhæ . vii. 64 Dacicus . vi. 204 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 copti Xv. 28 | Cynici . xiv. 309 Cynicis . xiii. 122 Cynicos . xiii. 121 Cynthia . vi. 7 Cyrrhæ . vii. 64 Dacicus . vi. 204 Dacis . iv. 111 Dædalus . iii. 25 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 | Cynici . xiv. 309 Cynicis . xiii. 122 Cynicos . xiii. 121 Cynthia . vi. 7 Cyrrhæ . vii. 64 D Dacicus . vi. 204 Dacis . iv. 111 Dædalus . iii. 25 Damasippe . viii. 185 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 203 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 coranum Coranum xvi. 54 | Cynici . xiv. 309 Cynicis . xiii. 122 Cynicos . xiii. 121 Cynthia . vi. 7 Cyrrhæ . vii. 64 Dacicus . vi. 204 Dacis . iv. 111 Dadalns . iii. 25 Damasippe . viii. 185 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 578 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 | Cynici . xiv. 309 Cynicis . xiii. 122 Cynicos . xiii. 121 Cynthia . vi. 7 Cyrrhæ . vii. 64 D Dacicus . vi. 204 Dacis . iv. 111 Dædalns . iii. 25 Damasippe . viii. 185 Damasippus . viii, 147. 151. 167 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 copti Coranum xvi. 54 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Corcyræ xv. 25 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 D Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dædalus iii. 25 Damasippe viii. 185 Damasippus viii, 147. 151. 167 Decii viii. 258 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Coronthi nom. propr viii. 197 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dædalus iii. 25 Damasippe viii, 147. 151. 167 Damasippus viii, 147. 151. 165 Deciorum viii. 254 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Corcyræ xv. 25 Corinthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corinthum viii. 113 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dædalns iii. 25 Damasippe viii, 147. 151. 167 Decii viii, 258 Deciorum viii. 254 xiv. 239 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Coronthi nom. propr viii. 197 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 D Dacicus D Dacicus iv. 111 Dacdalns iii. 25 Damasippe viii, 147. 151. 167 Decii viii. 258 Deciorum viii. 254 xiv. 239 Delphis vi. 554 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Corcyræ xv. 25 Corinthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corinthum viii. 113 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dædalns iii. 25 Damasippe viii, 185 Damasippus viii, 147. 151. 167 Decii viii. 258 Deciorum viii. 254 xiv. 239 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 Copti xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Corcyræ xv. 25 Corinthi nom. propr. viii. 197 Coritha viii. 62 Cornelia vi. 166 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 D Dacicus vii. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dædalns iii. 25 Damasippe viii. 147. 151. 167 Decii viii. 258 Deciorum viii. 258 Delphis vii. 554 Demetrius viii. 99 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia viii. 101 Copti xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Corcyræ xv. 25 Corinthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corinthe viii. 62 Cornelia vi. 166 Coro xiv. 268 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 122 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 D Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dædalus iii. 25 Damasippe viii. 147. 151. 167 Decii viii. 258 Deciorum viii. 254 xiv. 239 Delphis vii. 554 Demetrius iii. 99 Democritus xiii. 99 Democritus xiii. 34 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Corrobulo iii. 251 Corinthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corinthum viii. 113 Corithe viii. 62 Cornelia vi. 166 Coro xiv. 269 Corsica v. 92 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dædalus iii. 25 Damasippe viii, 147. 151. 167 Decii viii. 258 Deciorum viii. 254 xiv. 239 Delphis vi. 554 Democritus xii. 99 Democritus xii. 34 Democritus xii. 34 Demosthenis xiii. 39 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Corcyræ xv. 25 Corinthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corintha viii. 120 Corithæ viii. 62 Cornelia vi. 166 Coro xiv. 268 Corsica v. 92 Corvine xii. 1. 93 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dacdalus iii. 25 Damasippe viii, 147. 151. 167 Deci viii, 258 Deciorum viii. 254 xiv. 239 Delphis vi. 554 Democritus iii. 99 Democritus x. 34 Demosthenis x. 114 Deucalion i. 81 |
| Codri i. 2 | Cynici |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Corcyræ xv. 25 Corinthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corintha viii. 120 Corithæ viii. 62 Cornelia vi. 166 Coro xiv. 268 Corsica v. 92 Corvine xii. 1. 93 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dacdalus iii. 25 Damasippe viii, 147. 151. 167 Deci viii, 258 Deciorum viii. 254 xiv. 239 Delphis vi. 554 Democritus iii. 99 Democritus x. 34 Demosthenis x. 114 Deucalion i. 81 |
| Codri i. 2 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 122 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 D Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dxdalus iii. 25 Damasippe viii, 147. 151. 167 Decii viii. 258 Deciorum viii. 254 xiv. 239 Delphis vi. 554 Democritus iii. 99 Democritus x. 34 Demosthenis x. 114 Deucalion i. 81 Diana x. 292 Dianam iii. 320 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Corcunthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corinthum viii. 197 Corintha viii. 62 Cornelia vi. 166 Coro xiv. 269 Corsica v. 92 Corvine xii. 1. 93 Corvinum viii. 5. 7 Corvinum viii. 5. 7 Corvinus i. 108 Corybanta v. 25 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 122 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 D Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dxdalus iii. 25 Damasippe viii. 147. 151. 167 Decii viii. 258 Deciorum viii. 254 xiv. 239 Delphis vi. 554 Demetrius iii. 99 Democritus x. 34 Demosthenis x. 114 Deucalion i. 81 Diana x. 292 Dianam iii. 520 xv. 8 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Cororulo iii. 251 Corinthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corinthum viii. 197 Corithæ viii. 62 Cornelia vi. 166 Corocica v. 92 Corvine xii. 1. 93 Corvinum viii. 5. 7 Corvinus i. 108 Corychanta v. 25 Corycia xiv. 267 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 D Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dædalus iii. 25 Damasippe viii. 185 Damasippus viii, 147. 151. 167 Decii viii. 258 Deciorum viii. 254 xiv. 239 Delphis vi. 554 Democritus iii. 99 Democritus x. 34 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Coreyræ xv. 25 Corinthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corinthum viii. 197 Corithæ viii. 62 Cornelia vi. 166 Coro xiv. 268 Corvine xii. 1. 93 Corvine xiii. 1. 93 Corvinum viii. 5. 7 Corvinus i. 108 Corydon xiv. 267 Corydon ix. 102 | Cynici |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iiii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Corcyræ xv. 25 Corinthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corinthum viii. 197 Corinthæ viii. 62 Cornelia vi. 166 Coro xiv. 268 Corsica v. 92 Corvine xiii. 1. 93 Corvinum viii. 5. 7 Corvinus i. 108 Corycia xiv. 267 Corydon ix. 102 Corymbos vi. 52 | Cynici |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Coreyræ xv. 25 Corinthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corinthum viii. 197 Corithæ viii. 62 Cornelia vi. 166 Coro xiv. 268 Corvine xii. 1. 93 Corvine xiii. 1. 93 Corvinum viii. 5. 7 Corvinus i. 108 Corydon xiv. 267 Corydon ix. 102 | Cynicis . xiv. 309 Cynicis . xiii. 122 Cynicos . xiii. 122 Cynthia . vi. 7 Cyrrhæ . vii. 64 Dacicus . vi. 204 Dacicus . vi. 204 Dacis . iv. 111 Dædalus . iii. 25 Damasippe . viii, 147. 151. 167 Decii . viii. 258 Deciorum . viii. 254 xiv. 239 Delphis . vi. 554 xiv. 239 Delphis . vi. 554 Demosthenis . x. 34 Demosthenis . x. 114 Deucalion . i. 81 Diana . x. 292 Dianam . iii. 320 xv. 8 Diomedcas . i. 53 Diphilus . iii. 120 Dolabella . viii. 105 Dolphins pillars . vi. 589 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 coranum Coranum xvi. 54 Coranum xvi. 54 Corobulo iii. 251 Corcyra xv. 25 Corinthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corinthe viii. 62 Corinthe viii. 62 Corochelia vi. 166 Coro xiv. 269 Corvine xii. 19 Corvinum viii. 5. 7 Corvinum viii. 5. 7 Corycia xiv. 267 Corycia xiv. 267 Corycia xiv. 267 Coryubos vi. 52 Cosmi viii. 86 | Cynici xiv. 309 Cynicis xiii. 122 Cynicos xiii. 121 Cynthia vi. 7 Cyrrhæ vii. 64 D Dacicus vi. 204 Dacis iv. 111 Dxdalus iii. 25 Damasippe viii. 185 Damasippus viii, 147. 151. 167 Deciorum viii. 258 Deciorum viii. 254 xiv. 239 Delphis Demetrius iii. 99 Democritus x. 34 Demosthenis x. 114 Deucalion i. 81 Diana x. 292 Dianam iii. 320 xv. 8 Diomedcas ii. 53 Diphilus iii. 120 Dolphilus iii. 105 Dolphins pillars vii. 589 |
| Codri i. 2 Codro iii. 203 Cedrus iii. 208 Collacia vi. 306 Collina turre vi. 290 Collyria vi. 578 Colosso viii. 230 Commagenus vi. 549 Conchylia iii. 81 viii. 101 xv. 28 Coranum xvi. 54 Corbulo iii. 251 Coryrez xv. 25 Corinthi nom. propr viii. 197 Corithæ viii. 62 Cornelia vi. 166 Coro xiv. 269 Corvine xii. 1. 93 Corvinum viii. 5. 7 Corvinum viii. 5. 7 Corycia xiv. 267 Corycia xiv. 267 Corydon ix. 102 Cosmi viii. 86 | Cynicis . xiv. 309 Cynicis . xiii. 122 Cynicos . xiii. 122 Cynthia . vi. 7 Cyrrhæ . vii. 64 Dacicus . vi. 204 Dacicus . vi. 204 Dacis . iv. 111 Dædalus . iii. 25 Damasippe . viii, 147. 151. 167 Decii . viii. 258 Deciorum . viii. 254 xiv. 239 Delphis . vi. 554 xiv. 239 Delphis . vi. 554 Demosthenis . x. 34 Demosthenis . x. 114 Deucalion . i. 81 Diana . x. 292 Dianam . iii. 320 xv. 8 Diomedcas . i. 53 Diphilus . iii. 120 Dolabella . viii. 105 Dolphins pillars . vi. 589 |

| Druso . | iii. 238 | Fusci . | xii. 45 |
|--------------|-----------|---|-----------------|
| Drusorum | viii. 40 | Fuscina | ii. 148 |
| | viii. 21 | | iv. 1 |
| Drusus | VIII. 21 | | vi. 46 |
| E | | | |
| Echion | vi. 76 | | iv. 112 |
| Electræ | viii. 218 | G | |
| | vi. 434 | Gabiis . | iii. 192 |
| Elisæ . | | | vi. 56 |
| Elpenora | xv. 22 | | vii. 4 |
| Enceladi | vii. 215 | Gabiorum | x. 100 |
| Endymion | x. 318 | | |
| . Ennosigæum | x. 182 | Gadibus | x. I |
| Enthymema | vi. 449 | Gaditana | xi. 162 |
| | xiv. 319 | Gætula , | x. 158 |
| Epicure | | 3 | civ. 278 |
| Epicurum | | Gætulum | v. 59 |
| Epimenia | vii. 120 | Gætulus | v. 53 |
| Erimanthus | iii. 120 | | xi. 140 |
| Erinnys | vii. 68 | | |
| Eriphylæ | vi. 654 | Galba | |
| Esquilias . | iii. 71 | | iii. 222 |
| 23quinas | | Galbam | ii. 104 |
| | | V | iii. 5 |
| | xi. 51 | Galbana | ii. 97 |
| Etruscum | v. 164 | Galla i | |
| Evandrum | xi. 61 | | vi. I |
| Euganea | viii, 15 | | |
| Euloë | vii. 62 | | iii. 176 |
| Eumenidum | xiv. 285 | | ix. 30 |
| | iii. 217 | | 16. 148 |
| Euphranoris | | 2 | kv. 11E |
| Euphratem | i. 104 | Gallicus . v | iii. 116 |
| | viii. 51 | | iii. 157 |
| Euro | xii. 63 | | iii. 307 |
| Europen | viii. 34 | | xi. 113 |
| Euryalum | vi. 81 | | |
| • |  | | xii. 99 |
| F | | | kii. 113 |
| Fabii | vi. 265 | Gangem | x. 2 |
| Fabiis | ii. 146 | Ganymedem | v. 59 |
| Fabios | viii. 191 | | ix. 22 |
| | xi. 90 | | iii. 86 |
| Fabius | vii. 95 | | ix. 57 |
| Fabius | | | iii. 76 |
| m | | | |
| Fabrateriæ | iii. 224 | | iii. 164 |
| Fabricio | iv. 129 | | vi. 20 4 |
| Fabricios | xi. 91 | Geticis | v. 50 |
| Fabricius | ii. 154 | Getulice v | iii. 26 |
| Fabricus | ix. 142 | Gillo | i. 40 |
| Fabulla . | ii. 68 | | vi. 77 |
| | xiii. 32 | | xi. 27 |
| Fessidium | | 1 100.41 | |
| Ficedulas | xiv. 9 | | cii. 4 |
| Fidenarum | x. 100 | 6 | iii. 118 |
| Fidenis | vi. 57 | Gracchi | ii. 148 |
| Flaccus | vii. 227 | Graceho vi | iii. 210 |
| Flaminia | i. 171 | | vi. 167 |
| Flaminiam | i. 61 | | ii. 24 |
| Flavius . | iv. 37 | | ii. 201 |
| | | | ii. 117 |
| Flora | | | |
| Floræ | xiv. 262 | | ii. 128 |
| Florali | vi. 249 | | ii. 113 |
| Fonteio | xiii. 17 | O I I O O O O O O O O O O O O O O O O O | iii. 61 |
| Forum . | i. 128 | Græce . vi. 186. | |
| • | vii, 132 | | x. 174 |
| Frameam | xiii. 79 | | vi. 240 |
| | i. 12 | | vi. 16 |
| Frontonis . | | | v. 89 |
| Furia; | xiii. 51 | *1 | 7, 07 |
| | | | |

| Græcorum · · | iii. 114 | Horatius . | vii. 62 |
|--|---|--|--|
| Græcos . | iii. 206 | Hyacinthos | vi. 110 |
| Græcula . | vi. 185 | Hydri . | vii. 70 |
| Græculus . | iii. 78 | Hylas . | i. 164 |
| Graiæ | viii. 226 | Hymetto | xiii. 185 |
| Graias . | xi. 100 | Hyperboreum . : | vi. 469 |
| Grana . | xv. 110 | 1 | |
| Graius . | x. 138 | I | |
| Grammatici . | vi. 437 | Jane | vi. 395 |
| Grammaticus . | iii. 76 | Jane Janum | vi. 385 |
| Orammaticus . | vii. 216 | läson . | vi. 152 |
| Grassator | iii. 305 | | v. 42 |
| Gurgitis . | vi. 265 | läspis • • | vi. 53 |
| Gyaræ . | x. 170 | Iberinæ . | IV. S |
| | i. 73 | Ictericz . | vi. 564 |
| Gyaris . | iii. 115 | Idai . | iii. 138 |
| Gymnasia . | ii. 4 | Idæis | xiii. 41 |
| Gypso | | | ri. 192 |
| | iii. 99 | Idæum . | viii. 160° |
| Hæmo • | x. 224 | Idumææ • • | xiii. 43 |
| Hamillus Haruspex vi. | 396. 549 | Iliacus . | xi. 178 |
| and the first | ii. 121 | Iliados | x. 261 |
| Haruspice | | Iliadum | viii. 117 |
| Hæcatomben | xii. 101 | Illyricum . | vi. 584 |
| Hectore | x. 259 | Indus | |
| Hedymeles | vi. 382 v. 38 | | xi. 125 |
| Heliadum | | lö | vi. 525 |
| Heliodorus | vi. 372 | Iönium | vi. 93 |
| Helvidius . | v. 36 | Jove • | vi. 15 |
| Helvinam | iii. 320 | Jovem | xii. 89 |
| Heracleas | i. 52 | Jovi . | xii. 6 |
| Hercule. | v. 125 | Jovis • • | viii. 156 |
| Herculeo | viii. 14 | | . 38. 268 |
| And the second | xiv. 280 | | 81. 271 |
| Herculeos | xiii. 82 | Iphigenia | xii. 119 |
| Herculis | ii. 20 | Isæo | iii. 74 |
| | iii. 89 | Isiacæ | vi. 488 |
| T 100 1 | x. 361 | Iside . | xii. 28 |
| X 1111. | 43. 151 | Isidis . | |
| | | | vi. 528 |
| | xiv. 90 | | ix. 22 |
| Hermæ . | viii. 59 | Isis | ix. 22 xiii. 93 |
| Hernia | viii. 59 vi. 325 | Istro | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 |
| Hernia • • • · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · | viii. 59 vi. 325 xiv. 180 | Istro | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum | viii. 59 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 | Istro Istrum | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii., 171 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ | viii. 59 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 | Istro | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii., 171 x. 154 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia vi. 82. | viii. 53 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104. 114 | Istro | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii. 171 x. 154 xii. 78 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia vi. 82. | viii. 53 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104. 114 220. 322 | Istro Istrum | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii. 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Vi. 82. x. | viii. 59 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104. 114 220. 322 ii. 50 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiam Ithacum | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii., 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xiv. 287 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Vi. 82. Kippo Hippo | viii. 59 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104. 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiam Ithacum | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii., 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xiv. 287 xv. 26 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Vi. 82. x. Hippo Hippoomanes | viii. 59 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104. 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiam Ithacum Ithacus Judæa | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii., 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xiv. 287 xv. 26 vi. 542 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Vi. 82. x. Hippo Hippolyto Hippomanes Hipponam | viii. 59 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104. 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 viii. 157 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiam Ithacum Ithacus Judæa Judæi | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii., 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xiv. 287 xv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 543 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Vi. 82. x. Hippo Hippo Hippomanes Hippoman Hirpini | viii. 58 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104, 114 220, 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 viii. 157 viii. 63 | Istro Ietrum Italiæ Italiam Ithacum Ithacus Judæa Judæi Judaïcum | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii. 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xiv. 287 xv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 543 xiv. 101 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia vi. 82. Kippo Hippolyto Hippomanes Hipponam Hirrini Hirrus | viii. 58 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104, 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 viii. 157 viii. 63 x. 222 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiam Ithacum Ithacus Judæa Judæi Judæi Judaicum Iüli | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xiii. 111 iii 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 542 xiv. 101 viii. 42 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Ni 82. Hippo Hippomanes Hippomanes Hirpini Hirrus Hirrus Hirundinis | viii. 58 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104, 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 viii. 157 viii. 63 x. 222 x. 231 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiam Ithacum Ithacus Judæa Judæi Judæi Judaicum Iüli Julia iii | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii. 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xiv. 287 xv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 543 xiv. 101 viii. 42 i. 32. 37 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia vi. 82. Kippo Hippolyto Hippomanes Hipponam Hirrini Hirrus | viii. 58 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104. 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 viii. 157 viii. 63 x. 222 x. 231 viii. 116 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiam Ithacum Ithacus Judæa Judæi Judaicum Iüli Julia Julius | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii., 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xiv. 287 xiv. 287 xiv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 543 xiv. 101 viii. 42 i. 32. 37 ii. 70 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Vi. 82. x. Hippo Hippomanes Hippomanes Hipponam Hirrus Hirrus Hirundinis Hispania | viii. 59 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104. 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 viii. 157 viii. 63 x. 222 x. 231 viii. 116 x. 151 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiæ Ithacum Ithacus Judæ2 Judæi Judaīcum Iüli Julia Julius Iülo | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xiv. 287 xv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 543 xiv. 101 viii. 42 i. 32 ii. 70 xii. 70 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Vi. 82. X. Hippo Hippo Hippomanes Hippomam Hirpini Hirrus Hirundinis Hispania Hispania | viii. 58 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104, 114 220, 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 viii. 157 viii. 63 x. 222 x. 231 viii. 116 x. 151 vi. 74 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiam Ithacum Ithacus Judæa Judæi Judaïcum Iüli Julia Julius Iülo Junio | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii., 171 x, 154 xii. 78 x 257 xv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 543 xiv. 101 viii. 42 i. 32. 37 ii. 70 xv. 27 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippoia Nippo Hippolyto Hippomanes Hirpini Hirrus Hirus Hispania Hispania Hispania Hispulla Hispulla | viii. 58 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104, 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 viii. 157 viii. 63 x. 222 x. 231 viii. 116 x. 151 vi. 74 xii. 11 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiæ Ithacum Ithacus Judæ2 Judæi Judaīcum Iüli Julia Julius Iülo | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii. 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 542 vi. 543 xiv. 101 viii. 42 i. 32. 37 ii. 70 xv. 27 vi. 618 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Vi. 82. X. Hippo Hippolyto Hippomanes Hipponam Hirrini Hirrus Hirundinis Hispania Hispulla Hispulla Hispulla Hister | viii. 58 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104. 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vii. 132 viii. 157 viii. 63 x. 222 x. 231 viii. 116 x. 151 vi. 74 xii. 11 ii. 58 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiæ Ithacum Ithacus Judæa Judæi Judaīcum Iüli Julia Julius Iūlo Junio Juno | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii. 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xiv. 287 xv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 543 xiv. 101 viii. 42 i. 32. 37 ii. 70 xv. 27 vi. 618 xiii. 40 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Vi. 82. X. Hippo Hippomanes Hippomanes Hirpini Hirrus Hirundinis Hispania Hispulla Hispulla Hister Homericus | viii. 58 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104. 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 viii. 157 viii. 63 x. 222 x. 231 viii. 116 x. 151 vii. 74 xii. 11 vii. 58 xiii. 113 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiæ Ithacum Ithacus Judæa Judæi Judaïcum Iüli Julia Julius Iülo Junio Juno Juno | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xiv. 287 xiv. 287 xiv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 543 xiv. 101 viii. 42 i. 32. 37 ii. 70 xii. 70 xv. 27 vi. 618 xiii. 40 ii. 98 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Vi. 82. X. Hippo Hippolyto Hippomanes Hipponam Hirrini Hirrus Hirundinis Hispania Hispulla Hispulla Hispulla Hister | viii. 58 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104. 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 viii. 157 viii. 63 x. 222 x. 231 viii. 116 x. 151 vi. 74 xii. 11 ii. 58 xiii. 113 vii. 38 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiæ Ithacum Ithacus Judæa Judæi Judaïcum Iüli Julia Julius Iūlo Junio Juno Junoni | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 542 vi. 543 xiv. 101 viii. 42 i. 32. 37 ii. 70 xv. 27 vi. 618 xiii. 40 ii. 98 vi. 48 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Vi. 82. X. Hippo Hippomanes Hippomanes Hirpini Hirrus Hirundinis Hispania Hispulla Hispulla Hister Homericus | viii. 58 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104, 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 viii. 157 viii. 63 x. 222 x. 231 viii. 116 x. 151 vi. 74 xii. 11 ii. 58 xiii. 113 vii. 38 x. 246 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiæ Ithacum Ithacus Judæa Judæi Judaïcum Iüli Julia Julius Iülo Junio Juno Junoni Junonis | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii 171 x. 154 xii. 287 xv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 542 vi. 543 xiv. 101 viii. 42 i. 32. 37 ii. 70 xv. 27 vi. 618 xiii. 40 ii. 98 vi. 48 vii. 32 |
| Hernia Hernicus Hesperidum Hiarbæ Hippia Vi. 82. X. Hippo Hippomanes Hippomanes Hirpini Hirrus Hirundinis Hispania Hispulla Hispulla Hister Homericus | viii. 58 vi. 325 xiv. 180 xiv. 114 v. 45 104. 114 220. 322 ii. 50 x. 325 vi. 132 viii. 157 viii. 63 x. 222 x. 231 viii. 116 x. 151 vi. 74 xii. 11 ii. 58 xiii. 113 vii. 38 | Istro Istrum Italiæ Italiæ Ithacum Ithacus Judæa Judæi Judaïcum Iüli Julia Julius Iūlo Junio Juno Junoni | ix. 22 xiii. 93 viii. 170 xii. 111 iii 171 x. 154 xii. 78 x. 257 xv. 26 vi. 542 vi. 542 vi. 543 xiv. 101 viii. 42 i. 32. 37 ii. 70 xv. 27 vi. 618 xiii. 40 ii. 98 vi. 48 |

| Jupiter | # | | x. | 188 | Lucifero | | | - | xiii. | 158 |
|---------------------|-----|------|---------|-------|-------------|----|----|---|-------|-------------------------|
| | | | | 116 | Lucilius | | | | | 165 |
| | | xii | i. 41. | | Lucretia | | | | | 293 |
| Juvernæ . | | • | | 160 | Lucrinum | | | | iv. | 141 |
| Ixion . | | | xiii. 5 | 1, n. | Lugdunense | m | | | i. | |
| | | L | | | Luperco | | | | ii. | 142 |
| Lacedæmoniu | m | | xi | 173 | Lycisæ | | | | vi. | 123 |
| Lacertæ | | | vii. | 114 | Lycius | | | | xi. | 147 |
| Lachesi | | | iii. | 27 | Lyde . | | | | ii. | 141 |
| Lachesis | | | ix. | 136 | • | | M | | | |
| Ladas . | | | xiii. | 97 | Machæræ | | | | vii. | 9 |
| Lælius . | | | xiv. | 195 | Maculonus | | | | vii. | 40 |
| Læstrigonas | | 4 . | xv. | 18 | Mænades | | | | vi. | 316 |
| Lagi | | | vi. | 83 | Mæotica | | | | iv. | 42 |
| Lamiarum | | | iv. | 154 | Mævia | | | | i. | 22 |
| | | | vi. | 384 | Magus | | | | iii. | 77 |
| Laomedontiad | les | | vi. | 325 | Mamercorus | n | | | viii | 192 |
| Lappa . | | • | vii. | 72 | Mandræ | | | | iii. | 237 |
| Laronia . | | . ii | . 36. | 65 | Manilia | | | | vi. | 242 |
| Lateranorum | | | x, | 17 | Marcellis | | | | | 145 |
| Latiis . | | • | ii. | 127 | Marius | | | | i. | 49 |
| | | | | 115 | Maronem | | | | vi. | 435 |
| Latinz | | • | i. | 171 | Maroni | • | | | vii. | 227 |
| | | | viii. | 256 | Maronis | | | | xi. | 178 |
| Latinæ | • | • | v. | | Mars . | | | | vi. | - |
| Latinas | | • | vi. | 286 | | | | | xiv. | 261 |
| Latine | | • | | 187 | Marsos | | | | | 169 |
| | | | | 148 | Marsus | | | | | 180 |
| Latini | | • | vi. | | Marsya . | | | 4 | ix. | - |
| Latino | • | • | i. | | Marti | | | | xvi. | 5 |
| | | | | 636 | | | | | ii. | 31 |
| Latio . | | • | | 103 | Martis . | | 95 | • | i, | 8 |
| Latona | • | • | | 292 | | | | | | 101 |
| Latonæ | • | • | | 175 | | | | 3 | . 83. | |
| Laufella | • | • | | 319 | | | | | xiii. | 79 |
| | | | | 117 | Massa | | • | • | . i. | 35 |
| Lavino . | | • | xii. | 71 | Mathematici | | • | • | xiv. | |
| Laurenti | • | • | | 107 | Mathematic | 18 | • | • | | 561 |
| Laureolum | • | • | viii. | | Matho . | | • | • | | 129 |
| Ledam | • | • | vi. | 63 | 20.0 | | | | xi. | 34 |
| Lenas . | | • | ▼. | | Mathonis | • | | • | i. | 32 |
| Lentule . | • | • | vi. | 80 | Maura . | | | • | | 30 7 22 4 |
| Lentulus | 4 | • | vii. | 95 | | | | | xii. | |
| | | Λ | viii. | 287 | Mauræ . | | | | | 4 306 |
| T anidi | | | | 264 | Mauri . | | | • | V. | 53 |
| Lepidi . Lepidis | , | • | viii. | 9 | 1417011 · | | • | • | | 936 |
| Leucade | • | • | viii. | | | | | | | 125 |
| Libitinam | | • | xii. | 122 | Mauro . | | | | | 148 |
| Liburno | • | • | iii. | 240 | 4740040 4 | | | | | 125 |
| Jan Dullau | • | 4 | iv. | 75 | Maurorum | | | • | xiv. | |
| Liburnus | | | | 476 | Maurus | | | - | iii. | 97 |
| Libyâ . | • | | Xi. | 25 | Mecænas | | | | vii. | 94 |
| Libya . | | , | | 119 | Mecænate | | | | i. | 66 |
| Licinis . | | • | | 109 | Mecænatibus | | | | xii. | 39 |
| Licinus | | | xiv. | | Medo . | | | | x. | 177 |
| Ligustica | | | | 257 | Medos . | | | | vii. | 192 |
| Liparæa | | | xiii. | 45 | Medullinz | | | | vi. | 321 |
| Locusta . | | | i. | 71 | Megalesia | | | | vi. | 69 |
| Longinum | | | x. | 16 | Megalesiacæ | | | • | | 191 |
| Lucanos | | | Viii. | | Meleagri | | | | | 115 |
| Lucanus | | | vii. | 79 | Memnone | | | | Xv. | 5 |
| Luciferi | | | viii. | 12 | Memphitide | | | | XV. | 122 |
| | | | | | | | | | | |

| Menalippes . | . viii. 229 | Niobe . | á., | . vi. 176 |
|-----------------|----------------------------|-------------|-----|--------------|
| Menæceus . | . xiv. 240 | Novium . | | . xii. 111 |
| | , viii. 104 | Numa . | | iii, 12. 138 |
| Mentore | vi. 527 | Numæ . | | vi. 342 |
| Meroë • | xiii, 163 | | | viii. 156 |
| 20.00 | . д. 383 | Numantinos | | . viii. 11 |
| Messalinæ - | vi. 264 | Numidarum | • | vii. 182 |
| Metelli - | | Numidas . | • | iv. 100 |
| | xv. 109 | Numitor . | | . vii. 74 |
| Micipsarum . | • v. 89 | Nurscia . | | x. 74 |
| Miletos . | . vi. 295 | | • | . vii. 64 |
| Miloni | . ii. 26 | Nysæ . | | . VII. 02 |
| Minervæ . | . xiii 82 | | _ | |
| Minervam . | iii. 139. 219 | | 0 | |
| | x. 116 | Oceani . | | zi. 94, 119 |
| Minturnarum . | x. 276 | | | xiv. 283 |
| Minutal | . xiv. 129 | Oceano | | . x. 149 |
| Mirmillonem . | . vi. 81 | Oceanum . | | . ii. 2 |
| Mirmillonis . | . viii. 200 | Octavius . | | . viii. 242 |
| Mithridates . | . xiv. 252 | Ofellæ . | | . xi. 144 |
| Modiam . | . iii. 180 | Ogulnia . | | vi. 351 |
| Moeotide | . xv. 115 | Olynthi . | | xii. 47 |
| Mœsorum . | ix. 143 | Ombos . | • | . xv. 35 |
| | xii. 108 | | • | vi. 454 |
| Molossos . | xiv. 162 | Opicæ . | • • | iii. 207 |
| | iv. 107 | Opici . | • | ii. 41 |
| Montani | . iv. 131 | Opobalsama | | ii. 161 |
| Montanus | i. 11 | Orcadas . | • | |
| Monychus . | xiv. 102 | Orestes , | • | |
| Moses | ii. 76 | | | viii. 220 |
| Multicia | | Orexim . | • | vi. 427 |
| Musarum . | | Orexis | • | . xi. 127 |
| Mutinensis . | . xvi. 23 | Orgia . | • | . ii. 91 |
| Mutius | i. 153 | Orontes | - • | . iii. 62 |
| Mycale | . v. 141 | Osiri . | n • | . viii. 29 |
| Mycenis . | . xii. 127 | Orisis . | | vi. 540 |
| Myronis . | . viii. 102 | Ostia . | • | xi. 49 |
| Myrrhina | . vi. 155 | Othoni . | | . iii. 159 |
| | vii. 133 | | | vi. 558 |
| N | _ ^ _ | Othonis . | | . ii. 99 |
| Burn and | . xi. 126 | | | xiv. 324 |
| Nabathæ0 | , ix. 1. 91 | | P | |
| Nævole | xiv. 329 | Paccius . | 1 | , xii. 99 |
| Narcissi | viii. 95 | Pactolus . | | xiv. 299 |
| Natta . | xiii. 81 | Pacuvio | | xii. 125 |
| Neptune | xiii. 152 | Pacuvium | | xii. 112 |
| Neptuni | viii. 223 | Pacuvius | • | xii. 128 |
| Nero . | X. 308 | Pæan . | | vi. 171. 173 |
| | xii. 129 | Palæmon . | • | vii. 219 |
| | | | | vi. 451 |
| Nerone • • | viii. 72, 193 viii. 170 | Palæmonis | • | vii. 215 |
| Neronem . | | Delegion | | vi. 117 |
| Neroni . | . iv. 38 | Palatino | • | iv. 53 |
| 7.000 | viii. 212 | Palfurio . | • | i. 109 |
| Neronis . | iv. 137 | Pallante . | 0 | · viii. 95 |
| | vi. 614 | Pansa . | | viii. 95 |
| | x. 15 | Parcæ . | | |
| Nestora . | . xii. 128 | Paridem . | • | vi. 87 |
| Nestoris | . vi. 325 | Paridi . | | . vii. 87 |
| Niceteria . | . iii. 68 | Paris . | 4 | . x. 264 |
| Nili | . xiii. 27 | Parrhasii . | 7 | . viii. 102 |
| Niliacæ | . i. 26 | Parthenio . | | . xii. 44 |
| Nilo · | . xv. 123 | Partho . | | . vi. 406 |
| | z. 149 | Patriciæ . | | . x. 331 |
| Nilum | , vi. 83 | Patricias . | | iv. 102 |
| 70 144 10 100 V | | | | |

| Patriciorum | viii. 190 | Pluteum . | . ii. 7 |
|-----------------|-------------------|-------------------------|--------------------|
| Patricios | i. 24 | Pluto . | . xiii. 50 |
| Pauli . | ii. 146 | Podium . | ii. 147 |
| Paulus . | vii. 143 | Pœno . | x. 155 |
| Faulus . | viii. 21 | Pollineas . | ii. 68 |
| Pedo . | vii. 129 | Pollio . | vi. 986 |
| | iv. 77 | 101110 | vii. 176 |
| Pegasus | vii, 120 | | ix. 7 |
| Pelamidum • • | xiv. 214 | ĺ | xi. 43 |
| Pelea . | iii. 280 | Polycleti . | iii 217 |
| Peleidæ ; | x. 256 | 1 ory cieti | viii 103 |
| Peleus . | x. 168 | Polyphemi . | ix. 64 |
| Pellæo | vii. 92 | | xiv. 20 |
| Pelopea | | Polyphemus • Polyxena • | x. 262 |
| Penates . | | Pomæria . | ix. 11 |
| Penelope | ii. 56 xi. 137 | Pompeio . | x. 283 |
| Pergula | | Pompeios . | . x. 108 |
| Peribonius , . | | Pompeius . | iv. 110 |
| Perone . | xiv. 186 | Pontina . | iii. 307 |
| Persica . | xiv. 328 | Pontia . | vi. 637 |
| Persice . | xi. 57 | | vi. 660 |
| Persicus | iii. 221 | Pontica . | viii. 1. 75. 179 |
| Petasunculus | vii. 119 | Pontice | xiv 114 |
| Petauro | xiv. 265 | Ponticus . | vi. 540 |
| Petosiris | vi. 580 | Popano . | vi. 461 |
| Phæaca | xv. 23 | Poppæana . | vi. 583 |
| Phæacum | v. 151 | Poppysma | ii. 80 |
| Phæcasianorum . | iii. 218 | Porrigine - | iii. 266 |
| Phalaris | viii. 81 | Porthmea . | xiv. 91 |
| Phalas | vi. 589 | Posides . | iii, 190 |
| Phario | xiii. 85 | Præneste . | xiv. 88 |
| Pharon | vi. 83 | Prænestinis . | iii. 128, 213 |
| | xii. 76 | Prætor . | ni. 128. 21 |
| Phasma | viii. 186 | | x, 36 |
| Phialen | x. 233 | Prætorem . | i. 101 |
| Phidiacum . | viii. 103 | Prætori . | |
| Philippi | x iii. 125 | | |
| Philippica | x. 125 | Prætoria . | |
| Philomela | vii. 92 | | x. 161 vi. 376 |
| Phœbi | vii. 233 | Prætoribus . | |
| Phænicopterus | xi. 139 | Prætori · | viii. 194 |
| Pholo | xii 45 | | xin. 4 xiv. 257 |
| Phrenesis | xiv. 136 | | vii. 123 |
| Phrygia | vi. 515 | Pragmaticorum | |
| | xiv. 307 | Priapi | vi. 315 |
| Phrygibus | . vii. 236 | Priapo · | . iii. 283 |
| | xii. 73 | Proœmia | |
| Phrygio | ii. 115 | Prochytam . | iii. 5 |
| Phryx | vi. 584 | Procula . | |
| | xi. 147 | Proculas . | |
| Phthisis | xiii. 95 | Proculeius . | |
| Picenis | xi. 74 | | vii. 94 vi. 645 |
| Picens | . iv. 65 | Progne . | viii. 183 |
| Pico . | viii. 131 | Prometliea . | |
| Pieria | vii. 8 | Prometheus . | |
| Parides | iv. 36 | 1 | xv. 85 |
| Pierio | vii. 60 | Protogenes . | iv. 336 |
| Pinnirapi | iii. 158 | Psaltria . | |
| Pisææ | xiii. 99 | Psecas . | . vi. 490. 493 |
| Piscator | iv. 26 | Pulmentaria . | . vii. 185 |
| Piso . | v. 109 | Punica . | . xiv. 161 |
| Pittacon . | ii. 6 | Pygargus . | xi. 138 |
| Plaute | viii. 40 | Pygmæa . | |
| Dianinadas | viii. 191 | Drigger 20116 | . xiii. 168 |
| Planipedes | viii. 191 | Pygmæus . | |

| Pylades xvi. 26 | Ruffum . vii. 213. 214 |
|-------------------------------|--|
| Pylius . x. 246 | Rutilæ . x. 294 |
| Pyrenæum . x. 151 | Rutilo xi. 5. 21 |
| Pyrrha i. 84 | Rutilum . i. 162 |
| • | Rutilus . xi. 2 |
| | Rutulis vi. 636 |
| | |
| Pythagoras . xv. 173 | Rutulum vii. 105 |
| Pythagoreis iii. 229 | COLUMN TO THE PARTY OF THE PART |
| Pythia . xiii. 199 | Rutupino . iv. 147 |
| Pytismate xi, 173 | S |
| Pyxide ii. 141 | Sabbata . vi: 158 |
| . xiii. 25 | xiv. 96 |
| Q | Sabellam . iii. 169 |
| Quadra . v. 2 | Sabina . iii. 85 |
| Quadrijuges . vii. 126 | · vi. 163 |
| Quartanam . iv. 57 | Sabinas . x. 299 |
| Quinquatribus . x. 115 | Saguntina . v. 29 |
| Quiutiliane . vi. 279 | Saguntus . xv. 114 |
| Quintiliano . vii. 186 | Salamine . x. 179 |
| Quintilianus . vi. 75 | Saleio . vii. 80 |
| vii, 189 | Salios . vi. 603 |
| Quintillæ . vii. 75 | Samia . xvi. 6 |
| Quirine iii. 67 | Samo iii. 70 |
| Quirini . ii. 133 | Samothracum . iii. 144 |
| viii. 259 | 'Sandapilarum . viii. 175 |
| | |
| | |
| Quiritem . viii. 47 | Sarcophago . x. 172 |
| Quirites . iii. 60. 163 | Sardanapali . x. 362 |
| x. 45. 109 | Sardonyche . vil. 144 |
| R | Sardonyches . vi. 381 |
| Ravola ix. 4 | xiii. 139 |
| Remi . x. 73 | Sarmata . iii 79 |
| Resinata viii. 114 | Sarmentus . v. 3 |
| Rhadamanthus xiii. 197 | Sarraca . v. 23 |
| Rheno . viii. 170 | Sarrano . x. 38 |
| Rhinocerote . vii. 130 | Saturni . vi. 569 |
| Rhodios . viii. 113 | Saturno . vi. 1 |
| Rhodopes . ix. 4 | Saturnus xiii. 40 |
| Rhodos . vi. 295 | Sauromatæ xv. 125 |
| Roma | Sauromatas ii. 1 |
| iii, 319 | Scaphium . vi. 263 |
| iv. 38 | Scantinia lex . ii. 44 |
| vii. 138 | Scaurorum . vi. 603 |
| viii. 243, 244 | Scauros ii. 35 |
| x. 279 | xi. 91 |
| Romæ . iii. 41. 137. 165. 183 | Schænobates iii. 77 |
| v. 90 | Scipiadæ . ii. 154 |
| vii. 4 | Scrofa . xii. 73 |
| viii. 287 | vi. 176 |
| xi. 46 | Scutulata ii. 97 |
| Romam iii. 83. 314 | |
| , | |
| x. 122 | |
| Romana xi. 195 | 23000000 |
| | Secundi . vii. 204 |
| 2 | Segmenta ii. 124 |
| Romano iii, 119 | Segmentatis, . vi. 89 |
| Romanorum v. 58 | Sejano x. 89 |
| Romanus . x. 138 | Sejanum . x. 76. 104 |
| xiv. 160 | Sejanus . x. 63. 66. 90 |
| Romuleæ xi. 104 | Seio . iv. 13 |
| Rubelli . viii. 39 | Seleuco . x. 211 |
| Rubrenus vii. 72 | Semiramis ii. 108 |
| Rubrius . iv. 105 | Semivir . vi. 512 |
| | |

| Seneca | v. 109 | Sulmonensi . vi. 186 |
|--|---------------------|---|
| Senecæ . | x. 16 | Sybaris vi. 295 |
| Sanecam | wiii. 212 | Syenes . xi. 124 |
| Senonum | viii. 234 | Syllæ . i. 16 |
| Septembri . | xiv. 130 | ii. 28 |
| Septembris | vi. 516 | Sympuvium . vi. 342 |
| Seres . | vi. 402 | Syphacem . vi. 169 |
| Sergiolus | vi. 105 vi. 112 | Syriæ . viii. 169 Syrium . xi. 73 |
| Sergius . | vi. 112 vi. 563 | |
| Seripho | x. 170 | |
| Common | vii. 8 | Syrmata . xv. 30 Syrophœnix . viii. 159. 160 |
| Serrano | vi. 141 | Syrorum vi. 350 |
| Sertorius Setinis | v. 34 | Syrus . iii, 62 |
| Setinum . | x. 27 | -) |
| Sexte . | ii. 21 | T |
| Sibyllæ . | iii. 3 | Tabraca . x. 194 |
| Sibylia | viii. 126 | Tagi iii. 55 |
| Sicambris . | iv. 147 | Tagus . xiv. 299 |
| Sicula . | vi. 485 | Tanaquil . vi. 565 |
| orcuja v | xiii. 50 | Tarentum . vi. 296 |
| Siculo | v. 100 | Tarpeia . xiii. 78 |
| Siculos . | ix. 150 | Tarpeio . xii. 6 |
| Siculus . | vii. 236 | Tarpeium vi. 47 |
| Sicyone | iii. 69 | Tatio . xiv. 160 |
| Signinum | xi. 73 | Taurea . vi. 491 |
| Silanus | viii. 27 | Taurica . xv. 116 |
| Silvano | vi. 446 | Taurominitanæ . v. 93 Telamonem . xiv. 214 |
| Sipario | viii. 186 | |
| Sirena | xiv. 19 | 11 24 |
| Sistro | xiii. 93 | |
| Socratici | xiv. 320 | Tentyra . xv. 35. 76 Terea . vii. 12 |
| Socraticos | ii. 10 | Terpsichoren . vii. 35 |
| Solœcismum . | vi. 455 | Testudo . xi. 94 |
| Solonis | x. 274 | Teucrorum . viii. 56 |
| Solymarum . | vi. 543 | Teutonica . x. 282 |
| Sophistæ | vii. 167 | Thaïda iii. 93 |
| Sophocleo | vi. 635 iii. 223 | Thaletis . xiii. 184 |
| Soræ . | и. 223 х. 178 | Thebaïdos . vii. 83 |
| Sostratus | viii. 101 | Thebarum xiii. 27 |
| Spartana | viii. 218 | Tirebas . vii. 12 |
| Spartam | xiii: 199 | xiv. 240 |
| Spartano | 118. 128 | Thebe xv. 6 |
| Sportula . i. 95. | iii, 249 | Themison . x. 221 |
| | x. 46 | Theodori . vii. 177 |
| | xiii. 33 | Thersitæ . viii. 271 |
| Statius | vii, 83 | Thersites . viii. 269 |
| Stentora | xiii. 112 | xi. 31 Theseide . i. 2 |
| Sthenobæa . | x. 327 | 1 Heactac |
| Stlataria | vii. 134 | Illessald . |
| Stoica | xiii. 121 | Tilespanie |
| Stoïcidæ | ii. 65 | I III Acco |
| Stoïcus | iii. 116 | Thracum . xiii. 167 Thrasea . v. 36 |
| 111 | xv. 109 | Thrasylli . vi. 575 |
| Stratocles . | iii. 99 | Thrasymachi vii. 204 |
| Stygio | ii, 150 | Thrax iii. 79 |
| Suburra | x. 156 | Thule . xv. 112 |
| The second secon | d. 51, 141 | Thusca . viii. 180 |
| Suburræ | iii. 5 v. 106 | Thusca . vi. 185 |
| | v. 106 viii. 143 | Thusco · vi. 288 |
| Sufflamine | xvi. 50 | x. 74 |
| | WAIP OF | |

| Thusco . | xi. 109 | Tyrrhenum . | v. 96 |
|---------------|------------|-------------------|-----------|
| Thuscis | xiii. 62 | -, | 10 50 |
| Thyestæ | viii. 228 | V | |
| | i. 36 | | |
| Thymele | vi. 66 | Varillus . |  00 |
| Themalos | | | ii. 22 |
| Thymeles | | Vascones | xv. 93 |
| Thyrsum | vi. 70 | Vaticano | vi. 343 |
| Tiberi | vi. 522 | Ucalegon | iii. 199 |
| | vii. 121 | Vectî | vii. 150 |
| Tiberinum | viii. 265 | Veiento | iii. 185 |
| Tiberinus | v. 104 | · iv. | 113. 123 |
| Tiburis | iii, 192 | 1 | vi. 113 |
| | xiv. 87 | Velox | viii. 187 |
| Tiburtino | xi. 65 | Venefrano | v. 86 |
| Tigillinum | i. 155 | Venere | ' x. 362 |
| Tiresiam | xiii. 249 | Venerem | x. 209 |
| Tirynthius | xi. 61 | Veneres | xiii. 34 |
| Tisiphone | vi. 29 | Veneri . | ii. 31 |
| Titan . | xiv. 35 | Veneris . | iv. 40 |
| Titanida | viii, 132 | V C.H.D.1.0 | vi. 137 |
| Titio | iv. 13 | | vii. 25 |
| Tongilli | vii. 130 | | vii. 25 |
| | | | |
| Tophum | | | xi. 165 |
| Trallibus - | iii. 70 | 77 | xvi. 5 |
| Trebio . | y. 135 | Veneto | iii. 170 |
| Trebium . | v. 135 | Ventidio | xi. 22 |
| Trebius . | v. 19 | Ventidius | vii. 109 |
| Trechedipna - | iii. 67 | | 299. 569 |
| Tribunal , . | .viii. 127 | Venusina : | i. 51 |
| | x. 35 | Venusinam . | vi. 166 |
| Tribuni | i. 109 | Verrem | . iii. 53 |
| 10 - | iii. 132 | Verres | viii. 106 |
| 11 · | vii. 228 | Verri | ii. 26 |
| Tribunis | iii. 313 | | iii. 53 |
| Tribuno | i. 101 | Verveçis . | iii. 294 |
| ~ | ii. 165 | Vervecum | x. 50 |
| 4 | xi. 7 | Vestam : . | iv. 61 |
| Tribunos , | vii. 92 | | vi. 385 |
| Trifolinus | ix. 56 | Virgilio | vii. 69 |
| Triscurria | Viii. 190 | Virgilium | vi. 434 |
| Troja | x. 258 | Virginia | x. 294 |
| Trojanum | iv. 61 | Virginius | viii. 221 |
| Troïca | viii. 221 | Virro . v. 39. 43 | 128. 149 |
| Trojugenæ | yiii. 181 | 211 | ix. 35 |
| Trojugenas | i, 100 | Virrouem | v. 156 |
| Trojugenis | xi. 95 | Virroni . | v. 99 |
| Trypheri | xi. 137 | Virronibus | v. 149 |
| Tuccia | vi. 64 | Virronis | v. 134 |
| Tullî | v. 57 | Ulubris | x. 102 |
| Tollia | vi. 306 | Ulysses | ix. 65 |
| Tullius | vii. 199 | 10.7 | xi. 31 |
| Turni . , | xii. 105 | | xv. 14 |
| Turnus | xv. 65 | Umbritius | iii. 21 |
| Tuscum | i. 22 | | viii. 182 |
| Tydides | xv. 66 | Volscorum | viii. 245 |
| Tyndaris | vi. 656 | Volsciniis | iii. 191 |
| Tyrias | i. 27 | Volusi . | xv. 1 |
| | vi. 245 | Urbicus . | vi. 71 |
| Tyrio | ÿii. 134 | | 38. 42 |
| | xii. 107 | Vulcani . | i. 9 |
| Tyrius | x. 334 | | viii. 270 |
| Tyrrhenam | xii. 76 | Vulcano . | x. 132 |
| Tyrrhenos | vi. 92 | Vulcanus | xiii. 45 |
| • | 1 | | |

| | | | Zelotypæ | | - | vi. | 277 |
|--------------|---|---------|-------------|------|---|-------|-----|
| | X | | Zelotypo | | | v. | 45 |
| Xerampelinus | | vi. 518 | Zelotypus | | | viii. | 197 |
| | | | Zenonis | | | xv. | 107 |
| | Z | | Zonam | | • | xiv. | 297 |
| Zalates | | ii. 164 | Zwn xas Jus | Y.10 | | vi. | 194 |

INDEX

27,0 2311

TO PERSIUS.

| | Sat. | Lin. | Sat. Lin. |
|---------------|-----------|------|-----------------------|
| ABACO : . | | 131 | Cæsonia vi. 47 |
| Accî · · | . i. | 50 | Calabrum : ii. 65 |
| Acci | i. | 76 | Callirhoën . i. 134 |
| Ægeum | V. | 142 | Camœna v. 21 |
| Agaso | v. | | Canicula . iii. 5. 49 |
| Anticyras | iv. | 16 | Cannabe . v. 146 |
| Antiopa | i. | 78 | Cappadocas . vi. 77 |
| Antithetis | i. | 86 | Catonis iii. 45 |
| Apennino | i. | 95 | Centuriones . v. 189 |
| Appula , | . i. | 60 | Centurionum iii. 7? |
| Aqualiculus | i. | 57 | Chærestratus . v. 162 |
| Arcadiæ | iii. | 9 | Chiragra . v. 58 |
| Arcesilas . | iii. | 79 | Chrysidis v. 165 |
| Areti • • | i. | 130 | Chrysippe vi. 80 |
| Artocreas · · | vi. | 50 | Ciconia . i. 58 |
| Attin . | i. | 93 | Cleanthea . v. 64 |
| Attys · · · | i. | 105 | Coa . v. 135 |
| Auster | vi. | 12 | Cornute . v. 2337 |
| В | | | Corymbis . i. 101 |
| | | 100 | Crassi . ii. 36 |
| Baro | | 138 | Cratero . iii. 65 |
| Bassaris . | i. vi. | 101 | Cratino . i, 123 |
| Basse . | | 123 | Crispini . v. 126 |
| Bathylli | V. | 21 | Curibus . iv. 26 |
| Baucis . | iv. | 93 | Cynico . i. 13 |
| Berecynthius | vi. | 37 | D |
| Bestius | ii. | 27 | Dama v. 76. 79 |
| Bidental | vi. | 55 | Dave . v. 161. 168 |
| Bovillas | vi. | 76 | Delphin . i. 94 |
| Brisei . | vi. | 27 | Dictatorem . i. 74 |
| Bruttia | V. | 85 | Dinomaches . iv. 20 |
| Bruto . | V. | 03 | |
| C | - | | E |
| Caballino | Prol. | 1 | Eccho . i. 102 |
| Cæsare | vi. | 43 | Elegidia . i. 51 |

INDEX TO PERSIUS.

| Ennii . vi. | 10 | Mænas | i. 101. 105 |
|---------------------------|-----|----------------|----------------|
| Ergenna ii. | 26 | Mæonides | vi. 1I |
| Evion i. | 102 | Manius | vi. 56. 60 |
| Eupolidem i. | 124 | Marce | v. 81 |
| F | | Marco | v. 79. 80 |
| | 110 | | |
| | 116 | Marcus | v. 79. 81 |
| Floralia . v. | 178 | Marsi | iii. 75 |
| G | | Masuri | v. 90 |
| Galli . v. | 186 | Medis | iii. 53 |
| Germanæ . vi. | 44 | Milicerta . | v. 103 |
| Glutto . v. | 112 | Mercurialem | . v. 113 |
| Glyconi . v. | 9 | Mercurium . | ii. 44 |
| | 70 | | |
| Græce . i. | | Mercurius | vi. 62 |
| | 191 | Messalæ | ii. 72 |
| Graiorum . i. | 127 | Mimalloneis . | i. 99 |
| Graios . vi. | 38 | Muti . | i. 115 |
| Granaria . v. | 110 | Mycenis | v. 17 |
| H. | | N | |
| 9.9 15 | 7 | Nattæ , . | iii. 31 |
| | | | |
| Heliconidas . Prol. | 4 | Nerea | i. 94 |
| Helleborum iii. | 63 | Nerio | ii. 14 |
| v. | 100 | Nonaria | i, 13 3 |
| Heminas . i. | 130 | Numæ | ii. 59 |
| Hercule , i. | 2 | 0 | |
| ii. | 12 | Obba | v. 148 |
| | 69 | | |
| | | Œnophorum . | v. 140 |
| | 180 | Orestes | iii. 118 |
| Hyacinthina . i. | 32 | P | • |
| Hypsipylas . i. | 34 | Pacuvius | i. 77 |
| ,, , | | Palilia | 1. 72 |
| Jane . i. | 58 | Pannutia | iv. 21 |
| Iliade . i. | 123 | Parca | |
| | | | |
| Ilias . i. | 50 | Parnasso | Prol. 2 |
| Iönio . vi. | 29 | Parthi | v 4 |
| Jove ii. | 18 | Pedio | i. 85 |
| v. 50. 114. | 139 | Pedius | i. 85 |
| Jovem ii. | 43 | Pegaseïum . | Prol. 14 |
| Jovis ii. | 21 | Pericli | iv. 3 |
| Italis . v. | 54 | Phyllidas . | i. 34 |
| | | . 4 | |
| Italo i. | | Pirenen | Prol. 4 |
| Jupiter . ii. 22. 23. 29. | 40 | Polydamas | i. 4 |
| V. | 137 | Pontifices | ii. 69 |
| L | | Ponto . | v. 134 |
| Labeonem . i. | 4 | Popa | vi. 74 |
| Latinæ . vi. | 4 | Prætore | v. 88 |
| | 185 | Prætoribus | v. 114 |
| | 36 | | |
| Licini ii. | | Prætoris | |
| Lictor i. | 75 | Prognes | v. 8 |
| | 175 | Publius | v. 74 |
| Ligus vi. | 6 | Putcal | . iv. 49 |
| Luciferi . v. | 103 | Pythagoreo: . | vi. 11 |
| | 114 | Q | |
| Lunaï . vi. | 9 | Ouinti . ~ | i. 73 |
| | 115 | Quintus . | vi. 11 |
| | | | |
| Lustralibus ii. | 33 | Quiritem | |
| Lyncem i. | 101 | Quirites . | . iii. 106 |
| M | | | iv. S |
| Macrine ii. | 1 | | |
| | 7 | See the second | |

INDEX TO PERSIUS.

| | R | | - | Stoïcus | | 7 | ₹. | 86 |
|---|---------|------|------------|------------|-------|-------|-------|------|
| Recutita | | v. | 184 | Surrentina | | | iii. | 93 |
| Remus : | | i. | 73 | | | | | |
| Rhenos . | | vi. | 47 | | T | | | |
| Roma . | | i. | 5 | Tadius | : " | | vi. | 66 |
| Romæ | | į. | 8 | Thusco . | | | iii. | . 28 |
| Romule | | i. | 87 | Thuscum | | | ii. | 60 |
| Romulidæ | | i. | 31 | Thyestæ | . 1.4 | | v. | -8 |
| # Communication | | | - | Thynni | - 21 | | V. | 183 |
| • | S | | | Tiberino | : | | _ ii. | 15. |
| Sabbata | 2 6 | V. | 584 | Titos . | • | . • | i. | 20 |
| Sabino . | | vi. | 1 | Troiades | %. | *. | į. | 4 |
| Sambucam | .* | v. | 95 | Tyrannos | | - 1 · | iii. | 35 |
| | | iii. | 5 6 | 1 yraunos | • | | TITE | 23 |
| Samios . | - * | ii. | 59 | 2 a | 77 | | | |
| Saturnia | | - | | TT45 15 | V | | - | 0.5 |
| Saturnum | | V. | 50 | Vectid1 | . * | | iv. | 25 |
| Satyri . | | v. | 123 | Veientanum | | . • | v. | 147 |
| Scloppo | | v. | 13 | Velina | | - 1 | v. | 73 |
| Scombros | , . | 1. | 43 | Veneri. | | | ii. | 70 |
| Siculi . | | 111. | 39 | Vestales | | | ii. | 60 |
| Siliquis | • . • . | iii. | 55 | Viatica | | | v. | 65 |
| Sis pro Si vis | | , i. | 109 | Vindicta | | . V | . 88. | 125 |
| Socratico | | v. | 37 | Virbi | | | Vi. | 56. |
| Solones | | iii. | 79 | Vulfenius | | | V. | 190 |
| C+-7- | :: | 10 | 00 | | - | | | |

L32A

